J. DOWDING, NEWGATE STREET.

1833.

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE ENLARGED EDITION.

As the new Proprietor is anxious that nothing should be wanting to render complete a work which has already obtained such universal approbation, he has arranged with the Author to make such additions, by way of Appendix, as shall embrace all matters of interest down to the present period. Among the articles in Biography, which distinguish this edition, are an ample account of BONAPARTE, LORD BYRON, SIR WALTER SCOTT, MADAME BONAPARTE, LORD TENTERDEN, and others, who have died in the course of the last year and previously. The Heraldic part has been enlarged by an account of all who have received titles, either in the Peerage or Baronetage, down to the end of the last year, so as to make this the completest thing of its kind that has ever been published on that subject. Under the head of Archæology, Geography, and History, the reader will be pleased to find a short account of the old boroughs in England that have been disfranchised by the Reform Bill, and in every other branch of knowledge, additional articles have been inserted of all such matters as are now interesting to the public.

GABBATHA (Bibl.) Γαββαθα, the Hebrew name of a place in Pilate's palace, where he pronounced judgment on our Saviour. John xix.

GABBIANI, Anthony Dominic (Biog.) an artist, was born at Florence, and died in consequence of a fall from a scaffold. His greatest and most esteemed work in fresco, is the vast cupola of Castello.

GABELLUS (Geog.) a river of Italy, now La Secchio, falling into the Po. Plin. l. 3.

GABIA, John Baptist (Biog.) a scholar of Verona, in the 16th century, translated from Greek into Latin, the Commentaries of Theodoret, bishop of Cyrrhus, on Daniel and Ezekiel, which was printed at Rome, fol. 1563. He also translated the history of Scylitzes Curopalates, printed in 1570, with the original, which is thought to be more complete than the Paris edition of 1648. About 1543, he published the first Latin translation of Sophocles, with Scholia, besides translating the Gregorian Kalender into Greek, &c. printed at Rome in 1583.

GABII (Geog.) a city of the Volsci, built by the kings of Alba, which was taken by the artifice of Sextus Tarquinius, but is now no longer in existence. The inhabitants had a particular mode of dress, called after them the 'Gabinus Cinctus.' Liv. l. 5; Virg. Æn. l. 6; Ovid. Fast. l. 2; Plut. in Rom.; Isidor. Orig. l. 19.

GABINIA, gens (Hist.) a plebeian family of Rome, which rose to distinction in the state. [Vide Gabinius]

GABINIA, gens (Numis.) one medal is extant of Aulus Gabinius, mentioned under History, bearing the inscription, A*ulus* GABINI*us* A*uli* F*ilius*. Goltz. Fast.

GABINIUS, Aulus (Hist.) a consul who made war in Judæa, and was afterwards charged with bribery, against which accusation Cicero defended him, at the request of Pompey. Cic. pro Gabin.; pro Dom. &c.; Joseph. Antiq. l. 17; Appian. in Mithrid. &c.; Dio. l. 29.

GABINIUS, nephew of the emperor Diocletian, was the father of St. Susanna, who was a martyr for the faith.

GABINIUS (Biog.) an historian mentioned by Strabo. Strab. l. 7.

GABRIEL (Bibl.) גבריאל, a principal angel in heaven, who was sent to the prophet Daniel to explain his visions, and also to Zechariah, to announce the birth of John the Baptist. Dan. viii. &c.; Luke i. 11, &c.

GABRIEL, Sionita (Biog.) a Maronite, who died in 1648, took a part in M. Le Jay's Polyglott Bible, by the addition of the Arabic and Syriac versions, which he had transcribed with his own hand from MS. copies at Rome. He also translated the Arabian Geography, entitled 'Geographia Nubiensis,' 4to. 1619.

GABRINI, Thomas Maria (Biog.) a divine of the Romish Church, was born at Rome in 1726, and died in 1807, leaving a 'Dissertation on the twentieth Proposition of Euclid,' 8vo. Pesaro, 1752, which went through several editions, besides some other dissertations, &c.

GACON, Francis (Biog.) a French poet, was born at Lyons in 1667, and died in 1725, leaving among his works 'Le Poete sans Fard,' a French translation of Anacreon; 'L'Homere vengé,' a satire against la Motte, besides a number of other pieces against Rousseau, Bossuet, &c.

GAD (Bibl.) גד, son of Jacob and Zilpah, Leah's servant. Gen. xxx. Gad had seven sons, namely, Ziphion, Haggai, Shuni, Ezbon, Eri, Arodi, and Areli, and the tribe of Gad went out of Egypt, in number 45,650; Gen. xlvi.; Deut. &c.

GAD, a prophet, and David's friend, who followed him when persecuted by Saul. He is styled David's seer. 2 Sam. xxiv; 1 Chron. xxix.

GAD, a heathen deity, mentioned in several places, as Isa. lxv.

GADARA (Geog.) a town of Cœlosyria, celebrated for its baths. It was taken from the kings of Syria by Alexander Jannæus, and released from its subjection to the Jews by Pompey, U.C. 690, in honour of whom it was also called Pompeiana.

GADARA (Numis.) medals were struck by this town in honour of Tiberius, Nero, Vespasian, Titus, Domitian, Trajan, Adrian, Antoninus Pius, M. Aurelius, L. Verus, Commodus, Caracalla, Heliogabalus, and Gordianus Pius, bearing the inscriptions, ΓΑΔΑΡΑ.—ΓΑΔΑΡΕΩΝ.—ΠΟ. ΓΑΔΑΡΕΩΝ, i. e. Pompeianorum Gadarenorum. It also dated an æra on its coins from the period of its recovering its independence by means of Pompey, as ΔΜ, i. e. 44, or U.C. 734; on a medal of Augustus; B q, 92, the Pompeian æra U.C. 782, on one of Tiberius, &c. The types are either a head or figure of Hercules, Serapis, Bacchus, or the genius of the city, and the like. Vaillant. Num. Græca. Patin. Impp.; Harduin. Num. Urbs, &c.

GADARENES (Bibl.) Γαδαρηνοί, the country round Gadara. Mark v. and Luke viii.; but Matthew calls it Gergasenes, Gergasa being a territory belonging to Gadara. Matth. viii.

GADBURY, John (Biog.) an astrological impostor of Wheatly, near Oxford, in the 17th century, was the author of a number of Almanacks, and among others, of the 'West India, or Jamaica Almanack.' His life, under the title of 'The Black Life of John Gadbury,' was written and published by Partridge in 1693.

GADDESDEN, John of (Biog.) a physician of the 14th century, was the author of the work entitled 'Rosa Anglica quatuor Literis distincta,' &c.

GADES (Geog.) Gadium, or Gadisa, an island in the Atlantic, near to the Herculis Columnæ, which Cicero and others called the term of his labours; and a town of Hispania Bætica, now Cadiz.

Dionys. Perieges. v. 64.

GADES (Numis.) this town is known, by inscriptions on stones and medals, to have been a Roman colony mostly denominated MUN*icipium* AUG*ustum* GAD*itanum*, but sometimes COL*onia* JUL*ia* AU*Gusta*; many medals of this town are likewise inscribed in the Punic or ancient character, as in fig. 2, where the fishes and the trident are symbolical of its maritime situation. The Gaditani honoured Hercules more than any other deity, to whom they erected a temple, and placed a figure or head of him on their medals, as in fig. 1, with his lion's skin, and his club. He was on that account distinguished by the epithet of Gaditanus, and is inscribed on some medals HERC. GADIT. Vaillant. Col.; Flor. Med.

Fig. 2.

GADITANUS (Myth.) an epithet of Hercules, to whom a temple was erected at Gades.

GAERTNER, Joseph (Biog.) a botanist, was born at Calw, in the duchy of Wirtemberg in 1732, and died in 1791, leaving a work entitled 'De Fructibus et Seminibus Plantarum,' 2 vols. Stutgard. 1783—1791.

GAETA (Geog.) a town of Terra di Lavoro, the ancient Caieta, situated on a small promontory, or peninsula, in a gulf, to which it gives its name. Lon. 13° 30′ E. lat. 41° 14′ N.

GAETANO (Biog.) vide Pulzone.

GÆTULIA (Geog.) a country of Libya, now called Bildulgerid, near the Garamantes, which formed part of king Masinissa's kingdom. The inhabitants are celebrated by the poets for their rudeness, and the country as the residence of lions and beasts of prey.

Virg. Æn. l. 4, v. 40.

Misceri, gregibus, Gætule adsuete, ferarum
Indomitisque loqui, et sedare leonibus iras.

Sallust. in Jugurth.; Plin. l. 5.

GÆTULICUS, Cn. Lentulus Cossus (Hist.) a consul in the reign of Tiberius, whose death is mentioned by Tacitus. Tac. Annal. l. 4.

GÆTULICUS, Cn. Lentulus, son of the preceding, was a consul and colleague with C. Calvisius Sabinus, U. C. 778, and afterwards commanded in Germany with great credit to himself; but, falling under the displeasure of Caligula, he was put to death soon after his accession to the empire. He was a poet and historian, as we learn from Suetonius and Martial; and is supposed to be the epigrammatist, under whose name a few verses are still preserved. Mart. Præf. l. 1; Tac. l. 6; Sueton. in Tib.; Dio. l. 59.

GAFFARELL, James (Biog.) a rabbinical writer, was born at Mannes, in Provence, about 1601, and died in 1681, leaving, 1. 'Abdita divinæ Cabalæ Mysteria,' &c. 4to. Paris. 1623. 2. 'Rabbi Elea, de Fine Mundi Latine versus cum notis,' 8vo. Paris. 1629. 3. 'Curiosite Inoüyez,' 4to. Paris, 1629, which went through three editions in six months. 4. 'Index Codicum MStorum quibus usus est Joh. Picus Comes Mirandulanus,' Paris. 1650. 5. 'Un Traité de la Poudre de Sympathie,' &c. 6. 'Avis aux Doctes touchant la Necessité des Langues Orientales,' &c.

GAFFURIUS, Franchinus (Biog.) a musical writer of Lodi, was born in 1451, and died, as is supposed, about 1522. His works are, 1. 'Theoricum Opus Harmonicæ Disciplinæ,' Neapol. 1480, Mediol. 1492. 2. 'Practica Musicæ utriusque Cantus,' Mediol. 1496, Bresc. 1497, 1502, and Venet. 1512. 3. 'Anglicum ac Divinum Opus Musicæ Materna Lingua Scrip.' Mediol. 1518.

GAGE, Sir John (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was one of the most famous men in his time, who, after distinguishing himself, both in a civil and military capacity, in the service of Henry VIII and queen Mary, died in 1557.

GAGE, Sir Henry, a loyal officer in king Charles's army, and governor of Oxford, who, after having performed great feats of valour, was unfortunately killed at Cullum Bridge in 1644. He was great grandson of the preceding.

GAGE (Her.) the name of the family of which honourable mention has been made under History. They are of Norman extraction, and derive their descent from De Gaga or Gage, who accompanied William the Conqueror into England, and obtained large grants of land. Of this family was sir John Gage, who in 1622 was created a baronet.

which title is still enjoyed by a branch of this family. Another branch enjoys the peerage conferred on Thomas, a descendant of sir Thomas Gage, the second baronet, who in 1720 was created viscount Gage, of Castle Island, and baron Gage, of Castlebar, in Ireland. William Hall Gage, his son, and second viscount Gage, was in 1780 created a peer of Great Britain by the title of baron Gage, of Firle, co. Sussex; and in 1790 baron Gage, of High Meadow, co. Gloucester. The barony of Gage, of Firle, became extinct at his death, but the remainder of his honours descended to his nephew. The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Gage, baron Gage, of High Meadow, and baronet, English honours; also viscount Gage, of Castle Island, and baron Gage, of Castlebar, in the kingdom of Ireland.

Arms. Per saltire azure and argent, a saltire gules.

Crest. On a wreath, a ram statant proper, armed and unguled or.

Supporters. Two greyhounds proper, ducally gorged gules.

Motto. "Courage sans Peur."

GAGE, Thomas (Biog.) an English divine of the family of the Gages, of Firle, above-mentioned, and brother of the colonel sir Henry Gage above-mentioned, became first a Dominican monk; but leaving the Romish church, he attached himself to the puritans, during the rebellion, and died a preacher at Deal, but in what year is not known. He wrote 'A new Survey of the West Indies, or the English American, his Travail by Sea and Land, containing a Journey of 3300 Miles within the main Land of America,' &c. 1648; the second edition, fol. Lond. 1655; in French, 2 vols. 12mo. 1695: besides which he published his recantation sermon at London, 4to. 1642, and in 1651; 'A Duel between a Jesuit and a Dominican, begun at Paris, fought at Madrid, and ended at London,' 4to.

GAGER, William (Biog.) a Latin poet in the 16th century, educated at Westminster and Oxford, was the author of several Latin plays; namely, 'Meleager,' a tragedy; 'Rivales,' a comedy; and 'Ulysses redux,' a tragedy, which were all acted with great applause in Christ Church; the first only was printed in 1592.

GAGNIER, John (Biog.) an oriental scholar, and native of Paris in the 18th century, who, leaving the Romish religion, came and settled in England, was the author of 'Vindiciæ Kircherianæ, seu Defensio Concordantiarum Græcarum Conradi Kircheri adversus Abr. Trommii Animadversiones;' besides which he edited Joseph Ben Gorion's 'History of the Jews,' in the original Hebrew, with a Latin translation and notes, in 4to. 1706; 'Abulfeda's Description of Arabia,' in the original, with a translation, inserted in the third volume of Hudson's 'Geographiæ veteris Scriptores Græci minores,' 8vo. 1712; and Abulfeda's 'Life of Mohammed,' in Arabic, with a Latin translation and notes, fol. Oxon. 1723.

GAGUIN, Robert (Biog.) a French historian, was born at Colines, near Amiens, and died in 1501, but at what age is not ascertained. He was the author of a history in eleven books, 'De Gestis Francorum,' fol. from 1200 to 1500; besides translating the chronicle of Ab. Turpin, and writing a Roman History, and some poems, &c.

GAHAGAN, Usher (Biog.) a Latin poet, of a good family in Ireland, but of very bad morals, was executed at Tyburn in 1749 for filing gold. He translated Pope's 'Essay on Criticism' into Latin verse; and, after his confinement in Newgate, the 'Temple of Fame,' and the 'Messiah:' besides writing verses in English on the prince of Wales, afterwards George III.

GAIGNY (Biog.) or Gagny, John, a French divine, who died in 1549, wrote, among other theological works, Commentaries upon the different books of the New Testament, &c. His scholia on the four Evangelists, and on the Acts of the Apostles, are inserted in the 'Biblia Magna' of father John de la Haye.

GAILLARD, de Lonjumeau John (Ecc.) bishop of Apt from 1673 to 1695, the year in which he died, was the chief projector of the great 'Universal Historical Dictionary,' executed by Moreri under his patronage.

GAILLARD, Gabriel Henry (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Ostel, near Soissons, in 1728, and died in 1806, leaving, 1. 'Rhetorique Françoise à l'Usage des Demoiselles,' 12mo. Paris. 1746, which has gone through six editions. 2. 'Poetique Françoise,' 2 vols. 12mo. ibid. 1749. 3. 'Parallele des quatre Electre de Sophocle, d'Euripide, de Crebillon, et de Voltaire,' 8vo. ibid. 1750. 4. 'Melanges literaires en prose et en vers,' 12mo. ibid. 1757. 5. 'Histoire de Marie de Bourgogne,' 12mo. ibid. 1757. 6. 'Histoire de Francois I.' 7 vols. 12mo. 1769, of which there have been several editions. 7. 'Histoire des Rivalités de la France et de l'Angleterre,' 11 vols. 12mo. 1771—1802. 8. 'Histoire de Charlemagne,' 4 vols. 12mo. 9. 'Observations sur l'Histoire de France de Messieurs Velly, Villaret, et Garnier,' 4 vols. 12mo. 1807; besides various eloges, epistles, poems. &c.; also contributions to the 'Journal des Sçavans,' from 1752 to 1792; to the 'Mercure,' from 1780 to 1789; and most of the historical articles in the new Encyclopedie. His last performance was an 'Eloge historique,' on M. de Malesherbes, his intimate friend.

GAINSBOROUGH, Earl of (Her.) a title conferred in 1683 on Baptist, fourth viscount Camden, which became extinct in 1798 at the death of Henry, the sixth earl.

GAINSBOROUGH, Thomas (Biog.) an English artist, was born at Sudbury, in Suffolk, in 1727, and died in 1788, leaving the highest reputation for skill and originality. [Vide Plate XXXVII]

GAINSBOROUGH, Dupont, nephew of the preceding, and a portrait-painter of considerable merit, died in 1797, at the early age of 30.

GAIUS (Bibl.) Γαῖος, Paul's disciple, with whom the apostle lodged during his abode at Corinth. Acts xix.: Rom. xv.

GAIUS, a disciple, to whom the apostle John addressed his third epistle, is supposed by some to be the same as the preceding.

GALATEO, Anthony (Biog.) in Latin Galateus Liciensis, an Italian writer, whose proper name was Ferrari, was so called from his native place Galatina, in Otranto, where he was born in 1444. He wrote, 1. 'De Situ Elementorum,' 1501. 2. 'De Situ Japygiæ,' Basil. 1558; but the best edition is that of 1727, with the notes of Tasneri, and some lesser pieces by Galateo. 3. A Description of Gallipoli. 4. 'Successi dell' Armata Turschesca nella citta d'Otranto dell' anno 1480.' 4to.; besides some Latin poems, and a topography of his native country, &c. He died in 1517.

GALADIN, Mohammed (Hist.) vide Akbar.

GALANTHIS (Myth.) the servant maid of Alcmene, whose sagacity is said to have eased the labours of her mistress, which were retarded by Juno at the birth of Hercules. Ovid. Met. l. 9; Ælian. Hist. Anim.

GALAS, Matthew (Hist.) a page to baron Beaufremont, distinguished himself in such manner by his valour that he succeeded his master as general of the forces under Tilli. He for a time fell into disgrace in consequence of losing the battle of Torstenson in the war against Sweden, but was restored to favour a short time before his death in 1647.

GALATÆA (Myth.) or Galathæa, a daughter of Nereus and Doris, who was beloved by Polyphemus, and also by Acis, the shepherd. The latter being killed by his rival, she mourned his loss so greatly that she was changed into a fountain. Virg. Æn. l. 9; Ovid. Met. l. 13.

GALATIA (Bibl.) the province mentioned under Geography, to whose inhabitants Paul addressed one of his epistles.

GALATIA (Geog.) Γαλατία, a province of Asia Minor, having Cappadocia on the E., Bithynia on the W., Pamphylia on the S., and the Euxine Sea on the N. The Galatians were descended from the Gauls, who, having invaded Asia Minor, and conquered this country, took up their abode there. The principal towns were Ancyra, Pessinus, Synope, Cybele, &c. This country was first subject to Crœsus; and, after the destruction of his empire, it fell into the hands of the Macedonians, from whom it was taken by the Gauls before-mentioned, A. C. 280, and subsequently became a part of the Roman empire, when Anthony made Amyntas king of this country, at whose death it was converted into a Roman province. Cic. ad Attic. l. 6, ep. 5; Liv. l. 38; Plin. l. 5; Dio. l. 47; Eutrop. l. 7; Ptol. l. 5.

GALATIA (Numis.) medals are extant of this country as an independent kingdom, and also in honour of Nero, Vespasian, Titus, Domitian, Nerva, Trajan, bearing the inscription ΚΟΙΝΟΝ ΓΑΛΑΤΙΑΣ, or ΓΑΛΑΤΙΩΝ; and for their types, the figure of their god Lunus, or of Jupiter, &c. Vaillant. Num. Gr.; Hard. Num. Pop. et Urb. &c.; Wilde. Sel. Num.; Haym. Thesaur. Britan.; Froel. Tentam.

GALBA (Hist.) a surname of the family of the Sulpitii.

GALBA, a king among the Gauls, who made war against J. Cæsar. Cæs. de Bell. Gall. l. 2.

GALBA, Servius Sulpicius, an orator, and consul with M. Æmilius Scaurus, perfidiously caused 30,000 Lusitanians to be cut off during his command in Spain; for which he was accused on his return to Rome, but escaped the threatened punishment by his arts of persuasion. Cic. de Orat. l. 1, c. 53; Liv. l. 49; Val. Max. l. 3; Tacit. Annal. l. 3; Suet. in Galb.

GALBA, Caius, son of the preceding, was the first of the college of priests condemned by a public sentence.

GALBA, Publius, a pontifex, who failed in his election to the consulate with Cicero. Cic ad Attic. l. 1, ep. 1.

GALBA, Servius, great grandfather to the emperor, who was in the interest of Pompey, afterwards joined in the conspiracy against Cæsar. Cic. ad Fam. l. 6, ep. 18; Sucton. in Galb.

GALBA, Servius, grandfather of the emperor, was prætor at Rome; but distinguished himself more by his literary attainments. He wrote a history much commended by Suetonius.

GALBA, Servius Sulpitius, a Roman emperor, who, rising by his merits to the first offices of the state, and being afterwards among the number of those whom Nero destined to die, raised the standard of revolt, and procured his own election to the empire, U. C. 821, A. D. 68; but he was assassinated by the soldiers after a reign of seven months, at the age of 73.

GALBA, Caius Sulpitius, brother to the emperor, having consumed his substance, killed himself in despair, in the reign of Tiberius. Tac. Annal. l. 6.

GALBA (Numis.) the medals of this emperor bear on the obverse his effigy [vide Plate I]; inscriptions, IMP. SER. SULP. GALBA. CAESAR. AUG. TR. P. or P. M. TR. P. COS. DES. On the reverse, FORTUNA AUG. —ROMA RENASCENS.—SALUS GENERIS HUMANI.—HISPANIA.—CONCORDIA PROVINCIARUM. — BONI EVENTUS. — LIBERTAS RESTITUTA.—ADLOCUTIO S. C.—PROVIDENTIA, S. C. &c. Vaillant, Patin, Tristan, Mediobarb, &c.

GALE, Thomas (Biog.) an English surgeon in the 16th century, was the author of, 1. 'The Institution of a Chirurgeon.' 2. 'An Enchiridion of Surgery,' in four books. 3. 'On Gun-shot Wounds,' &c.; all which were printed together in 8vo. London, 1563; besides 'An Epitome of Galen, De Natur. Facultat.' and 'A brief Declaration of the worthy Art of Medicine, and the Office of a Chirurgeon,' printed with a translation of 'Galen de Methodo Medendi,' and some other pieces.

GALE, John, a baptist preacher of London, was born in 1680, and died in 1721, leaving some controversial tracts on infant baptism, and also some sermons.

GALE, Theophilus, a dissenter, was born at King's Teignton, Devonshire, in 1628, educated at Oxford, and died in 1678, leaving, 1. 'Court of the Gentiles,' in four parts, the first part of which was published at Oxford in 1669, and the last in 1677. 2. 'The true idea of Jansenism,' 4to. 1669. 3. 'Theophilus,' &c. 4. 'The anatomy of infidelity,' &c. 8vo. 1672. 5. 'Idea Theologiæ tam contemplativæ quam activæ ad formam,' &c. 12mo. 1673. 6. 'Philosophia generalis,' &c.

Vol. VI, p. 2231; and some Latin Prayers; Antonini Itinerarium Britanniæ; Iamblichus de Vita Pythagoræ, and other things in MS. The Itinerary was published afterwards by his son.

GALE, Roger, son of the preceding, was born in 1672, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1744. He published, 1. 'Antonini Iter Britanniarum Commentariis illustratum Thomæ Gale, S. T. P. nuper Decani Ebor. Opus posthumum revisit, auxit, edidit R. G.' &c. 4to. Lond. 1709. 2. 'The Knowledge of Medals, or Instructions for those who apply themselves to the Study of Medals, both ancient and modern, by F. Jobert,' translated from the French, of which two editions were published without his name, 8vo. 1697 and 1715. 3. 'Registrum Honoris de Richmond,' fol. Lond. 1722. 4. 'Discourse on the four Roman Ways in Britain,' printed in the sixth volume of Leland's Itinerary. Besides 'Remarks on a Roman Inscription found at Lanchester,' in Vol. XXX, Philosophical Transactions; 'An Account of a Roman Inscription found at Chichester,' &c.; and 'Observations on an Inscription at Spello;' both in the Archæologia, Vol. II.

Gale, Samuel, younger brother of the preceding, was born in 1682, and died in 1754, leaving 'A History of Winchester Cathedral,' London, 1715; besides some papers, which have since been printed in the Archæologia and the 'Bibl. Top. Britannica.'

GALEANO, Joseph (Biog.) a physician of Palermo, died in 1675, leaving several works in Italian and Latin, particularly 'Hippocrates Redivivus Paraphrasibus illustratus,' published in 1650. He also published a collection of pieces of the Sicilian poets, entitled 'The Sicilian Muse,' in 5 vols.

GALEAZZO, Matthew (Hist.) surnamed the Great, succeeded his father Otho, archbishop of Milan, in the government of that state, in 1295; and after having conducted the public affairs with great wisdom in the midst of turbulence and warfare, he resigned in favour of his son.

Galeazzo, son of the preceding, was engaged in constant struggles with the factions of the Guelphs and Ghibelins, who at that time agitated all Italy, and after undergoing many reverses of fortune, he died in 1327.

Galeazzo II, a governor of Milan, who was distinguished by his magnificence and the greatness of his alliances, in consequence of the marriage of his two daughters with a French and an English prince, died in 1378, in the 59th year of his age, and the 22d of his reign.

Galeazzo, John, son of the preceding, and the first duke of Milan, governed the state with much policy, and died in the 55th year of his age, and the 24th of his government, during which he experienced many vicissitudes of fortune.

GALEN, Jan Van (Hist.) a Dutch sea-captain, distinguished himself in the service of the United States of Holland, and died in 1653, after an engagement with the English, over whom he obtained an advantage.

Galen, Christopher Bernard de, bishop and prince of Munster, of a very considerable family in Westphalia, was elected to the ecclesiastical and temporal government of Munster in 1650, and died in 1678, after having been engaged in war with the Dutch, in conjunction with the English and French, and afterwards with the Swedes, in conjunction with Denmark.

Galen (Biog.) vide Galenus.

Galen, Matthew, a professor of divinity of Zealand, who died in 1573, was the author of 'Commentarium de Catholico et Christiano Sacerdote,' 4to. and 'De Originibus Monast.' &c.

GALENUS, Claudius (Biog.) the prince of physicians after Hippocrates, was a native of Pergamus, in Asia Minor where he was born about A. D. 131, in the reign of the emperor Adrian, and died about 193. He is said to have written no less than 300 volumes, the greatest part of which were burned in the temple of Peace, at Rome, where they had been deposited. What remains of his works have been edited at different times, and in different forms. The Greek editions are those of Aldus and And. Asulanus, 5 vols. fol. Venet. 1525; and of Hieron. Gemusæus, 5 vols. fol. Basil. 1538; the Latin editions are that of Paris, fol. 1536, and Lugd. 1554; that of Basil. fol. 1542, 1549, 1550, and 1562; that of Venice, 1562, with the corrections of John Baptist Rasario; besides ten other editions at Venice, printed between 1541 and 1625; and another edition at Venice, in 7 vols. fol. 1541—1545, by John Farræus, with the notes of Ricci. An edition of Galen's works, in Greek and Latin, was published at Paris in 13 vols. fol. by Rene Chartier, including also the works of Hippocrates. [Vide Plate XXXII]

GALEOTI, Martio (Biog.) in Latin Galeotus Martius, a writer at Narni, in the papal territory, in the 15th century, published, 1. 'De jocosè Dictis ac Factis Regis Matt. Corvini,' 1478. 2. 'De Doctrina promiscua,' 8vo. Lugd. 1552, &c.

'An Essay on the Commerce of Corn,' published at Paris. 3. 'A Work on the Origin of the Neapolitan Dialect,' 1779. 4. 'A Treatise on the armed Neutrality,' which he dedicated to the late empress Catherine of Russia.

GALIGAI, Eleonora (Hist.) the wife of Concini Marechal d'Ancre, who, having offended Lewis XIII by her haughtiness, was condemned and executed on a charge of sorcery in 1617.

GALILÆA (Bibl.) Γαλιλαία, a country mentioned under Geography, which was often visited by our Saviour, who was brought up at Nazareth, in Galilee, and on that account was sometimes denominated a Galilean. Matt. xxvi. &c.

Galilæa (Geog.) in English Galilee, a province in Palestine, extending principally north, beyond the plain of Jezreel, or the Great Plain, and divided into Upper and Lower Galilee. Its principal towns were Cana, Chorazin, Tiberias, Capernaum, Bethlehem, Zabulun, Acron, &c. Strab. l. 16; Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. &c.; Ptolem. l. 5; Greg. Tur. l. 18.

GALILEI, Galileo (Biog.) an astronomer and mathematician, son of Vincenzo Galilei, a nobleman of Florence, was born in 1564, and died in 1642. His treatises were collected and published by Mendessi, in 2 vols. 4to. 1656, under the title of 'L'Opere di Galileo Galilei Lynceo.' Some of these were translated into English, and published by Thomas Salisbury, in his Mathematical Collections, 2 vols. fol. His principal work was 'Dialogi della due massime Sisteme del Mondo, Tolemaico et Copernicano,' 1632; in which he supported the principles of Copernicus respecting the motion of the earth, which was the cause of his imprisonment. A piece of his, entitled 'Quinto Libro degli Elementi d'Euclide,' &c. 4to. Florence, 1674, was published by Vincenzo Viviano, one of his disciples.

GALISONNIERE, Roland Michael Barria, Marquis de (Hist.) a French admiral, was born at Rochefort in 1745, and after having been made governor of Canada, he had a severe engagement near Minorca with admiral Byng.

GALLA, Placidia (Hist.) daughter of the emperor Valentinian, and second wife of Theodosius, by whom she had a daughter of the same name, and a son named Gratianus, died in child-bed at Constantinople in 394.

GALLA, Placidia, daughter of the preceding, was taken prisoner by Alaric, after the second siege of Rome, and after experiencing great vicissitudes was married by her brother Honorius to Constantius, a patrician, by whom she had Valentinian III. Du Cang. Byzant. Fan.

GALLA, Placidia (Numis.) medals are extant which are commonly ascribed to the daughter of this name, bearing her effigy, as in the annexed figure, inscriptions, D. N. GALLA PLACIDA P. F. AUG.; on the reverse R. V. which is interpreted Regina Visigothum, because she was married to Adolphus, king of the Visigoths. Some medals are inscribed SALUS REIPUBLICAE.—VICTORIAE AUGG. &c.

GALLAND, Augustus (Biog.) proctor-general of the domain of Navarre, and counsellor of state in the 17th century, was the author of, 1. 'Memoires pour l'Histoire de France et de Navarre,' fol. 2. 'Collection des Maximes,' &c. 3. 'Traité sur l'Origine du Caffé.' 4. 'A Translation of the Arabian Tales;' besides many dissertations on medals, &c.

GALLÆUS, Theodore (Biog.) a painter, and native of Haerlem, died in 1612, at the age of 50, leaving a collection of portraits of illustrious men in antiquity, published with the notes of John Faber de Bamberg, 4to. Antv. 1606.

GALLÆUS, Servatus, a native of Rotterdam, who was born in 1627, and died in 1709, was the author of a work on the Sybilline Oracles; besides editing the works of Lactantius, Lugd. Bat. 1660.

GALLIA (Geog.) a large portion of Europe, called by the Greeks Galatia, and in modern times Gaul, or France; the inhabitants were denominated Galli, Celtiberi, Celtoscythæ, and Celtæ. It was bounded on the E. by the river Rhine, and part of the Alps, on the S. by the Pyrenees, on the W. and N. by the German Ocean, &c.; but as some of the Gauls in process of time passed over into Italy, beyond the Alps, the name of Gallia was extended so far, and distinguished into Gallia Cisalpina, and Gallia Transalpina, which included part of Italy; this latter was also sometimes distinguished into Gallia Cispadana, and Transpadana, including the country occupied by the Gauls in Italy on this or the other side of the Po, in reference to Rome. Gallia was divided by the Romans into four parts, namely, Gallia Belgica, Narbonensis, Aquitanica, and Celtica. Gallia Belgica, the largest province, was bounded by Germany, the rivers Rhone, Rhine, Seine and Marne, and the British Channel; and contained the modern countries of Alsace, Lorraine, Piccardy, Isle of France, the Low Countries, and southern part of Holland. Gallia Narbonensis, was bounded by Belgium, Aquitania, the Mediterranean, the Alps, and the Pyrenees, and includes the modern provinces of Languedoc, Provence, Dauphiné, Savoy, Le Gevaudan, Le Vivares, and Le Pays de Foix. Gallia Aquitanica, or Aquitania, was situated between the river Garumna, the Pyrenean mountains, and the ocean, including the modern Poicton, Saintogne, Guienne, Berry, Perigord, Querey, Limosin, Gascony, Auvergne, &c. Gallia Celtica, or Lugdunensis, was bounded by Belgium, Gallia Narbonensis, the Alps, and the ocean, and contained the modern Lyonnois, Touraine, Franche Comté, Switzerland, and part of Normandy. Gallia was also sometimes distinguished, according to the dress of its inhabitants, into Togata, which was the same as the Cisalpina, Braccata, or Narbonensis, and Comata, which included the rest of Gaul. The chief towns, places, or people, in these several divisions were as follow:

GALLUS, Vibius (Biog.) an orator of Gaul in the age of Augustus, of whose orations Seneca has preserved some fragments. He is said to have become deranged.

GALLWEY (Her.) the name assumed by the family of Payne, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1812 on sir William Payne Gallwey, bart, Lieutenant General in the army; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth per fess or and gules in chief, an eagle displayed, with two heads of the last in base; a bridge of three arches, double towered argent, for Gallwey; second and third gules, a fess between two lions passant, argent.

Crest of Payne. A lion's gamb erased, erect argent, grasping a broken tilting spear gules. Crest of Gallwey. On a wreath of the colours, a mountain cat passant gardant proper, gorged with a cross pattee or.

GALLY, Henry (Biog.) an English divine, was born at Beckenham, in Kent, in 1696, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1769, leaving, 1. 'The Moral Characters of Theophrastus, translated from the Greek, with notes, and a Critical Essay on characteristic Writing,' 8vo. 1725. 2. 'The Reasonableness of Church and College Fines asserted, and the Rights which Churches and Colleges have in their estates defended,' 8vo. 1731, in answer to a pamphlet entitled 'An Enquiry into the customary Estates and Tenants of those who hold Lands of Church and other Foundations by the Tenure of three Lives, and twenty-one Years,' by Everard Fleetwood, esq. 8vo. 3. 'Some Considerations upon clandestine Marriages,' 8vo. 1750, and a second edition greatly enlarged the year following. 4. 'A Dissertation against pronouncing the Greek Language according to Accents,' 8vo. 1754, 1755, which was followed soon after by a second dissertation on the same subject; besides some single sermons preached at St. Paul's, Covent-garden, and before the House of Commons.

GALVANI, Lewis (Biog.) an experimental philosopher, descended from a learned family of Bologna, from whom galvanism, a supposed new principle in nature, took its name, was born in 1737, and died in 1798. The discovery which he made of this new species of electricity, otherwise called animal electricity, was owing to the accident of a dead frog, which was lying in his laboratory, coming in contact with a scalpel, on which the muscles of the limb were agitated with a strong convulsion. The experiment was repeated, and being followed up by a series of new experiments, gave rise to his first publication on the subject, entitled 'Aloysii Galvani de Viribus Electricitatis in Motu Musculari Commentarius,' Bonon. 1791. This publication stimulated Volta to construct the galvanic battery which is known by his name.

GALVANO, Edward (Hist.) secretary to the kings Alphonsus V and John II, was employed by them on many important missions, and died in 1517, after having been sent ambassador to David, king of Æthiopia.

GALVANO, Anthony, natural son of the preceding, who was born in the Indies, was chosen governor of the Moluccas in 1536; and, after a vigorous administration, by which he cleared the sea of pirates, he died in 1557 in an hospital at Lisbon, poor, and neglected by his sovereign king John III, whom he had zealously served. He wrote a history of the Moluccas, which is lost; but his treatise concerning the different passages for merchandizes into the Indies, and the discoveries made therein, to the year 1550, was printed at Lisbon in 1555.

GALVANO, John (Ecc.) brother of Edward Galvano, and eldest son of Roderic Galvano, was raised to the see of Coimbra by the favour of Alphonsus V, and afterwards nominated to the archbishopric of Braga in 1480; but could not, through the influence of his enemies, obtain the bull for his confirmation from Sixtus IV. He died at Coimbra in 1485.

GALWAY, Viscount (Her.) a title enjoyed by the family of Monckton, who have also assumed that of Arundel. [vide Monckton] Their titles, arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Monckton-Arundel, viscount Galway and baron of Killard.

Arms. Sable, on a chevron between three martlets or, as many mullets of the field.

Crest. On a wreath a martlet, as in the field.

Supporters. Two unicorns ermine, gorged with an eastern crown or.

GAM, David (Hist.) fell fighting bravely at the battle of Agincourt, where he was knighted by his sovereign Henry V just as he expired.

GAMA (Hist.) the name of a family in Portugal, which rendered itself illustrious in history.

GAMA, Alva Annes de, distinguished himself, as well as his son, in the conquest of Algarve in the time of Alphonso III.

GAMA, Vasco de, so famous by his discovery of the passage to the Indies by the Cape of Good Hope, was born at Sines, in Portugal, sent in 1497 by Emanuel, king of Portugal, on a voyage of discovery; and, after encountering incredible difficulties, and undergoing many perils, he returned in safety in the space of two years and almost two months, gratified at having effected the object of his voyage. He made a second voyage, from which he returned laden with riches; and, being appointed viceroy of India by John III, he returned thither a third time, but died soon after his arrival in 1525. He was honoured with the title of Don for himself and his posterity, and created a grandee of Portugal. The poem of Camoens, entitled 'The Lusiad,' which celebrates the first expedition of Gama, is well known in this country by Mickle's able translation. [Vide Plate XV]

GAMA, Stephen de, second son of the preceding, and viceroy of the Indies, distinguished himself by his services to the state, and died on his return to Portugal.

GAMA, Paul de, brother of the preceding, and commander of the Portuguese fleet in the Indies, was killed fighting against the king of Malacca.

GAMA, Christopher de, a younger brother of the two preceding, was sent into Æthiopia by his brother Stephen, the viceroy, in 1541, where he signalized himself in defence of the Abyssinian princess, Cabelo Oanguel, against Grarhe, a Moor, who had usurped the throne; but being desperately wounded, and taken by the usurper, the latter struck off his head with his sabre.

GAMACHES, Stephen Simon (Biog.) a member of the French Academy, was born at Meulan in 1672, and died at Paris in 1756, leaving, 1. 'Système du Cœur,' 1708. 2. 'Système du Philosophe Chrêtien,' 8vo. 1721. 3. 'L'Astronomie Physique,' 4to. 1740–2. 4. 'Dissertations literaires et philosophiques,' 8vo. 1755.

GAMALA (Geog.) a town beyond Jordan, in the Gaulonitis, which formed a part of Agrippa's kingdom; but the inhabitants refusing to submit to him, it was besieged first by his forces, and afterwards by the Romans, by whom it was taken and sacked. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 4.

GAMALIEL (Bibl.) גמליאל, son of Pedahzur, prince of Manasseh, when the Israelites left Egypt. Numb. i. &c.

GAMALIEL, doctor of the law, a pharisee, and Paul's master, as also the master of St. Barnabas and St. Stephen, counselled the Jews to deal leniently with Peter and the other apostles, who were brought before him. Acts v.

GAMALIEL (Ecc.) grandson of the preceding, was, as it is said, the first patriarch of the Jews. Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. ii.

GAMBARA, Lorenzo (Biog.) an Italian poet of the 16th century, who died in 1586, at the age of 90, wrote a Latin poem on Columbus, besides Eclogues, entitled 'Venatoria,' &c.

GAMBARA, Veronica, an Italian poetess, was born in 1485, married in 1509 to Giberto X, lord of Corregio, and died in 1550, many years after his death. Her writings, which had been dispersed in various collections of the time, were published together by Zamboni at Brescia, 8vo. 1759, with a life of the authoress.

GAMBIER (Her.) the name of a family originally from Caen, in Normandy, of which is admiral Gambier, who in 1807 was created a peer by the title of Lord Gambier, of Iver, co. Buckingham. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Erminois, a fess wavy azure, between three starlings beaked and legged gules.

Crest. On a naval crown or, an eagle displayed erminois.

Supporters. On the dexter, a British sailor habited proper, his dexter-arm supporting a passion-cross gules; on the sinister, a female figure vested argent, zoned gules, her mantle azure, fringed or, on her breast the sun in splendour; her sinister-hand resting on an anchor sable.

Motto. "Fide non armis."

GAMBOLD, John (Biog.) a preacher among the Moravians, was educated at Oxford, where he took his degrees, but afterwards deserted his flock in 1742, without giving any notice to his diocesan and patron, to associate with the sectaries, whom he governed under the name of a bishop until his death in 1771. He wrote, 1. 'A Short Summary of Christian Doctrine in the way of Question and Answer,' a second edition of which was printed in 12mo. 1767. 2. 'Maxims and Theological Ideas and Sentences,' &c. 8vo. 1751; besides other pieces on the subject of his sect.

GAMUL (Bibl.) גמול, head of one of the sacerdotal families which served in the temple.

GANDAVUM (Geog.) the Latin name for the town of Ghent.

GANDY, James (Biog.) an artist, who was born in 1619, and died in 1689, was the disciple of Vandyck, and is said to have equalled his master in some of his portraits, although he is at present but little known.

GANGANELLI, John Vincent Anthony (Ecc.) the well known name of the pope Clement XIV. [Vide Clement]

GANGARIDÆ (Geog.) a people inhabiting the banks of the Ganges, who were so powerful that Alexander did not dare to attack them.

Virg. Georg. l. 3, v. 26.

In foribus pugnam ex auro solidoque elephanto
Gangaridum faciam, victorisque arma Quirini.

Val. Flacc. l. 6, v. 67.

—— Acies quem Martia circum
Gangaridum, potâque Gerus quos efferat undâ.

Diodor. l. 1; Justin. l. 12; Q. Curt. l. 9.

GANGES (Geog.) a very large river of India, which is now known to take its rise in the mountains of Thibet, and after a course of 2000 miles, discharges itself into the Indian Ocean. It was considered by the ancients to yield gold and gems, and is therefore distinguished by the epithets χρυσαυγὴς, εὐῤῥείτης, μελανδίνης, pulcher, &c., and is celebrated by the poets for its size and beauty.

Virg. Georg. l. 2.

Nec pulcher Ganges, atque auro turbidus Hermus.

Ovid. Trist. l. 5.

Lucan. l. 3.

Movet et Eoos bellorum fama recessus,
Quâ colitur Ganges, toto qui solus in orbe
Ostia nascenti contraria solvere Phœbo
Audet, et adversum fluctus impellit in Eurum.

Oppian. Κυνηγ. l. 4.

—— Ὀν τοῖον Γάγγαο ῥόος πρόσθ' ἠελίοιο

'Colossus Henrico Magno in Ponte Novo positus Carmen,' Paris. 1617. 7. 'Recherches des Recherches et autres Œuvres d'Etienne Pasquier,' a satire against Stephen Pasquier. 8. 'La Doctrine des beaux Esprits de ce Temps,' &c. 1623. 9. 'La Somme Theologique des Verités Capitales de la Religion Chretienne,' the book that first excited the war between the Jansenists and the Jesuits, and provoked the censure of the doctors of the Sorbonne.

GARCIAS (Hist.) or Garcia, the name of several kings of Navarre.

GARCIAS, Iniguez, or, as he is styled by some, Don Garcia Ximenes, succeeded his father as count of Sobrarva, in 857, and assuming the title of king of Pampluna and Navarre, he died after a reign of 23 years. Chron. d'Albayda; Chron. Adefonsi Magni; Ferrer. Hist. Gen. de Hispana, tom. ii.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho, succeeded his father in 905, and died in 925, after a glorious reign, in which he was very successful against the Moors. Roder. Tolet. de Reb. Hisp.; Luc. Tudens. Chron.; Ferr. Hist. de Hispan.; Zurit. Annal. Arragon.; Hieron. Blanca de Var. de Subrarbæ Reg. Init. Sentent.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho II, son of the preceding, succeeded his father in 925, and died about 960, after a peaceful and prosperous reign. Roder. Tol.; Luc. Tudens; Mariana, &c.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho III, surnamed the Trembler, because he trembled, as is said, on his first commencing a battle, succeeded his father Don Sancho Abarca in 994, and died in 1000, after having been engaged in almost constant warfare with the Moors. He was the father of Sancho the Great. Roderic. Tol.; Luc. Tuden.; Mariana.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho IV, son of Sancho the Great, succeeded to the kingdom of Navarre in 1034, and was slain in battle in 1054, as he was invading Leon and Castille, to attack his brother. Roderic. &c.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho V, succeeded to the throne of Navarre, after the unfortunate death of his father, and was assassinated by his brother Don Raymond, in 1076.

GARCIAS, Ramirez Don, son of Don Ramirez, was elected by the States of Navarre, on the death of Alphonso I in 1104, and died in 1150, after having governed the state with much wisdom during a troublesome period. Chron. Adefons. Mag.; Roderic. Tolet.; Luc Tuden.; Marian. Hist. Espan.; Ferrer. Hist.

GARCIAS, king of Leon and Oviedo, and son of Alphonso III, having conspired against his father, the latter abdicated in his favour in 908. Garcias died after a reign of little more than three years, and was succeeded by his younger brother Ordogno. The effigy of this prince is given, as in the annexed figure.

GARCIAS, surnamed Fernandez, count of Castille, succeeded his father Ferdinand Gonsales in 942, and was killed in battle against the Moors in 990.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho, succeeded his father Garcias I, and died in 1019, after a warlike and successful reign, in which he obtained great successes over the Moors.

GARCIAS, Don Sancho III, son of the preceding, and last count of Castille, was assassinated in 1025 by the king of Leon, when Castille passed, by the marriage of his sister, into the house of Navarre.

GARCILASSO, de la Vega (Hist.) or Garcias Lasso de la Vega, a Spanish poet, of a noble family at Toledo, was born in 1500 or 1508, and after serving in the campaigns in Germany, Africa, and Provence, he was killed in 1536 in this last expedition, by a stone thrown from a tower, which fell upon his head as he was leading on his battalion. His works, which place him in the first rank of poets, were all printed at Naples in 1664, under the title 'Garcilasso de la Vega Obras Poeticas con Annotationes de Franc Sanchez,' 8vo. [Vide Plate XXVIII]

GARCILASSO, de la Vega, an historian, distinct from the preceding, was the son of a gentleman of Cusco, and author of a history, in Spanish, of Florida, Peru, and the Incas.

GARDENSTONE, Lord (Biog.) one of the Judges in the Courts of Session and Justiciary, was born at Edinburgh in 1721, and died in 1793, leaving, 1. 'Miscellanies in Prose and Verse.' 2. 'Travelling Memorandums,' two volumes of which were published in his life-time, and a third volume appeared after his death, with an Account of his Life.

GARDINER, Stephen (Hist.) bishop of Winchester, and Chancellor of England, is commonly said to have been the illegitimate son of Lionel Woodvill, or Woodvylle, bishop of Salisbury, brother to Elizabeth, queen consort of Edward IV; although other accounts assign a more honourable descent to him from the Gardiners of Lancashire. He was born in 1483, at Bury St. Edmund's, in Suffolk, and after having risen by his talents as a negotiator and a statesman, to the highest posts, he enjoyed the confidence of Henry VIII until his death, was imprisoned and deprived of his bishopric in that of Edward VI, for his strenuous opposition to the reformation, but was restored to all his honours by Queen Mary, whose views in regard to religion he forwarded in such manner as to bring considerable odium on himself. He died in 1555, just after attending a parliament that had been summoned by his advice. He wrote, 1. 'De Verâ Obedientiâ,' 1534. 2. 'Palinodia dicti Libri.' 3. 'A necessary Doctrine of a Christian Man, set forth by the King's Majesty of England,' 1543. 4. 'An Explanation and Assertion of the true Catholic Faith,' &c. 5. 'Confutatio Cavillationum,' &c. written while he was a prisoner in the Tower. [Vide Plate X]

GARDINER, James, a colonel in the English army, was born at Carriden, in Linlithgowshire, in Scotland, in 1687, and killed while fighting bravely at the head of his men at the battle of Preston Pans in 1745. His Life has been written by Dr. Doddridge, who relates his sudden conversion from libertinism to piety.

GARDINER, Alen, Lord, or Gardner, a distinguished naval officer, was born in 1742, commenced his career in the navy in 1755, and, rising by his merits through the several gradations of rank, he died Admiral of the White in 1809, after having obtained the honour of the peerage for his signal services, particularly in the actions of May 29, and June 1, of 1794, under Lord Howe, and in the action off Port L'Orient in 1795, when he was second in command under Lord Bridport.

GARDINER (Her.) the name of a family of Ireland, in whom the title of Viscount Mountjoy, was revived in 1795, in the person of the Hon. Luke Gardiner, allied by marriage to the family of Stewart, who had enjoyed this title until the death of William, the third Viscount Mountjoy, and first Earl of Blessington in 1769. The title of Earl of Blessington was revived in 1816 in the person of his son Charles John, second Viscount Mountjoy. [Vide Blessington]

GARDINER, or Gardner, the name of a family of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, of which was admiral lord Gardiner above-mentioned, who was created a baronet in 1794, a peer of Ireland in 1802, and an English peer in 1806. His son, Allan Hyde, was created a viscount in 1815. The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Gardiner, viscount and baron Gardiner, of Uttoxeter, co. Stafford, and baron Gardiner, in the peerage of Ireland, and baronet.

GARNOCK, Viscount (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Crawford and Lindsay.

GAROFALO (Biog.) vide Tisi.

GARONNE (Geog.) one of the largest rivers of France, called by the ancients Garumna, takes its rise among the Pyrennees, on the borders of Catalonia, and falls into the Atlantic, after a course of 400 miles, in which it passes by Bourdeaux, and receives the Arriege, the Tarn, the Baise, the Lot, the Dordogne, and a number of other smaller streams.

GARRARD, Marc (Biog.) or Gerards, a Flemish painter, was born at Bruges in 1561, and died in 1635, having been painter to queen Elizabeth, and Anne of Denmark. His works are numerous, and are still in es mation.

GARRICK, David (Biog.) the unrivalled actor, grandson of Mr. Garrick, a merchant of France, who fled to England at the revocation of the edict of Nantes, was born in 1716, and died in 1779, after having acquired the reputation of being a perfect master in the histrionic art, which he retained undiminished to his last moments. He was also distinguished as a dramatic and poetical writer, having, according to the Biographia Dramatica, written not less than 38 pieces, some of which were original, besides sonnets, songs, elegies, &c. A monument has been erected to his memory in Westminster abbey, and his life has been written by Thomas Davies. [Vide Plate XXXI] His widow, whose maiden name was Violetta, was a native of Vienna, and an admired dancer previous to her marriage with Mr. Garrick in 1749. She survived him 43 years, and died in 1822, at the age of 99.

GARSAULT, Francis Alexander de (Biog.) grandson of M. Garsault, inspector-general of the studs throughout the kingdom, died in 1778, at the age of 85, leaving, 1. 'Nouveau parfait Marechal,' 4to. 1770. 2. 'Le Guide du Cavalier,' 12mo. 1769. 3. 'Les Faits des Causes celebres,' 12mo. 4. 'Le Notionaire de ce qu'il y a de plus utile dans les Connoissances acquirées,' 8vo.

GARTH, Sir Samuel (Biog.) a poet, and physician, of a good family in Yorkshire, died in 1718. His 'Dispensary,' which is his principal piece, and has given him a place among the British poets, was first published in 1699, and went through three impressions in a few months; the sixth edition was published in 1706, with considerable additions. [Vide Plate XXIX]

GARZI, Louis (Biog.) a painter, was born at Rome in 1640, and died in 1721. His paintings are held in great estimation in Italy.

GARZONI, Thomas (Biog.) an Italian writer, was born at Bagnacavallo, near Ferrara, in 1549, and died in 1589, leaving several moral works, which were printed in 4to. Venice, 1617, the principal of which was 'La Piazza universale di tutte le Professioni del Mondo,' which went through several editions.

GASCOIGNE, Sir William (Hist.) Chief Justice of the King's Bench in the reign of Henry IV. the descendant of a noble family of Yorkshire, originally from Normandy, was born about 1350; made one of the King's Serjeants at Law in 1398; sat as Judge in the Court of Common Pleas in 1399; was made Chief Justice of the King's Bench in 1401; and after distinguishing himself in this office by his rectitude, and skill in the law, died in 1413, honoured by his sovereign, Henry V, whom, as prince of Wales, he had committed to prison for contempt of court. From him descended the unfortunate earl of Strafford, in the reign of Charles I.

GASCOIGNE, George (Biog.) an English poet, of a good family in Essex, was educated mostly at Cambridge, and after being disinherited by his father, he engaged in a military life, in which he experienced some adventures, and died in 1577, leaving 'The Steel Glasse;' the 'Glasse of Government;' the 'Delicate Diet;' 'Dooms-Day Drum,' and other pieces, which have been more than once published together; but the editions of his works are now very scarce and often imperfect. A pamphlet has since been brought to light, under the title of 'A Remembrance of the well-spent Life and godly End of George Gascoigne, Esq. who deceased at Stamford, in Lincolnshire, 7th October, 1577, reported by George Whetstone;' which consists of about 13 pages 4to. black letter, and has therefore been an object of curiosity among bibliomaniacs.

GASCONY (Geog.) a former province of France, which was called by Latin writers Vasconia, and formed a part of Aquitania. It comprehends the modern departments of the Upper Pyrenees, the Gers, the Landes, part of the Lower Pyrenees, the Upper Garonne, and the Lot and Garonne.

GASPARINO, Barzizza (Biog.) a grammarian, was born at Barzizza, near Bergamo, in 1370, and died in 1480. His works, consisting of treatises on grammar and rhetoric, &c. were collected and printed by cardinal Furietti, in 4to. Rom. 1725, with those of his son Guiniforte Gasparino. His 'Epistolæ' were the first typographical production in France, under the title of 'Gasp. Pergamensis (Bergomensis) Epistolæ,' 4to. without date, but printed in 1470.

GASSENDI, Peter (Biog.) a mathematician, and astronomer, was born in 1592, at Chantensier, in Provence, and died in 1655. His works were published at Leyden, in 6 vols. fol. 1658, by his executor M. de Monmor; and his life was accurately written by Bougerelle, a priest of the oratory at Paris, in 1737.

GASTAUD, Francis (Biog.) a French divine, died in 1731, leaving, among his theological publications, 'A Collection of Homilies on the Epistles to the Romans,' 2 vols. 12mo.; besides which he wrote a book against the Jesuits, entitled 'The Jesuits unmasked.'

GASTRELL, Francis (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born about 1662, at Slapton, in Northamptonshire; educated at Oxford; promoted to the see of Chester in 1714; and died in 1725. His works are, 1. 'Some Considerations concerning the Trinity, and the Ways of managing that Controversy,' of which a third edition was published in 1707. 2. 'The Christian Institutes,' &c. 1707, and frequently reprinted since. 3. 'Remarks on the Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, by Dr. Samuel Clark.' 4. 'The Bishop of Chester's Case with relation to the Wardenship of Manchester; in which is shown that no other Degrees but such as are taken in the University can be deemed legal Qualifications for any Ecclesiastical Preferment in England,' Oxford, 1720; a pamphlet which, though written in reference to the case of a private individual, yet, as it involved the rights and privileges of the University, the bishop received their solemn thanks. Besides which, a treatise entitled 'A moral Proof of a Future State,' in 8vo. is ascribed to him, although without his name.

GATAKER, Thomas (Biog.) an English divine, descended from a good family of that name, at Gat-acre Hall, in Shropshire, was born in 1574, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1654, leaving, 1. 'A Discourse of the Nature and Use of Lots; a Treatise Historical and Theological,' 4to. 1619. 2. 'De Nomine Tetragrammato,' 1645, in defence of the common way of pronouncing the word Jehovah in England. 3. 'De Dipthongis sive Bivocalibus,' 1646. 4. 'A Mistake, or Misconstruction removed,' &c.; being an answer to a treatise on 'Free Grace;' most of these, with some other works, were published in his 'Opera Critica,' fol. Ultraj. 1678.

GATAKER, Charles, son of the preceding, was born in 1614, at Rotherhithe, in Surrey, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1680, leaving several works of a Calvinistic cast.

GATH (Bibl.) גת, a city of the Philistines, and one of their five principalities. It was the most southern of their cities, as Ekron was the most northern. 1 Sam. v. &c.

GATH-RIMMON (Bibl.) a city of Dan. Josh. xix.

GATH-RIMMON, a city of Ephraim. 1 Chron. vi.

GATIMOTZIN (Hist.) the last of the Mexican kings, and nephew to Montezuma, who, after being tortured by Cortez to make him discover his treasures, was ignominiously hanged in his capital, with many of his caziques, in 1526.

GAVASTON, Piers (Hist.) son of a Gascon Knight, in the service of Edward I, and the favourite of Edward II, rendered himself so odious to the barons, by the influence which he gained over the monarch, and the misuse he made of his favour, that after being twice banished by the rebel barons, and as often recalled by the king, he was at length seized by the earl of Warwick, and beheaded, in violation of the laws, and the terms of the capitulation.

GAUBIL, Anthony (Ecc.) one of the French missionaries, was born at Caillac in 1708, and died in 1759, at Pekin, after a residence of 38 years in that country. He published a History of Ghenghis-Khan, 4to. 1739; and after his death appeared a translation of the 'Chou-King,' in 1771, a work held in the utmost veneration by the Chinese. His eulogium may be found in the thirty-first volume of the 'Lettres Curieuses et Edifiantes.'

GAUBIUS, Jerome David (Biog.) a German physician, was born at Heidelberg in 1701, and died in 1780, leaving, 1. 'Dissertatio Inauguralis de solidis Humani Corporis Partibus,' Lugd. Bat. 1725. 2. 'Libellus de Methodo concinnandi Formulas Medicamentorum,' ibid. 1739, 1767, Francof. 1750; and in French, Paris. 1749. 3. 'De Regimine Mentis, quoad Medicorum est,' Lugd. Bat. 1747, 1763. 4. 'Institutiones Pathologiæ Medicinalis,' ibid. 1758; and frequently reprinted and translated. 5. 'Adversariorum varii Argumenti Liber unus,' ibid. 1771. 6. 'Oratio Panegyrica in Auspicium Sæculi tertii Academiæ Batavis quæ Leidæ est,' &c. fol. 1775.

GAUCHER, Charles Stephen (Biog.) a French engraver, was born at Paris in 1740, and died in 1803. As an artist he succeeded principally in engraving portraits, and as an author he published, 1. 'Observations sur le Costume François,' in the 'Journal des Beaux Arts.' 2. 'De l'Origine et de la Suppression des Cloches.' 3. 'Voyage au Havre.' 4. 'Amour Maternel,' a successful dramatic piece. 5. 'Iconologie, ou Traité complet des Allegories et Emblemes,' 4 vols. 8vo. 6. 'Essai sur la Gravure.' 7. 'Traité d'Anatomie a l'Usage des Artistes,' fol. with fine engravings; besides the articles concering engravers, which he wrote for Fontenay's Dictionary of Artists in 1770.

GAUDEN, John (Ecc.) son of John Gauden, vicar of Mayfield, in Essex, was born there in 1605; educated at Cambridge; and, after acting his part on the side of rebellion, he, with more sincerity, advocated the cause of the restoration, which procured his nomination to the see of Exeter in 1659, and his translation to the see of Worcester in 1662. He died in the same year, leaving, 1. 'Certain Scruples and Doubts of Conscience about taking the solemn League and Covenant,' &c. 1643. 2. 'The religious and loyal Protestation of John Gauden, Doctor in Divinity, against the present declared Purposes and Proceedings of the Army, &c. in which he protests against trying the King, &c. 4to. Lond. 1648. 3. 'A just Invective against those of the Army, and their Abettors, who murthered King Charles I, on the 30th of January, 1648; with some other Poetical Pieces in Latin, referring to those tragical Times, written Feb. 10, 1648,' but not published until after the restoration, in 1662. 4. 'Εἰκὼν Βασιλική,' or the Portraiture of his Sacred Majesty, in his Solitude and Sufferings,' drawn from the MSS. of the king himself, which Dr. Gauden got into his possession, and digested into a form for publication. This he ventured to print immediately after the royal murder; but it was suppressed by every means by the domineering party. It has since been a subject of much controversy as to the share which Gauden had in the composition of this work. He claimed the whole merit of it to himself, and doubtless great merit is due to him for the care he took in preparing it for publication; but the matter and the manner being more suitable to the character of the king than his own, it is most reasonable to conclude that it was composed from materials written by the king. 5. 'Hieraspistes, or, an Apology of the Ministers of the Church of England,' 1653. 6. 'The Case of Ministers' Maintenance by Tithes (as in England) plainly discussed in Conscience and Prudence,' 1653; written at the time that tithes were abolished. 7. 'A Petitionary Remonstrance presented to O. P. by John Gauden, D. D. a Son, Servant, and Supplicant for the Church of England, in behalf of many Thousands of his distressed Brethren, Ministers of the Gospel, and other good Scholars, who were deprived of all Public Employment,' 1659. 8. 'A Discourse concerning Public Oaths, and the Lawfulness of swearing in Judicial Proceedings, in order to answer the Scruples of the Quakers,' 1649. 9. 'Ἱερα Δάκρυα, Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ Suspiria; or, The Tears, Sighs, Complaints, and Prayers of the Church of England, setting forth her former Constitution, compared with her present Condition, also the visible Causes and probable Cures of her Distemper, fol. in four Books,' 1659. 10. 'Anti-Sacrilegus; or, A Defensative against the plausible or gilded Poison of that nameless Paper supposed to be the Plot of Cornelius Burges and his Partners, which tempts the King's Majesty by the offer of 500,000*l*. to make good, by an Act of Parliament, to the Purchasers of Bishops' Lands, &c. their illegal Bargain for 99 Years,' 4to. 1660. 11. 'Considerations touching the Liturgy of the Church of England, in reference to his Majesty's late Declaration, and in order to a happy Union in Church and State,' 1660. 12. 'Analysis against the Covenant in Defence of the Hierarchy.' 13. 'Anti-Baal-Berith, or, the Binding of the Covenant and all the Covenanters to their good Behaviour,' &c.; both written and printed before he became a bishop. 14. 'Life of Hooker,' prefixed to an edition of Hooker's works, published by him in 1661. 15. 'Pillar of Gratitude, humbly dedicated to the Glory of God, the Honour of his Majesty, &c. for restoring Episcopacy,' 1662. 16. 'A Discourse of Artificial Beauty, in point of Conscience, between two Ladies,' 1662, published after his death. 17. 'Prophecies concerning the Return of Popery,' 1663; published, with some other tracts on the same subject, by Whitgift, Hooker, and Sanderson. 18. 'The whole Duty of a Communicant,' &c. published in 1681, with bishop Gauden's name prefixed to it.

GAUDENTIUS, St. (Ecc.) bishop of Brescia at the end of the fourth century, was sent in the year 405 to Constantinople, with the legates of pope Innocent, to re-establish St. Chrysostom in his see, and to hold a general council. He died about 410, or, according to others, about 427, leaving a number of works, a complete edition of which was published at Brescia in 1738. Some of his pieces are inserted in the 'Bibliotheca Patrum,' vol. v.

'Walk, Knaves, walk,' with the name of Turbervil in the title-page, but written by Gayton while in the King's Bench prison, and published in 1659. 7. 'Wit revived, or a new and excellent Way of Divertisement,' 12mo. Lond. 1660, published under the name of Asdryasdust Tossoffacan, allusive to the author's habits. 8. 'Poem upon Mr. Jacob Bobart's Yeomen of the Guards to the Physic Garden,' &c. Oxford, 1662. Most of the above are in prose and verse, and have but little value now, except for book-collectors.

GAZA, Theodore (Biog.) a Greek scholar, was born at Thessalonica, in Greece, in 1398, came to Italy in 1430, upon the invasion of his country by the Turks, and died at Rome in 1478. His works consisted of original pieces and translations: of the former are, 1. 'Grammaticæ Græcæ Libri quatuor,' written in the Greek, and first printed at Venice, 1495; afterwards at Basil, in 1522, with a Latin translation by Erasmus. 2. 'Liber de Atticis Mensibus, Græcè,' by way of supplement to his grammar. 3. 'Epistola ad Franciscum Philelphum de Origine Turcarum, Græcè, cum Versione Leonis Allatii,' printed by the translator, Colon. 1653. His translations are either from Greek into Latin; as of 'Aristotelis Libri novem Historiæ Animalium,;' 'De Partibus Animalium Libri quatuor;' and 'De Generatione

Animalium Libri quinque,' Venet. 1476; also of Aristotle's 'Problemata;' 'Theophrasti Historiæ Plantarum,' &c.; 'Alexandri Problematum Libri duo;' 'Æliani Liber de instruendis Aciebus;' 'I. Chrysostomi Homiliæ quinque de Incomprehensibili Dei Natura:' or from Latin into Greek; as of Cicero's pieces, 'De Senectute,' and 'De Somnio Scipionis,' both printed in Aldus' Edition of Cicero's Works, 8vo. 1523. [Vide Plate XXIII]

Gaza, Æneas, vide Æneas.

Gaza (Bibl.) עזה, a city of the Philistines given by Joshua to Judah. Josh. xv. 47.

History of Gaza.

This town, which was afterwards a famous city of Palestine, was situated not far from the sea, and was well fortified with spacious walls. It first belonged to the Philistines, and afterwards to the Jews; but recovered its liberty, and was governed by kings of its own, when it was conquered by Hezekiah, and afterwards fell into the hands of the Chaldeans, from whom it passed into those of the Persians. They occupied it until it was besieged, taken, and destroyed by Alexander. It was afterwards possessed by the kings of Egypt, during which time it was taken and sacked by Antiochus the Great. The Maccabees took it several times; Alexander Jannæus, king of the Jews, took and destroyed it; Gabinius, the Roman consul, repaired it; Augustus gave it to Herod the Great; after which it changed its name as well as its site. The old town, which is the Greater Gaza, was, according to St. Luke (Acts viii. 26), a desert place; but the Little Gaza, called Majuma, became very populous, and received the name of Constantia, from the emperor Constantine, in honour of his sister. It is now pronounced Rassa, with a strong guttural, by the Arabs, and is still a considerable place; whither the English carried their successful arms in the war with Bonaparte. 1 *Maccab. GELANOR (Hist.) a king of the Argives, who succeeded Sthenelus, according to Apollodorus and Pausanias, about 1150 years before the Christian æra, but Castor and Eusebius, Tatian and Hyginus, make no mention of him among the kings of Argos.

GELASIUS (Ecc.) the name of two popes.

GELASIUS I, succeeded Felix II in 492, and died in 496, after having in vain endeavoured to unite the eastern and western churches. Some Letters and other pieces are extant of this pope. Baron. Annal. ann. 492; Gennad. de Script. Eccles. l. 94.

GELASIUS II, a native of Gaieta, was created cardinal by Urban II in 1088, elected to the pontificate after Pascal II in 1118, ejected by the emperor Henry V, in favour of Gregory, and after endeavouring in vain to recover the papal chair, he retired to Clugny, in France, and died in 1119. Gelasius was the author of the Lives of some Saints, and other works. Baron. Annal.

GELASIUS the Elder, nephew of Cyril, bishop of Jerusalem, was consecrated bishop of Cæsarea in 380, and died in 394. Of his works, which were numerous and well esteemed, only a few fragments are extant.

GELASIUS of Cyzicus, bishop of Cæsarea about 476, composed a History of the Nicene Creed.

GELDENHAUR, Gerard Eobanus (Biog.) a divine and historian, was born at Nimeguen in 1482, and died in 1542. His works are, 1. 'Historia Batavica, cum Appendice de vetusta Batavorum Nobilitate,' Argentorat. 1533, but Vossius mentions an earlier edition in 1520. 2. 'De Batavorum Insula.' 3. 'Vita Philippi à Burgundiâ, Episcopi Ultrajectensis,' ibid. 1529. 4. 'Germaniæ Inferioris Historia,' Argentorat. 1532. 5. History of Geneva.

Geneva was known to the ancients by the various names of Januba, Genabum, Janiba, and Civitas Genevensium, as well as that of Geneva, its present name. It became a Roman colony, after the conquest of Gaul by Julius Cæsar, but, on the decline of the Roman empire, it suffered much from the irruptions of the barbarians, until it came successively into the hands of the dukes of Burgundy, the kings of France, and the dukes of Savoy. The latter retained only a partial authority over the city, leaving the administration of government to the citizens until 1518, when Charles III, duke of Savoy, wishing to assert his rights over Geneva, a party of the inhabitants, distinguished by the name of Eidgenossen, or confederates, assisted by the three cantons of Switzerland, Schwiss, Uri, and Underwald, shook off the yoke altogether; not, however, without great intestine commotions between the patricians and the popular party, who denominated their opponents Mameluks, or slaves, and succeeded in expelling them at one time, since which period it has been a scene of warfare between the contending factions. In the French revolution it had its full share of troubles, and was annexed to France; but the downfal of Buonaparte procured for it a restoration of its ancient republic.

Ecclesiastical History of Geneva.

St. Nazarius, said to be a disciple of St. Peter, is reputed to have been the first bishop of Geneva, who was succeeded by Paracedes Donnellus, who died in 132; Hyginus, who died in 155; Frontius, at first a high-priest of Apollo, and, after becoming a convert, died in 179; among his successors are Tiburnus Salvianus, Cassianus Theophilus, Isarius, Domitianus, and Maximilian, who assisted at the council of Chalcedon. From 473 to the 16th century, when Geneva threw off its obedience to the popes, it was governed by 77 bishops. This city, which so strenuously asserted its freedom from the political dominion of a foreign power, was the first to embrace Protestantism in its most popular form, and has since been the resort of every description of persons the most ill-affected to ecclesiastical establishments. It readily accepted of Calvin as the leader and framer of its religious creed, which accorded so well with the conceited, gloomy, and lawless character of its inhabitants. St. Marth. Gallia. Christ. Minutol. Chron. Epis. Genev. &c.

GENGHISKHAN (Hist.) or Jenghis Khan, son of Jessugi Bayadur, otherwise called Piscouca, a khan of the Moguls, was born at Diloun in the year of the Hegira 559, A. D. 1169, begun to reign at the age of thirty, and at first was obliged to fly from his kingdom to escape a conspiracy formed against him; but having soon after assembled an army, he regained possession of his dominions, and died in the year of the Hegira 624, after having founded one of the greatest empires in the world. *Abu'lghazi. This deity received its name à gignendo, i. e. from begetting or producing, because he was invested with the power of framing the fortunes of every person over whom he presided. There was also a genius who presided over places. [Vide Genius under Numismatics] Some of the ancients assigned two genii to each person, the one bad, and the other good, who determined the actions of men, either to good or bad, according as they exerted their influence.

GENIUS (Numis.) this deity, as the guardian of the emperors and of places, is commonly represented naked, holding a platter in the right hand, after the manner of one making an offering; and in the left, a cornucopia, to denote the productive power of the Genius; to this is sometimes added an altar: but the genius of towns is very frequently represented by the turreted head of a female, to denote the walls of which the Genii were supposed to be the guardians. The following inscriptions testify how much regard was paid by the Romans to the Genius:—GEN. AUG.—GEN. COL. ANTIOCH.—GEN. COL. COR.—GENIO AUGUSTI.—GENIO CAESARIS.—GENIO EXERCITUS.—GENIO IMPERATORIS.—GENIO POP. ROM.—GENIO POPULI ROMANI.—GENIO. P. R. S. Q.—GENIUS POPULI ROMANI. Vaill. Pr. Col. &c.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Patin. Impp. Numis. &c.

GENNADIUS (Ecc.) patriarch of Constantinople, succeeded Anatolius in 458, and died in 471, after having governed his see with great zeal and prudence. He wrote several theological works, none of which are extant, except a circular Epistle against Simony, inserted in vol. iv. of the Collect. Concil., and a Fragment of a Work against the Anathemas of St. Cyril.

GENNADIUS (Biog.) a priest, but not a bishop of Marseilles, as some have asserted, who died about 492, was the author of some works, two of which are extant; namely, 1. 'De Dogmatibus Ecclesiasticis,' falsely attributed to St. Augustin, and printed in his works. 2. 'De Illustribus Ecclesiæ Scriptoribus,' in St. Jerome's works, fol. Antv. 1639, fol. Hamb. 1718.

GENNARI, Cæsar (Biog.) an Italian artist, the pupil and nephew of Guercino, followed his profession at Bologna, where he closely imitated the style of his uncle.

GENNARI, Benedetto, brother to the preceding, was painter to James II of England, whose portrait he took, as also those of his family. He died in 1715, at the age of 82, leaving, among his historical works, a St. Leopardo in the dome of Osimo, and a St. Zaccaria at Forli.

GENNARI, Bartolomeo, uncle to the preceding, was less successful than either as a copyist of Guercino.

GENNARI, Lorenzo, of Rimini, probably of the same family, and also a pupil of Guercino, is creditably known by a picture at the Capuchins.

GENOA (Geog.) a maritime city in the N. W. of Italy, capital of a republic of the same name, which extends 150 miles along that part of the Mediterranean called the Gulf of Genoa; it is 62 miles S. E. Turin, and 120 W. N. W. Florence. Lon. 8° 36′ E. lat. 44° 25′ N.

History of Genoa.

This city, of which mention is made under its ancient name of Genua [vide Genua], passed from the dominion of the Romans in the seventh century to that of the Lombards, being reduced to subjection, with the whole coast of Genoa, by Rotharis, king of the Lombards, in 638; but when Liguria was conquered by Charlemagne in 774, Genoa, which gave its name to the whole line of coast, was erected into a marquisate, which was given by the emperor to Audemarus, his relation, and the first count or margrave. In 935 the city of Genoa was attacked, taken, plundered, and burnt by the Saracens, who made a sudden irruption into that country, but the Genoese soon after repaired these losses; and, availing themselves of the distracted state of the French affairs in Italy, formed themselves into a republic, and were governed by their own magistrates; from this time they experienced all the intestine commotions incident to popular governments, and underwent numerous revolutions. It has been observed that Genoa, from the 11th to the 16th centuries, had not less than twelve different forms of government, having, for its magistrates, marquisses or counts, consuls, podestats, captains, governors, lieutenants, rectors of the people, abbots of the people, reformers, noble and popular dukes. The last form of government, which was most lasting, was a sort of aristocracy, at the head of which was the doge or duke, whose office was biennial. It was governed by consuls, or podestas, from 1099 to 1257, when William Boccanegra was elected president, or captain of the people, for 10 years, having 32 of the people chosen as his assistants under the name of ancients. This form of government continued till 1262, when the nobles regained the power until 1339, when a popular faction chose Simon Boccanegra for their chief under the name of a duke; he was expelled in 1344, and his place supplied by John de Mutta, who died in 1350. His successor, John de Valenti, abdicated in 1353, when the Genoese submitted to John Visconti, archbishop of Milan, who gave the government to William, marquis of Pallavicini; he was dispossessed of his power three years after to make way for the re-establishment of the popular leader Simon Boccanegra. This latter was succeeded by Gabriel Adorni, Dominico Fregosa, Nicholas de Guareo, Antonio Adorni, and Leonard de Montardo, &c. until Genoa became subject to the French in the reign of Charles VI, who appointed governors. The last of these was John le Maingre, in whose absence in 1409 the Genoese massacred the French, and re-established their own magistrates, during which period they were exposed to incessant revolutions, until they became again subject to the French in the reign of Charles VII; but having driven the latter from their city in 1461, they yielded to Francis Sforza, duke of Milan, and were afterwards governed successively by Baptiste and Paul Fregosa under the name of dukes; and then again by the dukes of Milan until the conquest of their city in 1499 by Louis XII. They revolted in 1506, and were retaken the same year, when Francis de Rochechouart was appointed their governor; but the French being once more dispossessed of their power in 1512, John Fregosa was created their duke, whom they expelled the next year. The Adorni, by whose assistance this last revolution was effected, now came into power, and Antonio was appointed their governor; he was however soon compelled by the people to give up his government to Octavian Fregosa, who, under the title of duke, governed with much prudence until 1522, when the city of Genoa was pillaged by the army of Charles V under the command of the marquis of Pescaro. Francis I reconquered Genoa in 1527; and Andrew Doria, as its doge, contributed most to establish the form of government which they enjoyed for a considerable length of time. They suffered, however, by foreign invasion during the wars of Lewis XIV with the house of Austria and Great Britain; and again still more during the revolutionary wars of France, when in 1798 Genoa was annexed to the Ligurian Republic, and sustained, two years after, a dreadful siege while occupied by the French under Massena; and had hardly been surrendered by the latter when the victory of Marengo placed it again in their hands. In 1805 it was incorporated, with its territory, into the French empire, forming the departments of Genoa, Montenotte, and the Apennines; and, on the fall of Bonaparte in 1814, it surrendered to a British naval force, since which time it has, agreeably to the decision of the Congress of Vienna, been made over to the king of Sardinia, but retains its own laws, senate, supreme court of justice, and provincial councils, &c.

GENOVESI, Anthony (Biog.) in Latin Antonius Genuensis, an Italian writer, was born at Castilione in 1712, and died in 1769, leaving, 1. 'Disciplinarum Metaphysicarum Elementa Mathematica in Morem adornata,' 4 vols. 8vo. 1744—1751. 2. 'Elementorum Artis Logico-Criticæ Libri quinque,' Neapol. 1745. 3. 'Discorso sopra alcuni Trattata d'Agricoltura,' ibid. 1753. 4. 'Lettere Accademiche,' ibid. 1764. 5. A Translation of Carey's History of English Trade under the title of 'Storia del Commercio della Gran Brettagna,' &c. 1757. 6. 'Delle Lezioni di Commercio,' 7. 'The most Delectable, Scriptural, and Pious History of the famous and magnificent great Eastern Window in St. Peter's Cathedral, York,' 8vo. ibid. 1762.

GENTIANUS, James (Hist.) a valiant knight, who defended the person of Philip the Fair with extraordinary courage at the battle of Mons in 1304, for which service he was permitted to add to his coat of arms a bend azure, semée with fleurs-de-lis.

GENTIANUS, Peter (Biog.) an ancient French poet, of the same family as the preceding, who flourished about 1304, was the author of different works in verse, which are in private collections.

GENTILE, de Fabriano (Biog.) a celebrated painter of the 15th century, who was employed by Martin V in adorning the church of St. John de Lateran.

GENTILESCHI, Horatio (Biog.) an Italian painter, was born at Pisa in 1563, and died in 1647. After distinguishing himself at Florence, Rome, and other parts of Italy, he came to England, where he was patronized by king Charles I, and left specimens of his skill on the ceilings of Greenwich and York-house.

GENTILESCHI, Artemisia, daughter of the preceding, who died in 1642, was little inferior to her father in historic painting, and excelled him in portraits.

GENTILI, Luke (Ecc.) a cardinal and bishop of Luceria, was a native of Camerino, in Umbria, created a cardinal by pope Urban VI in 1378, and died in 1389.

GENTILI, Anthony Xavier, a cardinal, was born in 1681, and created a cardinal by Clement XII in 1731, after having filled various posts under the papal government.

GENTILIANUS (Biog.) surnamed Amelius, a Tuscan philosopher and disciple of Plotinus, flourished in the reign of Claudius, and composed a number of books in favour of his philosophy, mentioned by Porphyry. Porphyr. in Vit. Plotin.

GENTILIS, John Valentin (Ecc.) a Calabrian, and native of Cosenza, who, from a Roman Catholic, became an Arian; and, taking refuge in Geneva, set himself up against Calvin; and after flying from one country to another was beheaded at Berne, in Switzerland, in 1566.

GENTILIS (Biog.) or De Gentilibus, surnamed of Foligno, a physician, who died in 1348, was the author of, 1. 'Commentaria super Opera Avicennæ.' 2. 'Commentaria in Arte Galeni,' &c.

GENTILIS, Albericus, a civilian at Oxford, and the descendant of a noble family of the Marche of Ancona, was born in 1550, and died in 1611, leaving, among other things, 1. 'De Jure Belli.' 2. 'Lectiones Vigilianæ.' His father, Matthew Gentilis, who was a physician, and had embraced Protestantism, took refuge in England with his two sons.

GENTILIS, Scipio, brother of the preceding, was born in 1565, and died in 1616, leaving, 1. 'De Jure Publico Populi Romani.' 2. 'De Conjurationibus.' 3. 'De Donationibus inter Virum et Uxorem.' 4. 'De Bonis Maternis et Secundis Nuptiis,' which were published between 1602 and 1606; but his 'Epic Paraphrases of twenty-five of David's Psalms,' appeared in 4to. 1584; and his Translation of 'Tasso's Jerusalem,' into Latin Verse, in 4to. 1585.

GENTILIS, Robert, son of Alberic, was born at London in 1590, and died, as is supposed, about 1654, leaving, 1. 'Paul Servita's History of the Inquisition,' translated from the Italian. 2. A Translation of 'Malvezzi on the Success and chief Events of the Monarchy of Spain,' 12mo. 1639. 3. 'The Antipathy between the French and Spaniards,' from the Spanish, 12mo. 1641. 4. 'Considerations on the Lives of Alcibiades and Coriolanus,' translated from Malvezzi,' 12mo. 1650. 5. A compendious Method for attaining the Sciences in a short Time, with the Statutes of the Academy founded by Cardinal Richelieu,' from the French, 8vo. 1654.

GENTILLET, Innocent (Biog.) a Protestant lawyer of Vienne, in Dauphiny, in the 16th century, wrote, among other things, an Apology for the Protestant Religion.

GENTIUS (Hist.) a son of Pleuratus, and king of Illyricum, who, having, at the request of Perseus, king of Macedonia, imprisoned the Roman ambassadors, was conquered by Anicius, and led in triumph by his family, A. C. 169. Liv. l. 40, 43, &c.

GENTIUS (Numis.) several medals are extant bearing the effigy of one prince of this name; inscription ΒΑCΙΛΕ ΓΕΝΤΙΟΥ. Haverkamp. Morell. Fam.; Froel. Not. Elem.; Eckel. Num. Vet.; Neumann. Pop. Num.

GENTLEMAN, Francis (Biog.) a dramatic and poetical writer of Ireland, was born in 1728, and died in 1784, leaving not less than 15 dramatic pieces enumerated in the Biographia Dramatica; besides 'Characters, an Epistle,' 4to. 1766; 'Royal Fables,' 8vo. 1766; 'Dramatic Censor,' 2 vols. 8vo. 1770; and an edition of Shakspeare published by Bell in 1774–5.

GENUA (Geog.) now Genoa, a celebrated town of Liguria, which was utterly destroyed by Annibal, but was rebuilt by Cornelius Severus, and continued from that time to increase in wealth and importance amidst all the changes to which it was subject, until it ceased to be under the dominion of the Romans. [Vide Genoa] The name has been derived from Janus, a king of the Italians; but this conjecture rests on no other ground than the idea that it received in all probability its name from its founder. Liv. l. 21, &c.

GENUCIUS (Hist.) a tribune of the people, who was killed in his own house through the intrigues of his enemies. Liv. l. 2.

GENUSUS (Geog.) now Semno, a river of Macedonia, falling into the Adriatic above Apollonia. Lucan. l. 5.

GEOFFREY (Hist.) brother of king Henry II, made an incursion into the provinces of Anjou and Maine, to which he made some pretensions; but on the approach of the king, he withdrew his forces on condition of receiving an annual pension, which he did not live long to enjoy. He died in 1158, after having got possession of the territory of Nantz.

GEOFFREY, third son of Henry II, was invested with the duchy of Brittany, notwithstanding which, at the instigation of his mother Eleanor, he twice rebelled against his father; but before he could engage in open warfare was killed in a tournament in 1185.

GEOFFREY, natural son of Henry II, and the only one of his children who showed his duty to him, attended his corpse to the nunnery of Fontevrault, where it lay in state. This prince was afterwards archbishop in the reign of his brother Richard.

GEOFFREY, John (Ecc.) or Joffredi, a cardinal and bishop of Albi, was raised to that dignity by Pius II in 1461, and died in 1473, after having been employed on several negotiations.

GEOFFREY, surnamed of St. Aumer, one of the founders of the order of the Templars, commenced the establishment of this order in 1118 in conjunction with Hugh de Paganis and seven others, whose names are unknown.

GEOFFREY of Monmouth, vide Jeffry.

GEOFFREY, bishop of Chartres, assisted at the council of Sens in 1080, after he was deposed.

GEOFFREY de Lievres, bishop of Chartres in the 12th century, was elevated to this dignity in 1116, and died in 1139, after having been employed by Innocent II as a legate in Aquitania.

GEOFFROI, Stephen Francis (Biog.) a physician and chemist, was born at Paris in 1672, and died in 1731, leaving, 1. 'Le Code Medicamentaire de la Faculté de Paris,' published just before his death, and reprinted twice afterwards. 2. 'Tractatus de Materia Medica,' 3 vols. 8vo. Paris, 1741, by Antoine de Jussieu; several editions have been subsequently published, and it has been translated into French; a continuation of this work was published by Arnault de Nobleville, and Salerne, physicians of Orleans, entitled, 'Histoire Naturelle des Animaux,' 6 vols. 12mo. Paris, 1756, 1757. 3. From a MS. copy of his lectures, Dr. G. Douglas translated and published in 1736, 'A Treatise of the Fossil, Vegetable, and Animal Substances that are made use of in Physic.'

GEOFFROI, Claude Joseph, brother of the preceding, wrote an essay on the structure and use of the principal parts of flowers, and some other papers, inserted in the 'Memoires de l'Academie.'

GEORGE (Hist.) the name of some kings and princes.

GEORGE LEWIS I, son of Ernest Augustus, and elector of Hanover, was born in 1660, called to the throne of England in 1714, and died in 1727, after having been compelled to suppress a revolt in favour of the Stewart family.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS II, succeeded his father, George I, in 1727, and died in 1760. During his reign another insurrection was made in Scotland in 1745 in favour of the Stewarts, which was entirely quelled by the duke of Cumberland at the battle of Culloden.

GEORGE III, grandson and successor of George II, was born in 1738, and died in 1821, after the longest and most eventful reign in the annals of Great Britain.

GEORGE, Duke of Clarence, vide Clarence.

GEORGE, second son of Boden, a prince of Servia, succeeded Vladimir in 1115, and died in prison at Constantinople, after having been twice driven from his government, of which he was the second time stript by order of the emperor of Constantinople.

GEORGE, despot of Servia in 1440, died in 1457 of a wound which he received in battle against the Hungarians.

GEORGE, St. (Ecc.) the patron of England, is supposed to have suffered martyrdom in the reign of Diocletian, but nothing authentic is known respecting him.

GEORGE, a priest of Alexandria, set up by the Arians to be bishop, was at the council of Antioch, assembled by these heretics in 340, where he displayed a violent animosity towards St. Athanasius. Socrat. Hist. Eccles. l. 4; Theodoret. Hær. Fab.

GEORGE, an heretical bishop of Cappadocia, who was thrust into that see by the Arians on the expulsion of St. Athanasius, about 356, by the emperor Constantius; but, rendering himself odious by his cruelties and vices, he was ignominiously dragged in chains to prison, and murdered by the populace. Some have absurdly imagined this man to be the patron saint of England, but such a supposition is too absurd to need the refutation which Pegge, Milner, and others, have given to it. St. Athanas. Epist. ad Solib.; S. Epiphan. Hær. 76; Socrat. l. 2; Sozom. l. 4; Theodoret. l. 2; Ammian. Marcell. l. 22; Baron. Annal. ann. 356, &c.

GEORGE, a patriarch of Constantinople, succeeded Theodore in 678, and, after assisting at the sixth general council, he died in 682.

GEORGE, Scholarius, vide Scholarius.

GEORGE, archbishop of Nicomedia in the ninth century, was the friend of Photius, and author of several orations.

GEORGE, metropolitan of Corfu, about 1136, was sent to Rome by the emperor Manuel, to assist at the council there, but, being taken ill by the way, he did not reach that city.

GEORGE, a monk of Cyprus about 1283, was consecrated patriarch of Constantinople, but abdicated in 1290, a short time before his death. His Euloge of St. George the Martyr was published by Bollandus in Greek and Latin.

GEORGE, John Anthony de Saint, a cardinal, and bishop of Alexandria, was a native of Milan, created cardinal by pope

Alexander VI in 1493, and died in 1509, after having been sent on an embassy into Hungary by the duke of Milan.

George, surnamed Amira, patriarch of the Maronites, who died in 1641, was the author of a Syriac and Chaldee Grammar, published at Rome, 4to. 1596. He also introduced the reformation of the calendar on his return from Rome to his native country.

George (Her.) the name of a family of Irish extraction, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1808 on sir Rupert George; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, on a fesse engrailed gules, between three falcons rising azure, beaked, legged, and belted, or; three bezants, each charged with a lion's head erased sable; and on a canton vert, a harp or, stringed argent.

Crest. A falcon, as in the arms.

George (Biog.) surnamed Syncellus, vicar to the patriarch Tarasius, who flourished about 792, composed a Cosmography, which is inserted among the 'Byzantinæ Historiæ Scriptores,' 27 vols. fol. Venet. 1722—1733.

George of Trebisonde, vide Trapezuntius.

George, or Georgius Acropolyta, vide Acropolyta.

George, or Georgius Gemistus, vide Gemistus.

George, or Georgius Theophanes, vide Theophanes.

GEORGIA (Geog.) a country of Asia, called by the Persians Gurgistan, by the Turks Gurtshi, comprehends the ancient Iberia, and is bounded on the N. by Circassia, E. by Daghestan, S. by Persian Armenia, and W. by Imerita. Georgia was once an independant kingdom, the people of which were Christians, but falling into the hands of the Persians, its religion became corrupted by Mahometanism; and the government was given to princes appointed by the kings of Persia, until Russia disputed the right of the latter to this country, and finally became possessors of it in 1800, at the death of the last prince, Heraclius, since which time it has been annexed as a province to that empire.

Georgius (Biog.) vide George.

Georgius, Pisida, vide Pisida.

GERA (Bibl.) גרא, father of Ehud. Judg. iii. 15.

Gera of Benjamin, father of Shimei. 2 Sam. xvi. 5.

GERAR (Bibl.) גרר, a city of the Philistines, S. of Judah; the Abimelechs were kings of this city in the time of Abraham and Isaac. Gen. xx. According to St. Jerome, Gerar was three days' journey from Jerusalem.

GERARD (Hist.) duke, or governor-general of Provence, resisted the attacks of Charles the Bald, in the service of the emperor Lotharius, but was at length obliged to capitulate.

Gerard, Balthazar, a fanatic, and the assassin of William I, prince of Orange, was a native of Villefans, in Franche Comté, and, having conceived the design of assassinating this prince, on account of the interest he took in the Protestant cause, he effected his purpose by shooting him through the head, for which he suffered in 1584 the same punishment as Ravaillac and Damien.

Gerard, Richard, son of sir Thomas Gerard, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, signalized himself as an officer in king Charles's army during the rebellion, and died in 1686.

Gerard, Sir William, nephew of the preceding, was one of the last who held out in his Majesty's service, for which he suffered in his estate from the usurping powers.

Gerard, St. (Ecc.) bishop of Toul, in the 10th century, died in 994, after having led an exemplary life, and was canonized in 1050.

Gerard of Chonad, bishop of Chonad, in the 11th century, was murdered in 1047, after having laboured for some time at the conversion of the infidels.

Gerard I, bishop of Cambray, and the descendant of a noble family on the frontiers of France and Lorraine, died in 1051, after governing his see 37 years and upwards, during which time he displayed great wisdom and zeal in the government of his church, and in the improvement or rebuilding of churches.

Gerard II, grand nephew of the preceding, was raised to the see of Cambray in 1076, and died in 1094, distinguished for his munificent donations to the cathedral of Cambray, and many religious houses.

Gerard, surnamed Thom, founder of the order of Knights Hospitalers of Jerusalem, and afterwards of Malta, was born at Amalfi, and died in 1120. He took the religious habit in 1100, and, having associated himself with others to relieve all Christians in distress, thus laid the foundation of the above-mentioned order, which was confirmed by Anastasius IV.

Gerard, a fanatical leader of a sect, who, with 30 others of his companions, came over in the reign of Henry II into England with the view of making proselytes, but, after being branded and whipt through the streets, they were left to perish from cold and hunger. Nothing is known of these people, but that they were opposed to the Romish church, and were among the first who suffered for heresy in England. Matth. Par.

Gerard (Her.) the name of a family of Bryn, in Lancashire, which derives its descent from Otho, or Other, a rich and powerful lord in the time of king Alfred. The 18th in descent from this Otho was sir Thomas Gerard above-mentioned, who was created a baronet in 1611. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a saltire gules.

Crest. A monkey statant proper, chained round the loins or.

Motto. "En Dieu est mon esperance."

Gerard, Lewis (Biog.) a botanist, was the author of 'Flora Gallo-Provincialis,' 8vo. Par. 1761.

GERBILLON, John Francis (Ecc.) a Jesuit missionary in China, was born in 1654, and died in 1707, leaving an account of his travels and observations on Great Tartary, published in Du Halde's History of China.

GERDIL, Hyacinth Sigismund (Ecc.) a cardinal, was born at Samoens in 1718, made a cardinal in 1777, and died in 1802, leaving some metaphysical works against Locke and others, which were all published together at Bologna, in 6 vols. 4to.

GEREE, John (Biog.) a puritan, and native of Yorkshire, was born in 1600, educated at Oxford, and died in 1649, leaving several controversial tracts.

GERGENTI (Geog.) Girgenti, or Agrigenti, the ancient Agrigentum [vide Agrigentum], a town of Sicily, which is even now considerable, though not equal to what it was formerly. It suffered much from the irruptions of the Saracens; but, on the removal of the barbarians from the island, it has experienced no other vicissitudes than what has befallen the whole kingdom of Sicily. The most remarkable ruins here are the temples of Jupiter Olympius, Juno, Diana, Concordia, and Hercules. It is an episcopal town, formerly suffragan of Syracuse, but now of Palermo, situated 60 m. S. Palermo, and 27 N. W. Alicata. Lon. 14° 30′ E. lat. 37° 23′ N. Leand. Albert. Descript. Sicil.

GERHARD, John (Biog.) a Lutheran, was born at Quedlinburgh in 1582, and died in 1637. His works, which are written in Latin and German, consist of treatises on theology, &c. One only of these, namely, his 'Meditations,' is known in this country, which has gone through many editions, and been translated into most European languages, and also into Greek.

Gerhard, John Ernest, son of the preceding, was born at Altdorf in 1621, and died in 1688, leaving among his works, 'Harmonia Linguarum Orientalium;' 'Disputationum Theologicarum Fasciculus,' &c.; 'De Ecclesiæ Copticæ Ortu, Progressu, et Doctrinâ,' &c.

GERLACH, Stephen (Biog.) a Lutheran divine, was born at Knitlingen, in Suabia, in 1546, and died in 1612, leaving, besides many pieces of controversy, also a Journal, in German, of an embassy to the Porte, fol. Francfort, 1674.

GERMAIN, St. I. (Ecc.) a patriarch of Constantinople, and son of the patriarch Justinian, who was killed by Constantine Pogonatus, was raised to this see in 715, driven from it by Leo the Isaurian in 730, and died about 740, at the age of 100. He wrote a variety of theological works. Theophanes, Zonaras, and Cedrenus, Annal.; Niceph. in Chron.; Phot. Bibl.; Baron. Annal. &c.

Germain II, surnamed Nauphis, succeeded Manuel in the see of Constantinople in 1221, and died in 1239, having taken up his residence at Nice, after the capture of Constantinople.

Germain III, was translated from the see of Adrianople to the patriarchate of Constantinople in 1267, and renounced his dignity the same year, having Joseph for his successor.

Germain, St. bishop of Auxerre in the fifth century, died in 448, or 449, after having been sent into England three several times, to combat the heresies of Pelagius and Celestius.

Germain, St. a bishop of Capua, died in 520, after having been employed on different legations to the emperors Anastasius and Justinian, to induce them to withdraw their protection from heretics. S. Gregor. l. 4; Baron. Annal. &c.

Germain, St. bishop of Paris, and one of the most celebrated prelates of the sixth century, was elected to succeed Libanius, and died about 576, or 579, after having been sedulous in the discharge of his ecclesiastical duties. A letter of his is still extant, addressed to queen Brunehaut, exhorting her to prevent king Sigebert from making war on king Chilperic.

Germain (Her.) the name assumed by George, younger son of the first duke of Dorset, who was created viscount Sackville in 1782. [Vide Sackville]

Germain, Thomas (Biog.) an artist of Paris, who died in 1748, at the age of 74, distinguished himself as a goldsmith, an architect, and a designer.

GERMANIA (Geog.) Germany, an extensive country of Europe, the name of which has been variously derived; but in all probability owes its origin to the Latin Germanus, a brother, which was first applied by the Gauls to those German tribes, namely, the Condrusi, Eburones, Cærasi, and Pæmani, who, following the example of some of their countrymen, crossed the Rhine and settled in Gaul. The appellation is supposed to have extended afterwards from them to those who lived beyond the Rhine. The name of Allemans, or Alemans, still retained by the French, is derived from the German tribe named Alemanni, who were among the first that made a settlement in Gaul; that of Teutones, which was also applied to the whole nation, and from which the modern Germans derive their own Teutsch, and the English that of Dutch, was at first confined to a tribe, and is supposed to have taken its rise from Theuth or Thoth, a god of the Germans.

Boundaries and Extent. Some geographers have supposed, on the authority of Ptolemy, that the ancients confined the name of Germania to the country lying between the rivers Rhine, Danube, and Vistula, the Baltic, and the German Ocean; but Cluverius has shown, from the authority of all ancient writers on this subject, that the boundaries of ancient Germany were even more extended than at present; comprehending the river Rhenus and the Oceanus Germanicus on the W.; the Oceanus Septentrionalis, or Hyperboreus, on the N.; Codanus Sinus, or the Baltic, on the E.; and the Danubium on the S.

Division and People. The most ancient division of Germany was made by the names of the people, of which the following list contains a general account; together with the more modern names of the countries or places:—

Ancient People.	Modern Countries or Places.
Gotthones, or Gothi,	Cassubia, or Further Pomerania.
Carini and Lemovii,	Pomerania, in the neighbourhood of Colberg, Stetin, and Gripeswold, &c.
Rugii,	Rugia, or Rugen.
Varini and Anglii, &c.	Mecklenburg, &c.
Longobardi,	Middlemarch.
Semnones,	Silesia, Misnia, Lusatia, or Lausnitz, &c.
Burgundiones,	Part of Cassubia and Polonia, or Poland.
Chauci, &c.	The neighbourhood of Bremen and Hamburgh.
Fosi, or Saxones,	Holsatia, or Holstein.
Cimbri,	Chersonesus Cimbrica, or Jutland.
Teutones, or Teutoni,	Scandia, or Scandinavia, including Denmark, Norway, and Sweden.
Codani, or Dani,	Codanonia, or Zealand.
Scandii, or Scanii,	Scania, or Schonen.

Ancient People.	Modern Countries or Places.
Sitones, or Norvegii,	Norvegia, or Norway.

Scritofinni,	Scritfennen.
Rutubæ,	Noortkigri.
Lappiones, or Lappi,	Lappen, or Lapland.
Suiones, Sueones, or Suedi,	Suedia, or Sweden.
Gutæ, or Gothi,	Gothia, or Gothland.
Finnii, or Fenni,	Finingia, or Finland.
Frisii, Marsaci, and Bructeri,	Friezland.
Batavi,	Batavorum Insula, Batavia, or Holland.
Angrivarii, &c.	Neighbourhood of Minden.
Chamavi,	Neighbourhood of Embden.
Dulgibini, Chassuarii, &c.	Paterbona, or Paderborn.
Sicambri,	Banks of the Lower Rhine, and neighbourhood of Cologne.
Ubii,	On the Right Banks of the Rhine.
Mattiaci,	Hassia, or Hesse, &c.
Marcomanni, Sedusii, and Harudes,	Between the Rhine and the Danube, &c.
Cherusci,	Brunsvicum, or Brunswick.
Chatti,	Part of Hesse and Thuringia.
Hermanduri, Quadi, &c.	Voitland, and other parts of Upper Saxony.
Osi, Lugii,	Moravia, &c.
Bastarnæ,	Between the Vistula and the Ister.
Æstii,	Prussia and Livonia.
Suevi,	Suevia, or Suabia.
Rhœtii,	Rhœtia, or the Grisons.
Vindili, or Vandali,	Vindelicia, or Salzburg, &c.
Norici,	Noricum, or Austria, &c.
Bojoarii, or Bojuvarii,	Bavaria.
Boii,	Bojohænum, or Bohemia.
Hunni,	Hungary.

Germany was, however, from an early period divided by the Romans into Germania Superior and Germania Inferior; which division has been preserved to the present day.

Principal Towns. The Germans did not begin to build towns of any consideration till after the arrival and settlement of the Romans, by whom the following towns were either built or enlarged, and received from them their names.

Ancient.	Modern.
Colonia Ubiorum, or Agrippina,	Cologne.
Colonia Ulpiana,	Cleves.

History of Germany.

Some German tribes had passed into Gaul and Italy previously to the invasion of the Romans, who, under Marius, first conquered the Cimbri and Teutones, partly in Gaul and partly in Italy. Cæsar and his successors extended their conquests to the countries lying between the Elbe and the Rhine, and reduced to their subjection the Frisi, Teuctones, Alemani, and other tribes lying nearest to the Rhine; but the rest of Germany, beyond the Elbe and the Danube, were strangers to the Roman arms until the decline of the empire, when they became the aggressors, and migrating into different parts of Europe formed distinct kingdoms; thus the Goths established themselves in Spain; the Burgundi settled in Gaul, and gave their name to the present province of Burgundy; the Longobardi formed the kingdom of Lombardy; the Boii that of Bohemia; the Hunni that of Hungary; the Angli that of England, &c. [Vide Germany]

Writers on Germany.

Polybius; Cæsar; Livy; Velleius Paterculus; Marcianus Heracliotes; Strabo; Mela; Pliny; Tacitus; Solinus; Ptolemy; Florus; Dio Cassius; Julius Capitolinus; Ammianus Marcellinus; Festus Avienus; Priscian; Vopiscus; Aurelius Victor; Eutropius; Antonini; Itinerarium; Cassiodorus; Jornandez; Paul Diaconus; Albert Krantz; Sigonius; Johannes Aventinus; Paul Jovius; Thuanus; Agricola; Scaliger; Gesner; Simler; Lipsius; Notitia Utriusque Imperii; Cluverius; Rerum Germanicarum Scriptores; Bertier; Ortelius; Nichol. s Sanson; Cellarius, &c.

Germania (Numis.) many imperial medals are extant, which commemorate the triumphs of the Romans over the Germans, as may be seen from their inscriptions, namely, on those of Julius Cæsar, GERMAN. INDUTI III; of Augustus, DE GERMANIS; of Tiberius, SIGNIS RECEPTIS; of Nero, AUGUSTUS GERMANICUS; of Vitellius, GER. CAPTA.—VICT. GER.—CLEMENTIA IMP. GERMAN; of Domitian, GERMANIA CAPTA, &c.; of Nerva, VICTORIA GERM.; of Trajan, PROFECTIO AUG. GERMANIAE; of Caracalla, GER. VOTIVIS, &c.; of Alexander Severus, GERMANIA DEVICTA; of Maximus, VICTORIA GERMANICA; of Alexander Severus, VICTORIA GERMANICA; and the like on those of Trajanus, Decius, Herennius, Hostilianus, Valerianus, sen., Gallienus, Salonina, Postumus, sen., Claudius Gothicus, Aurelianus Probus. Germania is represented sometimes as in fig. 1 on a medal of Adrian, on the occasion of his going into Germany, under the figure of a matron in long robes, bearing in her right hand a spear, and resting with her left on a shield, worn by the Germans; and sometimes as in fig. 2, under the figure of a female, sitting in a melancholy attitude, at the foot of a tree hung with a trophy. *Vaillant. GERMANICUS (Hist.) a surname given first to Drusus, on account of his victories over the Germans, and afterwards assumed by the emperors, when they made war on the Germans. His son, mentioned in the next article, received the name of Germanicus.

Germanicus, son of Drusus and Antonia, the niece of Augustus, was adopted by his uncle Tiberius, and after having distinguished himself by his skill and success in Germany, for which he was rewarded with a triumph, he was secretly poisoned, through the instigation of Tiberius, as is supposed, A. D. 19, in the 34th year of his age, leaving nine children by his wife Agrippina, of whom Caligula was one. Some specimens of his Latin poetry are still extant; besides which he wrote comedies in Greek, and a version of Aratus. The latter was published under the title of 'Arati Phœnomena, Latinis versibus tradita,' 4to. Venet. 1488; reprinted by Morellus, 4to. Paris. 1559. Some epigrams atttributed to him are among the 'Poemata Vetera,' 12mo. Paris. 1590; 8vo. Coburg. 1715, 1716.

Germanicus (Numis.) the above-mentioned son of Drusus had many medals struck in honour of him, particularly by his worthless son Caligula, some of which bear his effigy, as in fig. 1; and others commemorate his victories, as in fig. 2,

GERMANY (Geog.) an extensive country of Europe, which has already been considered as to its ancient state, under its ancient name. [Vide Germania]

Boundaries and Extent. Germany is bounded on the N. by Denmark and the Baltic, E. by Hungary and Poland, W. by the Netherlands and France, and S. by Switzerland and Italy; extending from N. to S. about 650 miles, and from E. to W. about 600.

Division. This country was divided by the emperor Maximilian I into circles, the names of which are still preserved for the purposes of distinction, although the constitution of the German empire, which rendered them peculiarly useful, no longer exists. They are as follow: namely, the Circle of Austria; the Circle of Bavaria; the Circle of Franconia; the Circle of Suabia; the Circle of Burgundy; the Circle of the Upper Rhine; the Circle of the Lower Rhine, the Circle of Westphalia; the Circle of Lower Saxony; and the Circle of Upper Saxony; which comprehend a number of independent principalities, some of which are considerable kingdoms, and others little more than small districts.

The following is the list of states which at present constitute the German empire, and have a vote at the diet:—Austria, Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, Hanover, Wirtemberg, Baden, Hesse Cassel, Hesse Darmstadt, Holstein and Lauenburg, Luxemburg, Brunswick, Mecklenburg Schwerin, Nassau, Saxe-Weimar, Saxe-Gotha, Saxe-Cobourg, Saxe-Meiningen, Saxe-Hildburg-hausen, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Oldenburg, Anhalt-Dessau, Anhalt-Bernburg, Anhalt-Kothen, Schwartzburg-Sondershausen, Schwartzburg-Rodolstadt, Lichtenstein, Hohenzollern-Hechingen, Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, Waldeck Reuss, (Elder and Younger Branch), Hesse-Homburg, Schaumburg-Lippe-Detmold, and the free towns of Lubeck, Francfort, Bremen, and Hamburgh.

Towns. The principal modern towns, not mentioned under the head of Germania, are, Hamburgh, Lubeck, Francfort, Bremen, Hanover, Leipzig, Brunswick, Halle, Jena, Dantzig, Konigsberg, Francfort on the Oder, Worms, Spire, Minden, Baden, Wirtemburg, &c.

History. The Western Roman empire having terminated in the year 475, in the person of Augustulus, the last emperor, it was succeeded by the reign of the Hunns, in Hungary; the Vandals, Visigoths, and Suevi, in Spain; the Vandals, in Africa; the Franks and Burgundians, &c. in Gaul; the Ostrogoths and Lombards, in Italy; until the time of Charlemagne, who, having brought these different kingdoms under his power, revived the empire of the West in his person, which was continued by his successors in Germany, of whom the following table contains a list:

The empire remained in the house of France, by hereditary succession, until the death of Lewis IV, when it passed into the hands of German princes, and became elective until 1806, when the above-mentioned Francis II resigned his dignity as emperor of Germany, and styled himself emperor of Austria; the power and prerogatives of the German emperors having gradually diminished until they were reduced to almost nothing.

GERMON (Biog.) or Germonio Anastasius, a lawyer, of a noble Piedmontese family, was born at Turin in 1551, and died in 1627, leaving, among his works, 'De Sacrorum Immunitatibus Lib. tres,' &c. fol. Rom. 1591; 'Pomeridianæ Sessiones in quibus Latinæ Linguæ Dignitas defenditur,' 4to. Taurin. 1580. An edition of his 'Opera Omnia ab ipso recognita,' was published in fol. Rom. 1623.

Germon, Bartholomew, a Jesuit of Orleans, was born in 1663, and died in 1718, leaving, 1. 'De Veteribus Regum Francorum Diplomatibus et Arte decernendi antiqua Diplomata vera a falsis,' 12mo. Paris. 1703. 2. 'De Veteribus Hæreticis Ecclesiasticorum Codicum Corruptoribus,' 8vo. Paris. 1713.

GERONA (Geog.) an episcopal town of Catalonia, in Spain, built on the side of hills, which to the eastward are defended by some redoubts; it is seated on the Ter, 20 m. from its entrance into the Mediterranean, and 56 N. E. Barcelona. Lon. 2° 40′ E. lat. 42° 5′ N.

History of Gerona.

Gerona, or Girona, which was known to the Romans by the name of Gerunda, was taken by the French, under marshal de Noailles, in 1694, but restored at the peace of 1698. In the late Spanish war, it was again exposed to the attacks of the French, but did not surrender until after having made a stout resistance.

GERSON, John (Biog.) otherwise called Charlier, and usually styled Doctor Christianissimus, was born at Gerson, in France, in 1363, and died in 1429, after having distinguished himself by the vigour of his writings, a collection of which has been published several times, but the best edition is that in 5 vols. fol. 1706, under the care of Du Pin.

GERTRUDE, St. (Ecc.) a daughter of Pepin, of Landen, prince of Brabant, and minister to the kings of Austrasia, refused every offer of marriage, and, determining to devote herself to a religious life, she retired at the age of 14, to the monastery of Nivelle, in Namur, which her mother had built, and of which she died abbess in 659, at the age of 33.

GERVAISE, Nicholas (Ecc.) a French missionary, and native of Paris, embarked for the kingdom of Siam, with some other ecclesiastics, before he had reached his 20th year, returned four years after, and being consecrated bishop of Horren, he proceeded to the place of his mission; but was murdered with his companions by the Caribbees in 1729. He wrote, 1. 'Hist. Naturelle et Politique du Royaume de Siam,' 4to. 1688. 2. 'Description Historique du Royaume de Macaçar,' 12mo.; besides some other works.

Gervaise, Armand Francis (Biog.) brother of the preceding, and a monk of la Trappe, died in 1755, in confinement in the abbey of Notre Dame des Reclus, at Paris, after having, on account of his contentious spirit, been deprived of the abbey of la Trappe. He wrote 'Apologie,' i. e. an Apology for his Conduct as Abbot of la Trappe; 'Hist. de la Reforme de Citeaux,' in which he attacked the Bernardines; 'La Vie de St. Cyprien,' with dissertations, 4to.; 'La Vie d'Abailard et d'Heloise,' 2 vols. 12mo.; 'Lettres d'Abailard a Heloise,' 2 vols. 12mo. &c.

GERVASE of Tilbury (Biog.) an historian of the 13th century, and nephew to Henry II, king of England, wrote a Commentary on Monmouth's British History, and also a tripartite History of England; besides a History of the Holy Land; 'Origines Burgundionum,' 'Mirabilia Orbis,' and 'De Otiis Imperialibus,' a Chronicle in MS. which is in the library of Bennet College, Cambridge. The compilation of the Exchequer Book, entitled, 'Liber Niger Scaccarii,' was ascribed to him; but Mr. Madox, the editor of this work, assigns it to Richard Nelson, bishop of London.

Gervase of Canterbury, another historian of the 13th century, and a monk of the monastery of Christ Church, in that city, wrote a Chronicle of the Kings of England, from 1122 to 1200; and a History of the Archbishops of Canterbury, from St. Augustine to Archbishop Hubert, who died in 1205; both of which are published in Twisden's Hist. Anglican. Script. X.

GERYON (Myth.) Γερυὼν, or Γηρυόνης, a monster, the son of Chrysaor and Calirrhoe, who is said to have had three bodies and three heads.

Hesiod. Theog. v. 187.

GESNER, Conrad (Biog.) a distinguished scholar, was born at Zurich, in Switzerland, in 1516, and died in 1565 [vide Plate XXXVIII], leaving, among other works, 1. 'Bibliotheca Universalis,' fol. Tigurin. 1545; of which there have been various editions, abridgments, and continuations; the edition of 1583 by Frisius is usually reckoned the best; to this work is also added his 'Pandectarum, sive Partitionum Universalium,' as a second volume to the 'Bibliotheca,' this was printed in 1548. 2. 'Historiæ Animalium,' 3 vols. fol. Tigurin. 1551—1587; there is also an edition in German. His observations on insects, which are not included in this work, form a part of that of Mouffet, entitled 'Insectorum, sive Minimorum Animalium Theatrum,' London, 1634, the earliest book on entomology. The 'Icones Animalium,' with their nomenclature, form a separate publication from the above, consisting of wooden cuts and names only. 3. 'Aquatilium Animantium Enumeratio juxta Plinium,' 8vo. Tigurin. 1556. 4. 'De Lacte,' 8vo. 5. 'De secretis Remediis Thesaurus,' a pharmacopœia, which has gone through a number of editions in different languages. 6. 'De raris et admirandis Herbis,' &c. 4to. Tigurin. 1555. 7. 'De omni Rerum Fossilium Genere,' 8vo. Tigur. 1565; also 'De Rerum Fossilium, Lapidum et Gemmarum maxime Figuris;' besides the share he had in a Greek Lexicon, which was published under the title of 'Lexicon Græco-Latinum,' Basil. 1537. Many Latin and some Greek verses were published in honour of this great writer, whose life was composed by Josias Simler, and published the ensuing year. He left a number of figures prepared for his 'History of Plants,' which, for the most part, were published by Camerarius in the 'Epitome Matthioli,' 1586, and a second edition in 1590; after which the same blocks were employed by Uffenbach for the Herbal of Castor Durantes, and next served to illustrate the 'Parnassus Medicinalis illustratus' of Becher in 1663; besides which they were used twice afterwards, namely, for a German Herbal by Bernard Verzacha, and for the 'Theatrum Botanicum' of Zwinger.

GESNER, Solomon, a Lutheran divine, was born at Boleslau, in Silesia, in 1559, and died in 1605, leaving a Latin translation of the Prophecy of Hosea, 'Disquisitions on the Psalter,' and other works of a theological or controversial nature to the amount of 40.

GESNER, John Matthew, a scholar and critic, was born near Newbury, in Germany, in 1691, and died in 1761. His works consist principally of editions of the Classics, Greek and Latin, as Horace; Claudian; the Argonautics of Orpheus, with the poem de Lapidibus, and the Hymns; besides a Latin Thesaurus, 4 vols. fol. Lips. 1749.

GESNER, John James, brother of the preceding, who died in 1787, is well known as the author of 'Thesaurus Numismatum,' 2 vols. Tigur. 1738.

GESNER, John, a canon of Zurich, probably of the same family as Conrad Gesner above-mentioned, was born in 1709, and died in 1790, leaving, 1. Two Physiological Dissertations on Plants, 1740 and 1741, reprinted at Leyden in 1743, along with Linnæus' 'Oratio de Peregrinatione intra Patriam.' 2. 'De Ranunculo Bellidifloro,' a dissertation on a supposed vegetable monster which had been imposed upon him as a real production, although it turned out to be nothing more than the common daisy artificially stuck upon a branch of the Meadow Crow-foot. 3. Eleven Dissertations published separately, from 1759 to 1773, under the general title of 'Phytographia Sacra,' 4to.; besides which he wrote on Extraneous Fossils, and composed an index to Weinmann's 'Phytographia,' 8vo. 1787.

GESNER, (or, as it is sometimes written, Gessner), Solomon, a poet, engraver, painter, and bookseller of Zurich, was born in 1730, and died in 1788, leaving a reputation no less as an artist than as a writer, so that at his death his fellow citizens erected a statue to his memory in his favourite walk on the banks of the Limmat, where it meets the Sihl. Among his works, as an author, are, 'Daphnis,' 1754; 'Inkle and Yarico;' and 'Pastorals;' but the work by which he is best known is his 'Death of Abel,' which was translated into every language in Europe; in 1802 his works, translated into English from the German, were published in 3 vols. 8vo. with an account of his life and writings. [Vide Plate XXIX]

GETA, Septimius Antoninus Lucius, Publius (Hist.) son of the emperor Severus, reigned after his father's death conjointly with his brother Caracalla, until the latter, stimulated by envy at his virtues, first attempted to have him poisoned, and, on the failure of this scheme, murdered him in the arms of his mother Julia, who, in attempting to keep off the fatal blow from his body, received a wound in her arm. Geta was thus cut off A. D. 212 in the 23d year of his age to the great grief of his subjects.

GETA (Numis.) the medals of this prince bear his effigy, as in the annexed figure, and many of them are inscribed with his several titles and dignities in their order as follow:

GIBERTI, John Matthew (Ecc.) bishop of Verona, was born at Palermo, appointed to the see of Verona by Clement VII, and died in 1543, after having been employed in missions of the highest importance at the papal court. He employed a number of persons in transcribing MSS., and defrayed the charge of printing excellent editions of the works of the Greek fathers, particularly a beautiful edition of Chrysostom's Homilies on the Epistles of St. Paul. His works, with his Life, were published at Verona in 1733.

GIBRALTAR (Geog.) the name of a town of Andalusia, as also of a promontory, and a strait in the neighbourhood, 60 m. S. E. Cadiz, 16 m. N. Ceuta, and 70 S. Seville. Lon. 5° 20′ W., lat. 36° 6′ N.

History of Gibraltar.

The promontory, or rock, at the foot of which the town of Gibraltar is built, was anciently called Calpe, and projecting into the sea, forms with the promontory opposite, on the coast of Africa, anciently called Abyla, the narrow strait known by the name of the Straits of Gibraltar, anciently by that of Fretum Herculeum, or Gaditanum. These two promontories were moreover distinguished by the appellation of Columnæ Herculis, or the Pillars of Hercules, because they were supposed to have been the boundary of his labours, and to have been formed by his separating the land at this part. The name of Gibraltar is derived, as is said, from Gibel-Tarek, a Moorish chief, who erected a fortress on the promontory. It was taken from the Moors in 1462, and in 1704 it fell into the hands of the English, from whom the Spaniards attempted in vain, three several times, to retake it. The last and most memorable seige of this place commenced in July, 1779, and continued until 1783, when it was raised, in consequence of the signing the preliminaries of peace.

GIBSON, Edmund (Ecc.) bishop of London, and son of Edward Gibson, of Knipe, in Westmoreland, was born at Bampton, in the same county, in 1669, entered a scholar of Queen's College, Oxford, in 1686, promoted to the see of Lincoln in 1715, translated to that of London in 1720, and died in 1748. His works are, 1. An edition of Drummond's 'Polemo-Middiana,' &c. 4to. 1691. 2. 'Chronicon Saxonicum,' 4to. 1692. 3. 'Librorum Manuscriptorum Catalogus,' 4to. Oxon. 1692. 4. An edition of 'Quintilian de Arte Oratoria,' 4to. Oxon. 1693. 5. 'Julii Cæsaris Portus Iccius illustratus,' a tract of W. Somner, with a Dissertation of his own, 1694. 6. A translation of Camden's 'Britannia,' into English, 2 vols. fol. 1695, and again with large additions in 1722, 1772. 7. 'Vita Thomæ Bodleii Equitis Aurati, et Historia Bibliothecæ Bodleianæ,' prefixed to 'Catalogi Librorum Manuscriptorum in Anglia et Hibernia in unum collecti,' fol. Oxon. 1697. 8. 'Reliquiæ Spelmannianæ,' fol. 1698. 9. A short State of some present Questions in Convocation, 1700. 10. 'The Schedule of Prorogation reviewed,' 4to. 15. 'The pretended Independence of the Lower House upon the Upper House a groundless Notion,' 4to. 1703. 16. 'The Marks of a defenceless Cause, in the Proceedings and Writings of the Lower House of Convocation,' 4to. 17. 'An Account of the Proceedings in Convocation in a Cause of Contumacy, upon the Prolocutor's going into the Country without the leave of the Archbishop, commenced April 10, 1707.' All these, except the Synodus Anglicana, were printed without his name. 18. 'Visitations, Parochial and General,' &c. 8vo. 1717. 19. 'Five Pastoral Letters,' &c. 8vo. to which might be added numerous religious Tracts that issued from his pen, and 'A Collection of the principal Treatises against Popery in the Papal Controversy digested into proper Heads and Titles, with some Prefaces of his own,' 3 vols. fol. Lond. 1738.

Gibson, Thomas (Biog.) a physician of Morpeth, who died in the 16th century, was the author of, 1. 'A breve Chronicle of the Bishops of Rome's Blessynge,' &c. a work which is supposed to be the same as another entitled 'The Treasons of Prelates,' 16mo. Lond. 2. 'The Sum of the Acts and Decrees made by divers Bishops of Rome,' from the Latin, 12mo. no date. 3. 'A Treatise behoovefull, as well to preserve the People from Pestilence, as to help and recover them,' &c. 4to. 1586; besides an 'Herbal,' and a 'Treatise against unskilful Chemists,' in MS.

GIBSON, Richard, called the Dwarf, a painter in the time of sir Peter Lely, who died in 1690, in his 75th year, married Mrs. Anne Shepherd, a dwarf, like himself, who lived to the age of 90. They had nine children, five of whom lived to the age of maturity, and were duly proportioned in size. Being page to Charles I, the king, he was pleased to honour their wedding with his presence, and Waller wrote a poem on this occasion, 'Of the Marriage of the Dwarfs.' Gibson's Portraits were in great estimation, but the copies he made of Lely's Portraits, gained him the greatest reputation.

GIBSON, William, nephew of the preceding, and also a painter, who died in 1702, was equally happy with his uncle in copying after sir Peter Lely, and was also esteemed for his skill in taking portraits.

GIBSON, Edward, a kinsman of William's, followed at first the painting portraits in oil, but succeeded better afterwards in taking likenesses in crayons.

GIBSON, William, a self-taught mathematician, was born at Boulton in 1720, and died in 1791, leaving numerous Answers to Mathematical Questions, in the Gentleman's and Ladies' Diaries, the Palladium, and other annual publications.

GIDEON (Bibl.) גדעון, son of Joash, of Manasseh, and one of the judges of Israel, who had a particular call to deliver Israel from the oppression of the Midianites. Judg. viii. &c. He judged the nation nine years, from A. M. 2759 to 2768, according to Calmet; but others have said that his government lasted 40 years.

GIDGAD (Bibl.) גדגד, a mountain in the wilderness of Paran, where the Hebrews encamped. Numb. xxxiii.

GIFANIUS (Biog.) or Giffen Hubertus, or Obertus, a critic and civilian, was born at Bunen, in Guelderland, in 1534, and died in 1604 or 1609. He wrote Notes and Commentaries on Aristotle's 'Politics and Ethics,' also on Lucretius and Homer.

GIFFORD, Andrew (Biog.) an antiquary, and assistant librarian at the British Museum, was born at Bristol in 1700, and died in 1784, leaving, besides some Sermons, an edition of Folkes' Tables of Coins, 2 vols. 4to.

Besides the above-mentioned works, there are two MSS. of the Lord Chief Baron's, in Mr. Hargrave's collection, entitled 'History of the Feud,' and 'A Treatise of Remainders.'

GILBERT, William (Biog.) or Gilberd, a physician, was born at Colchester, and died in 1603. He is well known as the first discoverer of several of the properties of the loadstone, which he communicated to the public in his work entitled 'De Magnete, Magneticisque Corporibus,' &c. 1600, besides which he left a work in MS. which was printed at Amsterdam by sir William Boswell, under the title 'De Mundi nostri Sublunaris Philosophia nova,' 4to. 1651.

GILBERT, Thomas, a nonconformist of Shropshire, was born in 1613, and educated at Oxford, after which he was appointed during the rebellion, an assistant in the work of expelling such as were styled scandalous, ignorant, and insufficient Ministers and Schoolmasters,' in which sweeping commission he was, according to Wood, not sparing of the power that was given to him. He was ejected after the Restoration for nonconformity, and died in 1694. He published, 1. 'Vindiciæ Supremi Dei Domini,' 8vo. Lond. 1655, against Dr. Owen. 2 'Epitaphia diversa.' 3. 'Julius Secundus,' a dialogue, 12mo. Oxon. 1669, and 8vo. 1680, to which latter edition was added 'Jani Alex. Ferrarii Euclides Catholicus.' 4. 'England's Passing Bell, a Poem, written soon after the Plague, the Fire of London, and the Dutch War,' 4to. 1675. 5. 'Super Auspicatissimo Regis Gulielmi in Hiberniam Descensu,' &c. Besides which he translated into Latin, a considerable part of Francis Potter's book, entitled 'An Interpretation of the Number 666,' and is supposed to have been concerned in the pamphlets 'Anni Mirabiles,' printed in 1661, 1662, and the following years.

GILBERTUS, Anglicus (Biog.) a writer on medicine in the reign of king John, was the author of 'Compendium Medicinæ tam Morborum Universalium quam Particularium,' Lugd. GILPIN, Bernard (Biog.) a divine of Kentmir, in Westmoreland, was born of a good family in 1517; educated at Oxford; obliged to fly the realm on account of his religion; and afterwards escaped burning only by the death of queen Mary, the news of which met him on the road, and put a stop to any further proceedings against him. He left a high reputation for zeal and activity as a divine, by which he is known more than as an author. His life has been written by Carleton, and by his descendant William Gilpin, by whom, as well as by others, he is warmly eulogized; although it is evident that he was puritanical in his principles, and schismatical in his practice.

Gilpin, Richard, a nonconformist, and a native of Cumberland, was educated at Oxford, silenced for refusing to comply with the act of uniformity in 1662, and died a practitioner in physic in 1657. He was the author of several treatises, but his discourse on 'Satan's Temptations,' 4to. 1677, is most esteemed.

Gilpin, William, a descendant of Bernard Gilpin, of whose life he wrote an account, was a native of Westmoreland, and died in 1804, at the age of 80. He wrote the lives of Latimer, Wickliffe, Huss, and Cranmer; besides 'Lectures on the Church Catechism,' 12mo.; 'Observations on Picturesque Beauty,' 8vo.; 'A Tour to the Lakes,' 2 vols. 8vo.; 'Remarks on Forest Scenery,' 2 vols. 8vo.; 'Essays on Picturesque Beauty,' &c.

Gilpin, Sawrey, brother of the preceding, and an artist, who died in 1807, left, among his best performances, 'The Triumph of Camillus;' 'The Election of Darius;' 'The Story of Phaeton,' &c.

GIN, Peter Louis Claude (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Paris in 1726, and died 1807. He translated Homer, Hesiod, Theocritus, Demosthenes, and Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield; the first of which was splendidly printed twice by Didot. His original works are, 1. 'Traité de l'Eloquence de Barreau,' 12mo. 1767. 2. 'De la Religion par un Homme du Monde,' 5 vols. 8vo. 1778, and following years; and abridged in 1785, under the title of 'Nouveaux Melanges de la Philosophie et de la Literature.' 3. 'Les vrais Principes du Gouvernement Français,' 8vo. Geneva; and 2 vols. 12mo. Paris. 4. 'Analyse raisonnée du Droit Français,' 4to. Paris, 1782.

GIOCONDO (Biog.) Jocundus.

GIOIA, Flavio (Biog.) a Neapolitan in the 14th century, to whom the invention of the compass has been ascribed, although it is possible he may have been only an improver of an invention, which has been attributed by some to the Chinese, and by Dr. Wallis to the English.

GIORDANI, Vital (Biog.) a mathematician, was born at Bitonto in 1633, and died in 1711. His principal works are 'Euclide Restituto,' fol.; 'De Componendis Gravium Momentis,' fol.; 'Fundamentum Doctrinæ Motus Gravium,' fol. 1715; 'Ad Hyacinthum Christophorum Epistola,' fol. 1705.

GIORDANO, Lucas (Biog.) an artist of Naples, was born in 1629, and died in 1704, having been very happy in his imitations of the style of Titian. One of his most considerable productions is the altar-piece of the church of the Ascension at Naples, representing the Fall of Lucifer; and another at Genoa, of Seneca dying in the Bath.

GIORGI, Augustine Anthony (Biog.) an Italian ecclesiastic, was born at St. Maur, in the diocese of Rimini, in 1711, and died in 1797, leaving, 1. 'Alphabetum Thibetanum,' 4to. 1761. 2. 'Fragmentum Evangelii S. Joannis Græco-Copto-Thebaicum Sæculi quarti,' &c. 4to. Rom. 1789; besides letters and dissertations on oriental criticism and antiquities, &c.

GIORGIONE (Biog.) an artist, whose real name was Giorgio Barbarella, was born at Castelfranco, in Frioul, in 1477, and died in 1511. His Moses taken from the Nile, and presented to the Daughter of Pharaoh, in the Archiepiscopal Palace at Milan, is esteemed by some his masterpiece, and by others, his Tempest Allayed, in the School of St. Marco, at Venice.

GIOSEPPINO (Biog.) an Italian painter, who was born in 1560, and died in 1640, excelled in painting battles. He was made knight of St. Michael by Lewis XII.

GIOTTO (Biog.) a painter, sculptor, and architect, was born in a village near Florence in 1276, and died in 1336, when the city of Florence erected a marble statue over his tomb. He left monuments of his genius at Rome, Naples, Verona, Ferrara, and the other principal cities of Italy.

GIOVIO (Biog.) vide Jovius.

GIRALDI, Lilio Gregorio (Biog.) in Latin Gyraldus, an Italian critic, was born at Ferrara in 1479, of an ancient and reputable family, and died in 1552. His works, consisting of 'Historia de Diis Gentium;' 'Historiæ Poetarum tam Græcorum quam Latinorum Dialogi decem;' 'Dialogi duo de Poetis nostrorum,' &c.; and 14 other pieces on similar subjects, were all collected and published in 2 vols. fol. Basil. 1580, and Lugd. Bat. 1696. Among his other pieces not mentioned, is one 'De Annis, Mensibus, cæterisque Temporis Partibus, una cum Kalendario Romano et Græco;' written with a view to the reformation of the calendar, afterwards effected by pope Gregory XIII, about 1582.

GIRALDI, John Baptist Cintio, an Italian poet of the same family as the preceding, was born at Ferrara in 1504, and died in 1573. His works consist chiefly of tragedies in Italian; a collection was published at Venice, in 8vo. 1583, by his son, Celso Giraldi. His prose works were also all written in Italian, except some orations in Latin; of these was one upon tragedy, comedy, and other kinds of poetry, which was printed at Venice by himself in 4to. 1554; but he is more particularly known by his 'Hecatommiti,' or hundred novels, in imitation of Bochart. A volume of his poems was printed at Ferrara in 1537, to which is subjoined a treatise of Cælio Calcagnini, 'De Imitatione,' addressed to Giraldi.

GIRALDUS, Cambrensis (Ecc.) otherwise called Barry Girald, or Girald of Wales, was born at the castle of Mainaper, near Pembroke, in 1146, elected bishop of St. David's in 1179, and again in 1198, but failed on both occasions to obtain his confirmation, and died at the age of 70, leaving among his works as an author, 1. 'Gemma Ecclesiastica,' published at Mentz in 1549, under the title of 'Gemma Animæ,' without his name. 2. 'Itinerarium Cambriæ,' published with annotations by Powel, 8vo. 1585; and in 1806 sir Richard Colt Hoare published, in two splendid quarto volumes, 'The Itinerary of Archbishop Baldwin through Wales, A. D. 1188, by Giraldus de Barri, Translated into English,' &c. 3. 'De Laudibus Cambrorum,' also published by Powell. 4. 'Topographia Hiberniæ,' Francof. 1602, and in Holingshed. 5. 'Historia Vaticinalis de Expugnatione Hiberniæ,' Francof. 1602; both published by Camden.

GIRARD, Gabriel (Biog.) a writer, of Clermont, in Auvergne, was born in 1678, and died in 1748. The work by which he is best known is his 'Synonymes Français,' a new edition of which was published in 2 vols. 12mo. 1769, by M. Beauzee; besides which he wrote, 'Les vrais Principes de la Langue Française,' 2 vols. 12mo.

GIRARDON, Francis (Biog.) a sculptor and architect, was born at Troyes in 1628, and died in 1715, leaving, among his best pieces, the Equestrian Statue of Louis XIV; the Mausoleum of Richelieu; and the Rape of Proserpine, &c.

GIRTIN, Thomas (Biog.) a landscape painter, was born in 1773, and died in 1802. His last and best drawings were his Views of Paris.

GIRY, Lewis (Biog.) advocate to the parliament of Paris, was born there in 1596, and died in 1665, leaving translations of the 'Dialogues des Orateurs,' 4to. 'L'Hist. Sacrée de Sulpice Severe,' &c.

'Disticha Sacra et Moralia.' 5. 'Annotationes in Jul. Cæsaris Comment.' 6. 'Annotat. in Ciceronis Epist. Famil.' 7. 'Onomasticon Historiæ Romanæ.'

GLANDORP, Matthias, a German physician, was born at Cologne in 1595, and died, according to some accounts, about 1640, leaving, 1. 'Speculum Chirurgorum,' 8vo. Bremen, 1619; and 4to. 1648. 2. 'Methodus Medendæ Paronychiæ.' 3. 'Tractatus de Polypo Narium Affectu gravissimo,' 1628. 4. 'Gazophylacium Polypusium Fonticulorum et Setonium reseratum,' 1633; these four pieces were collected and published under the title of his works, 4to. Lond. 1729, with his life prefixed, and some tracts on Roman antiquities.

GLANVIL, Ranulf (Hist.) or Glanville, a Justiciary in the reign of Henry II, is well known as the author of a work, 'De Legibus,' of great authority among law writers. It is said to be a transcript of the Norman Law. It was printed in 1554, 1557, 1604, and 1673, and a translation of it, entitled, 'A Treatise of the Laws and Customs of England,' was published in 1780 by John Wilmot, esq. one of the Masters in Chancery, collated with the MSS. in the Harleian, Cottonian, Bodleian, and Dr. Mille's libraries.

GLANVIL, Sir John, younger son of John Glanvil, of Tavistock, in Devonshire, one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, who died in 1600, was educated at Oxford, studied law at Lincoln's Inn, was made serjeant at law in 1639, and Speaker of the House of Commons in 1640; but, in consequence of his loyalty, he was deprived both of his office, and his seat in that rebellious assembly, and, suffering both in his person, and his estate, he died just after the restoration, in 1661. His works consist of speeches and arguments, most of which are in Rushworth's Collections; besides his 'Reports of Cases of Controverted Elections,' published by John Topham, esq. 8vo. 1775, to which is prefixed an historical account of the Ancient Rights of determining Cases upon Controverted Elections.

GLANVIL, Bartholomew (Biog.) an English Minorite, or Franciscan, of the family of the earls of Suffolk, in the 14th century, was the author of a work, 'De Proprietatibus Rerum,' which was one of the first books on which the art of printing was exercised; there being no fewer than 12 editions or translations of it from 1479 to 1494. The English translation, printed by Wynkyn de Worde, is said to be the most magnificent publication that ever issued from the press of that celebrated printer, but the date has not been ascertained. An analysis of this work may be found in Mr. Dibdin's 'Typographical Antiquities.'

GLANVIL, Joseph, a writer of Plymouth, in Devonshire, was born in 1636, educated at Oxford, and died in 1680, leaving a number of tracts, as, 1. 'The Vanity of Dogmatizing, or Confidence in Opinions, manifested in a Discourse of the Shortness and Uncertainty of our Knowledge, and its Causes, with some Reflections on Peripateticism, and an Apology for Philosophy,' 8vo. 1666. 2. 'Scepsis Scientifica; or Confessed Ignorance the Way to Science,' &c. 4to. 1665. 3. 'Some Philosophical Considerations, touching the Being of Witches and Witchcraft,' 4to. 1663. 4. 'Plus Ultra; or the Progress and Advancement of Knowledge since the Days of Aristotle,' &c. 12mo.; being a defence of the Royal Society, which caused some scurrilous pamphlets to pass between him and his antagonists, who were of the Aristotelian school; besides which he wrote a number of other tracts not worth particularizing. After his decease his sermons and pieces were published by Dr. Henry Homech, under the title of 'Some Discourses, Sermons, and Remains,' 4to. 1681.

GLANVIL, John, a grand-son of sir John Glanvil above-mentioned, was born in 1664 at Broad Hinton, educated at Oxford, and died in 1735, leaving some minor poems, the best of which may be seen in Nichols's Collection. He made the first translation of Fontenelle's 'Plurality of Worlds.'

GLAPHYRA (Hist.) wife of Archelaus, high-priest of Bellona, at Comana, in Cappadocia, was celebrated for her beauty and intrigues with M. Anthony, from whom she obtained the kingdom of Cappadocia for her two sons, Sisinna and Archelaus. Appian. de Bell. Civ. l. 5; Dio. l. 49.

GLAPHYRA, grand-daughter of the preceding, and daughter of Archelaus, was married successively to Alexander and Archelaus, sons of Herod; but, according to Josephus, she was married to Juba, king of Lybia, before her marriage with Archelaus. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 17, c. 19.

GLAPTHORNE, Henry (Biog.) a dramatic writer in the reign of Charles I, who left some poems as well as plays.

GLASGOW, David, first Earl of (Hist.) a Privy Councillor of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was afterwards one of the commissioners for the Treaty of Union, which he had a principal share in bringing to effect; and, after taking an active part in suppressing the insurrection in 1715, and in preserving the public tranquillity at all times, he died in 1733.

GLASGOW, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the Scotch family of Boyle [Vide Boyle]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

GLENCAIRN, William, fifth Earl of (Hist.) a violent partisan in favour of the reformation, who had the chief command in the army embodied against queen Mary in 1567, when he went to the chapel-royal of Holyrood-house, attended by his domestics, demolished the altar, broke the images to pieces, tore down the pictures, and defaced the ornaments of the place.

GLENCAIRN, William, ninth Earl of, distinguished himself in the royal cause during the rebellion, for which he was excepted out of Cromwell's pardon. He was appointed High Chancellor of Scotland in 1661, and died in 1664.

GLENCAIRN, Earl of (Her.) a title conferred in 1148 on Alexander Cunningham, lord of Kilmaurs, which title became dormant at the death of John, fifteenth earl, in 1796.

GLENDOUR, Owen (Hist.) a Welch chieftain, who made a successful stand against Henry IV of England, and died in 1415, aged 61.

GLENGALL, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by a branch of the Butler family, [Vide Butler] which with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Butler, earl of Glengall, viscount and baron Cahir, co. Tipperary.

Arms. Argent, a cross gules, with the effigy of our Saviour thereon or, borne in memory of one of the families fighting against the Turks.

Crest. In a plume of feathers, a falcon argent, difference with a crescent.

Supporters. Two tigers parti per fess azure and or, gorged with a chain reflexing over their backs, and passing between their hinder legs.

Motto. "God be my guide."

GLENTWORTH, Lord (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Limerick.

GLERAWLEY, Viscount (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Annesley.

GLISSON, Francis (Biog.) an English physician, was born in 1596, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1677. He wrote, 1. 'De Rachitide, sive Morbo Puerili qui vulgo the rickets dicitur,' Lond. 1650. 2. 'Anatomia Hepatis,' Lond. 1654. 3. 'De Lymphæductis nuper repertis,' Amst. 1659, with the 'Anatomica Prolegomena, et Anatomia Hepatis.' 4. 'De Naturæ Substantia energetica,' &c. 4to. Lond 1672. 5. 'Treatise of the Stomach and Intestines,' Amsterdam, 1677. Several of his MSS. which were in sir Hans Sloane's possession, are now in the British Museum.

GLOUCESTER, Robert, Earl of (Hist.) natural son of Henry I, swore fealty conditionally to Stephen, but leaving the kingdom afterwards, he returned with the empress Matilda, and supported her cause by gaining several advantages over Stephen, whom he on one occasion took prisoner.

GLOUCESTER, Richard, Earl of, joined the confederacy formed by the earl of Leicester against king Henry III, but, just before his death in 1263, he left this party, and attached himself to that of the king.

GLOUCESTER, Gilbert, Earl of, son of the preceding, after joining the earl of Leicester, and taking the king Henry prisoner at Lewes, he was reconciled to the latter, and espoused his cause, but not without being guilty of great inconsistencies and unsteadiness. He became, however, at length bound to the royal family by marrying the daughter of Edward I.

GLOUCESTER, Earl of, son of the preceding, and nephew of Edward II, was slain at the battle of Bannockburn in 1314.

GLOUCESTER, Duke of, uncle to Richard II, was so active in his cabals and conspiracies against the king, that the latter ordered him to be arrested, and carried to Calais, where he died in 1397, not without strong suspicion that he had been murdered.

GLOUCESTER, Humphrey, Duke of, brother of Henry V, who was left by him regent of England during the minority of Henry VI, was embroiled with his uncle, the cardinal of Winchester, who embraced opposite counsels to his own, and by whose means, as is generally supposed, this prince came to an untimely end at St. Edmund's Bury, although it was given out that he died a natural death in 1447.

GLOUCESTER, Richard, Duke of, vide Richard III.

GLOUCESTER, Duke of, youngest son of Charles I, was enjoined by his father, just before his execution, not to accept the crown of England while his brothers Charles and James were alive; to which the child, sighing, replied, "I will be torn in pieces first." He was sent beyond sea by Cromwell, and survived the restoration, but died soon after, in 1660, at the age of 20, leaving a high reputation for talent and virtue.

GLOUCESTER, Duke of (Her.) a royal title, which has been enjoyed by members of the royal family for many centuries, as may be seen under the head of History, and was conferred in 1764, on William Henry, third son of Frederic, Prince of Wales, who was created duke of Gloucester and Edinburgh, in the kingdom of Great Britain, and earl of Connaught, in the kingdom of Ireland. At his death, in 1805, he was succeeded by his only son, prince William Frederick. The arms, &c. are the same as those of the prince of Wales, with the label differenced.

GLOUCESTER (Geog.) capital of a county of the same name in England, 24 m. N. E. Bristol, 104 W. by N. London. The county was denominated in Latin Glocestriensis Comitatus, the original inhabitants of which were the Dobuni. The town was called Clevum, Glovernia, or Glocestria, and was erected into a bishop's see in the reign of Henry III. The other principal places in this county are, Cirencester, Cheltenham, Tewkesbury, Northleach, Tetbury, &c. The rivers are the Severn, Avon, Wye, Thames, Coln, Lech, &c.

GLOUCESTER, Robert of (Biog.) vide Robert.

GLOVER, Thomas (Biog.) a herald, and heraldic writer, was first made Portcullis Poursuivant, and afterwards Somerset Herald in 1571, and died in 1588, leaving, 1. 'De Nobilitate Politica vel Civili.' 2. 'A Catalogue of Honour;' both of which were published by his nephew, Mr. Thomas Milles, the former in 1608, and the latter in 1610, both folio. His 'Ordinary of Arms,' was augmented and improved by Edmonson, 12mo. 1738, who published it in the first volume of his 'Body of Heraldry.'

GLOVER, Richard, an English poet, and son of Richard Glover, a Hamburgh merchant in London, was born in St. Martin's Lane, Cannon Street, in 1712, and died in 1785. He wrote, 1. 'Leonidas,' an admired poem, first published in 4to. 1737; it passed through three editions in two years, and received an accession of popularity on the appearance of a pamphlet by Dr. Pemberton, entitled, 'Observations on Poetry, especially Epic, occasioned by the late Poem Leonidas.' It was republished by himself, in 2 vols. 12mo. 1770. 2. 'London; or the Progress of Commerce.' 3. 'Hosier's Ghost;' both written in 1739. 4. 'Boadicea,' a tragedy, 1753. 5. 'Medea,' a tragedy, written on the Greek model, and, consequently, unfit for the modern stage. 6. 'The Athenaid;' which was published after his death in 1787; since that period the public attention has been called to this author by a work which appeared in 1813, said to be written by him, under the title of 'Memoirs of a distinguished Literary and Political Character, from the resignation of Sir Robert Walpole in 1742, to the establishment of Lord Chatham's second administration in 1757.' This work was immediately followed by 'An Enquiry concerning the Author of the Letters of Junius, with reference to the Memoirs of a celebrated Literary and Political Character;' the object of which was to prove that Glover was the author of these letters.

GLUCK, Christopher (Biog.) a musical composer, was born in the palatinate on the frontiers of Bohemia in 1712, or, according to some, in 1716, and died in 1787, leaving a number of operas; as 'Artamene;' 'La Caduta de' Giganti;' 'Orfeo;' 'Alceste;' 'Paride ed Elena,' &c. which established his reputation as one of the most original composers that ever appeared.

GLYCAS, Michael (Biog.) one of the Byzantine Historians, but at what period he lived is not certain. His 'Annales' extend as far as the emperor Alexis Comnenus, who died in 1118, and were first translated by Leunclavius. The whole was published by father Labbe, fol. Paris, 1660, and is included among the 'Byzantinæ Historiæ Scriptores,' &c. Gr. and Lat. 27 vols. fol. Venet. 1722—1733. Some of his letters have been published in the 'Deliciæ Eruditorum,' Florent. 1736, and other collections.

GLYCERIUS, Flavius (Hist.) a Roman of a good family, who, after having held some high posts in the state, caused himself to be proclaimed emperor at Ravenna in 473; but was deprived of the empire by Julius Nepos in the same year, when he was consecrated bishop of Salona, in Dalmatia, and died in 480. Evagr. Hist. Eccles. l. 4; Cassiodorus et Marcellin. in Chron.; Jornand. de Reb. Goth.

GLYCERIUS (Numis.) medals are extant of this prince, bearing his effigy, as in the annexed figure; inscription D. N. GLYCERIUS P. F. AUG. vel P. P. AUG. Du Cang. Fam. Byz.; Mus. Pemb. &c.

GLYCON (Biog.) a sculptor of Athens, to whose skill the moderns are said to be indebted for the admired statue of the Farnese Hercules.

GLYNN (Her.) the name of a family which derives its descent from Cilmin, nephew to Merfyn Frych, who had his residence at Glynnegyon, near Dinasin, co. Caernarvon, and flourished in 843. Of this family was sir Richard Glynn, who was created a baronet in 1759; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth, argent, an eagle displayed with two heads sable, guttee d'or, for Glynn; second and third party per pale azure and gules, three stags' heads or, for Lewen; in an escutcheon surtout a man's leg and thigh couped.

Crest. On a wreath of the colours, an eagle's head erased sable, guttee d'or, holding in the beak an escallop argent.

GLYNN, a branch of the same family, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1800 on sir Richard Carr Glynn, eldest son, by a second marriage, of sir Richard Glynn above-mentioned. The arms, &c. of this branch of the family are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth, the arms for Glynn as above, differenced a crescent; second and third gules, on a chevron argent, three mullets of the field, for Carr; on an escutcheon surtout argent, a man's leg and thigh couped sable.

GLYNNE, Sir John, Knt. (Hist.) a crafty politic lawyer, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born at Glyn-Cyphon in 1602, educated at Westminster and Oxford; and, after studying law at Lincoln's Inn, of which he became a bencher, he distinguished himself on the popular side by conducting the cause against the earl of Strafford, in conjunction with Maynard, Palmer, and Whitelock; the two former of whom, the earl remarked, treated him like advocates; the two latter like gentlemen. He afterwards fell into disgrace with his party; but making his peace with the usurping powers, he was patronized by Oliver Cromwell, whom he recommended to take the crown. At the Restoration, he wrote a work entitled 'Monarchy asserted to be the best, the most ancient and loyal Form of Government,' 8vo. 1660, by which probably he secured the favour of Charles II, by whom he was knighted; and died serjeant at law in 1666.

GLYNNE (Her.) the name of a family of Hawarden-castle, co. Flint, which derives its descent from Merfyn Frych, the prince of Wales above-mentioned, and is therefore a branch of the same family as the forementioned Glynn. This family enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred on William Glynne, son of sir John Glynne, knt. the lawyer mentioned under History; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, an eagle displayed with two heads sable.

Crest. An eagle's head erased sable, holding in his beak a brand ragule sable, fired proper.

GMELIN, John George (Biog.) a physician and botanist, was born at Tubingen in 1709, and died in 1755, leaving, 1. 'Flora Siberica, seu Historia Plantarum Siberiæ,' 4 parts, 4to. Petropol. 1747–49, with plates. 2. 'Reisebeschreiburg durch Siberien zwischen die Jahre,' 1733 and 1743, four parts, 8vo. Gottingen, 1751, 1752; an abridgment of which in French was published in 2 vols. 12mo. 1767.

GMELIN, Samuel Gottlieb, nephew to the preceding, was born in 1743; and, being taken prisoner by Usmei Khan, a Tartar prince, while on his travels through Persia, he died in confinement in 1774. His works are, 1. 'Historia Fucorum,' 4to. Petrop. 1768. 2. Travels in Russia, published in the Russian language, in 3 vols. 4to. Petersburg, 1771; and translated into German by professor Pallas in 1774. 3. Journey from Astracan to Czarizyn, and also a second Persian Journey, 1772—1774. Pallas prefixed Gmelin's Life to the fourth part of his travels.

GMELIN, John Frederick, of the same family, was born at Tubingen in 1748, and died in 1805. He is best known as the editor of Linnæus' System of Nature; besides which he wrote a History of Chemistry, and several other works on vegetable physiology, materia medica, mineralogy, &c.

GNIDUS (Geog.) vide Cnidus.

GNOSSUS (Geog.) Κνωσσὸν, a city of Crete, the residence of king Minos, now Ginosa, which was famous for archery. Lucan. l. 3, v. 185.

Contra elata mari respondet Gnosia tellus.

GNOSSUS (Numis.) this city is distinguished on some few medals by the inscription ΓΝΟΣΙΩΝ, or ΓΝΟΣΣΙΩΝ. Vail. Num. Gr.

GOA (Geog.) a district of India, the capital of which, bearing the same name, is situated lon. 73° 57′ E. lat. 15° 30′ N. Goa was taken from the rajahs of Bejanagur in 1469 by the sovereigns of the Deccan, from whom it was retaken in 1510 by the celebrated Portuguese general Albuquerque.

GOAD, John (Biog.) a divine of the Romish church, was born in 1615, educated at Oxford, and died in 1689, after having been removed from his post as master of Merchant Taylor's School on account of his attaching himself to the Romish church. He published Genealogicon Latinum; and Astro-Meteorologica, &c.

GOAR, James (Biog.) a French Dominican, was born at Paris, of a reputable family, in 1601, and died in 1653. His principal work was his collection of Greek liturgies, published under the title of 'Euchologion, sive Rituale Græcorum,' fol. Paris. 1647, and Venet. 1730; besides which he translated some of the Byzantine Historians for the collection printed at the Louvre.

GOB (Bibl.) גּוֹב, a plain where two battles were fought between the Hebrews and the Philistines. 2 Sam. xxi.

GOBAR (Hist.) a governor of Mesopotamia, who checked the course of the Euphrates, so that it might not run rapidly through Babylon. Plin. l. 6.

GOBARES (Hist.) a Persian governor, who surrendered to Alexander. Q. Curt. l. 5.

GOBEL, John Baptist (Hist.) a bishop of Lydda, and a constitutional archbishop of Paris, who had the effrontery to boast of his infidelity, and perished in the reign of Robespierre on the guillotine in 1795, regretted by none.

GOBELIN, Giles (Biog.) a celebrated dyer in the reign of Francis I, who discovered a method of dying a beautiful scarlet; whence his name has since been given, not only to the finest French scarlets, but also to the house, and the river adjoining to it, where he followed his business. An academy for drawing, and a manufactury of fine tapestries, were afterwards established in his place, for which reason the tapestries have received the name of Gobelins.

GOBIEN, Charles le (Biog.) a Jesuit, and secretary to the Chinese missionaries, was born at St. Malo in 1653, and died in 1708, leaving several works relating to the mission; as, 1. 'Lettres sur les Progrés de la Religion à la Chine,' 8vo. 1697. 2. 'Hist. de l'Edit. de l'Empereur de la Chine en faveur de la Religion Chretienne,' 12mo. 1698, which makes the third volume of le Comte's Memoirs of China. 3. Hist. des Isles Mariennes,' 12mo. 1700; besides eight parts or volumes of the 'Lettres Edifiantes et Curieuses,' written by the Chinese missionaries. Of these letters a collection was afterwards made extending to 34 vols. 12mo.; and in 1780 the Abbe de Querbeuf published a new edition in 26 vols.

GOBINET, Charles (Biog.) doctor of the Sorbonne, and a native of St. Quinten, who died in 1690, at the age of 77, was the author of, 1. 'Instruction de la Jeunesse,' 12mo. 1655, and often reprinted. 2. 'Instruction sur la Religion,' 12mo. 1687 and 1733. 3. 'Instruction sur la Maniere de bien étudier,' 12mo. 1689. 4. 'Instruction Chrétienne des Jeunes Filles,' second edition, 12mo. 1729; all these works, and some others of his, were printed at Paris.

GOBRYAS (Hist.) Γωβρύης, one of the seven Persian noblemen, who conspired against the usurper Smerdis, after whose death Darius was chosen king. Herod. l. 3, c. 70, &c.

GOCLENIUS, Conrad (Biog.) a philologist of Westphalia, was born in 1485, and died in 1539. He wrote notes on Cicero's 'Officia,' published a new edition of Lucan, and translated Lucian's 'Hermotinus.'

GOCLENIUS, Rodolphus (Biog.) who died professor of physic and mathematics at Marpurg in 1621, aged 49, was the author of a tract on the Cure of Wounds by the Magnet, which is supposed to have laid the foundation for the modern theory about animal magnetism.

GODDARD, Jonathan (Biog.) a puritan and partisan in the grand rebellion, was born at Greenwich in 1617, educated at Oxford, appointed head physician to Oliver Cromwell's army in 1647, and warden of Merton College in 1651. At the Restoration his place as warden was occupied by Dr. Edward Reynolds, then king's chaplain; and he, retiring to his private practice, died in 1674, leaving a nostrum which was long known by his name; and 'A Discourse setting forth the unhappy Condition of the Practice of Physic in London,' 4to. 1669, in which he recommended to physicians to make up their own prescriptions. He is mentioned with more respect among the friends of the Royal Society, of which he was a principal promoter, by making communications and observations.

GODEAU, Anthony (Biog.) a French prelate, descended from a good family at Dreux, was born in 1605, nominated to the bishopric of Grasse in 1636 through the recommendation of cardinal Richelieu, and died in 1671, after having faithfully and zealously discharged his episcopal functions, and restored ecclesiastical discipline, which had fallen into neglect. He was a voluminous writer, and one of the members, whose meetings, at the house of M. Conrart, to confer upon subjects of polite learning, first gave rise to the academy for Belles Lettres. Among his works, the principal are, 1. 'Histoire Ecclesiastique,' 3 vols. fol. 1633. 2. 'Christian Morals for the Instruction of the Clergy of the Diocese of Venice,' 1709, which was afterwards translated into English by Basil Kennet. 3. 'Traduction des Pseaumes de David,' in verse, &c.

GODEFROI, Denys, son of the preceding, who died in 1719, left Remarks on the Addition to the History of Louis XI, by Naude; also ' Satire Menipée,' and other works.

GODEFROI, John, another son of the second Denys, who died in 1732, left an elegant edition of the ' Memoires de Philippe de Commines,' 1706; also a new edition of the ' Satire Menipée;' the ' Journal de Henri III,' with notes, and some new pieces, 2 vols. 8vo.; and ' Mem. de la Reine Marguerite.'

GODESCHALCUS (Biog.) vide Gotteschalcus.

GODFREY (Hist.) surnamed the Dane, or Norman, took up arms against the emperor Charles the Fat, who, having got him into his power by treachery, had him assassinated in 885.

GODFREY of Bouillon, an illustrious chieftain during the crusades, son of Eustachius II, count of Boulogne, was elected king of Jerusalem on the fall of that city; but refused to accept any other title than that of duke of the Holy Land, and died in 1100, after a reign of little more than one year, and after having made himself master of the whole country. [Vide Plate VII]

GODFREY, Sir Edmondbury, a magistrate, who, having exerted himself with extraordinary activity in the discovery of the gunpowder-plot, was soon after found dead, pierced with his own sword, in 1687. His death was imputed to the papists, three of whom, namely, Green, Berry, and Hill, were tried and executed, on the charge of having committed this murder.

GODFREY (Ecc.) bishop of Amiens, died in the monastery of Crespin de Soissons in 1118, leaving a high reputation for learning and piety.

GODFREY of Viterbo (Biog.) the author of an ancient chronicle, is supposed to have flourished at Viterbo in the 12th century. This chronicle, entitled, ' Pantheon,' which begins with the creation of the world, and ends with 1186, and is written in Latin, prose and verse, was first printed at Basil in 1559, reprinted at Francfort in 1584, and Hanover in 1613; it is also inserted in Pistorius's ' Rerum Germanicarum Scriptores;' and in Muratori's grand collection. Lambecius speaks of another work by Godfrey, which exists in MS. in the Imperial Library at Vienna, entitled, ' Speculum Regium, sive de Genealogia Regum et Imperatorum a Diluvii Tempore ad Henricum VI Imperatorum.'

GODOLPHIN, Sidney (Hist.) a poet, and loyalist, most probably of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1610, educated at Oxford, and fell fighting for his sovereign in 1643, in an engagement at Chagford, in Devonshire. He left a translation of Virgil's story of Dido; besides several original pieces.

GODOLPHIN, Sidney, Earl of, third son of Francis Godolphin, and a statesman of the most distinguished abilities, was constituted a Lord of the Treasury in 1679, and First Lord of the Treasury in 1684; which post he held after the revolution in the reign of queen Anne, until his resignation in 1710. He died in 1712. [Vide Plate IX]

GODOLPHIN (Her.) the name of an ancient family in Cornwall, of which honourable mention has been made under History, in the person of Sidney Godolphin, who in 1684 was raised to the peerage, by the title of lord Godolphin of Rialton; in 1704, and in 1706, was created viscount Rialton, and earl of Godolphin. These titles became extinct at the death of his son Francis, second earl; but he, having ing been created lord Godolphin, of Helston, in 1735, this title descended to his first cousin, Francis Godolphin, which at his death without issue, in 1785, also became extinct.

GODOLPHIN, John (Biog.) a civilian, probably of the same family as the preceding, was born in 1617, at Godolphin, in the island of Scilly, educated at Oxford, and after having been set up as a judge by the usurping powers, he died in 1678. He wrote, 1. ' The Holy Limbic; or, an Extraction of the Spirit from the Letter of certain eminent Places in the Holy Scripture.' 2. ' The Holy Harbour; containing the whole Body of Divinity, or the Sum and Substance of the Christian Religion.' 3. ' A View of the Admiral's Jurisdiction,' 8vo. 1661; to which is annexed a translation by him of Grasias, or Ferrand's ' Extract of the Ancient Laws of Oleron." 4. ' The Orphan's Legacy, &c. treating of last Wills and Testaments,' 4to. 1674. 5. ' Repertorium Canonicum,' &c. 4to. 1678; in this piece he asserts the king's supremacy, as a power vested in the crown before the pope invaded the jurisdiction of the realm.

GODWIN, Earl (Hist.) a Saxon baron, who, having attended Canute in 1017 in his expedition against Sweden, received that monarch's daughter in marriage, and at his death supported, first the pretensions of Hardicanute to the crown of England, and afterwards that of his brother Harold. At the death of Hardicanute he declared for Edward the Confessor, who had married his daughter; but conspiring against him, and invading the kingdom, he compelled that prince to receive him again into his favour, soon after which he died suddenly, while dining with the king, in 1053.

GODWIN, Thomas (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in 1517, at Oakingham, in Berkshire; educated at Oxford; nominated after various preferments in 1584 to the see of Bath and Wells, and died in 1590, leaving a high character for the faithful discharge of his episcopal functions.

GODWIN, Francis, son of the preceding, and also an English prelate, was born at Havington, in Northamptonshire, in 1561; educated at Oxford, where he took his degrees of A. B. and A. M. in 1580 and 1583; was promoted to the bishopric of Llandaff in 1601; translated to that of Hereford in 1617; and died in 1633; leaving, 1. ' The Man in the Moon; or, a Discourse of a Voyage thither by Domingo Gonsales,' which was written in the early part of his life, but not published till after his death, in 1638; since which time it has been several times reprinted. 2. ' A Catalogue of the Bishops of England, since the first planting of the Christian Religion in this Island; together with a brief History of their Lives and memorable Actions, so near as can be gathered of Antiquity,' 4to. 1601; which was followed by a small work, by way of supplement, 'A brief View of the State of the Church of England,' carried to the year 1608, when it was written. Another edition of his Catalogue was published in 1615, with great additions; but being very erroneously printed, he published it the next year in Latin, under the title of 'De Præsulibus Angliæ Commentarius,' which has been reprinted, and continued down to the time of its publication in 1743 by Dr. Richardson, in folio, with a portrait of the author. 3. 'Rerum Anglicarum Henrico VIII,' &c. 1616, which was translated by his son, Morgan Godwin, under the title of 'Annales of England; containing the Reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, and Queen Mary,' fol. 4. 'A Computation of the Value of the Roman Sesterce and Attic Talent.'

GODWIN, Morgan, son of the preceding, was driven by the usurping powers from his archdeaconry of Shropshire, during the rebellion, and died in distress in 1645, leaving a son of his own name, who became a minister in Virginia, under the government of sir William Berkeley, but was afterwards beneficed near London. He wrote some pamphlets while in Virginia on the state of religion in that country. The Rev. Charles Godwin, an antiquary and benefactor to Baliol College, who died in 1770, appears to have been a son of Charles Godwin, of Monmouth, another son of bishop Francis Godwin.

GODWIN, Thomas (Biog.) a scholar, and native of Somersetshire, was born in 1587, educated at Oxford, and died in 1642, leaving, 1. 'Romanæ Historiæ Anthologia,' 4to. Oxon. 1613 and 1623. 2. 'Florilegium Phrasico; or, a Survey of the Latin Tongue.' 3. 'Synopsis Antiquitatum Hebraicarum,' &c. 4to. Oxon. 1616. 4. 'Moses and Aaron;' a supplement to the preceding. 5. 'Three Arguments to prove Election upon Foresight by Faith.'

GODWIN, Mary, a female writer of the modern school, better known by her maiden name of Woollstonecraft, was born at Beverley, in Yorkshire, in 1768, and died in 1797, leaving, among her works, 'A Vindication of the Rights of Women,' and 'Letters on Norway,' &c.

GOEREE, William (Biog.) a bookseller, and writer, was born at Middleburg in 1635, and died in 1711, leaving among his works, in Flemish, 'Jewish Antiquities,' 2 vols. fol.; 'History of the Jewish Church, taken from the Writings of Moses,' 4 vols. fol.; 'Sacred and Profane History,' 4to.; 'Introduction to the Practice of Universal Painting,' 8vo.; 'Of the Knowledge of Man with respect to his Nature and Painting,' 8vo.; 'Universal Architecture,' &c.

GOERTZ, John de (Hist.) a baron of Holstein, and a statesman in the service of Charles XII, who, in the capacity of financier, caused such discontents among the people, that at the death of this prince he was beheaded, in 1719.

GOES, Hugo Vander (Biog.) a painter of Bruges in the 15th century, whose Abigail in the Presence of David is most admired.

GOETZE, George Henry (Biog.) a Lutheran, was born at Leipsic in 1668, and died in 1729, leaving, among his works, 1. 'Selecta ex Historia Literaria,' 4to. Lubec. 1709. 2. 'Meletemata Annebergensia,' 3 vols. 12mo. Lubec. 1709.

GOEZ, Damian de (Biog.) a Portuguese writer of the 16th century, was born in 1501, of a noble family, at Alanquar, near Lisbon, and died in 1560, leaving, 1. 'Historia do Principe Dom Juaõ,' and other works, which were often printed and held in much esteem.

GOFF, Thomas (Biog.) a dramatic writer of Essex, was born about 1592, educated at Westminster, and Christ Church, Oxford, and died in 1629. He wrote several pieces, and among them five tragedies, none of which were published till after his death.

GOGUET, Anthony Yves (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Paris in 1716, and died in 1758, leaving 'Origine des Loix, des Arts, des Sciences, et de leur Progrès chez les Anciens Peuples,' 3 vols. 4to. 1758, and 6 vols. 12mo. 1778; also translated into English.

GOLDAST, Melchior Halminsfeld (Biog.) a writer on civil law, was born in 1576, at Bischoffeel, in Switzerland, and died in 1635, leaving, among his works, 'Monarchia Sancti Romani Imperii,' 3 vols. fol. 1611, 1613, and 1614; 'Alamanniæ Scriptores,' 5 vols. fol. 1730; 'Scriptores aliquot Rerum Suevicarum,' 4to.; 'Commentarius de Bohemiæ Regno,' 4to.; 'Informatio de Statu Bohemiæ quoad Jus,' 4to.; 'Sybilla Francica,' 4to., a collection of pieces relating to the Maid of Orleans; 'Parænecticorum Veterum Pars Prima,' 4to. &c.; besides a collection of letters, published under the title of 'Virorum Clarissimorum ad Melchior Goldastum Epistolæ,' 4to. Francof. 1688.

GOLDING, Arthur (Biog.) a translator, and a native of London in the 16th century, left translations of Philip Mornay's treatise in French on the Truth of Christianity, published in 1587; of Justin, in 1564; of Cæsar, in 1565; of Pomponius Mela; of Solinus; also a poetical translation of Ovid's Metamorphoses; the first four books of which he published in 1565, and the remainder in 1567. Besides these, he translated many of the works of the early reformers of the Genevan school. His only original work, as is supposed, is a 'Discourse of the Earthquake, that happened in England and other Places in 1580,' 12mo., if we except some verses, prefixed to Baret's 'Alviarie,' published in 1580.

GOLDMAN, Nicholas (Biog.) a mathematician, was born at Breslaw in 1623, and died in 1665, leaving, 1. 'Elementa Architecturæ Militaris,' 8vo. 1643. 2. 'De Usu Proportionarii Circuli.' 3. 'De Stylometricis,' 1662, &c.

GOLDONI, Charles (Biog.) an Italian dramatist, was born at Venice in 1707, and died in 1793, leaving a number of pieces, principally comedies, which were printed at Leghorn in 31 vols. 8vo. 1788—1791.

GOLDSMITH, Oliver (Biog.) an eminent poet and miscellaneous writer, was born in 1728, at a place called Pallas, in the parish of Forney, and county of Longford, in Ireland. His father was a clergyman, and is supposed to have been faithfully represented in the character of the Village Preacher in the 'Deserted Village.' His eldest brother Henry, was also a clergyman, to whom the poem of the Traveller was dedicated. He was educated at Dublin, where in 1747 he was elected one of the exhibitioners on the foundation of Erasmus Smyth, took his degree of A. B. 1749, and after a chequered life, occasioned by his adventurous and thoughtless temper, he died in distress, April 1772. Among his justly admired works, are his 'Vicar of Wakefield,' published about 1759; 'The Traveller,' 1765; and 'The Deserted Village,' in 1769; besides which he wrote or compiled 'The Roman History,' 2 vols. 8vo.; 'The History of England,' 4 vols. 8vo.; 'Grecian History,' 2 vols. 8vo.; 'History of the Earth and Animated Nature;' 'Life of Bolingbroke,' &c.; and was the author likewise of two well known comedies, namely, 'The Good Natured Man,' and 'She Stoops to Conquer.' [Vide Plate XXXVIII]

He was the author of a book answering the question, 'How far superior Powers ought to be obeyed of their Subjects, and wherein they may be lawfully, by God's Word, obeyed and resisted,' an apology for rebellion, which he was compelled to recant on the accession of queen Elizabeth.

GOODRICH, Thomas (Hist.) or Goodrike, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, an English prelate, and a native of Lincolnshire, was admitted pensioner of Benet College, Cambridge, about 1500, became fellow of Jesus College in 1510, commenced A. M. in 1514, was elected bishop of Ely in 1534, appointed Lord Chancellor of England in 1551, and died in 1554. He is said to have favoured the Reformation, and to have had a hand in compiling the 'Book of Common Prayer,' and likewise the 'Institution of a Christian Man;' but he was sufficiently luke-warm in the cause of the Reformation to hold his offices in the reign of queen Mary.

GOODRICKE, Sir John, Bart. (Hist.) of the same family as the preceding, distinguished himself for his loyalty during the rebellion, for which he suffered much in his person and his estate. He was a prisoner, first at Manchester, and then in the Tower of London, from which he made his escape; and, going to France, continued there till the Restoration, when he was chosen knight of the shire, and died in 1670.

Goodricke, Sir Henry, eldest son of the preceding, was envoy-extraordinary from Charles II of England to Charles II, King of Spain, and died Privy Counsellor to king William III in 1704.

Goodricke, Right Hon. Sir John, grand-nephew of the preceding, resided for some time at Stockholm as envoy-extraordinary, and died in 1789.

Goodricke (Her.) or Goodrikke, the name of a family of Saxon origin, and great antiquity, which flourished at Nortingly, or Nortonlee, co. Somersetshire, for many centuries; of this family was the bishop of Ely and sir John Goodricke above-mentioned, who was created a baronet in 1641; their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Argent, on a fess gules, between two lions passant guardant sable, a fleur-de-lis or, between two crescents argent.

Crest. A demi-lion ermined, armed and langued gules, issuing out of a ducal coronet or; holding in his paws a battle-ax proper, helved or.

Supporters. Two naked boys, which are on the monument of Richard Goodricke, esq. who was high sheriff of Yorkshire in 1579.

GOODWIN, John (Biog.) one of the most violent advocates of rebellion under the mask of religion, was born in 1593, educated at Oxford, and died in 1665. He justified the murder of king Charles in a pamphlet, entitled 'The Obstructors of Justice,' and wrote many other things in defence of his religious opinions.

Goodwin, Thomas, a non-conformist, was born in 1600 at Rolesby, in Norfolk, educated at Cambridge, set over Magdalen College, Oxford, as its president, by Oliver Cromwell, ejected from that post at the Restoration, and died an independent preacher in 1679. He left some few works written after the manner of his party.

GOOGE, Barnaby (Biog.) a poet and translator of the 16th century, was the author of 'Eglogs, Epitaphes, and Sonnetes;' besides which he translated, 1. 'The Zodiake of Life,' from Marcellus Palingenius Stellatus, the first three books of which appeared in 1560, the first six in 1561, and the whole complete in 12mo. 1565. 2. A Poem on Antichrist from Naogeorgus, 1570. 3. Herebach's Œconomical Treatise on Agriculture, 1577. 4. Lopez de Mendoza's Spanish Proverbs, and, 5. Aristotle's Table of the Ten Categories.

GOPHNA (Geog.) a considerable town of Judea, situated in the eastern part of the tribe of Ephraim, was the capital of a district of the same name. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 3; Reland. Palæst. in l. 3.

GORANUS (Hist.) a king of Scotland, is said to have succeeded Congallus I in 501, and to have died after a reign of 57 years.

GORDAS (Hist.) a king of the Huns, about the Bosphorus, in the fifth century, who visited the emperor Justinian for the purpose of being baptized into the Christian church.

GORDIANUS, M. Antonius (Hist.) surnamed Africanus, Sen. a son of Metius Metellus, and a descendant from Trajan by the mother's side, and from the Gracchi by that of his father, was tumultuously raised to the imperial throne by the army at the age of 80, and, after a reign of six weeks, strangled himself, A. D. 236, at Carthage, on hearing of the death of his son, the subject of the next article. Jul. Capitolin. in Vit.; Herod. l. 7, &c.

Gordianus, M. Antonius, surnamed Africanus, Jun. son of the preceding, and a partner with him in the imperial throne, was no sooner proclaimed emperor than he was compelled to march against his antagonist Maximinus, and was killed in battle in the June of the same year. Jul. Capit. &c.

Gordianus, M. Antonius, surnamed Pius, grandson of the first Gordian, was proclaimed emperor in the 16th year of his age; and, after a warlike and prudent reign of eight years, he was assassinated by means of Philip, a principal officer in the state. Jul. Capit.

Gordianus (Numis.) many medals are extant of the three emperors above-mentioned, bearing their effigies as in the annexed figures; the inscription, for the first and second Gordian, IMP. M. ANT. GORDIANUS AFR. AUG.—

ΑΥΤ. Κ. Μ. ΑΝΤ. ΓΟΡΔΙΑΝ. ΑΦΡ.—Α. Κ. Μ. ΑΝ. ΓΟΡΔΙΑΝΟΣ CΕΒ. ΑΦΡ.; on the reverse, P. M. TR. P. COS. P. P.: those for the third Gordian denote his dignities in the successive years as follow:

A. D. 337. GORDIANUS CÆS.—M. ANT. GORDIANUS CÆS. having received this title of Cæsar at the age of 12.
339. IMP. GORDIANUS PIUS AUG. or FELIX AUG. with the additions P. M. TR. P. I. II. COS.
340. TR. P. II. III. COS. &c.
341. TR. P. III. IIII. COS. II. &c.
342—344. TR. P. IIII—VII. COS. II. &c.

Some of his medals are inscribed at large.—IMP. M. A. GORDIANUS PIUS AUG. FEL.; and in the Greek, ΑΥΤΟΚ. Κ. Μ. ΑΝΤ. ΓΟΡΔΙΑΝΟC CΕΒ. i. e. Ἀυτοκράτωρ Καῖσαρ Μάρκος Αντώνιος Γορδιανὸς Σεβαστὸς; to which is sometimes added Π. Π. πατὴρ πατρίδος; but, for the most part, the inscriptions are not so full: those on the reverse are — ABUNDANTIA AUG. — CONCORDIA EXERCITUUM.—FIDES EXERCITUS.—AETERNITATI AUG.—AEQUITATI PUBLICAE.—MUNIFICENTIA GORDIANI AUG. — MARS PROPUGNATOR.—JOVI CONSERVATORI.—LÆTITIA AUG &c. Medals were struck in honour of this emperor by the most considerable cities in Greece. Vail. Num. Græc. &c.; Patin. Num. Imp.; Tristan. Hist. Comment.; Harduin. Oper.; Spanh. Dissert.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Mediob. Num. Imp.; Oisel. Sel. Num; Mus. Pembroch.; Eckel. Cat. &c.

GORDIUS (Hist.) a peasant of Phrygia, who, according to an oracle was elected king; and, having consecrated his chariot in the temple of Jupiter, he tied the yoke to the draught-tree in such an artful manner that the ends of the cord could not be perceived, which gave rise to another oracle, that whoever could untie the Gordian knot, was to become master of Asia, which Alexander, finding himself unable to perform, cut the knot with his sword, and interpreted the oracle in his own favour. Justin. l. 11; Q. Curt. l. 3; Arrian. Alex. Exped. l. 1.

GORDON, Bertram de (Hist.) of the illustrious family mentioned under Heraldry, wounded Richard I, king of England, before the Castle of Chalons, of which wound he died in 1199.

GORDON, Adam de, sided with the rebellious barons, who took up arms against Henry III; but afterwards being engaged in single combat with prince Edward, who spared his life when he was falling, he from that time adhered faithfully to the royal cause.

GORDON, Sir Adam de, Lord of Gordon, was one of the greatest men of that age, being equally qualified for the cabinet and the field. He lost his life in the service of his king and country, bravely fighting in the vanguard of the Scotch army at the battle of Hallidon-hill in 1333, after having been employed by king Robert on different negotiations, particularly at the court of Rome in the affair of the king's excommunication, when he was the bearer of the famous letter, from the nobility of Scotland to his Holiness, asserting the independence of their country.

GORDON, Sir Alexander de, son of the preceding, after escaping unhurt from the battle in which his father was slain, was killed at that of Nevill's Cross, near Durham, in 1346, where king David was taken prisoner.

GORDON, Sir John de, son of sir Alexander, was taken prisoner at the battle of Nevill's Cross, and not released until 1357.

GORDON, Sir John de, a warrior of undaunted courage, routed a body of English, and took sir John Lilburne, their commander, prisoner in 1372; and, after performing other feats of valour, he lost his life at the battle of Otterburn in 1388.

GORDON, Sir Adam, his son and heir, yielding to none of his ancestors for bravery, was slain at the battle of Homildon in 1402.

GORDON, Alexander, vide Huntley.

GORDON, George, Lord, son of the second marquis of Huntley, joined the king upon the first breaking out of the rebellion, and never deserted his interest, being slain in his service at the battle of Alford in 1645.

GORDON, Lord Charles, Earl of Aboyne, third brother of the preceding, and a no less distinguished loyalist, supported the cause of Charles I and II until the Restoration, when he received the reward of his fidelity.

GORDON, Lord James, Viscount Aboyne, brother of the preceding, lent his aid in support of the royal cause; but, escaping to France on the defeat of the marquis of Montrose in 1645, he died in 1649 of grief, at the unhappy fate of his royal master.

GORDON, Lord Henry, youngest brother of the preceding, engaged with no less zeal in behalf of the royal cause, at the downfall of which he went into the service of the crown of Poland, where he distinguished himself by his valour.

GORDON, Sir John, of Haddo, a noble loyalist, withstood the enemies of his king and country to the last extremity, and held a siege in his own house, at Kelly, until being compelled to surrender at discretion, he was afterwards beheaded by the usurping powers in 1644.

GORDON, Sir George, Earl of Aberdeen, second son of the preceding, being bred to the law, was appointed one of the Lords of Session in 1680, advanced to the office of Lord Chancellor of Scotland in 1682; but resigning his post four years after, he lived for the most part in retirement until his death in 1720.

GORDON, Lord George, son of Cosmo, third duke of Gordon, was originally in the navy, but, obtaining afterwards a seat in the House of Commons, he courted popularity by opposing the ministers, but particularly in regard to the bill for granting immunities to the Roman Catholics, when he headed a mob to present a petition to the Commons against the bill, which terminated in the riots in 1780, that threatened the destruction of the metropolis. Although tried and acquitted of this offence, he was afterwards found guilty of a libel against the queen of France; for which he was imprisoned, and died in Newgate in 1793, at the age of 43.

GORDON (Her.) the name of an ancient and distinguished family of Scotland, the antiquity of which is such as to have given rise to many fabulous accounts of its descent. Some bring this family from Greece to Gaul, and thence to Scotland, others from Spain, Flanders, &c.; but the most probable conjecture is, that some of the Gordons, of which there were considerable families in France before the Norman conquest, came over with William, duke of Normandy, and accompanied king Malcolm Canmore, or his son, David I, into Scotland. In confirmation of this, it is said that in the reign of king Malcolm Canmore, a valiant knight, of the name of Gordon, went into Scotland, where having killed a wild boar that greatly infested the borders, the generous king gave him a grant of several lands in the Merse, or Berwickshire, which he called Gordon, after his own surname, and settling there took the boar's head in memory of his having killed that monstrous animal. From him descended the warriors of whom honourable mention has been made under History. On the death of sir Adam Gordon, lord Gordon above-mentioned, the elder branch became extinct in the male line; but was preserved in the female line in the person of Elisabeth Gordon, his only daughter, who married Alexander Seton, styled lord of Gordon and Huntley. His son Alexander was created in 1449 earl of Huntley. George, the sixth earl of Huntley, was in 1599 created marquis of Huntley. George, the fourth marquis of Huntley, was in 1684 created duke of Gordon; and Alexander, fourth duke of Gordon, was in 1784 advanced to the English peerage, by the title of baron Gordon of Huntley, in the county of Gloucester. The title of viscount Aboyne was enjoyed by a branch of this family, which was conferred in 1632 on lord George Gordon, the eldest son of the first marquis of Huntley, which became extinct at the death of his third son, James, second viscount; but that of earl of Aboyne was conferred in 1660, on his brother, lord Charles Gordon, ancestor of the present earl of Aboyne. [Vide Aboyne] The titles, arms, &c. of the duke of Gordon are as follow:

Titles. Gordon, duke of Gordon, marquis and earl of Huntley, earl of Enzie, viscount Inverness, lord of Badenoch, Lochaber, Strathaven, Achindoun, Balmore, Garlley, and Kincardine, in the kingdom of Scotland; earl of Norwich, and baron Gordon of Huntley, English honours. Title of the eldest son marquis of Huntley.

Arms. Quarterly, first azure, three boars' heads erased or; second or, three lions' heads erased gules, for Badenoch; third or, within a double tressure flory and counter-flory gules, for Seton; fourth azure, three cinquefoils argent, for Fraser.

Crest. In a marquis's coronet a stag's head affronté proper.

Supporters. Two greyhounds argent, collared gules, and thereon three round buckles or.

Motto. "Animo non astutia."

Gordon, a younger branch of the above-mentioned family, which is said to have descended uninterruptedly in the male line from Bertrand de Gourdon, or Gordon, who shot king Richard I, as before-mentioned, bears, in allusion to this event. for crest two arms ready to let fly an arrow from a bow, with the motto "Fortuna sequatur." This family was raised to the dignity of the peerage in the person of sir George Gordon, the before-mentioned Lord Chancellor of Scotland, who was created in 1682 earl of Aberdeen, viscount of Fromartine, &c. [Vide Aberdeen]

Gordon, the name of several branches of the same family, who enjoy the dignity and title of a baronet.

Gordon, of Newark on Trent, descended from William Gordon of Cricklaw, youngest son of John, first lord Lockenvar, created in 1764. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth azure, three boars' heads erased or, for Gordon; second and third azure, a bend or, between two swans proper, for Jenison.

Crest. A demi-savage proper, holding in his dexter hand a baton argent, wreathed.

Gordon-Cuming, vide Cuming.

Gordon, of Niton, in the Isle of Wight, created in 1818. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth for Gordon [vide Gordon]; second and third gules, a tilting spear fessways proper, between three ancient crowns, two and one or, for Grant; the whole within a bordure, embattled quarterly argent and or.

Crest. Issuant from a mural crown a dexter arm embowed in armour proper, charged with a mullet gules, and garnished or, the hand grasping a falchion also proper, transpiercing a boar's head erect and erased or.

Motto. "Animo non astutia."

Gordon, vide Duff.

Gordon, Bernard (Biog.) a French physician of the 13th century, who died, as is said by some, at Montpelier, in 1305, left a considerable number of treatises, which were published together at Ferrara in 1487, at Venice, in 1494; at Paris, in 1542; and at Lyons, in 1550.

Gordon, James, a Scotch Jesuit, of the noble family of Gordon, was born in 1543, educated at Rome, and died in 1620. His only writings are 'Controversiarum Fidei Epitome,' in three parts or volumes, 8vo.; the first printed at Limoges in 1612, the second at Paris, and the third at Cologne in 1620.

Gordon, James, another Scotch Jesuit of the same family, was born at or near Aberdeen in 1553, and died at Paris in 1641, leaving a Commentary on the Bible; besides 'Opus Chronologicum, &c. a Mundi Exordio ad Annum Christi 1617,' &c. fol. August. Pict.

Gordon, Robert, of Stralogh, was the author of 'Theatrum Scotiæ,' during the usurpation of Oliver Cromwell, to whom he dedicated his work.

Gordon, Thomas, a native of Scotland, and a party writer on politics and religion, who died in 1750, published, in conjunction with a Mr. Trenchard, a writer of the same stamp, Letters, under the name of 'Cato;' and also 'The Independent Whig.' Two collections of his tracts have been preserved, namely, 'A Cordial for low Spirits,' in 3 vols.; and 'The Pillar of Priestcraft and Orthodoxy shaken,' in 2 vols.; but he is more creditably known by his translations of Sallust and Tacitus.

Gordon, Alexander, a Scotch antiquary and historian, who died about 1750, was the author of, 1. 'Itinerarium Septentrionale; or, a Journey through most Parts of the Counties of Scotland, in two Parts,' &c. fol. 1726. 2. 'Additions and Corrections, by way of Supplement to the Itinerarium Septentrionale,' fol. A Latin edition of the 'Itinerarium,' with the Supplement, was published in Holland in 1731. 3. 'The Lives of Pope Alexander VI, and his Son Cæsar Borgia,' &c. fol. 1729. 4. 'A complete History of the Ancient Amphitheatres, more particularly regarding the Architecture of these Buildings,' &c. 8vo. 1730. 5. 'An Essay towards explaining the Hieroglyphical Figures on the Coffin of the Ancient Mummy belonging to Captain William Lethieullier,' fol. 1737. 6. 'Twenty-five Plates of all the Egyptian Mummies, and other Egyptian Antiquities in England,' fol.

Gordon, Andrew, professor of philosophy in the Scotch monastery of Benedictines, at Erfurt, who died in 1759, was the author of 'Phenomena Electricitatis Exposita,' 8vo.; 'Philosophia jucunda et utilis,' 3 vols. 8vo. &c.

Gordon, William, an Anglo-American divine, historian, and minister, was born at Hitchin, in Hertfordshire, in 1729, and died in 1807, leaving 'The History of the Rise, Progress, and Establishment of the Independence of the United States of America.'

Gordon, Sir Adam, a baronet, and an English divine, was born in Scotland in 1745, educated at Westminster and Christ Church, Oxford, and died in 1817, leaving 'The Contrast; or, an Antidote to Lord Chesterfield's Letters,' 2 vols.; 'Homilies of the Church of England modernized,' &c.

GORE (Her.) the name of a family of Ireland, which enjoys the dignity of the peerage, conferred on sir Arthur Gore, bart. who was in 1758 created viscount Sudley, of Castle Gore, and baron Saunders; and in 1762 earl of Arran, co. Galway. [Vide Arran]

Gore, Thomas (Biog.) an heraldic writer, was born at Alderton, in Wiltshire, in 1631, educated at Oxford, and died in 1684, leaving, besides a number of MSS., 1. 'A Table, showing how to blazon a Coat ten several ways,' 1655; a single sheet copied from Ferne. 2. 'Series Alphabetica Latino-Anglica, Nomina Gentilitiorum,' &c. 8vo. Oxon. 1667. 3. 'Catalogus in certa Capita seu Classes,' &c. Oxon. 1668; reprinted, with enlargements, in 1674. 4. 'Nomenclator Geographicus,' &c. 5. 'Loyalty Displayed and Falsehood Unmasked,' 4to. &c. London, 1681.

GORELLI (Biog.) or Gregorio, son of Raynier, of the family of Sinigardi, of Arezzo, in Italy, an historian of the 14th century, was the author of a history of his own country, in verse, in which he relates the events that happened from 1310 to 1384; his history is inserted in Muratori's collection of Italian historians.

GORGE (Myth.) Γόργη, a daughter of Œneus, king of Calydon, who, with her sister Dejanira, were the only daughters of this prince who were said not to be changed into birds by Diana, at the death of Meleager. Apollod. l. 1, &c.; Hygin. Fab. 174; Paus. l. 10, &c.

GORGIAS (Hist.) Γοργίας, a captain in the army of Antiochus Epiphanes, who distinguished himself in Judæa, whither he was sent by Nicanor, A. M. 3839, A. C. 165. 1 Maccab. iii.

Gorgias, a sophist, surnamed Leontinus, because he was born at Leontium, in Sicily, was sent by his countrymen to solicit the assistance of the Athenians against the Syracusans, in which embassy he was successful. He acquired, however, still greater celebrity as a philosopher, and had a statue of gold erected to him at Delphi, by the gratitude of all Greece. He lived to his 108th year, and died A. C. 400. Only two fragments of his compositions are extant, the one an apology for Helen, and the other in praise of the Athenians, who had fallen in the service of their country. Cic. de Orat. l. 1, &c.; Diod. l. 12; Plin. l. 33; Quintil. l. 3; Athen. l. 12.

GORGO (Hist.) the wife of Leonidas, king of Sparta.

GORGON (Numis.) vide Medusa.

GORGONES (Myth.) Γοργὲς, three sisters, daughters of Phorcus and Ceto, whose names were Stheno, Euryale, and Medusa, of whom Medusa was the only one that was immortal. According to mythologists their hair was entwined with serpents, their hands were of brass, their wings of the colour of gold, their body covered with scales, and their teeth as long as the tusks of a wild boar. Perseus having attacked them, cut off Medusa's head, which he gave to Minerva, who fixed it in her ægis, whereby she turned into stones all that directed their eyes towards it. Hom. Il. l. 5; Hesiod. Theog. v. 270; Æschyl. Prom. Act. 4; Pind. Pyth. od. &c.; Apollon. l. 4; Apollodor. l. 2; Diod. l. 1, &c.; Virg. Æn. l. 6; Mart. l. 9; Paus. l. 2, &c.

GORGOPHONE (Myth.) a daughter of Perseus and Andromeda. Paus. l. 2, &c.

GORING (Hist.) one of the officers in the time of Charles I, who entered into an engagement to oppose the encroachments which were then making by the Commons on the royal prerogative. He defeated their plan by disclosing it to the rebel party; and afterwards endeavoured to atone for his perfidy by joining the standard of the king, on the breaking out of the rebellion.

Goring (Her.) the name of a family of considerable antiquity in Sussex, named from Goring in the Rape of Arundel, enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1627 on sir Henry Goring; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a chevron between three annulets gules.

Crest. A lion rampant argent.

GORIO, Anthony Francis (Biog.) an antiquary of Florence, was born in 1691, and died in 1757, leaving, 1. 'Museum Florentinum,' 11 vols. fol. Florent. 1731. 2. 'Museum Etruscum,' 3 vols. fol. 1737. 3. 'Museum Cortonense,' fol. Rom. 1750. 4. 'Ancient Inscriptions, which are found in the Cities of Tuscany,' 3 vols. fol. &c.

GORLÆUS, Abraham (Biog.) an antiquary, was born at Antwerp in 1549, and died in 1609, leaving, 1. 'Dactyliotheca,' &c. 1601. 2. 'Variarum Gemmarum quibus Antiquitas in signando uti solita, Sculpturæ,' which was a second part of the same work that has gone through several editions; the best is that of Leyden, 1625. He also published a collection of medals, not considered of the best authority.

GORMANSTON, Viscount (Her.) a title enjoyed by the family of Preston, which was first conferred in 1478 on sir Robert de Preston.

GORMO (Hist.) the name of three kings of Denmark, of whom nothing authentic is known.

GORRÆUS, John de (Biog.) or John de Gorris, a physician, was born at Paris in 1506, and died in 1577. His works, consisting of Medical Definitions, a Dictionary of Medical Terms, and Commentaries on Hippocrates, Galen, and Nicander, were published by his son, in folio, in 1622.

GORT, Viscount (Her.) a title enjoyed by the family of Smyth, who took the name of Vereker, from the alliance between the two families.

GORTER, John de (Biog.) a physician, was born at Eckhuysen in 1689, and died in 1762, leaving, 1. 'De Perspiratione insensibile,' 4to. Lugd. Bat. and Patav. 1725, and frequently reprinted.

GORTYNA (Geog.) Γορτύνα, or Gortyn, an inland town of Crete, on the inhabitants of which Annibal practised a stratagem mentioned by Cornelius Nepos. It was famous for the fertility of its meadows.

Virg. Eclog. 6, v. 60.

Perducant aliquæ stabula ad Gortynia vaccæ.

And also for its bows and arrows.

Virg. Æn. l. 11, v. 773.

Gortyna (Numis.) most of the medals or coins of this town have an allusion, by the type of the bull, to the fable of Europa, who is supposed to be represented sometimes sitting half naked, and in a sorrowful attitude, on the trunk of a tree; on the reverse a bull standing. Some of their medals also bear the figure of Jupiter, who is fabled to have carried Europa to Crete: inscriptions, ΓΟΡΤΥΝΙΩΝ, ΓΟΡΤΥΝ. ΓΟΡΤΥ. ΓΟΡΤΥΝΙ, &c. The Gortynians struck medals and coins as an independent state, and also in honour of Tiberius, Germanicus, Caligula, Trajan, Adrian, and Ælius Cæsar.

GOSFORD, Earl (Her.) a title enjoyed by the family of Acheson, which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Acheson, earl of Gosford, viscount and baron Gosford.

Arms. Argent, an eagle displayed sable; on a chief vert, two mullets or.

Crest. On a wreath, a cock gules, standing on a trumpet or.

Supporters. Two leopards tenne, armed and langued gules, collared and chained or; the dexter regardant.

Motto. "Vigilantibus."

GOSHEN (Bibl.) גשן, the land in Egypt where Joseph placed his father and brethren. Gen. xiv. This province lying near the Mediterranean enjoyed the rains, which were very rare in other parts of Egypt.

GOSSELINI, Julian (Biog.) an Italian poet and miscellaneous writer, was born at Rome in 1525, and died in 1587, leaving, 'The Life of Ferdinand Gonzaga,' 4to. 1579; 'Three Conspiracies,' &c. 8vo. 1588; 'Rime,' &c.; the latter were frequently reprinted.

GOSSON, Stephen (Biog.) a divine and a poet, was born in Kent in 1554, educated at Oxford, and died in 1623. He wrote, besides some dramatic pieces never published, 1. 'Play confuted in five several Actions,' 1580. 2. 'The School of Abuse,' 1587, a professed invective against poets, players, and jesters. 3. 'The Ephemerides of Phialo,' 1579. 4. 'The Trumpet of War,' a sermon.

GOTARZES (Hist.) a brother of Artabanus II, whom he murdered, with his children, when he took possession of his throne. He was driven from it by Vardanes, but regained it at his death, notwithstanding the opposition which was made to him by the emperor Claudius. Tacit. Annal. l. 2.

GOTHI (Geog.) a celebrated tribe of Germans, otherwise called Gothones, Gutones, Gythones, and Guttones, in English Goths. They dwelt on the banks of the Vistula, and extended their settlements as far as the Baltic, their kings having, according to Jornandes, and Joannes Magnus, reigned in Sweden many centuries before Christ. They first attacked the Roman empire in the reign of Constantine, by whom they were driven away; but afterwards they plundered Rome under Alaric, one of their most celebrated kings, A. D. 410. The Goths were divided into two nations, namely, the Ostrogoths, or such as inhabited the East of Scandinavia, and the Westrogoths, or Visigoths, the inhabitants of the West; which names they retained after they left their country and passed over into Gaul. These latter formed a settlement in Spain under their king Ataulphus, the successor of Alaric, who was killed in 415, and succeeded by Sigeric, Vallia, Theodoric, Thorismond, Theodoric II, Evaric, Alaric II, Athalaric, Amalasunta, &c. GOTTESCHALCUS (Biog.) an heresiarch. [Vide Fulgentius]

GOTTI, Vincent Lewis (Ecc.) a cardinal, was born at Bologna in 1664, created a cardinal by Benedict XIII in 1728, and died in 1742, leaving among his works, which were highly esteemed, 1. 'De vera Christi Ecclesiâ,' 3 vols. Rom. 1719; and Mediol. 1734. 2. 'Theologia Scholastico-dogmatica juxta Mentem divi Thomæ Aquinatis,' &c. 6 vols. 4to. 3. 'Colloquia Theologica-polemica,' &c. 4to. Bonon. 4. 'De eligendâ inter Dissidentes Christianos Sententiâ;' written in answer to a piece with the same title by Le Clerc. 5. An elaborate work on the Truth of Christianity, published in 12 vols. at Rome, the first in 1735, and the last in 1740. His life was published under the title of 'De Vitâ et Studiis Fratris Vincentii Lodovici Gottii,' &c. Rom. 1742.

GOTTSCHED, John Christopher (Biog.) a German writer, was born at Konigsberg in 1700, and died in 1766, leaving, among other things, 'An Introduction to Dramatic Poetry, or a Review of all the Tragedies, Comedies, and Operas, which have appeared in Germany from 1450, to the middle of the eighteenth Century,' Leipzig, 1757.

Gottsched, Louisa Maria, wife of the preceding, published a metrical translation of Pope's 'Rape of the Lock;' and after her death, in 1762, a collection of her letters was published, which was highly esteemed.

GOUDELIN, Peter (Biog.) a Gascon poet, was born at Toulouse in 1579, and died in 1649, leaving several works, which were often printed at Toulouse, and secured him the admiration of his countrymen. His poem on the Death of Henry IV, which was one of the best, has been translated out of the Gascon language.

GOUDEMEL, Claude (Hist.) a composer of music to the French metrical translation of the Psalms for the use of the Protestants, was a native of Lyons, and lost his life on the day of the massacre of Paris in 1572, for the part he took in favour of Protestantism. He set to music the 'Chansons Spirituelles' of De Muret, in four parts, which were printed at Paris in 1555; and afterwards the Psalms of Clement Marot, which was printed at Paris in 1565, and reprinted in Holland in 1606, for the use of the Protestants.

GOVEA, Anthony (Biog.) a Portuguese Jesuit, was born at Beja in 1505, and died in 1565, leaving some works on law, which were published in one volume, folio, 1562; besides an edition of Virgil, and Terence, and a Discourse against Calvin, &c.

GOUFFIER, Marie Gabriel Auguste Laurent, Count de Choisseul (Hist.) a French statesman and writer, was born in 1752, appointed ambassador to the Porte in 1782, went to Russia on the breaking out of the revolution, where he was made a privy councillor, was raised to the peerage of France at the restoration of Louis XVIII, and died in 1817, leaving, 'Voyage en Grèce,' fol. 1782; besides several papers in the Memoirs of the Academy.

GOUGE, William (Biog.) a puritan, was born at Bow, near Stratford, in 1575, educated at Eton College, and King's College, Cambridge, and died in 1653, leaving some tracts in the style of the party to which he belonged; besides which, he wrote a Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews, and had a share in the Commentary on the Bible, usually called 'The Assembly's Annotations.'

Gouge, Thomas, son of the preceding, was born at Bow in 1605, educated at Eton College, and King's College, Cambridge, ejected from his living of St. Sepulchre's after the Restoration, and died in 1681, leaving, 'The Principles of Religion explained;' 'A Word to Sinners,' &c. which were collected into one volume, and published in 8vo. 1706.

GOUGH, Richard (Biog.) the Camden of the 18th century, was born in 1735, and died in 1809, leaving, as monuments of his industry and deep research, 1. 'The History of the Bible, translated from the French;' which was his first production, and is said to have been executed at the age of 12; to which was added, 'A Short Chronology of the Holy Scriptures.' 2. 'The Customs of the Israelites, translated from the French of the Abbot Fleury, by R. G.' 8vo. 1750. 3. 'Atlas Renovatus, or Geography Modernized; being a particular Description of the World as far as it was known to the Ancients,' &c. fol. 1751. 3. 'The History of Carausius; or an Examination of what has been advanced on that Subject by Genebrier and Dr. Stukely,' 4to. 1762. 4. 'Anecdotes of British Topography,' 4to. 1768; reprinted in 2 vols. 1780; a third edition was in preparation in 1806, when Mr. Nichols's office was destroyed by fire. 5. A new edition of 'Description des Royaulmes d'Angleterre et d'Ecosse, composée par Etienne Perlin,' Paris, 1558; and of 'Histoire de l'Entrée de la Reine Mère dans la Grande Bretagne, par de la Serre,' Paris, 1639; which he illustrated with cuts and notes, &c. 1775. 6. 'A Catalogue of the Coins of Canute, King of Denmark and England, with Specimens,' 4to. 1777. 7. 'An Essay on the Rise and Progress of Geography in Great Britain and Ireland; illustrated with Specimens of our oldest Maps,' 4to. 1780; both of which were extracted from his second edition of the 'British Topography.' 8. 'A Comparative View of the Ancient Monuments of India,' 4to. 1785. 9. 'Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain;' the first volume of which, in folio, was published in 1786, a second in 1796, and an introduction to it in 1799. 10. 'Camden's Britannia,' a new edition in three large folio volumes, 1789. 11. 'List of the Members of the Society of Antiquaries of London, from 1717 to June, 1796,' &c. 4to. 1798. 12. The Paris edition of the 'Arabian Night's Entertainments,' amended, and illustrated with notes. 13. 'A Letter to the Lord Bishop of London, by a Layman,' 8vo, 1799. 14. 'Rev. Kennet Gibson's Comment upon part of the Fifth Journey of Antoninus through Britain,' 4to. 1800. 15. 'The History of Pleshy, in Essex,' 4to. 1803. 16. 'Plates of the Coins of the Seleucidæ.' 17. 'Description of the Beauchamp Chapel, adjoining to the Church of St. Mary, at Warwick,' 4to. 1804; besides several works still in MS. which were prepared before he left college, namely, 1. 'Notes on Memnon, annexed to the Abbe Gedoyn's French Translation.' 2. 'Astro-Mythology,' &c. 3. 'The History of Bithynia, translated from the French of the Abbe Sevir.' 4. 'Memoirs of celebrated Professors of the Belles Lettres in the Academy of Inscriptions, &c. at Paris, translated and abridged from the Elogia,' &c. 5. 'Reflexions on the Egyptian Government.' 6. 'Memoirs of the Life and Character of Mithridates, King of Pontus,' &c. To the above might be added his contributions to the 'Archæologia,' and the 'Vetusta Monumenta,' for the former of which, besides numerous papers, he drew up 'The History of the Society of Antiquaries of London,' prefixed to the first volume of their 'Archæologia,' in 1770. He was also the improver and editor of Martin's 'History of Thetford,' 4to. 1780; 'Vertue's Medals, Coins, and Great Seals, by Simon;' Mr. Nichols's 'Collection of Royal and Noble Wills,' &c. &c. He bequeathed all his printed books and manuscripts on Saxon and Northern literature to the University of Oxford, for the use of the Saxon professor; besides all his printed books, MSS., pamphlets, prints, &c. &c. relating to British Topography, which in his will he desired might be placed in the Bodleian library, in a building adjoining to the picture gallery, known by the name of 'Antiquaries Closet.' These were accordingly deposited, and a catalogue has since been printed in a handsome quarto, under the care of the Rev. B. Bandinel, librarian of the Bodleian.

GOUJEH, Claude Peter (Biog.) a French ecclesiastic, was born at Paris in 1697, and died in 1767, leaving numerous works, which Moreri has divided into translations, works of piety, and works of literary history, lives, and eloges, papers in the literary journals, and prefaces, amounting in all to 83 articles: of these the most important are, 1. 'Les Vies des Saints,' Paris, 7 vols. 12mo. 1730; often reprinted in 4to. and otherwise. 2. 'Bibliotheque des Auteurs Ecclesiastiques du XVIII Siecle pour servir de Continuation à celle de M. Du Pin,' &c. 3 vols. 8vo. 3. 'Supplement to Moreri's Dictionary,' 2 vols. fol. 1735. 4. 'Nouveau Supplement' to the same dictionary, fol. 1749; with a volume of additions, 1750. 5. 'Bibliotheque Française, ou Histoire de la Litterature Française,' 21 vols. 12mo. 1740—1759. 6. 'De l'Etat des Sciences en France, depuis la Mort de Charlemagne, jusqu' à celle du Roi Robert,' 12mo. 1737. 7. A new edition of Richelet's Dictionary, 3 vols. fol. Lyons, 1756. 8. 'L'Histoire du College Royal de France,' 4to. 9. 'Hist. du Pontificat de Paul V,' 2 vols. 12mo. Amsterdam (Paris), 1765, which was his last work.

GOUJON, John (Biog.) a sculptor and architect of Paris, in the reigns of Francis I and Henry II, is supposed to have designed the fronts of the old Louvre. His Fountain of the Innocents, in the street of St. Denis, at Paris, and the Cariatides which support a tribune in a hall of the Hundred Swiss, at the Louvre, are considered inimitable specimens of his skill.

GOULART, Simon (Biog.) a protestant divine, and voluminous writer, was born at Senlis in 1543, and died in 1628. He edited and commented upon the works of Plutarch, St. Cyprian, Seneca, &c.; besides making a collection of 'Remarkable Histories,' 2 vols. 8vo. and a 'Collection of the most Memorable Events which occurred during the League, with Notes and original Documents,' 6 vols. 4to.

GOULSTON (Hist.) Goulson, or Gulston, Theodore, a physician, and native of Northamptonshire, who died in 1632, founded a lecture within the College of Physicians of London, to be read annually from time to time by one of the four youngest doctors in physic of the College, and to be upon two, or three, or more diseases, as the censors think fit. To this institution the public are indebted for Dr. Fordyce's treatise on digestion, and other treatises by Dr. Musgrave, Dr. Saunders, &c. Dr. Goulston wrote, 1. 'Versio Latina et Paraphrasis in Aristotelis Rhetoricam,' 4to. Lond. 1619, 1623, &c. 2. 'Aristotelis de Poeticâ Liber Latinè conversus, et Analyticâ Methodo Illustratus,' 4to. Lond. 1623. 3. 'Versio, variæ Lectiones, et Annotationes Criticæ in Opuscula varia Galeni,' 4to. Lond. 1640.

GOULU, Nicholas (Biog.) a French writer, and royal professor of Greek in the University of Paris in 1567, was the author of a translation, from Greek into Latin, of Gregentius' Dispute with the Jew Herbanus, and of other works, a collection of which was printed at Paris in 1580.

GOULU, John, son of the preceding, was born in 1576, and died in 1629, leaving translations into the French from the Greek of Epictetus' Manuel, Arrian's Dissertations, some of St. Basil's Treatises, and the Works of Dionysius Areopagita, besides writing a book against du Moulin's treatise, 'De la Vocation des Pasteurs,' and the Life of Francis de Sales, bishop of Geneva, and some controversial pieces, &c. against Balzac.

GOURNAY, Maria de Jars (Biog.) a literary lady of quality in France, was born about 1565, and died in 1645. She testified an extraordinary attachment to Montaigne, whose essays she revised and corrected after his death, and published in 1634; and also wrote several things, both in prose and verse, which were collected into one volume, and published by herself in 1636, under the title of 'Les Avis et les Presens de la Demoiselle de Gournay.'

GOURVILLE, John Herauld de (Biog.) a French politician and writer, was born at Rouchefoucauld in 1625, and died in 1705, after having enjoyed the confidence of Condé, and having been proposed as successor to Colbert in the ministry. He wrote 'Memoirs de sa Vie,' 2 vols. 12mo.

GOUSSET, James (Biog.) a Protestant of a good family at Blois, was born in 1635, and died in 1704, leaving, among his works, 1. 'Commentarii Linguæ Hebraicæ,' a Hebrew dictionary; the best edition of which is that of Leipzig. 4to. 1743. 2. 'Jesus Christi Evangeliique Veritas demonstrata in Confutatione Libri Chizzouk Emounak,' 8vo. Dort. 1688, fol. Amstel. 1712; the book, of which this is an answer, may be found in Wagensal's 'Tela ignea Satanæ.' 3. 'Considerations Theologiques et Critiques contre le Projet d'une Nouvelle Version de la Bible,' 12mo. 1698.

GOUSSIER, John James (Biog.) a physician and professor of mathematics, was born at Paris in 1722, and died in 1800. He wrote, in conjunction with baron de Marivetz, 'Physique du Monde,' five volumes of which, in 4to. appeared during the life of his coadjutor, and three others afterwards; besides a 'Prospectus d'un Traité de Geometrie Physique particuliere du Royaume de France,' 4to. 1779.

GOUTHIER (Biog.) or Guthieres, James, in Latin Gutherius, an antiquary and lawyer, was born at Chaumont in Bassigny, and died in 1638, leaving, 1. 'De Vetere Jure Pontificio Urbis Romæ,' 4to. 1612. 2. 'De Officiis Domûs Augustæ Publicæ et Privatæ,' 4to. Lips. 1628, and 8vo. 1672. 3. 'De Jure Maninum,' 8vo. Lips. 1671. 4. 'De Orbitate Tolerandâ,' and 'Laus Cæcitatis,' two tracts; besides some poetry, and other things.

GOUVERT de Maubert (Biog.) vide Maubert.

GOUX, Francis le de la Boulaye (Biog.) a French traveller, was born at Anjou about 1610, and died in Persia in 1668, leaving an Account of his Travels, published in 4to. in 1653.

GOUYE, Thomas (Biog.) a French mathematician, was born at Dieppe in 1050, and died in 1725. His principal work is entitled 'Observations Physiques et Mathematiques pour servir à la Perfection de l'Astronomie et de la Geographie, envoyées de Siam, à l'Academie des Sciences de Paris,' &c. 2 vols. the first in 8vo. and the second in 4to.

GOWER, Sir Nicholas, Knt. (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was in the great battle of Durham in 1346, where he took three of the Scots prisoners.

GOWER, Sir Thomas, grandson of the preceding, signalized himself in France in the army of Henry V, and continued until his death in the confidence of this king.

GOWER, Sir John, son of the preceding, and standard bearer to prince Edward, son of king Henry VI, was taken at the battle of Tewkesbury in 1471, and there beheaded.

GOWER, Thomas, grandson of the preceding marshal of Berwick, and captain of the light horsemen in the army of the duke of Somerset, which invaded Scotland, was taken prisoner in that expedition through his excessive courage, and was afterwards employed in the expedition made into Scotland in 1560.

GOWER, Sir Thomas, Bart. grandson of the preceding, was a great sufferer for his loyalty in the time of the grand rebellion, when he raised a regiment of dragoons at his own expense.

GOWER, John, first Earl of, distinguished himself during the insurrection in 1745; and, after filling the highest posts in the state, particularly that of one of the Lords Justices during his majesty's absence in 1745 and in 1752, he died in 1754.

GOWER, Lord John Leveson, second son of the preceding, was born in 1743, and being bred to the navy, distinguished himself during a long and honourable service, and died in 1790, after having filled the post of a Lord of the Admiralty from 1783 to 1789.

GOWER (Her.) a family of considerable antiquity, and of great honour, as above-mentioned, in the county of York, which is derived by some from sir Alan Gower, or Guhyer, who is said to have been sheriff of that county at the time of the Conquest. The first of this family that was ennobled was sir John Leveson Gower, the fifth baronet, who was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm by the title of lord Gower, baron Gower, of Stittenham, in Yorkshire. His son John was created in 1746 a viscount and an earl by the style and title of viscount Trentham, co. Stafford, and earl Gower and Granville; the second earl was in 1786 created marquis of Stafford. [Vide Stafford] His youngest son, lord Granville Leveson, was created in 1815 viscount Granville.

GOWER, John (Biog.) an English poet, who is supposed to have been born before Chaucer, but of what family, and in what part of the kingdom is uncertain. He died, however, in 1402 at an advanced age. His three principal works are, 1. 'Speculum Meditantis; un Traité selonc les Aucteurs, pour ensampler les Amants Mariez, au fins qu'ils la Foy de leur Seints Espousailles,' &c.; of this, which is written in ten books, there are two copies in the Bodleian. 2. 'Vox Clamantis,' in Latin; of which there are many copies extant; that in the Cottonian library has a fuller title. 3. 'Confessio Amantis,' the work which entitles him to a place among English poets, is supposed to have been finished about 1393. Gower is also said to have very largely contributed to the rebuilding of the conventual church of St. Mary Overy, or, as it is otherwise called, St. Saviours, Southwark, where a monument is erected to his memory. Besides the three works above-mentioned, he left some small poems preserved in MS. in Trinity College, Cambridge.

GOWRIE, William, first Earl of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was engaged, with his father, in the association against Rizzio, and afterwards was one of those who, entering into the association for the support of king James VI, waited on the queen at Lochleven with the instrument of resignation of the crown, which, by threatenings, they compelled her to sign. He was also the principal actor of the treasonable conspiracy to seize king James VI, which was carried into execution at his lordship's seat of Ruthven in 1582, for all which unlawful proceedings he was called to an account, and, being convicted of high treason, was executed in 1584.

GOWRIE, John, third Earl of, and second son of the preceding, was killed in 1600, with his brother Alexander Ruthven, in a treasonable attempt on the person of James VI, which is stated to have been one of the wickedest and most ill-concerted schemes of which history makes any mention.

GOWRIE, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of lord Ruthven, which was conferred in 1581 on William, the fourth lord Ruthven, and forfeited at his execution in 1584. His eldest son James was restored to his estate and honours in 1586, which, at his death, devolved on his next brother John, by whose misconduct, as above-mentioned, they became a second time forfeited in 1600.

GOZZOLI, Benozzo (Biog.) an artist of Florence, was born in 1400, and died in 1478. His best works are still preserved at Pisa.

GRAAF, Regner de (Biog.) a physician of Schoonhaven, in Holland, was born in 1641, and died in 1673, leaving some treatises that were much esteemed in his day, and were published, with his life, in 8vo. at Leyden in 1677 and 1705; also translated into Flemish, and published at Amsterdam in 1686.

GRAAT (Biog.) or Graet Barent, an historical painter, who died in 1709, at the age of 81, is still remembered in Amsterdam, his native city, as the founder of an academy, and also as a successful imitator of Bamboccio.

GRABE, John Ernest (Biog.) editor of the Septuagint from the Alexandrian MS. in the royal library at Buckingham-house, was born at Konigsberg in 1666, and died in 1712 in the communion of the English church, for which he left the Lutheran profession. He published, 1. 'Spicilegium SS. Patrum,' &c. 1698; reprinted in 8vo. Oxon. 1700. 2. An Edition of Justin Martyr's first Apology, in 1700, and the Works of Irenæus, in 1702. 3. The first volume of the 'Septuagint,' 8vo. and fol. Oxon. 1707; the fourth volume of which did not appear till 1720. 4. 'An Essay upon two Arabic Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, and that Ancient Book called the Doctrine of the Apostles, which is said to be extant in them, wherein Mr. Whiston's Mistakes about both are plainly proved,' 8vo. Oxford, 1711. 5. 'Some Instances of the Defects and Omissions in Mr. Whiston's Collections of Testimonies, from the Scriptures and the Fathers, against the True Deity of the Holy Ghost,' &c. published in 8vo. 1712, by his friend Dr. Hicks, who prefixed his Life to it, and an Account of several of his MSS. which he had bequeathed to the editor. 5. 'Liturgia Græca Johannis Ernesti Grabii,' which was published, by Christopher Matthew Pfaff, at the end of 'Irenæi Fragmenta Anecdota,' 8vo. Hag. 1715. 7. 'De Forma Consecrationis Eucharistæ; hoc est, Defensio Ecclesiæ Græcæ, &c. or a Discourse concerning the Form of Consecration of the Eucharist, &c. written in Latin by John Ernest Grabe, and now first published with an English version,' 8vo. 1721. 8. 'Collatio Codicis Cottoniani Geneseôs cum Editione Romanâ,' published by Dr. Henry Owen in 1778; and since that period the whole of the Alexandrian MS. has been very accurately published, in facsimile, by the Rev. Dr. Woide of the British Museum.

GRACCHUS (Hist.) a surname of the Sempronian family, who held high offices in the state, but distinguished themselves in a particular manner by upholding the pretensions of the popular party.

GRACCHUS SEMPRONIUS, Titus, was consul with P. Valerius Falto, U. C. 516, A. C. 238.

GRACCHUS SEMPRONIUS, T. son of the preceding, was Master of the Horse, under the dictator Junius, after the battle of Cannæ, and distinguished himself against Annibal, whom he obliged to raise the siege of Cumæ; but after defeating a body of Carthaginians under Hanno, he was at length taken in an ambuscade, when he fell bravely fighting. Polyb. l. 4; C. Nep. in Vit.; Liv. l. 22; Val. Max. l. 5.

GRACCHUS SEMPRONIUS, T. son of P. Gracchus, twice consul and once censor, distinguished himself no less by his prudence as a statesman than by his valour as a soldier. He married Sempronia, called by some Cornelia, of the family of the Scipios, by whom he had the Gracchi, Tiberius and Caius.

GRACCHUS TIBERIUS and CAIUS, the sons of the preceding, rendered themselves notorious by their seditious proceedings. Tiberius the elder, after displaying his valour at the taking of Carthage, began to affect the patriot by proposing the Agrarian law, and for a time obtained a triumph over his opponents; but was assassinated by P. Nasica in the midst of his adherents, of whom not less than 300 were slain at the same time. His brother Caius, who was no less a demagogue than himself, succeeded him in the office of tribune, and raised a sedition of the people, in which himself, and 3000 of his adherents, perished. Cic. in Brut. c. 27, &c.; Vell. Pat. l. 2; Val. Max.; Plut. in Gracch.; Appian. de Bell. Civ.

GRACCHUS, a freedman, who, having given himself out for the son of Tiberius Gracchus, was created a tribune of the people by the arts of Saturninus, with whose assistance he seized the Capitoline-hill. Cic. pro Rab. c. 7.

GRACCHUS SEMPRONIUS, a Roman, banished to the coast of Africa for his adulteries with Julia, the daughter of Augustus. He was afterwards put to death by order of Tiberius.

GRACCHUS, Rutilius (Biog.) a poet of a noble but reduced family at Rome in the 10th century, wrote some verses that were much esteemed in his day, but died in a state of derangement.

GRACCOPOLIS (Geog.) the Latin name for Cracow.

GRACE (Her.) the name of a family of Grace-castle, co. Kilkenny, who lay claim to great antiquity, and are said to be descended from baron Walter Fitz Other-de-Windsor, who was the founder of many noble families; as the Carews, Fitzmaurices, Gerards, Fitzgeralds, Mackenzies, and Fitzgibbons. This family enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1795 on sir Richard Gamon, and entailed on his heir and successor sir Richard Grace. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first gules, a lion rampant, per fess argent and or; second gules, a saltire between twelve cross crosslets argent, and a mullet for difference; third or, a chief indented azure, and in bend three escallop shells counter-changed; fourth argent, a chevron between three garbs gules.

Crest. First, on a wreath, a demi-lion, rampant argent; second, on a wreath, a boar's head and neck erased or.

Mottos. Above the crest, "En Grace affie." Under the arms, "Concordant nomine facta."

Supporters. Dexter a lion proper, sinister a boar or; anciently a lion and a talbot, which are on the monument of sir Oliver Grace, of Ballylinch-castle at Jerpoint Abbey, co. Kilkenny.

GRACES (Myth.) vide Gratiæ.

GRACIAN, Lawrence (Biog.) or, rather Balthasar, a Spanish Jesuit of Bilbilis, who died in 1658, was the author of, 1. 'El Heroe,' 16mo. Huescar, 1637; Madrid, 1639; translated into the French by P. de Couberville, Rotterdam, 1729. 2. 'El Politico D Fernando el Catolico,' Saragossa, 1641; translated into French, 12mo. Paris, 1732. 3. 'Agudesa y Arte de Ingenio,' &c. Huescar, 1649. 4. 'El Criticon,' &c. in three parts, 8vo. Madrid, 1653-58; translated into French by Maunoy, 3 vols. 12mo. 5. 'Oraculo Manual y Arte de Prudentia;' translated by Amelot de la Houssaye, under the title of 'L'Homme de Cour,' 12mo. Paris, 1689; and into English, under the title of 'Manual on the Art of Prudence;' besides some other works, which were all published together in 2 vols. 4to. Madrid, 1664.

GRACIANI (Biog.) vide Gratiani.

GRADENIGO, Peter (Hist.) or Gradonigo, a doge of Venice, who was elected in 1290, and died in 1303, was held in the highest honour by his countrymen, on account of his having by his vigilance detected the conspiracy of Baimonti Thiepoli, a Venetian nobleman, and by his prudence and valour averted the evil consequences of it, which threatened the republic. In gratitude for this service they decreed that the anniversary of his election should be commemorated. Sabell. Hist. l. 2, dec. 2; Blond. de Gest. Venet. l. 6.

GRADENIGO, or Gradonico, Bartolomeo, the fifty-third doge of Venice, was raised in 1338 to the ducal throne, and died in 1343. His pacific reign was marked by no other occurrence than the suppression of a rebellion in Candia. Sabell. &c.

GRADI (Biog.) or Gradio, Stephen, in Latin Gradius, a Latin poet of Ragusa, whose works were inserted in a collection made by Ferdinand de Furstemberg, bishop of Padderborn, published under the title of 'Septem Illustrium Virorum Poemata,' and reprinted by Elzevir, 8vo. Amstel. 1672. To this poet is also ascribed a work, entitled, 'Stephani Gradii Dissertationes Physico-Mathematicæ quatuor,' 12mo. Amstel. 1680.

GRADIVUS (Myth.) a surname of Mars, derived, as is supposed, from κραδαίνειν, to brandish a spear, which is an attribute commonly ascribed to him. He had a temple without the walls of Rome, where the Salii paid him the accustomed honours, according to the institution of Numa; but he is said by the poets to have had his favourite residence among the Getæ and the Thracians.

GRADO (Geog.) a small town of Friuli, in the Gulf of Venice, and formerly a patriarch's see, which was removed to Venice.

GRÆÆ (Myth.) Γραῖαι, two winged monsters, the daughters of Phorcus and Ceto, who received their name from the whiteness of their hair. Hesiod. Theog. v. 270; Æschyl. in Prom. Act. 2; Apollod. l. 2.

GRÆCIA (Geog.) Ἑλλὰς, a well-known country of Europe, which derived its name, as is said, from Hellen, or Hellas, the founder of the kingdom and nation of the Greeks, who were severally called by the names of Achæans, Argives, Danai, Hellenians, Ionians, Myrmidons, and Pelasgians.

Boundaries and Extent. Greece at first comprehended only the two countries of Thessaly and Græcia, or Hellas, properly so called; but its boundaries were afterwards extended by the accession at different times of Peloponnesus, Epirus, Macedonia, and lastly of Crete, and all the adjacent islands; and the name of Græcia was subsequently applied even to Italy and Sicily, which were called Græcia Magna; and to part of Asia, which was named Græcia Asiatica. But the country which is properly known by this name is bounded on the E. by the Mare Ægeum, or Archipelago; on the S. by the Mare Creticum, or Sea of Candia; on the W. by the Mare Ionium, or Ionian Sea; and on the N. by Moesia, &c.; comprehending Epirus, Peloponnesus, Græcia Propria, Thessalia, and Macedonia; the whole of which was divided by the Romans into two provinces, namely, Macedonia, comprehending Macedonia, Epirus, and Thessaly; and Achaia, under which was comprehended Græcia Propria, Peloponnesus, and the circumjacent islands.

GRAHAM (Hist.) or Greme, Sir Patrick, of the ancient family mentioned under Heraldry, was one of the Magnates Scotiæ who in 1284 bound themselves by their oaths and seals, in case the king Alexander II should die without heirs of his own body, to receive and acknowledge the princess Margaret, the Maid of Norway, his grand-child, as their lawful queen. He was afterwards killed at the battle of Dunbar, against the English, in 1296.

Graham, Sir David, son of the preceding, and a strenuou asserter of the independence of his country against the pretensions of Edward I, of England, was a very zealous loyalist in behalf of king Robert Bruce. He was also one of those who, in 1320, wrote to pope John XXII, maintaining the independence of Scotland, and extolling their king as the deliverer of his country. He died in 1327.

Graham, Sir David, his son, a steady adherent to king David, was taken prisoner with this monarch at the battle of Durham in 1346; and being soon after released, was employed to negotiate the ransom of his royal master, for whom he was afterwards one of the hostages, and died in 1424.

Graham, Sir Patrick, his grandson, and heir, was appointed one of the Lords of the Regency in the minority of king James II, and, after discharging this trust with great prudence and fidelity, he was chosen to be one of the hostages for king James I, and died in 1467.

Graham, William, third Lord, vide Montrose.

Graham (Her.) or Greme, the name of a family which is as ancient as the restoration of the monarchy in Scotland, by Fergus II, and derives its descent from the renowned Greme, who governed Scotland during the minority of Eugene II. This Greme had divers engagements with the Britons, and, by forcing the mighty rampart which they had reared up between the rivers of Forth and Clyde, immortalized his name so that to this day this trench i called Graham's Dyke. Among the descendants of this family, who have been so honourably mentioned under History, was William, third lord Graham, who was raised by James IV in 1504 to the dignity of earl of Montrose. John, the fourth earl, was created in 1644 marquis of Montrose; and James, the third marquis, was created in 1707 duke of Montrose; and his son, the second duke, was advanced to the dignity of an English peer, by the style and title of earl Graham, and baron Graham of Belford [Vide Montrose]

Graham, Marquis, the title borne by the eldest son of the duke of Montrose.

Graham, the name of a family of Balgowan, co. Perth, who derive their descent from William Graham, third son of sir William Graham, lord of Kincardine, by Lally Marota Stuart, his second wife, daughter of Robert III, king of Scotland. This family has been ennobled in the person of general sir Thomas Graham, who, for his distinguished services in the peninsular war, was created a peer in 1814, by the title of baron Lynedoch, of Balgowan. [Vide Lynedoch]

GRANADA (Geog.) a province, and a town of the same name, called in the Latin of the middle ages Granata Granatum.

Boundaries and Extent. Granada, which is 175 m. long, and 75 m. broad, is bounded on the W. and N. by Andalusia, E. by Murcia and the Mediterranean, and S. by the same sea.

Chief Towns. Its chief towns are Granada, the capital, seated on the Darro, 70 m. S. E. of Cordova. Lon. 3° 38′, lat. 37′ 8° N.; Malaga, Almeira, and Guadix, which are the four bishoprics into which this district is divided.

Mountains. This province is very mountainous, being traversed by the lofty ridges of the Sierra Navada, and the Alpuxaras.

History. Granada, which still retains the name of a kingdom, was the last province in Spain which remained in the hands of the Moors, by whom the town of Granada was built, and was made the residence of their princes. Bedis, son of Aben Habus, is supposed to have founded the city, and his successors continued there until the time of Abenhut, who, having expelled the Almohades out of Spain, established himself at Almeria, where he was killed. Mahomet Alamar, who succeeded him, returned to Granada, which he enlarged exceedingly, as did also Bulhar, one of his successors, who reigned there until the time of Abohacen, or Abul Hossein, when this kingdom being conquered by Ferdinand and Isabella, the Moors were finally expelled from Spain in 1492. *Diego de Muros, Hist. Arms. Azure, a maunch ermine, debruised by a bendlet gules.

Crest. On a wreath, a Blackmoor's head affronté, couped at the shoulders, his temples adorned with a garland of laurel proper, tied with strings argent and azure, and round his neck a wreath.

Supporters. On the dexter side, a gryphon argent, ducally gorged or; on the sinister, a lion or; each charged with a shield of the arms on the breast.

Motto. "Avi numerantur avorum."

GRANVILLE, Richard (Hist.) or Greenville, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, a vice-admiral under lord Thomas Howard, opposed the whole Spanish fleet for a time with his single vessel, which, at length being overpowered, was the first English ship taken by the Spaniards in that reign.

GRANVILLE, Sir Bevil, son of the preceding, and a most zealous loyalist, died fighting sword in hand at the battle of Lansdowne.

GRANVILLE, John, his son, and worthy successor, was one of the most active instruments in bringing about the Restoration, after having fought and bled in defence of his sovereign.

GRANVILLE, George, vide Lansdowne.

GRANVILLE. John, second son of John Granville, earl of Bath, being bred up to the sea-service, distinguished himself particularly at the siege of Cork in 1690, and died in 1707, after having filled several offices in the state.

GRANVILLE (Ecc.) or Granvelle, a cardinal of Spain, but of what family is not mentioned, who rendered himself particularly odious in the Low Countries as the minister of Philip II. He met with such violent opposition from the leaders of the popular party as made him willing to resign his charge, and retire to his native country.

GRANVILLE (Her.) Grainvill, Grenvil, Greinville, or Grenevyle, the name of a very ancient family which traces its descent from Rollo, duke of Normandy. From Richard de Granville, count de Corboil, baron de Torigni, and de Granville, &c. who came over with the Conqueror, descended John Granville, of Bideford, &c. who, for his eminent services, was created in 1661 earl of Bath; his brother, George Granville, was raised to the peerage in 1711 by the title of viscount Lansdowne; and the son of the earl of Bath was created a peer by the title of lord Granville, of Potheridge, all which titles became extinct at the death of these noblemen. The Grenvilles of Buckinghamshire are a collateral branch of the same family. [Vide Grenville]

GRANVILLE, Viscount, a title enjoyed by a branch of the family of Gower. [Vide Gower]

GRASSWINKEL, Theodore (Biog.) a lawyer, was born at Delft in 1600, and died in 1666, leaving, 1. 'Maris Liberi Vindiciæ.' 2. A Treatise on the Sovereignty of the States of Holland.

GRATAROLUS, William (Hist.) a physician, was born at Bergamo, in Italy, in 1510, and died about 1562 or 1568, leaving, 1. 'De Memoria reparanda augenda, conservanda,' &c. 2. 'De Prædictione Morum,' &c. 3. 'Prognostica Naturalia de Temporum Mutatione perpetua, Ordine Literarum,' &c. 4. 'De Literatorum et eorum qui Magistratibus funguntur conservanda preservandaque Valetudine,' &c.

GRATIÆ (Myth.) or Charites, χάριτες, the Graces, the daughters of Venus by Jupiter or Bacchus, who were three in number; namely, Aglaia, Thalia, and Euphrosyne. [Vide Charites and Gratiæ under Numismatics]

GRATIÆ (Numis.) the Graces are commonly represented, as in the annexed figure, young, because in youth the heart is most open to give and receive kindnesses; naked, because kindnesses ought to be done with sincerity; and holding their hands extended, and for the most part joined, because reciprocal kindnesses knit and interweave the affections of men.

GRATIAN (Biog.) a Benedictine of Chiusi in the 12th century, published about 1151 a work entitled 'Decretal, seu Concordantia Discordantium Canonum,' of which the editions of Rome, in 4 vols. fol. 1582, and of Lyons, in 3 vols. fol. 1671, are the most esteemed. This work, corrected by Anthony Augustine, was published in an emended form under the title of 'De Emendatione Gratiani.'

GRATIANI, Antonio Maria (Ecc.) bishop of Amelia, was born in 1536 in Tuscany, advanced to the see of Amelia by Clement VIII, and died in 1611, after having been sent as nuncio to Venice. He published, 1. Synodal Ordinances. 2 The Life of Cardinal Commendo, which was translated by M. Flechier into French. 3. 'De Bello Cyprio,' 4to. 4. 'De Casibus adversis Illustrium Virorum sui Ævi,' 4to. translated into French by Pelletier. 6. 'De Scriptis invita Minerva,' &c. a posthumous work, published at Florence in 4to. 1745.

GRATIANUS, Flavius (Hist.) a native of Pannonia, was born in 359, declared emperor conjointly with his father, Valentinian I, in 367, and assassinated by Andragathius at the instigation of the usurper Maximus at Lyons in 383, after having reigned alone seven years and nine months.

GRATIANUS, a usurper, who was set up in Britain by his own soldiers against the emperor Honorius, was afterwards assassinated by the same army in 407.

GRATIANUS (Numis.) the coins or medals of the emperor of this name, which bear his effigy, as in the annexed figure, are inscribed—D. N. GRATIANUS AUG.—D. N. GRATIANUS P. F. AUG.; on the reverse, FEL. TEMP. REPARATIO.—GLORIA NOVI SAECULI.—GLORIA ROMANORUM.—REPARATIO REIPUB.—RESTITUTOR REIPUBLICAE.—SECURITAS REIPUBLICAE.—VICTORIA AUGG.—VIRTUS EXERCITUS.—VOT. V. MULT. X.—VOT. V.X. MULT. XX. Vaillant. Num. Imp.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Harduin. Oper.; Mus. Pembroch.; Pellerin. Melang. &c.

GRATIUS, Faliscus (Biog.) a poet, cotemporary with Ovid, who wrote a poem on coursing, entitled 'Cynogeticon,' the first edition of which was published in folio, Bonon. 1504, along with Nemesianus; it has since been frequently reprinted; but the London edition in 8vo. 1699, 'Cum Notis perpetuis Thomæ Jonson, M. A.' is the most esteemed.

GRATIUS, Ortuinus, or properly Graes, a writer of Munster, who died in 1542, was the author of, 1. 'Lamentationes Obscurorum Virorum non prohibitæ per Sedem Apostolicam,' 8vo. Colon. 1518 and 1649. 2. 'Triumphus B. Job,' in elegiac verse. 3. 'Fasciculus Rerum expetendarum et fugiendarum,' fol. Colon. 1535; and reprinted under the inspection of Edward Brown, 2 vols. fol. Lond. 1690.

GRATTAN, Henry (Hist.) the strenuous advocate for Catholic Emancipation, was born in Dublin about 1750, studied at Trinity College; and, after qualifying himself for the bar, he was elected into the Irish parliament in 1775, and again in 1790, during which period he was vehement in his opposition to all the measures of goverment, but particularly to that of the Union; after which, however, he obtained a seat in the United Parliament, where he exerted his eloquence on his favourite topic until his death in 1820.

GRAVELINES (Geog.) a small town of French Flanders on the Aa, near the sea, 9 miles W. S. W. Dunkirk, and 39 N. W. Lisle. Lon. 2° 7′ E. lat. 50° 59′ N. It was entirely ruined by the Normans; but, being afterwards rebuilt, a strong fort was erected there by order of Charles V, who had an interview in this city with Henry VIII of England. In 1556 the French were defeated by the Spaniards; but having attacked and taken the town in 1658, it has since remained in their hands.

GRAVELOT, Henry Francis Bourignon (Biog.) a French artist, was born at Paris in 1699, and died in 1773, leaving several specimens of his skill in Gloucestershire.

GRAVEROL, Francis (Biog.) a French antiquary and lawyer, was born at Nismes in 1635, and died in 1694, leaving, among his works, 1. 'Observations sur les Arrets du Parlement de Toulouse recueillies par la Rochefiavin,' Toulouse, 1682. 2. 'Sorberiana, sive Excerpta ex Ore Samuelis Sorbiere,' Toulos. 1691, 1714, Paris, 1692 and 1732. 3. 'Notice ou Abregé Historique des Vingt-deux Chefs des Dioceses de la Province de Languedoc,' a posthumous work, published in 1696.

GRAVEROL, John, a Protestant divine, and brother to the preceding, was born in 1636, and died in 1718; among his numerous works are 'Moses Vindicatus,' 12mo. Amst. 1694, &c.

GRAVES, Lord (Her.) a title conferred in 1794 on Thomas Graves for his distinguished services as an officer in the royal navy.

GRAVES, Richard (Biog.) an English divine, and miscellaneous writer, was born at Mickleton, in Gloucestershire, in 1715, educated at Oxford, and died in 1750, leaving, 1. 'The Festoon, or a Collection of Epigrams,' &c. 2. 'The Spiritual Quixote,' 3 vols. 1772, intended as a satire on itinerant preachers. 3. A Translation from the Italian of Galates, &c. 4. 'Columella, or the distressed Anchoret,' 2 vols. 5. 'Euphrosyne,' 2 vols. poems which have gone through several editions. 6. 'Eugenius, or Anecdotes of the Golden Vale,' 2 vols. 7. 'Recollections of some Particulars in the Life of William Shenstone, Esq. in a Series of Letters to W. Seward, Esq. F. R. S.' 8. 'Plexippus, or the aspiring Plebeian,' 2 vols. 9. 'Hiero on the Condition of Royalty,' from the Greek of Xenophon. 10. 'Fleurettes,' a translation of Fenelon's Ode on Solitude, and other French authors.' 11. 'The Life of Commodus,' from the Greek of Herodian. 12. 'The Rout.' &c.

s'GRAVESANDE, William James (Biog.) a Dutch philosopher, was born at Bois le Duc in 1688, and died in 1742, leaving, 1. An Introduction to the Newtonian Philosophy, or a Treatise on the Elements of Physics, confirmed by Experiments. 2. A small Treatise on the Elements of Algebra, &c. 3. A Course of Logic and Metaphysics;' besides a number of articles on mechanics and experimental philosophy, inserted in 'Le Journal Littéraire.' All his mathematical and philosophical works, except the first of the above-mentioned articles, were collected and published at Amsterdam in 2 vols. 4to. 1774.

GRAVINA, Peter (Biog.) an excellent Latin poet, was born at Palermo, in Sicily, of a family originally of Gravina, and died in 1528. Most of his works are supposed to be lost, but what remained was published at Naples in 4to. 1532; and a few of them are inserted in the 'Carm. Illust. Poet. Ital.'

GRAVINA, Joseph Vincent, an Italian scholar, was born at Roggiano in 1664, and died in 1718, leaving 1. 'Prisci Censorini Photistici Hydra Mystica, sive de Corrupta Morali Doctrina Dialogus,' 4to. Colon. 1691. 2. 'L'Endimione di Erilo Cleoneo, Pastore Arcade,' &c. 12mo. Rome, 1692. 3. 'Delle Antiche Favole,' 12mo. Rome, 1696. 4. 'Opuscula,' a collection of pieces, 12mo. 5. 'De Ortu et Progressu Juris Civilis,' the first three books in 8vo. Neapol. 1701, and Lips. 1704; and two other books with it in 4to. in 1708; again at Naples in 2 vols. 4to. 1713, with the addition of a book 'De Romano Imperio,' dedicated to pope Clement XI. This is reckoned the best edition of this work, which was reprinted at Leipzic, with the 'Opuscula,' in 1717, under the title of 'Editio Novissima ad nuperam Neapolitanam emendata et aucta.' 6. 'Acta Consistorialia Creationis Emin. et Rev. Cardinalium Institutæ à S. D. N. Clemente XI,' &c. 4to. Colon. 1707. 7. 'Della Ragione Poetica Libri duo,' 4to. Rome, 1708 and 1716; to which was added a letter 'De Poesi.' 8. 'Tragedie Cinque,' 8vo. Napoli, 1712. 9. 'Orationes,' 12mo. Neap. 1712; reprinted several times since, and to be found with the 'Opuscula,' in the Leipzic edition of his 'Origines Juris Civilis.' 10. 'Della Tragedia Libro uno,' 4to. Napoli, 1775, which, with his 'Della Ragione,' &c. 'Endimione,' and some other pieces, were printed together at Venice in 4to. in 1731; but a more complete edition of his works was published at Naples, by John Antony Sergi, in 3 vols. 4to. 1756—1758.

GRAUNT, John (Biog.) a native of Hampshire, was born in 1620, and died in 1674, leaving 'Observations on the Bills of Mortality,' 4to. 1661, and a new edition the year after.

GRAY (Hist.) vide De Grey and Grey.

GRAY, or De Gray (Her.) vide De Grey and Grey.

GRAY, Lord, the title enjoyed by a Scotch branch of the family of De Grey mentioned under Heraldry, which was conferred as early as 1437 on sir Andrew Gray. The arms, &c. of this branch are as follow Arms. Gules, a lion rampant within a bordure argent.

Crest. An anchor in pale or.

Supporters. Two lions guardant gules.

Motto. "Anchor, fast anchor."

GRAY, Thomas (Biog.) an English poet of the first rank, and the fifth child of Philip Gray, a money-scrivener of London, was born in Cornhill, Dec. 20, 1716, educated at Eton, admitted as a pensioner at Peterhouse, Cambridge, in 1734, took his degree of Bachelor of Civil Law in 1742, and died in 1771. During his residence at college, between the years 1734 and 1738, he wrote some Latin verses, entitled, 'Luna Habitabilis;' inserted in the 'Musæ Ætonenses;' a poem on the Marriage of the Prince of Wales; and a Sapphic Ode to West; both in Latin: also a Latin version of the 'Care salve beate,' of the Pastor Fido, and fragments of translations in English from Statius and Tasso. In 1742 he wrote an heroic epistle in Latin in imitation of the manner of Ovid, and a Greek epigram; also his 'Ode to Spring;' 'A distant Prospect of Eton College;' 'Hymn to Adversity;' 'Elegy in a Country Church-Yard;' an affectionate sonnet in English, and apostrophe, which opens the fourth book of his poem, 'De Principiis Cogitandi;' his last Latin composition. In 1754, and 1755, he wrote, 'An Ode to Vicissitude;' 'On the Progress of Poetry;' 'The Bard;' and probably some of those fragments which he never completed. In 1758 he composed 'A Catalogue of the Antiquities, Houses, &c. in England and Wales, &c;' and contributed to Bentham's 'History of Ely.' His 'Ode to Eton College,' was first published in folio in 1747; his 'Elegy,' in 1749; and new editions of his poems began to be required before his death. His life, and a collection of his letters, were published by his friend Mr. Mason. [Vide Plate XXIX]

GRAZIANI (Biog.) vide Gratianio.

GRAZZINI, Anthony Francis (Biog.) an Italian scholar and poet, was born at Florence in 1503, and died in 1583, after having established the academy, known by the name of La Crusca. Many of his works are lost, but there remain twenty-one tales, six comedies, and a number of capitoli, or satirical chapters, and various poems, of which the best edition is that of Florence, 2 vols. 8vo. 1741. His Tales or Novels were printed at Paris, 8vo. 1756, and in 4to. under the title of London. A French translation appeared in 2 vols. 8vo. 1775, in which nine histories wanting in the third evening, are said to be inserted from an old French translation in MS. He wrote also, 'La Guerra di Mostri Poema giocoso,' 4to. Florence, 1584; and 'Tutti i Trionfi, Carri, Mascherate o Canti Carnascialeschi dal Tempo di Lorenzo de Medici a questo Anno 1559,' 8vo.

GREAVES, John (Biog.) a mathematician, was born near Alresford, in Hants, in 1602, educated at Oxford, appointed professor of Gresham College in 1630, removed from this post, as also from his fellowship at Merton, by the usurping powers, and died in 1652, leaving, 1. 'Pyramidologia; or a Description of the Pyramids in Egypt,' 8vo. Lond. 1646. 2. 'A Discourse of the Roman Foot and Denarius,' 8vo. ibid. 1647. 3. 'Elementa Linguæ Persicæ,' 4to. ibid. 1649. 4. His 'Miscellaneous Works;' containing some of the preceding, and published by Dr. Birch in 2 vols. 8vo. 1737.

GREAVES, Thomas, brother of the preceding, who was educated at Oxford, and died in 1676, in the 65th year of his age, was the author of, 1. 'De Linguæ Arabicæ Utilitate et Præstantiâ, Oratio Oxonii habita, 19 Julii, 1637,' 4to. Oxon. 1637. 2. 'Observationes quædam in Persicam Pentateuchi Versionem,' printed in the sixth volume of the Polyglot Bible. 3. 'Annotationes quædam in Persicam Interpretationem Evangeliorum,' printed in the same volume.

GREAVES, Edward, the youngest brother of the two preceding, and a physician, who died in 1680, was the author of, 1. 'Morbus Epidemicus, Ann. 1643,' &c. 4to. Oxon. 1643, written upon occasion of a disease called the 'Morbus Campestris,' which raged in Oxford while the king and court were there. 2. 'Oratio habita in Ædibus Collegii Medicorum Londinensium, 20 Julii, 1661, die Harveii Memoriæ dicato,' 4to. Lond. 1667.

GREECE (Geog.) the celebrated country in Europe, of which particular mention has been made under its ancient name of Græcia. It is called by the Turks Rumelia.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the N. by Bulgaria, Servia, and Dalmatia; on the other sides by the sea: namely, on the W. by the Gulf of Venice, the S. by the Mediterranean, and on the E. by the Archipelago, Sea of Marmora, Black Sea, and the Dardanelles, and extends from lat. 37° to lat. 42°, having a length of nearly 400 miles, and a mean breadth of nearly 160.

Division. Greece has been divided by the Turks into four pachalics; namely, 1. Tripolitza, comprising the whole of the Morea, or ancient Peloponnesus. 2. Egripos, or Negropont, the ancient Eubœa, with part of the adjoining main land. 3. Joannina, including Thessaly and part of Albania, or the ancient Epirus. 4. Salonica, in which are included the southern parts of Macedonia and Livadia; besides which there is that part of Greece which lies outside of Peloponnesus, including the ancient Acarnania, Ætolia, Doris, Locris, Phocis, Attica, and Bœotia; [Vide Græcia] also Romania, another district of European Turkey, which comprehends ancient Thrace, and other parts of Macedonia.

History. On the downfal of the Eastern empire, Greece fell into the hands of the Arabians, and from them passed into those of the Turks, under whose dominion it has remained uninterruptedly until the present revolt of the Greeks against the Turkish government. The religion of the inhabitants is that of the Greek church, at the head of which is the patriarch of Constantinople. They have likewise three other patriarchs; namely, of Alexandria, who resides commonly at Grand Cairo; that of Antioch, who resides at Damascus; and that of Jerusalem.

Popes of this Name.

GREGORY, St., the first of this name, distinguished by the surname of the Great, was a Roman by birth, son of the senator Gordian and Sylvia, and great grandson of pope Felix II, was elected pope in 590, and died in 604, at the age of 60, having Sabinian for a successor. He laboured earnestly in healing differences in the Christian church, and in extending the knowledge of the Gospel, which through his means was preached in Sardinia, and also in England, by St. Augustine. We are indebted to this pope for the invention of expressing musical sounds by the seven first letters of the alphabet, which he applied particularly to the cultivation of church music. He left more writings behind him than any other pope, from the foundation of the see of Rome to the present period; these consist of 'Letters,' 'A Comment on Job,' generally known by the name of Gregory's Morals on Job, 'A Pastoral, or a Treatise on the Duties of a Pastor,' 'Homilies on the prophet Ezekiel,' &c. which have been printed very many times in every form. The best edition of the whole is that of Paris, in 4 vols. fol. 1705. St. Isid. Hispal. c. 27; S. Ildefons. Tolet. de Vir. Illust.; Beda, Sigebert, Adon.; Paul Diaconus, Leo Ostiensis, Baronius, Possevinus, Trithemius, &c.

GREGORY II, also canonized as a saint, and a Roman by birth, succeeded Constantine in 714, and died in 731, after having contributed his endeavours towards the propagation of Christianity in Germany and elsewhere. He was succeeded by GREGORY III, a native of Syria, who was elected five days after the death of the preceding, and died in 741, after an unquiet pontificate, in which he set himself up against the emperor Leo, and endeavoured to compel him to adopt the worship of images. He was succeeded by St. Anastasius. Anastas. Vit. Pont.; Sigebert de Virt. illust.; Baronius, Ciaconius, Trithemius, Possevinus, &c.

GREGORY IV, was elected in 827, and died in 844, after having attempted in vain to reconcile the differences which divided the royal family of France. He was succeeded by Sergius II.

GREGORY V, a German, whose family name was Brunon, cousin or nephew to the emperor Otho III, succeeded John XV in 996, and died in 999. He was opposed by Crescentius, the consul at Rome, who set up John XVII as anti-pope, but the usurper was expelled. Sylvester II was his successor.

GREGORY VI, a Roman of the name of John Gratian, was raised to the Holy See on the cession of Benedict IX, but being still opposed by a third rival candidate Sylvester III, the emperor Henry interfered and deposed Gregory, who died in exile in Germany; sent Sylvester back to his bishopric of Saint Sabine, and restored peace to the church by the election of Clement II. Oth. Frising. in Chron.; Baron. Annal. Ciacon. Greg. VI, &c.

GREGORY VII, a Tuscan of the name of Hildebrand, the son of a carpenter, was elected successor to Alexander in 1073, and resigning the pontificate in 1085, he retired to Salerno, where he died the same year. He aimed at establishing the papal power over all princes, and first presumed to excommunicate the emperor Henry IV, which caused great dissensions and troubles at Rome and in Germany.

GREGORY VIII, named Albert de Mora, succeeded Urban IX in 1187, and died two months after. Clement III succeeded him.

GREGORY IX, a native of Anagnania, of the name of Hugolin, and of the family of the counts of Segni, was nephew to pope Innocent III. He was elected pope in 1227, and died in 1241, having Celestin IV for a successor. He excited the princes of Europe to enter on a crusade, and embroiled himself with the emperor Frederic III, whom he presumed to depose.

GREGORY X, a native of Placentia, of the family of the Visconti, and of the name of Thibaud or Theobald, was elected in 1271, while in the Holy Land with Edward, king of England, and died in 1276, after having called a general council at Lyons, for the purpose of healing the differences between the Greek and Latin churches; and also of terminating the disputes between the factions of the Guelphs and Gibelins. He was succeeded by Innocent V. Onuphrius, Blondus, Genebrand, Byorius, Spondanus, &c.

GREGORY XI, son of William, count of Beaufort, and nephew of the pope Clement VI, was elected pope, and died in 1378. He was a zealous promoter of peace among Christian princes, and transferred his residence to Rome, from Avignon, where the popes had lately been accustomed to live. He was succeeded by Urban VI.

GREGORY XII, a native of Venice, named Angelo Corario, was elected pope in 1406, in opposition to Benedict XIII, but a general council being assembled, both the competitors were deposed, and Alexander V was elected in their stead. Gregory died in 1417, aged 92. Thierri de Niem. Hist. Schis. l. 2; Binius Concil. tom. 8, &c.

GREGORY XIII, a native of Bologne, named Hugh Buoncompagno, was elected pope in 1572, at the age of 70, on the death of Pius V, and died in 1585, after having opposed the Protestants with great zeal, and embellished Rome with churches, palaces, and porticos. He is, however, better known as the reformer of the calendar, in which he was assisted by Lilio, and other astronomers at that time. [Vide Gregory, under Numismatics] He was succeeded by Sixtus V.

GREGORY XIV, a Milanese of the name of Nicholas Sfondratus, was elected in 1590, after Urban VII, and died in 1591. He gave his support to the league in France, with the view of supporting the Romish church. [Vide Gregory under Numismatics] He was succeeded by Innocent IX.

GREGORY XV, a native of Bologna, named Alexander Ludovisio, succeeded Paul V in 1621, and died in 1623. He erected the see of Paris into an archbishopric. Urban VIII was his successor. Spondan. Annal. Bzovius, &c.

Antipopes of this Name.

GREGORY, the opponent of Benedict VIII, was expelled in 1013 from the papal chair, by the assistance of the emperor Henry, to whom the latter had fled for protection.

GREGORY, a native of Rome, who had been created a cardinal in 1122 by Callixtus II, favoured the schismatical party, of which Anacletus II was the head, and at his death was chosen by the schismatics against Innocent II, but finding himself abandoned by his friends, he submitted to the legitimate pope in 1139.

Distinguished Persons of this Name.

Gregory, of Neocæsarea, St., a bishop of this city, where he was born, was named Thaumaturgus, from his supposed power of working miracles. He died in 265, leaving several works which were printed in 4to. by Gerard Vossius, in 1604, and again in folio, Gr. and Lat. in 1626. Euseb. l. 6; S. Basil. c. 29; S. Hieron. de Script. Eccles.; Socrates, Theodoret, Ruffinus, Evagrius, &c.

Gregory, of Cappadocia, an Arian bishop of Alexandria, who was forced on that see on the expulsion of St. Athanasius, their legitimate prelate. He died at Alexandria in 349. Socrates, l. 2; Sozom. l. 5; Theodoret. l. 2, &c.

Gregory, Nazianzen, St., the father, being converted to the Christian faith, was made bishop of Nazianzus in 329, and died in 374, at the age of 100, after having governed his church for 45 years. S. Gregor. Theol. Orat. Funeb. Patr.; Baron. Annal. ann. 325, &c.; Hermant. Vit. S. Gregor. &c.

Gregory, Nazianzen, St., the son, surnamed the Divine, from his able support of the orthodox faith, was born near the city of Nazianzus in 312, raised to the see of Constantinople in 378, and died in 389, shortly after having resigned his government of that church. His works, consisting of Sermons, Letters, Poems, and Orations, have been printed at different times collectively and separately; of the complete editions, those in 2 vols. fol. Gr. and Lat. 1609, and 1611, with notes by the Abbé de Billi, are more esteemed than the subsequent one of 1630.

Gregory, Nyssen, St., younger brother of St. Basil, was bishop of Nyssa, a town of Cappadocia, in 330, sent into exile by the emperor Valens; assisted at the council of Antioch in 380, and died in 396. His works were collected by P. Fronton-du-Duc, and printed at Paris in 1605; and another edition was published by Claude Morel in 1615, to which some additions were made in a reprint of 1618. S. Hieron. de Script. Eccles.; S. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. 6; S. Bas. ep. 43; Socrates, Sozomenes, Theodoret, Photius, Suidas, &c.

Gregory, St., surnamed the Illuminator, the bishop and apostle of Armenia, in the third century, whose festival is kept on the 30th September by the Greek church. Euseb. Hist. Eccles. l. 6; Sozom. Hist. l. 2.

Gregory, surnamed Bæticus, from the river Bætis, near which he was born, a bishop of Eliberi, supposed to be the modern Elvira, in Spain, flourished in the third and fourth centuries, and is mentioned by St. Jerome, among his ecclesiastical writers. S. Hieron. Catal.; S. Isidor. de Vir. Illustr. &c.

Gregory, St., bishop of Laugnes, was raised to that see at the age of 57, and died in 539, after having governed his church 33 years. Greg. Tur. Vit.

Gregory, of Tours, St., in Latin Gregorius Turonensis, one of the greatest ornaments of the church of Tours, was born in Auvergne in 544, elected bishop of Tours in 573, and died in 595, after having assisted at the council held at Paris in 677, respecting Pretextatus, bishop of Rouen. He wrote a History of France, in Ten Books, and Eight Books of the Miracles and Lives of the Saints, besides other works inserted in the 'Bibliotheca Patrum;' the best edition of these collectively, is that by Dom. Ruinart, entitled 'S. Gregorii Turonensis Opera,' fol. Pav. 1699. Aimon. de Reb. Gest. Franc. l. 1; Hincmar. Præf. Vit. S. Remig.; Honor. d'Autun. l. 3; Voss. de Hist. Lat. l. 3; Baronius, Trithemius et Bellarmin, &c.

Gregory I, a monk, was raised to the patriarchate of Antioch in the place of Anastasius, the Sinaite, who had been deposed in a synod in 572, and after having governed this church until 594, he was obliged to yield his charge to the same Anastasius. Evag. l. 5; Baron. Annal. ann. 572.

Gregory II, succeeded Anastasius II, a martyr, in 609, as patriarch of Antioch, and governed this church about 20 years, when Anastasius III was put in his place.

Gregory, a bishop of Syracuse, surnamed Asbesla, in the ninth century, opposed St. Ignatius, patriarch of Constantinople, and pope Nicholas. Baron. Annal.

Gregory, Palamas, archbishop of Thessalonica in the 14th century, caused some dissension in the Christian church on doctrinal points, in which he was supported by some synods and condemned by others.

Gregory (Numis.) medals are extant of the three last popes of this name. Those of Gregory XIII bear, besides his effigy, [vide Plate X] also the inscription, GREGORIUS XIII. PONT. OPT. MAXIMUS; on the reverse, CLAVES REGNI COELORUM ROMA, on his election; IN AEQUITATE ABUNDANTIA; ANNONA PONTIFICIA, on the occasion of a scarcity, when Gregory procured corn for the city; SPES OPIS EJUSDEM, and PRO CUNCTIS, on the occasion of a plague, when the pope afforded relief to the sufferers, &c. The medals of Gregory XIV bear his effigy, as in the annexed figure; with a suitable inscription; on the obverse, and on the reverse of some, A TEMPORALE AD AETERNUM, on the occasion of his election; DIEBUS FAMIS SATURABANTUR, on the occasion of a famine, when the pope afforded great relief to the city, &c.

The medals of Gregory XV bear his effigy, as in the annexed figure; inscription, GREGORIUS XV PONTIFEX MAXIMUS ANNO III; on the reverse of some, CAUSA NOSTRAE LAETITIAE, on the occasion of the victory obtained by the emperor Ferdinand over his Bohemian subjects, &c.

Gregory of Rimini (Biog.) general of the Augustines, who died in 1358, was so celebrated in scholastic divinity as to acquire the name of the Authentic Doctor. He wrote a Commentary on the Master of the Sentences; a Treatise on Usury, and other works, published in folio, Valent. 1500, Venet. &c. 1522.

Gregory of St. Vincent, a Flemish geometrician, was born at Bruges in 1584, and died in 1667, leaving among his works 'Opus Geometricum Quadraturæ Circuli, et Sectionum Coni,' 2 vols. fol. Antv. 1647.

Gregory, James, the first of a Scotch family of learned men, was born at Aberdeen in 1638, and died in 1675, leaving, 1. 'Vera Circuli et Hyperbolæ Quadratura,' 1667. 2. 'Exercitationes Geometricæ,' besides his invention of the reflecting telescopes, &c.

Gregory, David, nephew of the preceding, was born at Aberdeen in 1661, and died in 1708, Savilian professor of Astronomy at Oxford. He published, 1. 'Exercitatio Geometrica de Dimensione Figurarum,' 4to. Edinb. 1684. 2. 'Catoptricæ et Dioptricæ Sphericæ Elementa,' 8vo. Oxon. 1695. 3. 'Astronomiæ Physicæ et Geometriæ Elementa,' fol. Oxon. 1702, and 4to. Genev. 1726. 4. 'Treatise of Practical Geometry,' originally written in Latin, and of which a translation by Mr. Maclaurin, was published in 8vo. 1745, and again in 1751. 5. 'A Short Treatise of the Nature and Arithmetic of Logarithms,' printed at the end of Keill's translation of Commandine's Euclid, besides several papers in the 'Philosophical Transactions.' James Gregory, the brother of this gentleman, succeeded him in the Savilian Professorship, which he held for 33 years; and another brother Charles, who died in 1763, held the professorship of Mathematics at St. Andrews for 32 years.

Gregory, John, a physician of the same family, was born in 1724, and died in 1773, leaving, 1. 'Comparative View of the State and Faculties of Man with those of the Animal World,' 8vo. to the second edition of which the author put his name. 2. 'Observations on the Duties and Offices of a Physician, and on the Method of prosecuting Enquiries in Philosophy,' 8vo. 1770, published by one who heard the professor deliver them in lectures, but republished by himself in the same year. 3. 'Elements of the Practice of Physic for the use of Students,' 1772, and 1774. His son, Dr. James Gregory, also published a small tract of his, entitled 'A Father's Legacy to his Daughters,' which has since been a popular book. In 1788, all his works were published together in 4 vols. 8vo. with a Life of himself, and an account of his family.

GREGORY, John, an English divine, of a different family from the preceding, was born in 1607 at Agmondesham, in Buckinghamshire, educated at Oxford, and died in 1646, after having suffered for his loyalty. He published, 1. 'A Second Edition of Sir Thomas Ridley's View of the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law,' 4to. 1634, with notes. 2. 'Notes and Observations on some Passages of Scripture,' 4to. 1646, which besides being reprinted four times in the same form, were translated into Latin, and inserted in the 'Critici Sacri.' His posthumous works were published by his friend Mr. John Gurgany, in a 4to. volume, entitled 'Gregorii Posthuma,' besides which he wrote a tract entitled 'Alkibla,' and a MS. entitled 'Observationes in Loca quædam excerpta ex Johannis Malelæ Chronographia,' in the Bodleian at Oxford. He likewise translated from the Greek into Latin 'Palladius de Gentibus Indiæ et Brachmannibus;' 'S. Ambrosius de Moribus Brachmannorum;' and 'Anonymus de Brachmannibus.' which translations came after his death into the hands of Mr. Edmund Chilmead, and afterwards into those of Edward Byshe, esq. who published them in his own name, 4to. London, 1665.

GREGORY, George, a divine and miscellaneous writer, originally of Scotch extraction, but born in 1754, of a family that was settled in Ireland, died in 1808, leaving, 1. 'Essays Historical and Moral.' 2. 'A Translation of Lowth's Lectures on the Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews,' 1787. 3. 'Church History,' 2 vols. 1788, and 1795. 4. 'Life of Chatterton,' 8vo. 1789, inserted afterwards in the 'Biographia Britannica.' 5. A Translation of Telemachus, 4to. 1795. 6. 'The Economy of Nature,' 3 vols. 8vo. 7. 'A Dictionary of Arts and Sciences,' 2 vols. 4to. He left in the press 'Letters on Natural and Experimental Philosophy,' and a 'Series of Letters to his Son,' which have since been published.

GREGSON, Matthew (Biog.) an antiquary, who died in 1824, at the age of 75, was the author of 'A Portfolio of Fragments relative to the History and Antiquities of the County Palatine and Duchy of Lancaster.'

GRENADA, Lewis de (Biog.) a Dominican in the 16th century, who died in 1588, was the author of many religious works, which were translated into French by Mr. Girard, and published in 2 vols. fol. and 10 vols. 8vo.

GRENADA (Geog.) an island in the West Indies, about 26 miles long from north to south, and about 10 broad in the centre, 123 m. S.W. Barbadoes, 71 m. N.W. Tobago. Lon. 61° W., lat. 12° N. It was discovered by Columbus in 1498, but was not occupied by any Europeans before the 17th century, when some French adventurers took possession of it, and massacred all the natives. In 1762 the English became masters of it, and have ever since retained it, with the exception of some few intervals, when it was occupied by the French.

GRENOBLE (Geog.) a town of France, formerly the capital of Dauphiny, and now of the department of the Isere, is situated at the base of the Alps, a little above the junction of the Isere and the Drac, 27 m. S. of Chamberry. Lon. 5° 43' E., lat. 45° N. It is supposed to be the Cularo of the Allobroges, called by Ptolemy Accusium.

GRENVILLE (Her.) a family which has already been spoken of under its ancient name of Granville, of which a branch was early settled in Buckinghamshire. Of this family was Richard Grenville, of Wotton, esq. who, marrying into the Temple family, his descendant George Grenville Nugent Temple inherited the dignities and estates of that family, namely, the titles of earl Temple, and viscount Cobham. He was raised in 1784 to the dignity of a marquis, by the title of marquis of Buckingham. His son Richard Grenville Brydges Chandos, was advanced in 1822 to the dignities of marquis of Chandos, duke of Buckingham and Chandos. William Wyndham Grenville, the third and youngest brother of the first marquis of Buckingham, was created lord Grenville in 1790. The arms, &c. of this branch of the family are as follow:

Arms and Crest. The same as those of the duke of Buckingham, with a mullet for difference.

Supporters. Also the same, except that the lion is party per fess embattled, and each supporter has a collar charged with roundles.

Motto. "Exempla suorum."

GRENVILLE, a junior branch of the same family, also enjoys the peerage, conferred in 1797 on James Grenville.

GRESHAM, Sir Thomas (Hist.) the descendant of an honourable family, so called from a town of the same name in Norfolk, and the younger son of sir Richard Gresham, knt. alderman, sheriff, and lord mayor of London, was born in 1519, and died in 1579. He enjoyed the confidence of Edward VI and queen Elizabeth, for both of whom he negotiated many pecuniary matters of great importance; but is now still gratefully remembered by the city of London, for the erection of the Royal Exchange, and his other noble benefactions, among which, not the least, was the foundation of seven lectureships in divinity, law, physic, astronomy, geometry, music, and rhetoric, at 50*l.* per annum, which are now known by the name of the Gresham professorships.

GRESLEY (Her.) the name of a family which deduce their descent from Malahulcius, uncle to the famous Rollo, duke of Normandy, whose youngest son Nigel possessed, as grants from the conqueror, among other lordships in Derbyshire, that of Greesely, which gave its name to this branch of the family. The 18th in descent from him was George Gresley, who was created a baronet in 1611; whose arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Vaire, ermine and gules.

Crest. On a wreath, a lion passant ermine, armed, langued, and collared, gules.

Motto. "Meliore fide quam fortuna.'

GRESSET, John Baptist Lewis (Biog.) a French poet, was born at Amiens in 1709, and died in 1777, leaving 'Ver Vert,' 1735; 'Chartreuse;' 'Le Lutrin Vivant;' 'Le Mechant;' 'Les Ombres;' 'Epitres;' 'Odes,' &c.; all which have been collected in 2 vols. 12mo. 1748.

GRETSER, James (Biog.) a German Jesuit, who died in 1635, left a number of works, written against protestant authors, and published in 17 vols. fol. Ratisbon, 1739.

GREVILLE, Thomas (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was made knight banneret for his valiant behaviour in the battle of Stoke, June 16th, and was afterwards employed by Henry VII as one of the Commissioners of Array, in the county of Warwick, for sending archers, &c. into Britany; also, as one of the Justices for Jail Delivery in Warwickshire; and in 6 Hen. VII a second time a Commissioner for arraying men in defence of this realm, then in danger of invasion from Charles IX, of France.

GREVILLE, Edward, who was in the commission of the peace for Warwickshire, in 1 Henry VIII, received the honour of knighthood for his valour at the battle of the Spurs; and after having attended the king to Calais and Guisnes to meet Francis I, he died in 20 Hen. VIII.

GREVILLE, Sir Fulke, first Lord Brook, vide Brook.

GREVILLE (Her.) the name of a family which was anciently written Graville, Grevill, or Grevel. This family is supposed to be as old as the conquest; but the first who enjoyed the dignity of the peerage was sir Fulk Greville, referred to under History, who was created in 1620 a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Brooke, baron Brooke of Beauchamp's Court, co. Warwick. Francis, the eighth lord Brooke, was created in 1746 an earl, by the title of earl Brooke of Warwick Castle, co. Warwick; and in 1759 that of earl of Warwick was added to his other titles. [Vide Brook] The title of earl of Mansfield also came to this family by the marriage of Louisa Greville, countess of Mansfield, with the hon. Robert Fulke Greville, next brother to George, second earl of Warwick and Brooke.

GREVIN, James (Biog.) a French poet, and physician, was born at Clermont in 1538, and died in 1573. There are three plays of his extant, namely, 'La Tresorière,' 'Les Esbahis,' and 'La Mort de Cesar;' besides several poems, which were printed in 8vo. Paris, 1560.

GREVIUS (Biog.) vide Grævius.

GREW, Obadiah (Biog.) a puritan of Atherston, in Warwickshire, was born in 1607, educated at Oxford, employed as a commissioner by the usurping powers for expelling the clergy, ejected in 1661, and after exposing himself to imprisonment for disobedience to the laws, he died in 1689, leaving some religious works.

GREW, Nehemiah, son of the preceding, and a botanist, was born at Coventry about 1628, and died in 1711, leaving, 1. 'Anatomy of Vegetables,' &c. which was published first in three parts, 8vo., but afterwards altogether in folio, in 1682. 2. 'Museum Regalis Societatis,' 1681; which is accompanied with the 'Comparative Anatomy of the Stomach and Guts begun, being several Lectures read before the Royal Society in 1676.' 3. 'Cosmographia Sacra; or, a Discourse of the Universe as it is the Creature and Kingdom of God. The works of Grew were translated into Latin and French. [Vide Plate XXXIII]

GREY (Hist.) vide De Grey.

GREY, Henry, vide Suffolk.

GREY, Lady Jane, daughter of Henry Grey, duke of Suffolk, by Frances Brandon, his wife, was of the blood royal of England by both parents: her grand-mother on the father's side being queen consort to Edward IV, and her grandmother on her mother's side being daughter to Henry VII, queen-dowager of France, and mother of Mary, queen of Scots. Lady Jane was born in 1537, at Bradgate, her father's seat, in Leicestershire, married to lord Guildford Dudley, fourth son of the duke of Northumberland, in 1553, reluctantly proclaimed queen at the king's death in the same year, through the ambition of her father; and on her resigning soon after the parade of royalty, might in all probability have ended her days in retirement; but the part which her father took in Wyatt's insurrection involved her in the common ruin of her family. She was tried on Nov. 3 following, when she and her husband were convicted of treason, and brought to the scaffold, where they suffered in 1554, but separately, he first on Tower-Hill, and she within the Tower. Historians are loud in the praises of lady Jane Grey, as a lady of more than ordinary endowments, which she cultivated in literary pursuits with uncommon industry. She wrote three Latin Epistles to Bullinger, printed in the 'Epistolæ ab Ecclesiæ Helveticæ Reformatoribus vel ad eos Scriptæ,' 8vo. 1742; a Letter to her Sister Catherine Grey, which was said to have been written in Greek, but is preserved in Latin; four Latin Verses from her Prison, and her Speech on the Scaffold. According to Hollingshead and Baker she wrote other things; and Bale mentions 'The Complaint of a Sinner,' and 'The Devout Christian.' A Letter of hers to Harding, her Father's Chaplain, on his embracing Popery, is in the 'Phœnix.' Immediately after her death there came out a piece, entitled, 'The precious Remains of Lady Jane Grey,' 4to. [Vide Plate VI]

GREY, Lord, a general in the service of queen Elizabeth, was sent into Scotland to assist the Protestants there, and was afterwards employed under Ormond in reducing the Spanish general San Josepho, in Ireland.

GREY, vide Tankerville.

GREY (Her.) the name of a family, of which particular mention has been made under the ancient name of De Grey. [Vide De Grey and Stamford] A younger branch of this family, namely, the Greys of Howick, enjoys the dignity of the peerage, which was first conferred in 1623 on sir William Grey, who was created a baron, by the title of lord Grey of Warke. Ford, third lord Grey, was created in 1645 viscount Glendale, and earl of Tankerville. At the death of Ralph, the fourth lord Grey, these titles became extinct; but sir Charles Grey, of Howick, a descendant from a junior branch of the same family, and a general, was created in 1801 baron Grey de Howick, co. Northumberland; and in 1806 was farther advanced to the dignities of viscount Howick and earl Grey. George, the fourth son of Charles, the second earl Grey, was created a baronet in 1814. The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Earl Grey, viscount Howick, baron Grey of Howick, and a baronet.

Arms. Gules, a lion rampant argent, within a bordure engrailed argent.

Crest. A scaling ladder.

Supporters. On the dexter, a lion guardant, crowned with a ducal coronet; on the sinister, a leopard guardant.

Motto. "De bon vouloir, servir le Roy."

GREY, Lord, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Stamford and Warrington.

GREY de Wilton, Viscount, the title borne by the eldest son of the earl of Wilton.

GREY (Biog.) or Gray, Nicholas, an English divine, was born in London in 1590; educated at Westminster and Oxford; expelled from the Mastership of Merchant Taylors' School, and his living of Castle Camps, in Cambridgeshire, by the usurping powers; and died very poor in 1660; leaving, 1. A Dictionary in Latin and English, and English and Latin. 2. 'Luculenta e sacra Scriptura Testimonia ad Hugonis Grotii Baptizatorum Puerorum Institutionem,' 8vo. Lond. 1647. An edition of this Catechism of Grotius was published in 1668, containing also Wase's translation into Greek, with grammatical and other notes by Barth. Beale, and Goldsmith's translation of the same into English verse. 3. 'Parabolæ Evangelicæ Lat. redditæ Carmine Paraphrastico,' &c. 8vo. Lond. no date.

GREY, Zachary, of a Yorkshire family, related to the Greys above-mentioned, was born in 1687, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1766, leaving, 1. 'A Vindication of the Church of England, in answer to Mr. Pearce's Vindication of the Dissenters,' &c. 8vo. 1720. 2. 'Presbyterian Prejudice displayed,' 8vo. 1722. 3. 'A Pair of clean Shoes and Boots for a dirty Baronet, or an Answer to Sir Richard Cox,' 1722. 4. 'The Knight of Dumbleton foiled at his own Weapons, &c. in a Letter to Sir Richard Cocks, Knt., by a Gentleman and no Knight.' 5. 'A Century of Eminent Presbyterians; or, a Collection of Choice Sayings from the Public Sermons before the two Houses, from Nov. 1641, to Jan. 31, 1648, the Day after the King was beheaded, by a Lover of Episcopacy,' 1723. 6. 'A Letter of Thanks to Mr. Benjamin Bennet.' 7. 'A Caveat against Mr. Benjamin Bennet, a mere Pretender to History and Criticism, by a Lover of History,' 8vo. 1724. 8. 'A Defence of our ancient and modern Historians against the frivolous Cavils of a late Pretender to Critical History, in which the false Quotations and unjust Inferences of the anonymous Author are confuted and exposed in the Manner they deserve, in two Parts,' 8vo. 1725. London, 1591; besides a number of poems and translations,' &c.

GRIMOALD (Hist.) duke of Benevento, was elected king of Lombardy in 662, after Aripert, and died after a reign of nine years, in which he defeated the French, and obtained many advantages over his enemies. Paul. Diac. Hist. Miscel. l. 5; Sigon. de Reg. Ital.

GRIMOALD, son of Pepin the Old, succeeded him in 642 as Mayor of the Palace of Austrasia, was defeated by the Austrasians in his attempt to sieze the throne; and, being taken prisoner, was carried to Paris to king Clovis II, by whom he was put to death. Aimon. l. 4; Fred. c. 38; Dupleix et Mezerai, &c.

GRIMOALD, son of Pepin the Fat, surnamed Heristel, succeeded Nortbert in 695, as Mayor of the Palace to Childebert II and Dagobert III, and was assassinated by a Friezlander named Rangaire in 714.

GRIMOARD, Angelic de (Ecc.) of a noble French family, was made bishop of Avignon, and created a cardinal by Urban V, and died in 1387, after having devoted the greatest part of his property to the public service.

GRIMSTON, Sir Edward (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, comptroller of Calais in the reign of queen Elizabeth, was among the number of those who were taken prisoners on the capture of that place in 1558. He was confined in the Bastille, from which he contrived to make his escape; and, returning to England, he stood his trial, and cleared himself of all blame in the transactions which had taken place at Calais.

GRIMSTON, Sir Harbottle, grandson of the preceding, and second baronet of his family, was born at Bradfield, in Essex, in 1594, studied law at Lincoln's Inn, and supported the party which finally overturned the government; but not taking any active part in the rebellion, he was at the restoration chosen Speaker of the House of Commons, also in the same year appointed Master of the Rolls, and died in 1683.

GRIMSTON (Her.) the name of a family which is so called from its possessions in the county of York. It is descended from Sylvester de Grimston, who attended William the Conqueror as his standard-bearer into England; and, having acquitted himself manfully at the battle of Hastings, obtained, among other grants, the lands of Grimston, Hoxton, Fonsted, &c. Of this family was sir Edward Grimston, knt. abovementioned, whose son, sir Harbottle, was created a baronet in 1612. Sir William, the fifth baronet, was created in 1719 a peer of Ireland by the titles of baron of Dunboyne and viscount Grimston. Sir James Bucknell, the third viscount Grimston, was created baron Verulam of Gorhambury, co. Herts, in 1798; and James Walter, his son, succeeded in 1808 to the barony of Forrester on the death of baroness Forrester, and was raised to the dignity of earl Verulam in 1815. [Vide Verulam]

GRIMSTON, Viscount, the title borne by the eldest son of the earl of Verulam.

GRINDAL, Edmund (Ecc.) archbishop of Canterbury, was born in 1519 at Hinsingham, a small village in Cumberland, educated at Cambridge, where he took his degree of M. A. in 1541; and, after having discharged several honourable offices in the University, he was made chaplain to Ridley, bishop of London, in 1550, fled from the persecution of Mary in 1553, was nominated to the bishopric of London in 1559, was translated to the see of Canterbury on the death of Parker in 1575, was sequestered from his office in 1576 on account of his encouraging prophesyings, but restored soon after,' and died in 1583, leaving, among his works, a treatise entitled 'Christiani Hominis Norma,' &c.; 'The Rule of a Christian Man,' &c.; besides the share which he had in Fox's Martyrology, which contains a treatise of his, entitled a 'Dialogue between Custom and Truth.' He also drew up the statutes for the government of Christ Church, Oxford.

GRINGORNEUR, Jacquemin (Biog.) a Parisian painter, who is said to have invented playing cards in 1392 for the amusement of Charles VI, king of France.

GRISAUNT, William (Biog.) a physician, astronomer, and mathematician, was, like his countryman, Friar Bacon, violently suspected of magic in the 14th century. He studied at Merton College, and lived beyond 1350, when he was old. Bale and Pitts have given a list of his works, none of which are known to be extant. He was the father of pope Urban V.

GRISLER (Hist.) governor of Swiss and Uri, in Switzerland, was charged by the emperor, Albert I, to subdue the rising spirit of the Swiss, but, having roused them to an open insurrection by his severities, he is said to have been killed by an arrow shot by William Tell in 1307.

GRISONS, the Country of the (Geog.) one of the largest cantons in Switzerland, which was known to the ancients by the name of Upper Rhætia, the name of Lower Rhætia being given to the country now called Suabia.

Boundaries. The Grisons are bounded on the E. by Tyrol, S. by Venice and the States of Milan, W. by the cantons of Uri and Glaris, N. by Tyrol.

Division. Its natural division is into five great vallies; namely, those of the Anterior and Posterior Rhine; that of the Engadin or Valley of the Inn; that of the Albula; and, lastly, that of the Prettigan.

Mountains. The country is intersected by lofty ranges of the Alps, known by the name of the Rhetian Alps, which commence with St. Gothard, and extend to the Piave in Tyrol.

Principal Towns. Its principal towns are Coire, Ilantz, and Davos.

History of the Grisons.

The inhabitants of this country were independent previous to their subjugation by the Romans, from whom they were taken by the Goths and Franks; after which they were annexed to Germany; but about the 15th century they asserted their independence, yet, though in alliance with the Swiss Cantons, they formed no part of that republic, being considered as a separate state, which formerly consisted of three leagues; namely, the Grey League, the League of God's House, and the League of the Ten Jurisdictions; but these were incorporated into one canton, and annexed to the Swiss Republic at the French revolution.

GRITTI, Andrew (Hist.) a doge of Venice, who, by his merits, rose to the highest offices of the state, was elected to the dogeship at the death of Anthony Grimani in 1523, and after governing for 16 years with much prudence during a troublesome period, he died in 1539.

Gr. and Lat. fol. ibid. 1715, which, being not so correct as his other works, exposed him to the criticisms of Kuster in a piece, entitled, 'Examen Criticum Editionis Novissimæ Herodoti Gronovianæ,' and to those of Stephen Bergler in the 'Acta Eruditorum' of Leipsic for 1716. In this edition Gronovius attacked Laurentius Valla, Æmilius Portus, Henry Stephens, Dr. Thomas Gale, Spanheim, Salmasius, Isaac Vossius, Le Clerc, Bochart, and other illustrious men in the republic of letters. [Vide Plate XXII]

GRONOVIUS, Theodore Laurence, brother of the preceding, who died young, published 'Emendationes Pandectarum,' 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1605; and 'A Vindication of the Marble Base of the Colossus erected in honour of Tiberius Cæsar.'

GRONOVIUS, John Frederic, a physician and botanist, and most probably the son of James Gronovius, was born in Holland in 1690, and died in 1762, leaving, 1. 'Index Suppellectilis Lapideæ,' or a Scientific Catalogue of his own Collection of Minerals. 2. 'Flora Virginica,' 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1739, a second part appeared in 1743, and a third was preparing when he died. 3. 'Flora Orientalis,' 8vo. 1755.

GRONOVIUS, Laurence Theodore, son of the preceding, was born at Leyden in 1730, and died in 1777, leaving, 1. The latest and completest Edition of his Father's 'Flora Virginica.' 2. 'Museum Ichthyologicum,' fol. 1754; the second part appeared in 1756. 3. 'Bibliotheca Regni Animalis atque Lapidei,' 1760. 4. 'Zoophylacii Gronoviani Fasciculus primus,' 1763; the second Fasciculus appeared in 1764; and a third in 1781, after his death.

GROS, Nicholas le (Biog.) a French theologian, was born in 1675 at Rheims, and died in 1751, leaving, among his works, 1. 'Le Renversement des Libertés de l'Eglise Gallicane dans l'Affaire de la Constitution Unigenitus,' 2 vols. 12mo. 2. 'La Sainte Bible traduite sur les Textes originaux, avec les Differences de la Vulgate,' 8vo. 1739, and 6 vols. 12mo. 1756. 3. 'Sept. GROSLEY, Peter John (Biog.) a French antiquary, was born at Troyes in 1718, and died in 1785, leaving, 1. 'Recherches pour l'Histoire du Droit Français,' 12mo. Paris, 1752. 2. 'Vie de Pithou,' ibid. 2 vols. 12mo. 1756. 3. 'Observations de deux Gentilhommes Suedois sur l'Italie,' 4 vols. 12mo. 1774. 4. 'Londres,' 3 vols. 12mo.; translated into English by Dr. Nugent, 2 vols. 8vo. 5. 'Essais Historiques sur la Champagne.' 6. 'Ephemerides Troyennes,' continued for several years, and containing papers relative to Troyes. He had also a part in the 'Memoires de l'Academie de Troyes,' and in the last translation of 'D'Avila;' and was a useful contributor to the 'Journal Encyclopédique,' from 1771 to 1785, as also to the 'Dictionnaire Historique.' A life written by himself, and some posthumous pieces, were published after his death.

GROSSETESTE, Robert (Ecc.) an English prelate, supposed to have been born about 1175, of obscure parents, at Stradbrook, in Suffolk, was educated at Oxford, elected in 1235 bishop of Lincoln, and died in 1253, after having been engaged in almost constant opposition to the pope and his agents, for which he brought upon himself excommunication and suspension. He was one of the most voluminous writers in our country. A list and a copious account of all his works, both published and unpublished, may be seen in Dr. Pegge's Life of him.

GROSVENOR, Robert le (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, engaged in the crusade, with king Richard I, for the recovery of the Holy Land, and was with that courageous monarch in Sicily in 1190 when he assaulted and took Messina in revenge of king Tancred's expelling the English soldiers for some abuses committed there. He was afterwards at the conquest of Cyprus, the siege of Acre, and the memorable victory obtained by Richard over Saladin, whereby the former became master of Joppa, or Jaffa, Ascalon, and Cæsarea.

GROSVENOR, Sir Robert le, a descendant of the preceding, accompanied Edward III when he besieged Vannes, in Britanny, in 1342, as also at the memorable battle of Cressy, or Crecy, and the siege of Calais.

GROSVENOR, Sir Richard, Bart. the sheriff of Cheshire for the king in 1644, distinguished himself by his stedfast loyalty to his sovereign, whereby he suffered extraordinary hardships, being turned out of his habitation, and compelled to live in a small house belonging to a neighbouring gentleman until the Restoration. He died in 1664.

GROSVENOR, Roger, son of the preceding, was no less steady in his loyalty than his father, with whom he shared his sufferings. He joined the insurrection which was made in 1659 in favour of their exiled sovereign, king Charles II, which failed principally through the treachery of sir Richard Willis; and, for his eminent affection to the royal cause, he was one of the 13 gentlemen of Cheshire who were nominated to be knights of the Royal Oak, when Charles II proposed in 1660 the institution of such an order, but the design was laid aside from prudential motives. He lost his life in a duel in 1661.

GROSVENOR, Sir Thomas, third baronet, commanded a troop in the earl of Shrewsbury's regiment of horse; but resigned his commission that he might vote in the house against the repeal of the penal laws and test acts, notwithstanding he was in the confidence of, and favour with, the king.

GROSVENOR (Her.) or, as it was anciently written, Le Grosvenor, Le Grosvenour, Grovenor, Le Groveneur, and Le Grovenour, is the name of an ancient family descended from Gilbert le Grosvenor, who came to England in 1066, with his uncle Hugh Lupus, earl of Avranches and Chester, nephew to king William the Conqueror. The twentieth in descent from this Gilbert was sir Richard Grosvenor, seventh baronet, who was created in 1761 lord Grosvenor, baron Grosvenor, of Eaton, county palatine of Chester; and in 1784 was advanced to the dignities of viscount Belgrave and earl Grosvenor. The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Grosvenor, earl Grosvenor, viscount Belgrave, baron Grosvenor, and baronet.

Arms. Azure, a garb or.

Crest. On a wreath, a talbot statant or. With these arms his lordship is entitled to quarter the armorial bearings of 16 other families.

Supporters. On either side, a talbot regardant or, each plain collared azure.

Motto. "Nobilitatis, virtus non stemma character."

GROSVENOR (Biog.) or Grovenor, Benjamin, a dissenting minister, was born in 1675, and died in 1758, leaving an 'Essay on Health,' 8vo. 1748; and a treatise on consolation, entitled 'The Mourner,' which has been repeatedly printed.

GROTESTE, Claude, Sieur de la Motte (Biog.) a French Protestant, was born at Paris in 1647, and died in 1713, leaving, 1. 'Traité de l'Inspiration des Livres Sacrés,' Amst. 1695.

GROTIUS, Hugo (Hist.) or Hugo de Groot, the descendant of a family of the greatest distinction in the Low Countries, was the son of John de Groot, burgomaster of Delft, and curator of the University of Leyden. He was born at Delft in 1583; educated at the university of Leyden; appointed pensionary of Rotterdam in 1613; sent to England at this time to negociate respecting the Dutch fisheries; condemned in 1619, by the States of Holland, to perpetual imprisonment for the active part he took in favour of the Arminians; escaped from his confinement in 1621 by the stratagem of his wife; and, going to the court of queen Christina of Sweden, he was appointed her ambassador to the French court, in which character he continued until 1644, when he was recalled at his own desire, and died in 1645. He is however better known as a writer than as a statesman, having left many works in high estimation; namely, 1. An edition of 'Martianus Capella,' which was published in 1599, and dedicated to the prince of Condé. 2. A Translation into Latin of Steven's Treatise for the Instruction of Pilots in finding a Ship's Place at Sea, 1599. 3. An edition of the 'Phænomena,' of Aratus,' 1600. 4. Some tragedies in Latin; as 'Adamus Exul,' Lugd. Bat. 1601; 'Christus Patiens,' 1608; 'Sophomphanœus,' which was published in 1633. 5. Some Verses in Latin and French on his own marriage. 6. 'Mare Liberum, i. e. the Freedom of the Ocean, or the Right of the Dutch to trade to the Indies,' which was printed in 1609, as is said, without his consent, and produced several answers, particularly that of Selden's 'Mare Clausum.' 7. 'De Antiquitate Reipublicæ Batavæ,' 1610; it was also translated by himself and his father into Dutch. 8. 'A Reconciliation of the different Opinions on Predestination and Grace.' 9. 'De omni Genere Studiorum recte instituendo.' 10. 'De Veritate Religionis Christianæ,' written originally in Dutch verse, during his confinement, and since translated into every language. 11. 'Historia Gothorum.' 12. Dissertatio Hist. et Politic. de Dogmatibus, Ritibus, et Gubernatione Ecclesiæ,' &c. 13. 'De Origine Gentium Americanarum,' &c.; besides many other works on legal, historical, and controversial subjects. His theological works, printed in 3 vols. fol. include his Commentaries on the Bible, which have not added much to his credit as a theologian.

Grotius, Peter, son of the preceding, who was appointed pensionary of Rotterdam, and deputy of the States-General, was employed on various negotiations, by which he acquired great credit, and died in 1676.

GROTO, Lewis (Biog.) an Italian poet, commonly called, from his misfortune to be blind, Cieco d'Adria, was born at Adria in 1541, and died in 1585, leaving some tragedies, pastorals, orations, &c. which were published in 4to. Venice, 1598.

GROVE, Henry (Biog.) a dissenting minister, was born at Taunton in 1683, and died in 1737, leaving, 1. 'The Regulation of Diversions.' 2. Several Papers in the eighth Volume of the Spectator, namely, Nos. 538, 601, 626, 635, &c. 3. 'An Essay towards a Demonstration of the Soul's Immortality,' 1718. 4. 'Essay on the Terms of Christian Communion,' 1719. 5. 'The Evidence of our Saviour's Resurrection considered,' 1730. 6. 'Some Thoughts concerning the Proof of a Future State from Reason.' 7. 'A Discourse concerning the Nature and Design of the Lord's Supper,' 1732. 8. 'Wisdom the first Spring of Action in the Deity,' 1734. 9. 'A Discourse on Saving Faith,' 1736; besides several Sermons, and a volume of 'Miscellanies, in Prose and Verse.' His 'Posthumous Works' were published by subscription in 4 vols. 8vo. 1740.

GRUBESSA (Hist.) eldest son of Branislaus, whom Bodin, king of Servia, had put to death, maintained, with his uncles and brothers, a siege in the city of Ragusa for seven years; and after suffering imprisonment he was at length released, and obtained the government of Dalmatia. He was killed in battle in 1127.

GRUCHIUS (Biog.) or Grouchi, Nicholas, an antiquary, of a noble family of Rouen, who died in 1572, was the author of a translation of F. L. de Castagneda's 'History of the Indies,' 4to. Paris, 1554; a treatise 'De Comitiis Romanorum,' Lib. III, fol. 1655; and some other pieces.

GRUDIUS (Biog.) vide Everard.

GRUNER, John Frederick (Biog.) a divine, and critic, was born at Cobourg, in 1723, and died in 1778, leaving 'An Introduction to Roman Antiquities;' 'Miscellanea Sacra;' 'Various Critical Remarks on the Classics,' &c.

GRUTERUS, Janus, or John (Biog.) an antiquary, was born at Antwerp in 1560, and died in 1627, leaving a collection of Latin Poems, Notes on Seneca, Statius, Martial, Titus Livy, Florus, Velleius Paterculus, Pliny the Younger, the Scriptores Historiæ Augustæ, and an edition of the Works of Cicero, in 2 vols. fol.; besides which he published, 1. 'Lampax, seu Fax Artium, hoc est, Thesaurus Criticus,' 6 vols. 8vo. Francof. 1602—1634; 4 vols. fol. Florent. 1737—1739; Luc. 1747; Neapol. 1751. 2. 'Florilegium Magnum, seu Polyanthea,' &c. 3 vols. 3. 'Bibliotheca Exulum.' 4. 'Chronicon Chronicorum,' 4 vols. 8vo. published under the name of John Gualterus. 5. 'Inscriptiones Antiquæ totius Orbis Romani in Absolutissimum Corpus redactæ,' &c. 4 vols. fol. Amstel. 1707, edited by Grævius. The first edition was published by the author in 1601. 6. 'Deliciæ Poetarum Gallorum,' &c. 9 vols. 8vo. 1608—1641; besides other works, of which Niceron has given a complete list.

GRYLLUS (Myth.) Γρύλλος, one of the companions of Ulysses, who was changed into a swine by Circe. Plut. Brut. Anim.

Chrysolaræ Erotemata Linguæ Græcæ, in Compendium redacta, a Guarino Veronensi,' 8vo. Ferrar. 1509; and a Latin Grammar, entitled, 'Grammaticæ Institutiones,' without date or place, but printed at Verona in 1487, and reprinted in 1516; to which are annexed smaller treatises, as 'Carmina Differentialia,' 'Liber de Diphtongis,' &c. He also wrote Commentaries on Cicero's Orations, Persius' Satires, &c.; besides Orations and Poems in Latin; and recovered the Poems of Catullus, a MS. of which was mouldering in a garret.

GUARINO, Baptist, or Battista, son of the preceding, and professor of the Greek and Latin at Ferrara, who had Giraldi and Aldus Manutius for his scholars, left a collection of Latin poetry, entitled, 'Baptistæ Guarini Veronensis Poemata Latina,' Moden. 1496; also a treatise on study, entitled, 'De Ordine docendi ac studendi,' published without place or date, but subsequently at Heidelberg in 1489; besides a number of things which remain in MS.

GUASTALDI, Jerom (Ecc.) cardinal, and archbishop of Benevento, originally of Taggia, on the coast of Genoa, was created a cardinal by Clement X in 1673, and died in 1685, after having been sent as a legate to Bologne.

GUASTALLA (Geog.) in Latin Guardastallum and Vastalla, a town of Lombardy, on the Po, and a duchy of the same name. The town was much embellished by Ferdinand de Gonzaga, and a council was held here in 1106, by Pascal II.

GUATIMOZIN (Hist.) the last unfortunate emperor of Mexico, succeeded Quatlavaca just at the period when Cortez was about to make an attack on that kingdom; and after exerting himself to the utmost in the support of his falling empire, he was at length taken prisoner, and hanged by his merciless conqueror in 1554, in the 63d year of his age.

GUAY, Trouin Rene du (Hist.) a French naval officer, was born at St. Malo in 1673, and died in 1736, after a brilliant career, in which he is said to have captured more than 300 merchant ships, and 20 ships of war; besides taking Rio Janeiro, which occasioned a loss to the Portuguese of not less than a million sterling. He left 'Memoires,' written partly by his own hand, and partly by a nephew, which were printed in 1 vol. 4to. 1740.

GUDIN de la Brenellerie, Paul Philip (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Paris in 1738, and died in 1812, leaving, 1. 'Graves Observations sur les Bonnes Mœurs,' in poetical tales, published under the name of Frère Paul, Paris, 1777. 2. 'Discours,' likewise in verse, on the abolition of slavery, Paris, 1781. 3. 'Essai sur le Progrès des Arts et de l'Esprit sous le Regne de Louis XV,' Deux Ponts, 1776; Lausanne, 1777. 4. 'Supplement à la Manière d'écrire l'Histoire,' Kiel, 1784. 5. 'Essai sur l'Histoire de Comices de Rome des Etats Généraux de France, et du Parlement d'Angleterre,' 3 vols. 8vo. 1789. 6. 'Supplement au Contrat Social,' Paris, 1790. 7. 'La Conquete de Naples,' 3 vols. 8vo. Paris, 1801; but written in the reign of Louis XV.' 8. 'L'Atronomie,' a poem, Paris, 1801; and reprinted with additions in 1811. 9. 'Contes,' 2 vols. 1804.

GUDIUS, Marquard (Biog.) a critic of Holstein, in Germany, who died in 1689, published only two small pieces, namely, 1. 'De Clinicis, sive Grabatariis veteris Ecclesiæ,' Jen. 1657. 2. 'Hippolyti Martyris de Antichristo Librum, Græcè,' a piece never printed before; but he communicated the result of his critical labours to Gronovius, Grævius, Heinsius, and others, who all considered him as excelling in philosophy and criticism. A collection of Epistles of Gudius and his friends were published by Burmann, 4to. Ultraj. 1697; and in 1731 came out 'Antiquæ Inscriptiones cum Græcæ tum Latinæ, olim a Marquardo Guidio collectæ,' &c. fol. His manuscripts, which were purchased by the duke of Wolfenbuttel, consisted of very many early MSS. of Greek and Latin, some of which had never been used.

GUERARD, Robert (Biog.) a Benedictine, was born at Rouen in 1641, and died in 1715, leaving 'Abrégé de la Bible en forme de Questions et de Reponses Familières,' 2 vols. 12mo.; besides which he was supposed to be concerned in a book, entitled, 'L'Abbé Commendataire;' for which he was confined at Ambournay, in Bugey. In his exile he discovered, while searching for ancient MS., one of St. Augustine's against Julian, entitled, 'Opus Imperfectum.'

GUERCINO (Biog.) an artist, whose real name was John Francis Barbieri, was born at Cento, in the territory of Ferrara, in 1590, and died in 1666, leaving many specimens of his skill at Rome, as Aurora in the Villa Ludovisi; the St. Petronilla, now in the Louvre; and the Dido, in the Spada collection, &c.

GUERET, Gabriel (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Paris in 1641, and died in 1688, leaving, 1. 'Les Sept Sages de la Grèce.' 2. 'Entretiens sur l'Eloquence de la Chaire et du Barreau.' 3. 'Sur les Refus des Sacremens,' 12mo. 1752. 3. 'Sur le Droit qu'ont les Curés de commettre leur Vicaires et les Confesseurs dans leur Paroisses,' 12mo.

GUERICKE, Otho (Biog.) or Otto, a burgomaster of Magdebourg, was born in 1602, and died in 1686. He was the inventor of the air-pump, and the author of several works, the principal of which was his 'Experimenta Magdeburgica,' fol. 1672.

GUERNSEY, Lord (Her.) the title borne by the eldest son of the earl of Aylesford.

GUERNSEY (Geog.) an island in the English channel, near the coasts of Brittany and Normandy, lying in the gulf termed Mount St. Michael's Bay, 26 m. W. S. W. Cape la Hogue, 36 W. by S. Cherbourg, 51 S. Portland, 94 S. W. Portsmouth, 108 S. W. by S. Southampton. Lon. 2° W., lat. 49° N. It is nine miles in length, six in breadth, and about thirty-nine in circumference. The chief town on the island is St. Peter's Port, situated on the east coast. Guernsey, which by the Latins was called Sarnia, became a part of the duchy of Normandy, and as such was annexed to the crown of England by Henry I.

GUESCLIN, Bertrand du (Hist.) constable of France, and a celebrated warrior, was born in Brittany in 1311, and died in 1380, after having distinguished himself in an especial manner against the English. Particular mention is made of him in Froissart's Chronicles.

GUESLE, John de la (Hist.) a president of the parliament of Paris, distinguished himself by his firmness and loyalty during the civil wars in France, and died in 1588.

GUESLE, James de la, son of the preceding, was high in favour with Henry III of France, in whose death he was very unintentionally instrumental, by introducing to him the Jacobin friar Clement, by whom he was assassinated. La Guesle struck the assassin with the pommel of his sword in the stomach, which stunned him, and two of the king's guards dispatched him as he lay on the floor. La Guesle continued faithful to Henry IV, and died in 1612.

GUETTARD, John Stephen (Biog.) a French physician, was born at Estampes in 1715, and died in 1786, leaving, 1. Nearly two hundred Memoirs, published first in the 'Memoires' of the Academy, and afterwards by himself in two quarto volumes. 2. 'Observations on Plants,' 2 vols. 12mo. Paris, 1747, besides the share he had in the work of La Borde, entitled 'Voyage Pittoresque, ou Description generale et particulière de la France,' 12 vols. fol. 1781–1796.

GUEVARA, Anthony de (Biog.) a Spanish writer, who was born in the province of Alaba, and died about 1544, or, according to some, 1548, was the author of several works, as, 1. 'Relox de Principes, o Marco Aurelio,' which is supposed to have been first published in 1529, and was translated into most European languages, as also into the Latin. 2. 'Epistolas Familiares,' Pinc. 1539, besides several other works which were published collectively in folio at Valladolid in 1539, and Madrid in 1673.

GUEVARA, vide Velez.

GUGLIELMINI, Domenic (Biog.) an Italian mathematician, was born at Bologna in 1655, and died in 1710, leaving numerous works, which were collected and edited by Morgagni, under the title of 'Opera omnia Mathematica, Hydraulica Medica et Physica; accessit Vita Auctoris a J. B. Morgagni,' 2 vols. 4to. Genev. 1719, among these works is a treatise on Hydrostatics, in Latin; a work entitled 'Della Natura de Fiumi;' a dissertation 'De Sanguinis Naturâ et Constitutione,' and a treatise on Comets, written on the appearance of the comet in 1681.

GUI (Hist.) son of Lambert, duke of Spoleto, by a daughter of Pepin, king of Italy, caused himself to be declared emperor, after the death of Charles III in 888, and died in 894, after having been dispossessed of the empire by Arnold, the son of Carloman. Otto. Frising. l. 6; Luitprand. l. 1; Sigon. de Reg. Ital. l. 3, &c.

GUI, vide Guy.

GUI (Ecc.) a bishop of Auxerre, died in 961, after governing his see with great zeal and prudence.

GUI, son of Folk the Good, count of Anjou, a distinguished prelate in the 10th century, was elected bishop of Puy, in Velay, in 975, and died in 996, after having done much towards the reformation of abuses, and the suppression of different irregularities which then prevailed.

GUI of Amiens, son of Walter II, count of Amiens, succeeded his brother Folk as bishop of that city in 1058, and died in 1076, after having assisted at the consecration of king Philip I. He was the author of several works, particularly a Poem on the expedition of William the Conqueror into England.

GUI, vide Guy.

GUIANA (Geog.) an extensive country of South America bounded on the north by the river Oronoco, and on the south by the river Amazons, lying between lon. 50° and 70° W., lat. 8° N. and 3° S. It is said to have been discovered by Columbus in 1498, or, according to others, by Vasco Nunes, but was little known until it was visited by sir Walter Raleigh in 1595, since which period it has been in the hands of the French, the Dutch, the Portuguese, and the English, which two latter powers have still possessions there.

GUIBERT (Biog.) an abbot and French historian, of a rich and powerful family in a village of the diocese of Beauvais, was born in 1053, and died in 1124, leaving among his works 'Traité de la Predication;' a History of the Crusades, entitled 'Gesta Dei per Francos;' a Treatise on the Relics of the Saints, &c. all which were published by M. D'Achery, fol. 1651.

GUIBERT, James Anthony Hippolitus, a French writer, was born at Montauban in 1743, and died in 1790, leaving, 1. 'Essai general de Tactique,' 1770. 2. 'Le Connetable de Bourbon,' the 'Gracchi,' and 'Anna Bullen,' three tragedies. 3. 'Histoire de la Milice Française.' 4. 'De la Force publique considerée sous tous ses Rapports,' which he published under the name of G. T. Raynal, just before his death. His German Tour was published by his widow in 1803.

GUICCIARDINI, Francis (Hist.) a diplomatist and historian of Italy, descended of a noble family of Florence, was born in 1482, sent ambassador by the Florentines in 1511 to Ferdinand, king of Spain, on the subject of the league, which the French and Spaniards had entered into against the pope; appointed in 1518 by Leo X, to the government of Modena and Reggio; constituted president of Romagna by Clement VII, in 1523; declared in 1526 lieutenant-general of all the pope's forces in the ecclesiastical state; in 1531 made governor of Bologna by the same pope, contrary to all precedents, that city having never before been committed to the hands of a layman; assisted at the coronation of Charles V in 1532; and died in 1540; leaving among his works as an author, 1. His History, which has placed him in the first rank of historians. There have been various editions of this work, and it has been translated into Latin, French, English, and other languages. The original, which is in Italian, was first published by Guicciardini's nephew, Agnolo, under the title of 'Dell' Istoria d'Italia Libri XVI,' fol. Fiorenza, 1561; to which four books have since been added by Seth Viotti, at Parma, in 1564, and some passages omitted in the first edition have been published separately, under the title of 'Thuanus restitutus, sive Sylloge, &c. cum Francisci Guicciardini Paralipomenis,' Amst. 1663. It was afterwards frequently reprinted in a complete state, but an edition appeared at Friburg in 4 vols. 4to. professedly printed from the MS. revised and corrected by the author, which was in the library of Magliabecchi at Florence; this edition is considered to be the best. He wrote likewise The Sacking of Rome; Considerations on State Affairs; Councils and Admonitions, &c.

GUICCIARDINI, Lewis (Biog.) nephew of the preceding, was born at Florence in 1521, and died in 1589, leaving among other works, A Description of the Low Countries; Commentaries on the Affairs of Europe, particularly in the Low Countries, from 1529 to 1560; Remarkable Words and Actions of Princes, &c.

Genealogique de la Maison Royale de Savoie,' 2 vols. fol. 1660. 3. 'Une Suite Chronologique des Eveques de Bellay,' 4to. 4. 'Bibliotheca Sebusiana,' 4to. 1666.

GUIDI, Alexander (Biog.) an Italian poet, was born at Pavia, in Milan, in 1650, and died in 1712, leaving, 1. 'Poesie liriche,' Parma, 1681. 2. 'L'Amalasunta,' an opera, printed the same year. 3. 'Accademia per Musica,' Rome, 1687. 4. 'L'Endimione di Erilo Cleoneo, pastor Arcade; con un Discorso di Bione Crateo al Cardinale Albano,' Roma, 1692. 5. 'Le Rime,' Roma, 1704. 6. 'Sei Omelie di M. S. Clementi XI spiegate in Versi,' fol. Roma, 1712. In 1726, was published at Verona, in 12mo. 'Poesie d'Alessandro Guidi non piu reccolte,' &c.; being a collection of his printed Poems and MSS. including the pieces which he had recited before the academy of the Arcadi, upon various subjects.

GUIDICCIONI, John (Ecc.) an Italian poet, and bishop of Fossombrone, was born at Lucca in 1480, sent in 1523 nuncio to the emperor Charles V, made governor of Rome, and bishop of Fossombrone when his patron Alexander Farnese was raised to the papal chair under the name of Paul III; in 1539 was made president of Romagna, commissary-general of the pontifical army, and governor of La Marche; and would have been raised to the dignity of a cardinal, if he had not died in 1541. He was the author of an oration to the republic of Lucca, many Letters, and a number of Poems, which gained him a high reputation. His works have been several times printed, but the best edition is that in 2 vols. 4to. 1749, 1750.

GUIDO, Aretin (Biog.) vide Aretin.

GUIDO, Reni, an Italian painter of the first rank, was born at Bologna in 1575, and died in 1642. This painter received the most marked honours while he was living, from Paul V, Lewis XIII of France, Philip IV of Spain, the kings of Poland, and Sweden, and numberless persons of rank; and since his death his works have retained their full share of public approbation. [Plate XXXVI]

GUIENNE (Geog.) a province in the south-west of France, which was known to the Latins by the name of Aquitania, but called by Pliny Armorica. Bourdeaux was the capital of this province, in which were the towns of Agen, Condom, Bazas, Marmande, Sainte-Foi, Nerac, &c. Its rivers were the Garonne, the Dordogne, Lot, and Aveyron. Since the revolution it has been divided into the departments of the Gironde, Lot, Lot and Garonne, Dordogne, and Aveyron. Guienne was taken from the Romans by the Visigoths, who possessed it until the time of Clovis, by whom they were expelled. After that time it had its own princes, named dukes. In the 14th century this part of France was the scene of long warfare between the French and English under Edward III.

GUIGNES, Joseph de (Biog.) an oriental scholar, was born at Pointoise in 1721, and died in 1800, leaving, 1. 'Abrégé de la Vie d'Etienne Fourmont,' 4to. Paris, 1747. 2. 'Histoire generale des Huns, des Turcs, des Moguls, et des autres Occidentaux,' 4 vols. 4to. 1756, taken from oriental MSS. 3. 'Memoire,' 12mo. 1759, in which he endeavours to prove that the Chinese were a colony from Egypt. 4. 'Chou-King,' 4to. 1770, the translation of Gaubil, which was reprinted with notes by Guignes. 5. 'L'Art Militaire des Chinois,' 4to. 6. 'Essai Historique sur la Typographie Orientale et Grecque,' 4to. 1787. 7. 'Principes de Composition Typographique,' 4to. 1790.

GUILANDINUS, Melchior (Biog.) a Prussian botanist, whose real name was Wieland, was born at Konigsberg, and died about 1587 or 1589, leaving, 1. 'Papyrus,' 4to. Venet. 1572, or an essay on that plant. 2. 'Synonyma Plantarum,' 8vo. Francof. 1608.

GUILD, William (Biog.) a Scotch divine, was born at Aberdeen in 1586, and died in 1657, after having been deprived of his clerical office on account of his loyalty. He wrote, among other things, 1. 'Moses Unveiled,' 1617. 2. 'Harmony of the Prophets,' published at the beginning of the reign of Charles I, and afterwards printed with his 'Moses Unveiled,' in an edition dated Edinburgh, 1684. 3. 'Ignis Fatuus,' 1625, against the doctrine of purgatory. 4. 'Popish glorying in Antiquity turned to their Shame,' 1626. 5. 'A Compend of the Controversies of Religion,' Aberdeen. 6. 'A Friendly and Faithful Advice to the Nobility, Gentry and others,' written about 1638, on the abolition of episcopacy in Scotland, besides some Theological works.

GUILDFORD, Sir Francis North, Lord (Hist.) second son of Dudley, fourth lord North, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, being bred to the law, distinguished himself so much by his learning and knowledge, that Charles II conferred the honour of knighthood on him in 1671, and appointed him Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in 1674. He was chosen one of his Majesty's Privy Council in 1679, advanced to the dignity of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal in 1682, and died in 1685, full of honours. His Life was written by his brother, Roger North.

GUILFORD, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of North, of which mention is made above under History, and also under the head of North. [Vide North] The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. North, earl of Guilford, lord North and Guilford.

Arms. Azure, a lion passant or, between three fleurs-de-lis argent.

'Apologie pour les Chirurgiens,' 1593. 3. 'Œuvres de Chirurgie,' Paris, in 1598, and 1612; Rouen, 1649; some of these were published separately, as his 'Tables Anatomiques;' 'Histoire de tous les Muscles du Corps Humain,' &c.; 'Traité de la Generation de l'Homme;' 'L'Heureux Accouchement des Femmes,' &c.

GUILLET, de St. George, Guy (Biog.) first historiographer to the academy of painting and sculpture, was born at Thiers, in Auvergne, and died in 1705, aged 80, leaving, 1. 'Athène Ancienne et Nouvelle,' 12mo. 1675. 2. 'Lacedémone Ancienne et Nouvelle,' 1676. 3. 'Histoire des Grand Visirs Mahomet Coprogli Bacha et Achmet Coprogli Bacha,' &c. 12mo. 1676. 4. 'La Vie de Mahomet II,' 12mo. 1681. 5. 'L'Histoire de Castruccio Castracani,' &c. 12mo. 1671, besides some controversial pieces produced by his works 'Athène,' and 'Lacedémone.'

GUILLIM, John (Biog.) an heraldic writer, and native of Herefordshire, was born in 1565, and died in 1621, leaving his 'Display of Heraldry,' first published in folio, 1610; to the fifth edition, which came out in 1679, was added, by captain John Loggan, 'A Treatise of Honour, Civil and Military;' the last edition, in 1724, was considerably improved and enlarged.

GUILLOTIN (Biog.) a French physician, who was born at Saintes in 1738, was the inventor of the machine so well known by that name. It has been reported that he himself perished by his own invention; but, according to other accounts, he died a natural death, and of grief, at the monstrous abuse of what he intended for a more humane punishment.

GUINEFORTE (Biog.) vide Gasparino.

GUINTIER (Biog.) or Guinther, John, a French anatomist, was born at Andernach, in the diocese of Cologne, leaving some translations from Galen, and other authors, as also some treatises; 'De Medicina Veteri et Nova;' 'De Balneis;' 'De Peste,' &c.

GUIRAN, Galliard (Biog.) a French antiquary, was born at Nismes in 1600, and died in 1680, leaving, 1. 'Explicatio duorum Vetustorum Numismatum Nemausensium ex Ære,' 4to. 1655; twice reprinted, and inserted in Sallingre's 'Thesaurus.' 2. 'Recherches Historiques et Chonologiques concernant l'Etablissement et la Suite de Senechaux de Beaucaire et de Nismes,' 4to. 1660; besides three folio volumes in MS. of the Antiquities of Nismes, which are said to be now in the Imperial Library at Vienna.

GUISCARD (Hist.) the name of a very ancient family, which held the lordships of Coste and Bourlie, in Querci, as early as the 13th century.

GUISCARD, Robert de, a knight of Constance, and probably of the above-mentioned family, having assisted at the conquest of Naples and Sicily from the Saracens, obtained the dukedom of Apulia and Calabria. He afterwards took the pope Gregory VII prisoner, who died in confinement under his care, and, after the marriage of his daughter with Constantine, son of Michael Ducas, he died at Corfu in 1085. Curopalat. Hist.; Leo. Ost. l. 2; Sigon. de Reg. Ital.; Baron. Annal. &c.

GUISCARD, George de, a descendant of the above-mentioned family, and a French officer in the service of Louis XIII, who, after having signalised his valour on many occasions, and enjoyed the confidence of his sovereign, died at the age of 80, in 1673.

GUISCARD, Louis de, son of the preceding, who was born in 1651, and rose by his merit to the rank of marechal de camp, was in 1698 sent on an embassy to Sweden, and died in 1720.

GUISCARD, Anthony de, a French officer, otherwise called Marquis de Guiscard, probably of the same family as the preceding, who was obliged to fly from France on account of his enormities, was employed by the English ministry in the reign of queen Anne, and afterwards pensioned, but being suspected of holding a secret correspondence with his own court, he was arrested and brought before the Privy Council for examination, when he stabbed Mr. Harley, the Secretary of State, but died soon after, of the wounds he received in the scuffle, in 1710.

GUISCHARD, Charles Gottlieb (Biog.) a writer on military tactics, called Quintus Icilius, was born at Magdeburgh, and died in 1775, leaving, 1. 'Memoires Militaires sur les Grecs et les Romains,' 2 vols. 4to. 1757, which went through five editions in France and Holland. 2. 'Memoires Critiques et Historiques sur plusieurs Points d'Antiquité,' 4 vols. 8vo.

GUISE, Claude de Lorraine, Duke of (Hist.) fifth son of Rene II, of Lorraine, was born in 1496; distinguished himself by his valour at the battle of Marignan in 1515, where he received upwards of 20 wounds; had the county of Guise erected into a duchy in his favour in 1527; and died in 1550.

GUISE, Francis, Duke of, son of the preceding, who was the founder and leader of the faction known by the name of the League, which was set up professedly in favour of the Romish religion, died by a pistol-shot from the hand of a protestant gentleman of Poltrop de Meré, in 1563, at the age of 44. [Vide Plate VIII]

GUISE, Henry, Duke of, eldest son of Francis, was born in 1550, succeeded his father as the leader of the Catholic faction; and, after having conducted the massacre of the Huguenots on St. Bartholomew's Day, he carried his ambition so far as to overawe the king, Henry III, so as to prevent for a time his appearance at Paris; but the latter having escaped from his controul, caused his assassination in 1588. [Vide Plate VIII]

GUISE, Louis, Cardinal de, brother of the preceding, and archbishop of Rheims, was born in 1555, and having acted a more violent part than his brother in support of the league, he shared his fate, and after being imprisoned was put to death next day.

GUISE, Charles, Duke of, son of Henry, was imprisoned after the death of his father; but, escaping from the Castle of Tours in 1592, his partizans received him with open arms. He, however, had the good sense to be reconciled to the king, in whose favour he might have remained, if fresh jealousies had not been produced by Richelieu, in consequence of which he fled to Italy, and died at Cuma, at the age of 69, in 1640.

GUISE, Lewis, Cardinal de, third son of Henry, and brother of the preceding, signalized himself as a soldier in the service of Louis XIII, and died in 1621.

GUISE, Henry, Duke of, son of Charles, and grandson of the first Henry, a marshal of France, was born in 1614, and died in 1664, after having been compelled to leave France on account of his intrigues. During his exile he was placed at the head of the insurgents, and flattered himself with obtaining the crown of Naples, when he was taken prisoner by the Spaniards, and not liberated until after four years' captivity. He left 'Memoires' of his Neapolitan enterprise, published in 4to.

GUISE (Her.) the name of a family of Higham, co. Gloucester, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, revived in 1783 in the person of sir John Guise; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

GUSTAVUS (Hist.) the name of some kings of Sweden.

GUSTAVUS I, commonly known by the name of Gustavus Vasa, the son of Eric, was born in 1490; crowned in 1520, after having been kept a prisoner by the conqueror, Christian II, king of Denmark, whom he finally expelled the kingdom; and died in 1560, after a glorious reign. [Vide Plate V] He was succeeded by his son Eric.

GUSTAVUS, Adolphus, surnamed the Great, son of Charles IX, was born in 1594, succeeded his father in 1611, and was assassinated by one of his generals in 1632, after having rendered his name celebrated in Germany by the support which he gave to his protestant allies. [Vide Plate V] He was succeeded by his only child, the celebrated Christina.

GUSTAVUS III, son of Frederic Adolphus, was born in 1746, succeeded in 1771, and was assassinated in 1792, by the discharge of a pistol at a masked ball, by one Ankerstroem, a disbanded officer, who, with some other nobles, discontented with the revolution which Gustavus effected in 1772, conspired against him. He wrote some dramatic pieces, and academical discourses, &c.

GUTHRIE, William (Biog.) a Scotch minister, descended from the ancient family of Pitforthy, in the shire of Angus, was born in 1620, ejected from his church at Fenwick in 1664, and died in 1665, leaving as his only genuine work his 'Christian's Great Interest,' which has long been a standard book in Scotland, and has been translated into Dutch and French.

GUTHRIE, William, a miscellaneous writer, and compiler, was born in 1708 at Brechin, in the county of Angus, of the ancient family of the Guthries of Hankerton, in that county, and died in 1770, leaving his well-known 'Geographical Grammar;' 'A History of Scotland,' in 10 vols. 8vo.; 'History of the World,' 12 vols. 8vo.; 'A History of England;' and 'A History of the English Peerage,' &c.

GUTTENBERG (Biog.) or Gutenberg, John, the reputed inventor of the art of printing, was born at Mentz, of noble and wealthy parents in 1400; made his first essay at the art of printing with metal types, as is supposed, in 1439; and executed, with the assistance of Fust, in 1455, the celebrated Bible of 637 leaves, the first important specimen of printing with metal types; and died about 1467.

GUY, Lusignan (Hist.) a celebrated French warrior in the crusades, having espoused Sibylla, daughter of Amauri, king of Jerusalem, succeeded him in that kingdom, which he however resigned afterwards to Richard I, of England, and, assuming the title of king of Cyprus, died in 1194.

GUY, Thomas, founder of Guy's Hospital, and the son of Thomas Guy, a coal-dealer, in Horselydown, was put apprentice to a bookseller in 1660, and after amassing a large fortune, which he disposed in charitable purposes, he died in 1724, in the 81st year of his age.

GYGES (Myth.) Γύγης, a son of Cœlus and Terra, said to have had fifty heads and a hundred hands. He was engaged with his brother giants in the war against the gods, for which they were driven down into Tartarus. Hesiod. Theog. v. 148; Apollod. l. 1; Horat. l. 2, od. 14; Ovid. Trist. l. 4, el. 7.

GYGES (Hist.) a Lydian, to whom Candaules, the king, showed his wife naked; the queen, incensed at the affront, ordered Gyges to prepare for death, or to murder her husband. He chose the latter alternative, married the queen, and, ascending the throne A. C. 718, reigned 38 years, during which period he made immense presents to the Oracle of Delphi. Plato gives a different narrative of the circumstances by which he ascended the throne. Herod. l. 1; Plat. de Dial. 10; Cic. de Offic. l. 3; Val. Max. l. 7; Justin. l. 1; Plin. l. 7; Plut. Quæst. Græc. 4; Tzetz. Chil. &c.

GYLIPPUS (Hist.) Γύλιππος, a Lacedæmonian, was sent by his countrymen in the 91st Olympiad, A. C. 416, to the assistance of the Syracusans, when he obtained a signal victory over Demosthenes and Nicias, and compelled them to surrender. He afterwards accompanied Lysander in his expedition against Athens, and when entrusted with the plunder of that city, to carry it to Sparta, he unsewed the bags which contained the talents, and secreted 300 for himself. The theft being afterwards detected he fled to escape the punishment due to his offence. Thucyd. l. 6, &c.; Plut. in Nic.; Tibull. l. 4, el. 1.

GYLLENBORG, Charles, Count (Hist.) a Swedish statesman, descended from an ancient family, one of the members of which was created a count in the reign of Charles XI, was sent on an embassy to London, where he plotted the invasion of Scotland with baron Guertz, the Swedish Envoy at the Hague, and baron Sparre, at Paris, but their correspondence being detected, he was first imprisoned; and afterwards being conveyed to a sea-port he was dismissed the kingdom in 1717. In 1719 he was raised to the dignity of High Chancellor of Sweden; in 1739 was made President of the Chancery, &c.; and died in 1746, leaving a high character for political talent and a love of learning. He bequeathed his valuable cabinet of natural history to the University of Upsal, of which he was a chancellor, and translated Sherlock's 'Discourse on Death,' into the Swedish language. Linnæus has described a number of amphibious productions and corals under the title of 'Amphibia Gyllenborgiana.'

HAAK, Theodore (Biog.) a native of Worms, in the Palatinate, was born in 1605, came to Oxford in 1625, and died in 1690, after having had a great share in the establishment of the Royal Society, of which he was one of its first fellows. He published in 1657, in 2 vols. fol. what is called the Dutch Annotations upon the whole Bible; which is a translation of the Dutch Bible, ordered by the synod of Dort, and first published in 1637.

HAARLEM (Geog.) Haerlem, or Harlem, in the Latin of the middle ages Harlemum, a large city of the Netherlands, situated on the river Spaaren, about three miles from the sea, 11 m. W. Amsterdam. Lon. 4° 38′ E. lat. 52° N.

History of Haarlem.

This town is supposed to have been founded in the ninth century by the Normans, and its inhabitants early distinguished themselves in the wars of those times, particularly in the thirteenth century. It was almost entirely burnt down in 1347, sustained in 1573 an eight months' siege from the Spaniards, when it was taken and treated with severity. Paul IV founded a bishopric there in 1559, which was first governed by Nicholas Niculant. He was succeeded by Geoffry Mierloo, who, in 1572, was driven from the city in the breaking out of the reformation.

HABBAKKUK (Bibl.) הבקוק, one of the 12 minor prophets, whose tribe and birth-place are unknown. His genuine prophecies are contained in three chapters, but several other prophecies are ascribed to him, which are not received as canonical. He is supposed to have prophesied about 600 years before the birth of our Saviour.

HABERKORN, Peter (Biog.) a Lutheran minister, was born in 1601 at Bulzback, in Wetteraw, and died in 1676, leaving among his works, 1. 'Heptas Disputationum Anti-Wallenburgikarum.' 2. 'Vindicatio Lutheranæ Fidei contra H. Ulricum Hunnium,' 4to. 3. 'Syntagma Dissertationum Theologicarum,' 2 vols. 8vo. 1650, and 1652. 4. 'Anti-Valerianus,' 4to. 1652. 5. 'Relatio Actorum Colloquii Rheinfelsani,' &c.

HABERT, Isaac (Ecc.) a doctor of the Sorbonne, who was made bishop of Vabres in 1645, and died in 1668, distinguished himself by his preaching, and also by several works on Grace.

Habert, Germain (Biog.) a French poet, who died in 1655, left several poems, among which that entitled 'Metamorphose des Yeux d'Iris changés en Astres,' 8vo. 1639, is particularly admired. He likewise wrote the Life or Panegyric of Cardinal de Berulle, 4to. 1646; and a Paraphrase on the Psalms.

Habert, Philip, brother of the preceding, and a commissioner of artillery, who was accidentally killed at the siege of Emmerick in 1637, at the age of 32, was the author of a poem in Barbier's Collection, entitled, 'Le Temple de la Mort.'

Habert, Susannah, aunt of bishop Habert above-mentioned, was reckoned a prodigy in her day, being acquainted with Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, philosophy, and divinity. She died in 1633 in a convent, leaving several works in MS. in the hands of her nephew.

Habert, Lewis, a doctor of the Sorbonne, was born at Blois in 1636, and died in 1718, leaving a Complete System of Divinity, in 7 vols. 12mo., besides 'La Pratique de la Pénitence;' best known by the title of 'Pratique de Verdun,' of which there have been many editions.

HABINGTON, Thomas (Hist.) a gentleman of a respectable family in Worcestershire, was born at Thorpe, in Surrey, in 1560, and died in 1647. He first involved himself with the party who laboured to release Mary, queen of Scots, for which he suffered imprisonment; and afterwards he fell under the displeasure of government for concealing in his house some of those who had been concerned in the gunpowder plot, for which he was condemned to die, but obtained his pardon through the intercession of his brother-in-law, lord Morley, who discovered the plot by the famous letter of warning which Mrs. Habington is reported to have written. The condition of his pardon was, that he should never stir out of Worcestershire.

Habington, William (Biog.) eldest son of Thomas Habington above-mentioned, and a poet, was born at Hindlip in 1605, educated at the Jesuits' College at St. Omer's, and died in 1645, leaving 1. 'Castara,' 1635, a volume of poems, so called from the name which he gave to his mistress, Lucy, daughter of William Herbert, first lord Powis, whom he afterwards married. Another edition was published in 1640, of which an analysis is given in the 'Censura Literaria.' 2. 'The Queen of Arragon,' a tragi-comedy, acted at court and at Blackfriars, and printed in 1640; it has since been reprinted in Dodsley's Old Plays. 3. 'History of Edward IV,' fol. 1640. 4. 'Observations upon History,' 8vo. Lond. 1641; consisting of some particular pieces of history in the reigns of Henry II, Richard I, &c. interspersed with political and moral reflections, which two last works he wrote, as is said, at the request of Charles I. Habington's poems were introduced into Chalmers's edition of the English poets, and have since been printed separately.

HABIS (Hist.) an illegitimate son of the daughter of Gargares, king of the Curetes, in Spain, who was exposed in the woods by his grandfather, and afterwards thrown into the sea, but having, as is said, escaped both perils, he was at length adopted as his successor, and distinguished himself by his virtues as a king. Justin. l. 44.

HABSBURG (Geog.) the name of two ancient castles of Switzerland, one in the canton of Bern, and the other near the lake of Lucerne; the first of these, which was the most considerable, gave its name to the illustrious house of Habsburg, or Hapsburg, of which was Rudolphus I, emperor of Germany.

HACHALIAH (Bibl.) חכליה, father of Nehemiah.

HACHETTE, Jane (Hist.) a heroine of Beauvais, in Picardy, headed a body of women in an assault against the Burgundians, who were besieging her native place in 1472. This event was formerly commemorated by an annual procession in the Beauvais, in which the women headed the men.

HACHMONI (Bibl.) חכמוני, father of Jashobeam. 2 Sam. xxiii. 8; 1 Chron. xi. 11.

HACKAERT, John (Biog.) a Dutch painter of Amsterdam in the 17th century, who excelled in landscape painting.

HACKET, William (Hist.) a fanatic, who, from a gentleman's servant, became the husband of a rich widow; and, after being reduced to penury by his extravagance, became successively a highwayman, and a religious impostor; and on his attempting to raise the people in favour of his blasphemies, he was taken up, tried, and executed in 1502.

HACKET, John (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in London in 1592, educated at Westminster, and thence elected to Trinity College, Cambridge. During the rebellion, he suffered, in common with other loyal clergymen, by the loss of his rectory of St. Andrews, but recovered all his preferments at the Restoration, which were followed by his promotion to the sees of Lichfield and Coventry in 1661. He died at Lichfield in 1670, after having repaired the cathedral there at the expense of 20,000*l.* mostly his own benefaction, besides other acts of munificence during his life, and by his will. He published only a Latin comedy, entitled 'Loyola,' which was twice acted before James I, and printed in 1648; besides a sermon preached before the king in 1660; after his death, however, appeared 'A Century of Sermons upon several remarkable Subjects,' fol. 1675, with his Life by Dr. Thomas Plume; and in 1693 appeared his 'Life of Archbishop Williams,' fol. published by Ambrose Philips.

HACKSPAN, Theodore, or Thierri (Biog.) a Lutheran, and an oriental scholar, was born in 1607, and died in 1659, leaving, among his works, 1. 'Tractatus de Usu Librorum Rabbinicorum,' 4to. 1644. 2. 'Lucubrationes Franktallenses, sive Specimen aliquod Interpretationum et Expositionum quas plurimas in Difficillima quæque utriusque Testamenti Loca meditatus est B. C. Bertramus,' 8vo. Altdorf. 1645, reprinted in Crenius' 'Thesaurus.' 3. 'Sylloge Disputationum Theologicarum et Philologicarum,' 4to. Altdorf. 1663. 4. 'Fides et Leges Mohammedis ex Alcorano,' 4to. ibid. 1646. 5. HADDINGTON, Sir John Ramsay, Viscount of (Hist.) brother of George, first lord Ramsay, of Dalhousie, had the honour of being principally instrumental in preserving king James V from the treasonable attempt of earl Gowrie, and his brother, Alexander Ruthven, in 1600, when the voice of the king, crying "Treason, murder,' was heard at the window of Gowrie's house. Sir John Ramsay, who succeeded in entering the room by a back staircase, and found Ruthven struggling with the king, drew his dagger, plunged it twice into his body, and threw him down stairs, where, being met by sir Thomas Erskine and Hugh Herries, he was dispatched. The earl of Gowrie attempted to make a resistance, supported by seven of his attendants, all armed; but sir John Ramsay piercing him through the heart, he fell dead at their feet. The king retained a grateful remembrance of this signal service, which he rewarded, not only by conferring dignities upon him, but also by retaining him in his favour until his death in 1625.

HADDINGTON, Thomas, Earl of, eldest son of Thomas Hamilton, of Priestfield, was born in 1563; and, having applied to the study of the law, was appointed a Lord of Session in 1592, Lord President of the Court of Session in 1616, Keeper of the Privy Seal in 1626, and died in 1637, leaving the highest character for acumen in legal decisions.

HADDINGTON, Thomas, second Earl of, one of the covenanters, and a colonel of one of their regiments, perished, with a number of others, from the blowing up of a powder magazine at Dunglas-castle; whether from accident or design is doubtful.

HADDINGTON, Countess of, wife of the third earl of Haddington, daughter of Gaspard, Comte de Coligny, and great grand-daughter of Admiral Coligny, who was famous for her beauty, her wit, and her adventures, was re-married, after the death of the earl of Haddington, to Gaspard de Champagne, comte de la Suze, a Huguenot nobleman, from whom she was separated in 1653, and died a catholic in 1673.

Verus, Commodus, Crispina, Aurelius, Verus Cæsar, Pescennius, Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, Plautilla, Geta, Gordianus Pius, and Tranquillina, bearing the inscriptions—ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟΠΟΛΙΤΩΝ, with the name of their magistrates, who were styled præses, or presidents; as ΗΓΕμόνι ΤΙ. ΟΥΙΣΚΟΥ ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟΠΟΛΙτῶν; i. e. Præside Ti. Vopisco Hadrianopolitarum. ΗΓΕ. ΙΟΥΛίῳ ΑΚΑΣΤΟΥ, &c.; Præside Julio Aoasti, &c. ΗΓ. ΣΟΥΛ. ΜΑΡΚΙΑΝΟΥ, &c.; i. e. Præside Sulpitio Marciano, &c. Their types were commonly a figure of Bacchus, Diana, Apollo, Victory. Vaill. Num. Græc.; Tristan. Hist. Com. t. ii.; Harduin. Oper.; Mus. Pemb. &c.

HADRIANOTHERÆ (Geog.) a town of Mysia built by the emperor Adrian, who gave it the name of Ἀδριάνη θῆραι, Hadriani Theræ, because he there indulged himself in the chase. Dio. l. 69; Spartian. in Vit.

HADRIANOTHERÆ (Numis.) this town struck medals in honour of Adrian, Antinous, Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, and Philip, sen. A medal of Adrian bears, on the obverse, his effigy, and on the reverse, the head of a bear in commemoration of his having killed a bear there; the inscription ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟΘΗΡΙΤΩΝ; also entitled sometimes a metropolis, as ΑΔΡΙΑΝ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΛΙC.; sometimes with the name of their magistrates, who were either archons, as ΕΠΙ ΑΡ. ΠΑΝΚΡΑΤΙΟΥ ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟΘΗΡΕΩΝ; or prætors, as ΕΠΙ CΤΡ. ΝΑΡΑΤΙΟΥ ΔΙΟΓΕΝΟΥC, &c.; i. e. Sub Prætore Naratio Diogene, &c. Vaill. Num. Gr.; Harduin. Oper.; Med. Imp. Numis.

HADRIANUS, P. Ælius (Hist.) or Adrian, a Spaniard by extraction, son of Ælius Hadrianus and Domitia Paulina, was born at Rome, or, according to some, in the town of Italica, A. D. 76; and, being adopted by Trajan, mounted the throne in 117, and died at Baiæ, in Campania, U. C. 891, A. D. 138. [Vide Hadrianus under Numismatics] Dio. l. 69; Spartian. in Vit.; Eutropius, Aurelius Victor.

HADRIANUS (Numis.) this emperor, whose effigy is given as in Plate I, is designated on his coins or medals after the year 117, P. M. TR. P. COS.; and from the years 119 to 138, TR. P. II to XXI, COS. III, P. P. IMP. II. After the year 119, COS. III, he did not enter upon the consulship. Some of his medals are inscribed simply HADRIANUS AUGUSTUS; but for the most part with the addition of Trajani Filius, or Trajanus Optimus, Nervæ Nepos; as IMP. TRA. HADRIAN. AUG.—IMP. CAES. DIVI TRAJAN. AUG. F. TRAJAN.—HADRIAN. OPT. AUG. GER.—IMP. CAES. DIVI TRAJ. PARTH. F. DIVI NERVAE NEP. TRAJANO HADRIANO AUG.—IMP. CAES. TRAJAN. HADRIANO P. F. AUG. GER. DAC. PARTHICO DIVI TRAJANI AUG. T. P. M. &c.; and in the Greek, ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟC CΕΒΑCΤΟC ΥΠΑΤΟC Γ. ΠΑΤΗΡ ΠΑΤΡ.—ΚΑΙCΑΡ ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟC.—ΑΥ. Κ. ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟC—ΑΥΤ. Κ. ΝΕΡ. ΥΙΟC ΤΡΑΙΑΝΟΥ. He was sometimes designated in Greek ΗΡΑΚΛΗC ΡΩΜΑΙΟC, i. e. Hercules Romanus; or ΤΩ. ΗΡΑΚΛΕΙ CΩΤΗΡΙ ΑΥΤ. i. e. Herculi Servatori, on account of his travelling over his dominions, and redressing grievances after the manner of Hercules. The Greeks also having placed his statue in the temple of Jupiter Olympius give him, on many occasions, the epithet of Olympius; as ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΩΡ ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟC ΟΛΥΜΠΙΟC ΛΕΥΚΙΟC ΑΙΛΙΟC. He testified his piety to his adopted father, Trajan, by the inscriptions DIVIS PARENTIBUS; DIVO TRAJANO PATRI; DIVI TRAJANI AUG. PARTH. PATER, coupled with the heads of Trajan, or Trajan and Plotina. His journies through the empire are commemorated by the inscriptions PROFECTIO AUG. or ADVENTUS AUG. together with the names of the places; as ACHAIAE—AFRICAE—ALEXANDRIAE—ARABIAE—ASIAE—BITHYNIAE—BRITANNIAE—CAPPADOCIAE—CILICIAE—DALMATIAE—EUBOEAE—GALLIAE—HISPANIAE—ITALIAE—JUDAEAE—LIBYAE—LYCIAE—MACEDONIAE—MAURETANIAE—MOESIAE—PAMPHYLIAE—PHRYGIAE—SICILIAE—SYRIAE—THRACIAE. His benefits conferred on the different places where he went are also remembered by the inscriptions RESTITUTORI ACHAIAE—AFRICAE—ARABIAE, &c.; also RESTITUTORI ORBIS TERRARUM. The inscriptions on the reverse are as follow:—ADLOCUTIO—ADLOCUTIO BRITANNICA—ADOPTIO—AEQUITAS—AEQ. AUG. &c.—ANNONA AUG.—CLEMENTIA AUG. &c.—CONCORD.—CONCORDIA DAC. PARTHIC. P. M. &c.—CONJUGIUM AUG.—CONSECRATIO—DISCIPLINA AUG.—EXPED. AUG.—FELICIA TEMPORA.—FORT. HAEN, Anthony de (Biog.) a physician, was born at Leyden in 1704, and died in 1776, leaving a number of treatises published in the work entitled 'Ratio Medendi in Nosocomio Practico,' published at Vienna in 1758. He also wrote 'De Magia,' &c.

HAGAR (Bibl.) הגר, an Egyptian handmaid to Sarah, who gave her to Abraham for a wife, that he might have children by her. Hagar was the mother of Ishmael, by Abraham. Gen. xvi. &c.

HAGARENES (Bibl.) or Agarenes, the descendants of Ishmael, who were otherwise called Ishmaelites, or Saracens. Baruch iii. 23. They dwelt, according to Pliny, in Arabia Felix. Strab. l. 17; Plin. l. 6; Dio. l. 68.

HAGEDORN, Frederic (Biog.) a German poet, was born at Hamburgh in 1708, and died in 1754, leaving among his works 'The Poet,' 'The Philosopher,' 'Happiness,' &c. The second edition of his 'Moral Poems' appeared in 1752, and in 1754 an enlarged edition was published, since which they have been so often reprinted, as to place him among the standard poets of his country.

HAGGAI (Bibl.) חגי, the tenth of the minor prophets, who is supposed to have been born at Babylon, and accompanying Zerubbabel on his return, he exhorted him to resume the work of God, which had been so long interrupted. His exhortations were regarded, and the work was resumed in the 16th year of Darius, A.M. 3484, A.C. 520. Hag. i. &c. Nothing is known respecting the death of Haggai.

HAGGERSTON (Her.) the name of a family of great antiquity in Scotland, which enjoys the dignity and title of baronet, conferred in 1643 on sir Thomas Haggerston, colonel of a regiment in the service of Charles I; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Azure, on a bend cottized argent; three billets sable.

Crest. A lion rampant argent.

HAILLAN, Bernard de Girard, Sieur de (Biog.) a French historian of an ancient family, was born at Bourdeaux about 1535, and died in 1610, leaving 'Histoire de France depuis Pharamond jusqu'à la Mort de Charles IX,' 1576; besides some Poems, and another Historical Piece on the State and Success of the Affairs of France, published in 1594; the best editions of which are those of Paris, in 8vo. 1609, and 1613.

HAKEM (Hist.) vide Al-Hakem.

Hakem, Bramrillah, third caliph of the Fatemite dynasty of Egypt, began to reign in the year of the Hegira 386, A. D. 996, but becoming mad, and wishing to abolish the religious rites of the Mahometans, he was assassinated by his subjects in the 411th year of the Hegira.

Hakem, Ben Hesham, third caliph of the Ommiades, in Spain, commenced his reign in the year of the Hegira 180, A. D. 796, and died in the 27th year of his reign.

Hakem II, succeeded his father Abdalrahman III on the throne of Spain, in the year of the Hegira 350, A. D. 960, and died after a peaceful reign of 16 years.

HAKEWELL, George (Biog.) an English divine, was born at Exeter in 1579, educated at Oxford, and died in 1649, leaving several Theological works, mentioned by Wood, of which the one most known, is 'An Apology or Declaration of the Power and Providence of God in the Government of the World,' proving that it doth not decay, &c. in 4 books, 1627; to which were added two more in the third edition, in folio, 1635.

Hakewell, William, brother to the preceding, who was a puritan, and a vehement abettor of rebellion, wrote among other things in his way 'The Liberty of the Subject against the pretended Power of Impositions,' &c. 4to. 1641.

HAKLUYT, Richard (Biog.) a naval historian, descended from an ancient family at Eyton, or Yetton, in Herefordshire, was born about 1553, educated at Westminster and Oxford, and died in 1616, leaving, 1. A small 'Collection of Voyages and Discoveries,' 1582. 2. 'The notable History of Florida,' translated from a French MS. which he caused to be published in the original at Paris, in 1586, and the English translation in 1587. 3. A translation of Peter Martyr's book 'De Orbe Novo,' 1587. 4. 'Collections of Voyages and Travels,' &c. fol. 1589. 5. A translation of 'Leo's Geographical History of Africa,' fol. 1600. 6. A translation of a Work written in the Portugueso, by Antonio Galvano, 4to. 1601, besides the share which he had in the translation and publication of Peter Martyr's 'History of the West Indies.' His collection of Travels has been since reprinted with some additions, in 5 vols. 4to.

HALDE, John Baptist Du (Biog.) vide Du-Halde.

HALE, Sir Matthew (Hist.) a lawyer of some distinction, was born at Alderley, in Gloucestershire, in 1609, admitted of Magdalen-hall, Oxford, in 1626, and of Lincoln's-inn in 1629. He was called to the bar just before the breaking out of the rebellion, and was one of the counsel to the earl of Strafford, archbishop Laud, and to king Charles himself, as is said; as also to the duke of Hamilton, the earl of Holland, the lord Capel, and lord Craven; thus, though a loyalist in principle, yet by an inconsistency not unfrequent in those troublesome times, he afterwards condescended to act under the commands of a usurper, and to preside in a court set up by a faction. We are informed, however, that he had some scruples of acting on the crown side under Oliver Cromwell, but he continued to sit in the Court of Common Pleas until the Restoration, when he was made Chief Baron of the Exchequer. In 1671 he was promoted to the office of Chief Justice of England, and died in 1676. He wrote on subjects not connected with his profession, 1. 'An Essay, touching the Gravitation or Non-gravitation of Fluid Bodies, and the Reasons thereof.' 2. 'Difficiles Nugæ, or Observations touching the Torricellian Experiment, and the various Solutions of the same, especially touching the Weight and Elasticity of the Air.' 3. 'Observations touching the Principles of Natural Motion, and especially touching Rarefaction and Condensation. 4. 'Contemplations Moral and Divine.' 5. 'An English Translation of the Life of Pomponius Atticus, written by Corn. Nepos; together with Observations Political and Moral.' 6. 'The Primitive Origination of Mankind, Considered and Explained according to the Light of Nature,' &c. besides some other things published after his death, as, '7. Judgment of the Nature of True Religion, the Causes of its Corruption, and the Church's Calamity by Men's Additions and Violences, with the desired Cure.' 8. Several Tracts, as a 'Discourse of Religion, under three Heads,' &c. 9. 'A Letter to his Children, advising them how to behave in their Speech.' 10. 'A Letter to one of his Sons after his Recovery from the Small Pox.' 11. 'A Discourse of the Knowledge of God and of ourselves, first, by the Light of Nature; secondly by the Sacred Scriptures;' all these under the title of his 'Moral and Religious Works,' were published by the Rev. Thomas Thirlwall, 2 vols. 8vo. 1805, with his Life, by Bishop Burnet, and an Appendix to it. He wrote also many works on Law, of which only one Tract was printed in his life-time, entitled 'London Liberty, or an Argument of Law and Reason,' 1650, and reprinted in 1682, under the title of 'London's Liberties, or the Opinions of those great Lawyers Lord Chief Justice Hale, Mr. Justice Wild, and Sergeant Maynard, about the Election of Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen, and Common Council of London, and concerning their Charter.' In 1668 he wrote a Preface to Rolle's 'Abridgment,' which he published with the whole of that work. After his death, appeared, 1. 'The Pleas of the Crown, or a Methodical Summary,' 8vo. 1678, continued by Jacob, and reprinted in 1716. To this edition is often annexed 'The treatise of Sheriffs' Accounts,' and 'The Trial of Witches,' the latter of which was first published in 1683, and afterwards reprinted with the author's Religious Discourses. The seventh edition of 'Pleas,' was published in 1773, with many additions, new references, and an improved table to the whole, but it was considered by the author only as a plan of his 'Historia Placitorum.' 2. 'A treatise touching Sheriffs' Accounts,' 1683, reprinted in 1716, together with the author's 'Provision for the Poor,' &c. 3. 'Treatise, showing how Useful, &c. the Enrolling and Registering of all Conveyances of Land,' 4to. 1694, reprinted in 1756, with additions. 4. 'Tractatus de Successionibus apud Anglos, or a Treatise of Hereditary Descents,' 8vo. 1700, and 1735, besides inserted as the eleventh chapter of his History of the Common Law. 5. 'A Treatise on the original Institution, &c. of Parliaments,' 1707, republished by Francis Hargrave, Esq. under the title of 'Hale's Jurisdiction of the House of Lords,' with an introductory Preface, including a narrative of the same jurisdiction, from the accession of James I. 5. 'Analysis of the Law,' 8vo. without date. 6. 'History of the Common Law of England in Twelve Chapters,' 8vo. 1713, a fourth edition of which was published by Mr. Sergeant Runnington, in 2 vols. 8vo. 1779, and reprinted in 1794. 7. 'Historia Placitorum Coronæ, or History of the Pleas of the Crown,' 2 vols. fol. 1739, edited by Sollom Emelyn, Esq.; and again by George Wilson, Esq. in 2 vols. 8vo. 1772, and lastly by Thomas Dogherty, Esq. in the same size in 1800, besides 'Jura Coronæ,' a MS. mentioned by Mr. Hargrave, in his Notes to Co. Lit.; also 'Two Arguments' of his, printed in the Reports of Sir Peyton Ventris, published in 1696, 1701, 1716, and 1726; a treatise on the 'Management of the King's Revenue,' printed in 1787, among the Hon. Mr. St. John's 'Observations on the Land Revenue of the Crown,' 4to.; 'De Jure Maris,' &c. and some other pieces inserted in Mr. Hargrave's collection of Law Tracts, 4to. 1787; and lastly, sundry notes on Co. Lit. quoted by Lord Chief Baron Gilbert. In Lincoln's Inn library is a collection of MSS. which Sir Matthew Hale bequeathed to that Honourable Society, with special instructions for their preservation. [Vide Plate XVII]

HALES, Sir Robert (Hist.) of the first family mentioned under Heraldry, Knight-prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, and Admiral of the North Parts of England in the reign of Edward III, was constituted Treasurer of England in 1381, and murdered in the same year by the insurgents under Wat Tyler.

HALES, Sir James, of the same family, and son of John Hales, a Baron of the Exchequer, was one of the Justices of the Common Pleas in the reign of Henry VIII, and the only judge that refused to sign the will of Henry VIII for disinheriting the princesses Mary and Elizabeth.

HALES, Sir Edward, Bart. a descendant of the preceding, risked his person and his property in defence of king Charles I, and died in France some years after the restoration.

HALES, Sir Edward, his son and heir, was in great favour with James II, by whom he was made one of his Privy Council, a Lord of the Admiralty, Deputy Governor of the Cinque Ports, and Lieutenant Governor of the Tower of London. He was sued for the penalty of 500l. for neglecting to take the oaths of supremacy and allegiance, and was convicted at Rochester assizes for the same; but, moving his cause into the King's Bench, he pleaded the king's dispensing power, and had judgment given for him, eleven of the judges being of opinion that the king might dispense in that case. At the revolution he was confined for a year and a half in the Tower, and on his release he went to France, where, in consideration of his services, he was created earl of Tenterden, in Kent, by king James, and died in 1695.

HALES, Edward, eldest son of the preceding, was killed at the battle of the Boyne, fighting on the side of king James.

HALES (Her.) the name of a family in Kent, two branches of which enjoy the dignity and title of a baronet; of the elder branch was sir Edward Hales, of Wood-church, whose family is mentioned under History, who was created in 1611. Of the younger branch was sir Thomas Hales, of Beakbourne, who was created in 1660. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Gules, three broad arrows or, headed and feathered argent.

Crest. A dexter arm, bended at the elbow, and armed proper, bound about with a ribbon gules, holding an arrow, as in the arms.

Motto. "Vis unita fortior."

HALES, Alexander (Biog.) a scholastic divine, supposed to be a native of Gloucestershire, who died in 1245, wrote a 'Commentary on the four Books of Sentences,' or 'Sum of Divinity,' Nuremberg, 1482, and often reprinted; but a commentary printed at Lyons in 1515, with his name to it, is said not to be his; and according to Du Pin 'The Sum of Virtues,' Paris, 1509, and the 'Destructorium Vitiorum,' Noremberg. 1496, and Venet. 1582, are improperly attributed to him.

HALES, or Hayles, John, son of Thomas Hales, of Hales'-Place, at Halden, in Kent, and clerk of the Hanaper for several years, in the reign of Henry VIII, who died in 1572, was the author of, 1. 'Introductiones ad Grammaticam,' which he wrote for a school that he founded at Coventry. 2. 'Highway to Nobility,' 4to. Lond. 3. A translation of Plutarch's 'Precepts for the Preservation of Good Health,' 8vo. Lond. 1543. 4. 'An Oration to Queen Elizabeth, at her first Entrance to her Reign,' which was however not spoken, but delivered to the queen in manuscript. 5. 'A Treatise in favour of the Succession of the House of Suffolk to the Crown on the Demise of Elizabeth,' who was so displeased with it as to commit the author to prison. Some of his MSS. are in the Harleian Collection.

HALES, or Hailes, John, a divine, and critic, whom some were pleased to distinguish by the appellation of the Ever-memorable, was born at Bath in 1584, educated at Oxford, and died in 1656, leaving some works on controversial subjects, which appeared after his death in 3 vols. 12mo. published by lord Hailes in 1765.

HALES, Stephen, a natural philosopher, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born at Beckesbourne in 1677, educated at Cambridge in 1696, and died in 1761, leaving, 1. 'An Essay on Vegetable Physiology,' communicated to the Royal Society in 1717. 2. 'Vegetable Staticks,' 8vo. 1727, reprinted in 1771, and several times since; translated into French, by Buffon, in 1735; into Italian by a Neapolitan lady, named Ardinghelli, in 1756; besides German and Dutch translations.

HALESUS (Myth.) or Halæsus, a son of Agamemnon by Briseis, or Clytemnestra, who is said to have fled, on the murder of his father, from Argos into Italy, and to have assisted Turnus against Æneas. Virg. Æn. l. 7; Ovid. Am. l. 3; Serv. in Virg.

HALFORD (Her.) the name of a family of Penton, in Lincolnshire, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1809 on Henry Vaughan, who took the name of Halford, as also the arms, &c. which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a greyhound passant sable, on a chief azure, three fleurs-de-lis or.

Crest. A greyhound's head couped at the neck sable, collared or.

HALI-BACHA (Hist.) son-in-law of Selim II, and general of the Turkish fleet in 1570, after having laid waste many islands of the republic of Venice, was killed in a naval engagement with the Spaniards, commanded by Don John of Austria.

HALI-BEG (Biog.) a Polander of the 17th century, whose original name was Albert Bobowski, was taken by the Tartars when a child, and sold to the Turks, among whom he died, interpreter to the sultan, in 1675. He composed a Turkish Grammar and Dictionary, and other things which were never printed; but his principal work was 'A Treatise upon the Liturgy of the Turks, their Pilgrimages to Mecca,' &c., which, being transmitted in MS. to Dr. Hyde, was translated by him into Latin, and published in the appendix of the 'Itinera Mundi ab Abrahamo Peritsol,' Oxon. 1691. He likewise translated into the Turkish language the Catechism of the Church of England, and all the Bible; and is supposed to have furnished Ricaut, the consul of Smyrna, with materials for his book, entitled 'The State of the Ottoman Empire.

HALICARNASSUS (Geog.) Ἁλικαρνάσσος, now Bodroun, a maritime city of Caria, in Asia, which gave birth to Dionysius the historian, and Heraclitus the philosopher, &c. It was the residence of the princes of Caria, and rendered celebrated by the mausoleum, one of the seven wonders of the world, which was there erected. Herod. l. 2, c. 178; Liv. l. 27; Diod. l. 17; Mel. l. 1; Vitruv. l. 2; Justin. l. 2; Ptol. l. 5.

HALICARNASSUS (Numis.) some medals or coins are extant which were struck by this town, as an independent state, and also in honour of the emperors or their families, as of Agrippina, the wife of Claudius, of Commodus, Sept. Severus, Caracalla, Geta, Maximinus, and Gordianus Pius; bearing the inscription—ΑΛΙΚΑΡΝΑϹϹЄΩΝ, with the name of their magistrates, who were archons, as ΑΛΙΚΑΡΝΑϹϹЄΩΝ ΑΡΧ. ϹΤΡΑΤΟΚΛΕΟΥϹ, and sometimes with the title of Metropolis, as ΜΗΤΡ. ...... ΑΛΙΚΑΡΝΑϹϹЄΩΝ; sometimes, to denote their alliance with other states, as ΑΛΙΚΑΡΝΑϹϹЄΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΙΩΝΩΝ, i. e. Halicarnassensium et Ionum (concordia), with the addition ΑΡΧ. Τ. ΦΛ. ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟΥ, i. e. Archonte Tito Flavio Demetrio; sometimes, to denote their freedom or exemption from a foreign jurisdiction, as ΑΛΙΚΑΡΝΑϹϹЄΩΝ ΑΥΤΟΝΟΜΩΝ, &c. The ordinary types on their medals are the figures of Pallas, Apollo, Bona Fortuna, Æsculapius, and the like. Vaill. Num. Gr.; Spanh. Dissert. tom. I; Harduin, Oper. &c.

HALIFAX, Sir George Saville, Marquis of (Hist.) a statesman, descended from an ancient family in Yorkshire, was born about 1630, and, after taking an active part in bringing about the restoration, was called to a seat in the Privy Council in 1672, where he formed one of the cabal; went over to Holland the same year with the duke of Buckingham and earl of Arlington as ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to treat about peace with France; was dismissed from all his offices on the accession of James II; and died in 1695; after distinguishing himself in the ranks of opposition to the measures of government. [Vide Plate IX]

HALIFAX, Charles Montagu, Earl of, son of George, younger son of Henry, first earl of Manchester, an English statesman and poet, was born in 1661; educated at Westminster School, and Cambridge; made one of the Commissioners of the Treasury, and called to the Privy Council in 1691; appointed in 1698 one of the Regency in the king's absence; was dismissed from the council on the accession of queen Anne; appointed one of the Regency during her successor's absence from his kingdoms; and died in 1715; when his poems and speeches were published with his life.

HALIFAX, Marquis of (Her.) one of the titles conferred in 1682 on sir George Saville above-mentioned, who in 1668 had been created lord Saville of Eland, and viscount Halifax; and in 1679 earl and marquis of Halifax. At his death, without male issue, the peerage became extinct; but the baronetage devolved on sir George Saville.

Halifax, Earl of, one of the titles conferred on Charles Montague, who in 1698 was raised to the peerage, by the title of lord Halifax; and in 1714 was advanced to the dignities of viscount Sunbury and earl of Halifax. His nephew, George, succeeded him as baron Halifax, and was immediately re-advanced to the earldom of Halifax; but the titles became extinct at the death of his son George, the third earl, in 1771.

HALIRROTHIUS (Myth.) vide Alirrothius.

HALKET, Lady Anne (Biog.) an authoress, the daughter of Mr. Robert Murray, of the Tullibardian family, was born in London in 1622, and died in 1699, leaving 21 volumes, principally on religious subjects, some in folio and others in quarto, from which a volume of 'Meditations' was printed at Edinburgh in 1701.

Hall, Joseph (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in 1574, in Bristow Park, within the parish of Ashby de la Zouch, in Leicestershire, educated at Cambridge, appointed chaplain to prince Henry in 1607, and after different preferments promoted to the see of Exeter in 1627. He was translated to that of Norwich in 1641; but being stripped of his dignities and his revenues by the usurping powers, he retired to a little farm at Heigham, near Norwich, where he spent the last nine years of his life, and died in 1656. [Vide Plate XI] His works, which consist of some poems, letters, and theological pieces, have been published at different periods in folio, quarto, and duodecimo. The last edition, in 10 vols. 8vo. was prepared by the Rev. Josiah Pratt. His 'Meditations' have been the oftenest reprinted.

Hall, George, son of the preceding, was born at Waltham Holy Cross in 1612, and after having shared in the sufferings of his father for the preservation of his integrity, was promoted at the restoration to the see of Chester, and died in 1668, of a wound which was inflicted upon him by a knife in his pocket, as he fell from the mount in his garden at Wigan. He published, besides some sermons, a treatise entitled 'The Triumphs of Rome over despised Protestancy,' Lond. 1655; and was a considerable benefactor to Exeter College.

Hall, Richard (Biog.) a Roman Catholic writer of Christ's College, Cambridge, who died in 1572, was the author of the Life of Bishop Fisher, which goes under the name of Bailey, besides some controversial works.

Hall, or Halle, Edward, an English lawyer and historiographer, who died in 1547, wrote 'The Union of the Houses of York and Lancaster,' fol. Lond. 1548; the Continuation to the End of Henry VIII's Reign he left in MS. which, falling into Grafton's hands, he completed, and printed it in 1550. In 1555 it was prohibited by proclamation; but in 1809 a third edition was published, with the whole of the English Chronicles, in 4to.

Hall, John, an English poet, and scholar, was born at Durham in 1627, removed from Cambridge to Gray's Inn, when he was called to the Bar, and died in 1656, leaving, 1. 'Horæ Vacivæ, or Essayes,' 1646. 2. 'Poems,' by John Hall, Cambridge, &c. 1646; to which was added, in 1647, 'The second Booke of Divine Poems,' by J. H. 3. 'The Height of Eloquences,' being a translation of Longinus. 4. 'Hierocles upon the Golden Verses of Pythagoras;' also a translation from the Greek. Several of his poems are preserved in Nichol's 'Select Collection.'

Hall, Anthony, an editor, who was born in Cumberland in 1679, and died in 1723, published 'Leland de Scriptoribus,' 2 vols. Oxon. 1709, which was incorrectly printed; also 'N. Triveti Annales,' 8vo. 1718; and the 'Continuatio,' of the same, 8vo.; and drew up the account of Berkshire for the 'Magna Britannia.'

Hall, Thomas, a nonconformist, was born at Worcester in 1610, educated at Oxford, and died in 1665, leaving many controversial works suited to his disputatious temper.

HALLE, Peter (Biog.) professor of canon law in the University of Paris, was born at Bayeux, in Normandy, in 1611, and died in 1689, leaving several works on law; besides some Latin poems, published in 8vo. Paris, 1655.

HALLER, Albert de (Biog.) a physician, poet, and philosopher, was born at Berne in 1708, and died in 1777, leaving, 1. Poems, namely, 'On the Alps,' 'Satires,' 'Ethic Epistles,' &c. which passed through 22 successive editions, and were translated into most of the modern languages. 2. 'Letters to his Daughter on the Truth of the Christian Revetion,' which have been translated into English. 3. An extract from Ditton's 'Truth of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ.' 4. 'Letters concerning several late Attempts of Free-Thinkers, yet living, against Revelation;' 1775. 5. 'Commentarii ad Hermanni Boerhaarve Prælectiones Academicas,' 7 vols. 8vo. 1739—1744. 6. 'Enumeratio Methodica Stirpium Helvetiæ Indigenarum,' &c. first published in folio, 1742; but in a more complete form in 3 vols. fol. 1768, under the title of 'Historia Stirpium Helvetiæ Indigenarum.' 7. 'Iconum Anatomicarum quibus præcipuæ Partes Corporis Humani delineatæ,' &c. fol. 1743. 8. 'Lineæ Physiologiæ in usum Prælectionum Academicarum,' 8vo. 1747, which passed through many editions and translations. 9. 'Opuscula Botanica,' 8vo. 1749, containing several botanical papers, &c. 10. HAMBURGH (Geog.) the greatest commercial city in Germany, situated on the Elbe, about 78 m. from its mouth, 39 m. S. S. W. Lubeck, 84 N. Hanover, 65 N. E. Bremen, and 448 E. London. Lon. 10° E. lat. 53° 30′ N.

History of Hamburgh.

Hamburgh, called in the Latin Hamburgum, derived by some from Hammenburg, that is, the burgh or fortress of Hammon, was founded in the reign of Charlemagne; concluded in 1241 a league with Lubeck, which formed the basis of the Hanseatic League; in 1618 it was admitted into the number of imperial towns; and in 1768 it obtained from the king of Denmark, as count of Holstein, an entire renunciation of the claim, which had hitherto been asserted by his predecessors, to a certain tax from the inhabitants, and thus became a free independent city of the German empire. In 1806 it was occupied by the French, and in 1810 was incorporated into the French empire, and declared the capital of the department of the mouths of the Elbe. In consequence of a premature attempt on the part of the inhabitants in 1813 to shake off the yoke, they were exposed to cruel exactions, and other hardships, imposed upon them by Davoust; but the city was finally evacuated in 1814. The Congress of Vienna gave Hamburgh a vote in the German diet, in conjunction with Francfort, Lubeck, and Bremen. Hamburgh was formerly an archbishop's see, erected by Charlemagne, but was transferred to Bremen by S. Ansgarius with the consent of the emperor. It embraced Lutheranism at the reformation.

HAMELMANNE, Herman (Biog.) a Lutheran, was born at Osnaburg in 1525, and died in 1595, leaving among his works, 1. 'Commentaria in Pentateuchum,' fol. Diling. 1563. 2. 'Chronicum Oldenburgicum,' &c. 3. 'Opera genealogico-historica de Westphalia et Saxonia inferiori,' 4to. 1711.

HAMILCAR (Hist.) vide Amilcar.

HAMILTON, Sir James (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was sent into England as one of the hostages for James I of Scotland, when the latter was ransomed; soon after which he was knighted by the king, and died in 1460, after having suppressed the rebellion of the earl of Douglas.

HAMILTON, James, Lord, son of the preceding, entered inadvertently into a league with the earls of Douglas and Ross, &c.; but, finding that his fidelity to his sovereign was likely to be compromised thereby, he separated himself from the faction, which afterwards, by persisting in a course of rebellion, was ruined. He was appointed in 1471 one of the commissioners to treat with lord Howard and others on the part of the king of England, respecting a league and amity between the two nations, and died in 1479, highly esteemed by his sovereign, James III, with whom he was in such favour that he gave him the lady Mary, countess of Arran, his sister, in marriage, from which alliance sprung Henry, lord Darnly, father of king James VI.

HAMILTON, James, second Lord, and first Earl of Arran, son of the preceding, distinguished himself early by his zeal and abilities in the service of James IV, by whom he was called when very young to his Privy Council, and in 1503 was sent to England to conclude the king's marriage with Margaret, eldest daughter to Henry VII. The next year he had the command of the forces sent from Scotland to the assistance of Christian II, of Denmark, and afterwards was entrusted with the command of 4000 men sent into France to Lewis XI, on both which occasions he acquitted himself most handsomely; but after the death of James IV he was involved in a deadly feud with the earl of Angus, and died in 1530, after having withdrawn himself from public concerns.

HAMILTON, James, Earl of Arran, vide Arran.

HAMILTON, John, Marquis of, brother of the third earl of Arran, was born in 1532, adhered faithfully to the interests of queen Mary during the rebellion in 1567, who, at her death, took a ring from her finger, which she ordered to be given to my lord Hamilton in testimony of her regard. On account of his fidelity to the queen he was compelled, by the intrigues of the opposite faction, to make his escape to the Continent in the disguise of a seaman's habit; but on the accession of James VI, when the latter began to manage his own concerns, he was not insensible to the merits of lord Hamilton, whom he restored to his favour, and in 1588 sent as ambassador extraordinary to accomplish the marriage betwixt his majesty and the princess Anne of Denmark. He was afterwards invested with several high offices, and died in great favour with the king in 1604.

HAMILTON, Lord Claude, third brother of the preceding, whose fidelity to the queen, and consequent vicissitudes of fortune, he shared with his brother, received marks of the king's favor, and died at an advanced age in 1621. He is the ancestor of the Abercorn branch of the Hamilton family. [Vide Abercorn and Hamilton under Heraldry]

HAMILTON, James, second Marquis of, and first Earl of Cambridge, inherited the favour which king James bore to his father; and although he died in 1625, at the age of 35, yet he had acted an important part in the state as Lord High Commissioner to the parliament, which began in 1621.

HAMILTON, James, third Marquis, and first Duke of, son of the preceding, distinguished himself at the commencement of the rebellion by his active zeal in behalf of his majesty, Charles I, for which he was beheaded by order of the rebel parliament in 1625. [Vide Plate IX]

HAMILTON, William, second Duke of, and brother of James, the first duke, was no less active in the royal cause, both by his arms and his councils. He was mortally wounded at the battle of Worcester, and died a few weeks after in 1651, in the 35th year of his age.

HAMILTON, William, third Duke of, who had married Ann, duchess of Hamilton, the surviving daughter of the first duke, took an active part in the opposition to the duke of Lauderdale; and, after holding high offices in the state under king James II, and William III, he died in 1694, in the 60th year of his age.

HAMILTON, Lord George, and Earl of Orkney, fifth son of the third duke of Hamilton, distinguished himself at the battles of the Boyne, of Aghrim, Steinkirk, Landen, Oudenarde, Ramilies, and Mons; also at the sieges of Athlone, Limerick, and Namur, and rose to the rank of field-marshal. He was afterwards employed as a statesman in the reigns of William, Anne, and George I, and died in 1737, in his 71st year.

HAMILTON, Lord Archibald, seventh son of the third duke, was born in 1673, and bred to the sea-service, in which, by his valour and activity, he rose to the rank of admiral, was constituted one of the Lords of the Admiralty in 1729, and died in 1754, being then senior captain in the navy.

HAMILTON, James, fourth Duke of, and first Duke of Brandon, was appointed in 1683 his majesty's Envoy Extraordinary to Lewis XIV, to congratulate him on the birth of his grandson Philip, duke of Anjou; was imprisoned on suspicion of holding a correspondence with the exiled king, James II, in whose allegiance he remained steadfast for a long time. Being afterwards reconciled with the existing government he was employed in different posts, and was on the point of setting out as ambassador to France in 1713, when he was killed in a duel with Charles, lord Mohun.

HAMILTON, Sir William, son of lord Archibald Hamilton, above-mentioned, was born in 1730, and died in 1803, after having spent many years as ambassador at the court of Naples, leaving among his works as an author, 1. 'Observations on Mount Vesuvius, Mount Etna, and other Volcanoes of the two Sicilies,' 8vo. 1772. 2. 'Campi Phlegræi,' 2 vols. fol. 1776; to which a supplement was published in 1779; besides the share which he had in the work entitled, 'Antiquités Etrusques, Grecques, et Romaines, tirées du Cabinet de M. Hamilton,' which was published in 1765; and numerous papers published in the Philosophical Transactions, and the 'Archæologia.'

HAMILTON, James, first Earl of Abercorn, and son of lord Claude Hamilton before-mentioned, was appointed in 1604 one of the Commissioners to treat of a union with Scotland; in 1615 he was nominated one of the Council of the province of Munster; and, after filling other high posts, he died in 1617.

HAMILTON, Hon. Sir George, fourth son of the preceding, performed good service in Ireland for king Charles I during the rebellion, and also in 1649 for Charles II, by whom he was honoured with several commissions, and died in 1679.

HAMILTON, Sir George, Knt. second son of the preceding was page to Charles II, but losing his employment, on account of his attachment to the Romish religion, he retired to France, where he was employed in the French service, and died in 1667. He is frequently mentioned in the Memoirs of Grammont.

HAMILTON, Anthony, Count, younger brother of the preceding, was born in Ireland in 1646, and, after filling the post as governor of Limerick, he followed the fortunes of James II, and retired to France, and died in 1720, leaving, 'The Memoirs of Grammont,' and several other things, which have all been published in 3 vols. 8vo. and 6 vols. 12mo.

HAMILTON, Claude, fourth Earl of Abercorn, went over at the revolution to France with king James II, and accompanying the latter into Ireland, was sworn of his Privy Council on his arrival at Dublin; but after the battle of the Boyne he embarked for France, and was killed in his voyage over in 1690.

HAMILTON, Sir James, sixth Earl of Abercorn, was of the Privy Council to king James II, in whose army he commanded a regiment; but, on perceiving the king's intention to introduce the Romish religion, he quitted his service, and, bearing arms for king William, he was opposed to his uncle, the fourth earl, at the siege of Londonderry. He was afterwards one of the Privy Council to William, Anne, and George I, and died in 1734.

HAMILTON, George, second brother of the preceding, was killed at the battle of Steinkirk.

HAMILTON, William, third brother of the preceding, was one of the five Kentish petitioners who, in 1701, desired the parliament would turn their loyal addresses into bills of supply, that his majesty might be enabled to assist his allies against the growing power of France, which being voted a scandalous petition, the five petitioners were taken into custody by the serjeant at arms, where they remained to the end of the session.

HAMILTON, William Gerard, a statesman, probably of the same family as the preceding, was born in 1728, appointed in 1761 Principal Secretary to George, earl of Halifax, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, made in 1763 Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland, and died in 1796. He was designated by the appellation of Single-speech Hamilton, because his first speech in parliament, which produced an extraordinary effect in the house, was said to have been his only attempt at parliamentary eloquence; but, after a lapse many years, he appeared again among the speakers in the house. In 1808 Mr. Malone published his works in 8vo. under the title of 'Parliamentary Logic;' to which are subjoined two speeches delivered in the House of Commons in Ireland, and his poetical pieces, &c.

HAMILTON, Patrick (Ecc.) usually reckoned the first Scotch reformer, was related to James Hamilton, earl of Arran, but, according to Mackenzie, was of illegitimate birth. He was born in 1503, and, after completing his studies at St. Andrew's, he went into Germany, and, imbibing the notions of Luther, Melancthon, and the other reformers on the Continent, he returned to his country, where, although made abbot of Ferne, he strenuously endeavoured to overturn the church to which he was naturally allied. His violent proceedings called forth the interference of the ecclesiastical authorities of the country, and being brought before the archbishop of St. Andrew's, the archbishop of Glasgow, the bishops of Brechin, Dunkeld, and Dumblane, he was found guilty of heresy, and suffered in 1527 the sentence then inflicted on heretics, namely, that of being burnt alive. [Vide Plate XIX] A treatise of his, entitled, 'Patrick's Places,' or 'Common Places,' was translated into English by John Firth, and is published in Fox's 'Acts and Monuments.'

HAMILTON (Her.) the name of an illustrious family nearly allied to that of Douglas, and deriving its name from Hambledon, or Hamilton, in the parish of Barkby, which was erected by king James II into a lordship in 1445, in favour of sir James Hamilton, above-mentioned under History. James, the second lord Hamilton, was, in 1503, created earl of Arran, which title passed into the Stuart family for a time. [Vide Arran] James, the second earl of Arran, obtained in 1549 the title of duke of Chatelherault. Lord John Hamilton, his second son, was raised to the dignity of marquis of Hamilton in 1599. James, the second marquis, was, in 1619, created a peer of England, by the title of earl of Cambridge. His son James, the third marquis, was, in 1643, created duke of Hamilton, in reward of his loyalty, for which he was beheaded, as mentioned above. This title became extinct at the death of the second duke without male issue, but was revived in 1660, in the person of William Douglas, earl of Selkirk, who was married to Anne, duchess of Hamilton, daughter of the first duke. Four sons of this duke brought an accession of honours to the family. James, the eldest and fourth duke, was created a peer of Great Britain by the title of duke of Brandon, co. Suffolk; and baron of Dutton, co. Chester. Charles, the third son, on his father's resignation in 1688, was created earl of Selkirk. [Vide Selkirk] John, the fourth son, was created in 1697, a peer of Scotland, by the titles of earl of Ruglen, viscount of Riccartoun, and lord Hillhouse; and, on the death of his brother Charles, the title of earl of Selkirk also devolved to him. George, the fifth son, was created a peer in 1696, by the titles of earl of Orkney, Viscount of Kirkwall, and baron Dechmont. [Vide Orkney] The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Hamilton, duke of Brandon, co. Suffolk; and baron Dutton, co. Chester; duke of Hamilton, in Scotland; and duke of Chatelherault, in France; marquis of Douglas, Clydesdale, and Hamilton; earl of Angus, Arran, and Lanark; lord Machanshire, Polmont, Abernethy, and Aberbrothwick, &c.

Arms. Four grand quarters; first quarterly, first and fourth gules, three cinquefoils pierced ermine, for Hamilton; second and third, a ship with its sails furled up sable, for the earldom of Arran; second grand quarter argent, a human heart crowned with an imperial crown proper, and on a chief azure, three mullets argent, for Douglas; third grand quarter as the second, and the fourth as the first.

Crest. Out of a ducal coronet or, an oak fructed proper, having a frame-saw transversely fixed in the body of it, of the first.

Supporters. Two Antelopes argent, armed and gorged with ducal coronets or, chains affixed to their coronets and their hoofs, of the second.

HAMILTON, Viscount, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the marquis of Abercorn.

HAMILTON, another branch of this family, sprung from lord Claude Hamilton, brother of lord John, the first marquis of Hamilton, enjoys, among other titles, that of marquis of Abercorn. Lord Claud Hamilton above-mentioned was created in 1585 baron of Paisley; his son James was in 1604 raised to the dignity of baron of Abercorn, and in 1606 to that of earl of Abercorn, and baron of Hamilton, Mount Castle, and Kilpartrick; his son James, the second earl of Abercorn, was in 1616 advanced to the peerage of Ireland by the title of lord Hamilton, baron of Strabane; James, the sixth earl of Abercorn, was created in 1701 baron of Mountcastle, and viscount of Strabane; James, the third viscount Strabane, was created in 1786 a peer of Great Britain by the title of viscount Hamilton, of Hamilton, in the county of Leicester; and lastly, John James, his son, was in 1790 raised to the dignity of marquis of Abercorn. [Vide Abercorn]

HAMILTON, several branches of the above-mentioned families have, at different times, received the honours of the peerage; as sir Thomas Hamilton, of Priestfield, nearly related to the marquis, a president of the Court of Session, was created earl of Haddington, &c. in 1627 [vide Haddington] Gustavus Hamilton, grandson of lord Claude Hamilton, baron of Paisley above-mentioned, was created in 1717 baron Hamilton and viscount Boyne. [Vide Boyne] Sir Robert Hamilton, of Broomhill, was in 1647 created lord Belhaven and Stenton. Alexander Hamilton, eldest son of Archibald, duke of Hamilton, was in 1806 summoned to parliament, and placed in his father's barony of Dutton, co. Chester.

HAMILTON, some branches of the same family enjoy the baronetcy; as admiral sir John Hamilton, of the Mount Uxbridge, co. Middlesex, great grandson of William Hamilton, of Chilston, co. Kent, younger brother of James, sixth earl of Abercorn, who was created in 1776; sir Edward Hamilton his second son was created a baronet in 1800, having been previously knighted in 1800 for his extraordinary gallant achievement in cutting out his majesty's late ship, Hermione, from Porto Cavallo, in South America. Sir John Hamilton, another lineal descendant from the Abercorn branch of the family, and lieutenant-general of his majesty's forces, who early in life signalized himself in the East and West Indies, and since in the recent contest in Spain and Portugal, was, in consideration of his great services, created in 1815 a baronet of the United Kingdom. The arms, &c. of the two first are the same as those of the marquis of Abercorn, with a suitable difference. To those of the last has been added an honourable augmentation, and an additional crest allusive to his defence of Alba de Tormes.

Arms. The same as those of the marquis of Abercorn, and on a chief honourable augmentation a mount inscribed 'Alba de Tormes,' thereon a castle, and flowing from the battlements a Spanish flag all proper.

Crest. First, the crest of honourable augmentation; viz. on a wreath, a mount and a castle as in the arms, over it an escroll; the motto "Alba de Tormes." Second, the family crest. [Vide Abercorn and Hamilton]

HAMILTON, William (Biog.) a poet of Bangour, descended from a family of distinction in Ayrshire, was born in 1704, and died in 1760, leaving some poems, which were published partly in 1748, and more completely in 1760; besides being inserted in Chalmers' collection of English poets.

HAMILTON, Robert, a physician, was born at Edinburgh in 1721, and died in 1793, leaving, 1. A 'Treatise on the Scrofula,' 1791. 2. 'Observations on the Marsh Remittent Fever,' &c. 8vo. 1800.

HAMILTON, Gavin, a painter, descended from the Hamiltons, of Murdieston, who died in 1797, left some pieces, painted from the Iliad, which have been highly admired.

HAMILTON, William, an historical painter, and son of a Scotch gentleman, was born at Chelsea in 1750, and died in 1801. His most esteemed works are his 'Woman of Samaria,' and 'Queen of Sheba entertained at a Banquet by Solomon.'

HAMILTON, Elizabeth, a miscellaneous writer, was born at Belfast in 1758, and died in 1816, leaving, 1. 'The Letters of a Hindoo Rajah,' 2 vols. 8vo. 2. 'Memoirs of Modern Philosophers,' 3 vols. 12mo. 3. 'Letters on the Elementary Principles of Education,' 2 vols. 8vo. 4. 'The Cottagers of Glenbervie,' &c. Her memoirs have been published by Miss Benger.

HAMLYN (Her.) the name of a family of Clovely-court, in the county of Devon, originally called Hammett, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1795 on sir James Hammett, who assumed the name of Hamlyn by desire of his great uncle Zachary Hamlyn, esq. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Or, a falcon sable, belled gules, between three roses gules, leaved vert.

Crest. A swan with wings endorsed argent, collared gules, winged, beaked, and legged or, holding in his beak a bolt sable.

HAMMON (Myth.) vide Ammon.

HAMMOND, Henry (Hist.) an English divine, was born at Chertsey, in Surry, in 1605; educated at Eton school, whence he was removed to Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1618; elected fellow in 1625, took his degree of D. D. in 1639; made archdeacon of Chichester in 1643; had a reward of 100*l.* set upon his head for his exertions in favour of his sovereign in the same year; attended the king, during his imprisonment, as his chaplain; was removed, with the rest of his majesty's servants, from their attendance by the rebels; was afterwards confined for ten weeks, and suffered other hardships in support of his principles; and died in 1660, after the restoration, and at the moment that he was going to be promoted to the see of Worcester. His works, consisting of controversial and practical tracts, sermons, commentaries, &c. were collected together by his amanuensis, Mr. William Fulman, and published in 4 vols. fol. 1684; and in 1739 Mr. Peck published a collection of his Letters, amounting to 19. His work best known is his 'Paraphrase and Annotations,' which first came out in 1653; in 1656 with additions and alterations; and in 1698 Le Clerc published a Latin translation of it, with the text of the Vulgate, and his own additions, &c. He begun a 'Paraphrase, &c. of all the Books of the Old Testament,' of which he published the Psalms, and went through a third part of the book of Proverbs.

HAMMOND, Colonel, nephew of the preceding, and governor of the Isle of Wight, in the service of the rebels, confined king Charles I as a close prisoner in Carisbrook-castle, who had fled thither to escape his enemies.

HAMMOND, Anthony (Biog.) a gentleman and poet, descended from a family long situated at Somersham-place, in Huntingdonshire, was born in 1668, educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and died in 1738. He contributed many pieces to a work entitled 'A New Miscellany of Original Poems;' besides writing the 'Account of the Life and Writings of Mr. Moyle,' &c. He was denominated by lord Bolingbroke 'Silver-tongued Hammond,' from the fluency of his speech while he sat in parliament.

HAMMOND, James, second son of the preceding, was born in 1710, educated at Westminster school, and died in 1742. His 'Love Elegies' have procured him a place among the British poets.

HAMOND (Her.) the name of a family of Holy-grove, in Berkshire, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1783 on sir Andrew Snape Hamond in testimony of his meritorious conduct as a naval officer. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a chevron sable, charged with two escallops argent, between two pellets, each charged with a martlet argent in chief; and in base a wreath of oak-leaves, all within a bordure, engrailed vert.

Crest. Out of a naval crown, an eagle's head and neck sable.

HAMOR (Bibl.) חמור, prince of Shechem, and father of Shechem, who abused Dinah, the daughter of Jacob. Gen. xxxiv.

HAMPDEN, John (Hist.) one of the first promoters, and one of the most active agents in the grand rebellion, descended, as is said, from an ancient family in Buckinghamshire, was born in London in 1594, and died in 1643 of the wound which he received in a skirmish with prince Rupert at Chalgrove-field, in Oxfordshire. The part which he acted in withstanding the payment of ship-money is too well known to need repetition here, and proves him to have had all the talents fitted for a revolutionary demagogue. [Vide Plate XVIII]

HAMPDEN, John, grandson to the preceding, entered into the conspiracy of the duke of Monmouth, for which he was tried, and fined for a misdemeanour. He was afterwards one of the foremost to invite the prince of Orange into England.

HAMPDEN, Robert Hampden, Viscount, brother to John, third lord Trevor, was several years Envoy Extraordinary to the States General of Holland, and died at the age of 78, after having filled high offices in the state. He retained an extreme fondness for classical literature to the latest period of his life, and wrote many Latin poems, which his son printed in folio. He also wrote notes on Milton and Martial, besides a Commentary on Horace.

HAMPDEN, Viscount (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Trevor, which was conferred in 1776 on Robert, fourth lord Trevor above-mentioned, who, in compliance with the will of John Hampden, of Great Hampden, in Buckinghamshire, of the family of the noted Hampden above-mentioned, assumed the name and arms of Hampden. The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Hampden Trevor, viscount Hampden, and lord Trevor, of Bromham.

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth argent, a saltire gules, between four eagles displayed azure, for Hampden; second and third, party per bend sinister ermine and erminois, a lion rampant or, for Trevor.

Crest. On a chapeau gules, turned up ermine, a wyvern rising sable, for Trevor; but for Hampden on a wreath a talbot passant ermine, plain collared and chained gules.

Supporters. Two wyverns regardant sable.

Motto. "Vestigia nulla retrorsum."

HAMPSHIRE (Geog.) or Hants, one of the most southern counties in England on the English Channel; the principal towns of which are Southampton, Portsmouth, Christ Church, Andover, Lymington, Basingstoke, &c. The most celebrated rivers are the Avon, Wye, Thames, &c. On the invasion of Britain by the Romans, Hampshire was inhabited by the Belgæ, and afterwards formed a part of Britannia prima. Under the Saxons it was included in the kingdom of Wessex.

HAMPSON (Her.) the name of a family of Taplow, co. Buckingham, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1642 on sir Thomas Hampson. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, three hempbrakes sable.

Crest. Out of a mural crown argent, a greyhound's head sable, collared argent, rimmed or.

Motto. "Nunc aut nunquam."

This family quarters the arms of Duncombe and Reynes.

HAMUL (Bibl.) חמואל, son of Phares, chief of a family. Gen. xlvi.

HANAMEEL (Bibl.) חנמאל, son of Shallum, a kinsman of Jeremiah's, who sold the prophet a field at Anathoth. Jer. xxxii.

HANAN (Bibl.) חנן, the father of Rinna, 1 Chron. iv.; and also the son of Azel. 1 Chron. viii.

HANANEEL (Bibl.) חננאל, one of the towers of Jerusalem. Nehem. iii. 1; Jer. xxxi.

HANANI (Bibl.) חנני, father to the prophet Jehu. 1 Kings xvi. 1.

Hanani, a prophet, who reproved Asa, king of Judah, for which he was imprisoned. 2 Chron. xvi. He is supposed by some to have been the same as the preceding.

Hanani, a Levite and musician in the temple service. 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

HANANIAH (Bibl.) חנניה, one of the three young men of the tribe of Judah, and of the royal family, who, being carried captive to Babylon, were selected to wait in Nebuchadnezzar's palace. His name was changed to Shadrack. Dan. iii. 4.

Hananiah, son of Zerubbabel. 1 Chron. iii. 19.

Hananiah, son of Azur, a false prophet of Gibeon, whose death was predicted by Jeremiah for his false prophecy. Jer. xxviii.

HANDCOCK (Her.) the name of a family of Twyford, co. Westmeath, Ireland, which enjoys the dignity of the peerage by the title of baron Castlemaine, conferred in 1812 on William Handcock. This family is descended from the Handcocks, of Bolton, co. Lancaster, whose ancestor, William Handcock, esq. was appointed one of the council of Connaught by Charles II, and had a grant of a patent erecting his estates in Westmeath into a manor, by the name of the manor of Twyford, with ample privileges.

HANDEL, George Frederic (Biog.) the distinguished musical composer, was born at Halle, in the duchy of Magdeburgh, in 1684, and died in 1759. The talent, which displayed itself so supereminently in his compositions had made its appearance in his earliest infancy. [Vide Plate XXXVI]

HANEKINS, Martin (Biog.) a German professor, was born at Breslau in 1633, and died in 1709, leaving, among his works, 'De Romanarum Rerum Scriptoribus,' 2 vols. 4to. 1669, 1675; to which was added 'De Byzantinarum Rerum Scriptoribus Græcis,' 4to. 1677.

HANGER (Her.) the name of a family of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, which enjoys the dignity of the peerage conferred in 1762 on Gabriel Coleraine by the title of lord Coleraine. Of this family was sir Francis Ainger, Aungier, or Hanger, knt. and master of the rolls, who was created in 1621 baron of Longford, which title became extinct at the death of the latter.

HANHAM (Her.) the name of an ancient family of Winbourne, co. Dorset, which originally came out of Gloucestershire, and is so called from Hanham in that county. Peter de Hanham, the first of this family, of whom mention is made, lived in the 13th century. His descendant, William Hanham, was created a baronet in 1667. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, or and gules, on a bend ingrailed sable, three crosses pattée fitchy of the first.

Crest. A gryphon's head ducally gorged or.

HANMER, Sir Thomas, Bart. (Hist.) a statesman and polite writer, was born about 1676, educated at Westminster School and Christ Church, Oxford; and, after discharging the office of Speaker to the House of Commons with becoming dignity, he died in 1746, leaving, among his works as an author, a correct edition of Shakspeare, which he presented to the University of Oxford, where it was printed in 6 vols. 4to. in 1744, with elegant engravings at the expense of sir Thomas.

Hanmer (Her.) the name of a family of considerable antiquity, who, according to Camden, have resided from an early period in a parish of the same name in the county of Flint. In the reign of Edward I, sir John de Hanmere, knt. assumed the surname of Hanmer. Sir Walden, the 15th in descent from sir John de Hanmere, who was called to the bar about 1745, was created a baronet in 1774. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, two lions passant gardant azure, armed and langued gules.

Crest. On a cap of dignity azure, turned up ermine, a lion gardant sejant argent.

Motto. "Gardez l'honneur."

HANNAH (Bibl.) חנה, wife of Elkanah, of Levi, who dwelt at Ramath, or Ramathaim, was the mother of Samuel, whom she so named because she had asked him of the Lord. 1 Sam. i. &c.

HANNATHON (Bibl.) חנתון, a city of Zebulon. Josh. xix. 14.

HANNEKEN, Memnon (Biog.) a Lutheran, was born in 1595 at Blaxen, in the county of Oldenburg, and died in 1671, leaving, 'Scutum Catholicæ Veritatis;' 'Grammatica Hebraica;' 'Expositio Epistolæ Pauli ad Ephesios;' 'Synopsis Theologiæ;' 'Irenicum Catholicum Evangelium,' &c.

HANNEMAN, John (Biog.) or Adrian, a portrait and historical painter, was born at the Hague in 1611, and died in 1680, leaving several happy imitations of his master, Vandyke.

HANNIBAL (Hist.) vide Annibal.

HANNIBALDI, Richard (Ecc.) whom pope Gregory IX made cardinal in 1237, died at the council of Lyons in 1274.

Hannibaldi, Peter, a Roman by birth, received the cardinal's cap from Innocent VII in 1405, and died in 1457, after having acted an important part in the affairs of those times.

Hannibaldi, Cardinal, vide Annibal de Annibaldi.

HANNIBALIANUS, Fl. Claudius (Hist.) vide Annibalianus.

Hannibalianus (Numis.) or, as he is frequently called in History, Annibalianus, had medals or coins struck in honour of him, bearing his effigy as in the annexed figure; inscription FL. HANNIBALIANO REGI, or FL. CL. HANNIBALIANO REGI; on the reverse, SECURITAS PUBLICA.—SECURITAS REIPUBLICAE, &c. Trist. Hist. Comment.; Med. Imp. Numis.; Ducang. Fam. Byzant.

HANNO (Hist.) a Carthaginian general, who was banished from his country for having tamed a lion, which was considered an omen that he aspired to the sovereignty. Plin. l. 8; Plut. Instit. Princ. l. 4.

Hanno, a general of the Carthaginians, who, being unsuccessful and unskilful in the management of the affairs entrusted to him in Africa, was crucified by his soldiers who revolted. Whether this be the same as the preceding, and as the Hanno who was engaged against Agathocles in Sicily, is altogether doubtful. Polyb. l. 1.

Hanno, a general who was taken by Scipio, and carried to Rome. He was the son of Bomilcar, whom Annibal had sent to conquer the Gauls. Polyb. l. 3; Liv. l. 26.

Hanno, the name of several other Carthaginian generals mentioned by Polybius and other historians.

Hanno, a Carthaginian commander, who was employed to sail round Africa, when he entered the ocean by what is now called the Straits of Gibraltar. The 'Periplus of Hanno,' ascribed to him, was published in Greek by Gele-nius in 1533; and an edition in Gr. and Lat. was published, with notes, 12mo. Lugd. Bat. 1674. It is also inserted in the 'Geographiæ Veteris Scriptores,' 4 vols. 8vo. Oxon. 1712. It is not known at what time he flourished, but it is supposed that he was among the first commanders of this name, who distinguished themselves at Carthage.

HANOVER (Geog.) a country in the north of Germany.

Boundaries.—It is bounded by the German Ocean on the N.E., Friesland on the W. and S., and Saxony on the E.

Principal Towns.—Hanover the capital, Gottingen, Emden, Hildesheim, Luneburg, Osnabruck, Zell, Hameln, &c.

Principal Rivers.—The Elbe, the Weser, the Ems, the Oste, &c.

History.—This part of Germany was originally inhabited by the Chorusci, and Longobardi, &c.; but was subsequently occupied by the Saxons, and governed by the dukes of Saxony until the 12th century, when Henry, surnamed the Black, duke of Bavaria, and brother of Welf, or Guelf, having married a daughter of Billung, of the House of Saxony, received with her some parts of Hanover, whence descended the race of princes who have possessed this principality by the title of elector since the year 1692, when this dignity was first conferred upon them, and by that of king since 1815. On the death of queen Anne, George I, who was descended from James I, in the female line, succeeded as the nearest Protestant heir to the throne of Great Britain in 1714, since which period it has been governed by the kings of England, but without any political incorporation. In the years 1741 and 1756, Hanover co-operated with Great Britain with more glory than advantage to herself, and during the late revolutionary war it was exposed to the exactions of the French, by whom it was grievously oppressed from 1810 to 1813.

HANOVER, the capital of the above-mentioned country, is situated 28 m. W. Brunswick, and 154 W. Berlin. It was the birth-place of the dramatic writer Iffland, who died in 1815, as also of the two Schlegels.

HANVIL, John (Biog.) a monk of St. Alban's, and a poet of the 12th century, who was educated at Oxford, was the author of a long Latin Poem, in nine books, entitled 'Architrenius,' printed in 4to. Paris, 1544; two MSS. of it are preserved in the Bodleian Library, at Oxford.

HANUN (Bibl.) חנון, son of Nahash, king of the Amorites, who is famous for the insult offered to David's ambassadors, sent to compliment him after his father's death, which brought down upon him the vengeance of the king of Israel. 2 Sam. x, and 1 Chron. xix.

HANUN, son of Seleph, after the return from Babylon assisted to build the Valley-gate. Nehem. iii. 13.

HANWAY, Jonas (Hist.) a public benefactor, was born at Portsmouth in 1712, and died in 1786, when a monument by subscription, was erected to his memory. Among his works as a public benefactor, may be reckoned the institution of the Marine Society, and that of the Magdalen Charity. His publications as an author, amount to not less than 70, of which a list is given by Mr. Pugh, in his Life of him; among these, the most worthy of note, is an account of his Travels through Russia into Persia.

HAPHARAIM (Bibl.) חפרים, a city of Issachar, Josh. xix. 19, which, according to Eusebius, was Apharaïm, six miles from Legio. Euseb. Onom. Loc. Heb.

HARÆUS, Francis (Biog.) a Dutch Catholic divine, called in that language Van der Haer, was born at Utrecht in 1550, and died in 1632, leaving, 1. 'Chronologia,' 4to. Antv. 1614. 2. 'Biblia sacra Expositionibus priscorum Patrum litteralibus et mysticis illustrata,' fol. Antv. 1630. 3. 'Catena aurea in IV Evangelia,' 8vo. 1625. 4. 'Annales Ducum Brabantiæ ac Tumultuum Belgicorum.' 5. 'Lives of the Saints,' chiefly taken from Surius, 8vo. &c.

HARAN, eldest son of Terah, and brother to Abraham and Nahor. Gen. xi; Epiphan. de Hæres.

HARAN, otherwise called Charran, in Mesopotamia, whither Abraham first retreated after he left Ur, Gen. xi. 31, &c.; and Jacob fled also thither to Laban. Gen. xxvii.

HARBERTON, Viscount (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Pomeroy, [vide Pomeroy] which with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Pomeroy, viscount and baron Haberton, of Carbery, co. Kildare.

Arms. A lion rampant gules, holding an apple in his dexter paw in a field or, within a bordure engrailed sable.

Crest. A lion rampant gules, holding an apple, as in the coat.

Supporters. Two wolves, the dexter proper; the sinister argent, plain collars and chains or.

Motto. "Virtutis fortuna comes."

HARBORD (Her.) the name of a family of Norfolk, which received the honour of the peerage in 1746, when sir Harbord Harbord was created a baron, by the style and title of baron Suffield, of Suffield, co. Norfolk.

HARBOROUGH, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Sherard, [vide Sherard] which with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Sherard, earl of Harborough, baron Harborough, co. Leicester; baron Sherard, of Leitrim, in Ireland.

Arms. Argent, a chevron gules, between three torteauxes.

Crest. In a ducal coronet or, a peacock's tail erect proper.

Supporters. Two rams argent, armed and unguled or.

Motto. "Hostis honori invidia."

HARCLA, Sir Andrew (Hist.) a knight, who, having defeated the earl of Lancaster, and taken him prisoner in the reign of Edward II, was made earl of Carlisle, but forfeited this title and his life soon after, for a treasonable correspondence with the Scots.

HARCOURT, Errand de (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was commander of the archers of Val de Ruel, in the descent of William the Conqueror upon England, and returned to his native country after the coronation of that monarch.

HARCOURT, Robert de, surnamed the Strong, and brother of the preceding, attended William the Conqueror in his expedition into England, where he founded the present family.

HARCOURT, Arnold de, fourth brother of the preceding, was sent for to England by the Conqueror, to assist against the Danes in 1068, and was slain in an engagement.

HARCOURT, William de, son of Robert de Harcourt, took part with Henry I against Robert Curtois, eldest son of the Conqueror, and having defeated Walleran de Beaumont, earl of Mellent, in the battle near Bourghtonrode, in 1123, was liberally rewarded with large possessions in England by his royal master Henry.

HARCOURT, William de, eldest son of Robert, and Isabel his wife, was surnamed the Englishman, by way of distinction. He adhered to king John, against Lewis, prince of France, and the rebellious barons in 1217; and was at the siege of Damietta, in Palestine, in 1218.

HARCOURT, Sir William de, joined Simon Montfort, earl of Leicester, against Henry III, but had the benefit of the Dictum de Kenilworth proclaimed in 1266, and died in 1278.

HARCOURT, Sir Robert, was made knight of the Garter in 1463, commissioned with Richard Nevil, earl of Warwick, (styled the King-maker,) and others, to treat of a peace between king Edward IV, and Lewis XI, of France, and after having distinguished himself in the wars of Henry VI, and Edward IV, he was slain by the Lancastrian party in 1470.

Harcourt, Sir Robert, grandson of the preceding, was standard-bearer to king Henry VII, at the battle of Bosworth; made one of the knights of the Bath in 1495, at the creation of Henry, duke of York, that king's son and successor; and was dubbed knight banneret, for his gallant behaviour at the battle of Blackheath, against lord Audley, and his Cornish followers in 1497.

Harcourt, Sir Simon, the descendant from a younger branch of the same family, distinguished himself at the sieges of Terouenne and Tournay, and also at the action commonly called the Battle of the Spurs, fought in 1513, where he received the honour of knighthood, and died in 1547.

Harcourt, Robert, eldest son of sir Walter Harcourt, distinguished himself as an adventurer with sir Walter Raleigh, in his voyage to Guyana, &c.; having obtained a patent from James I for planting of part of Guyana, in America. He began his voyage thither in 1609, of which he published an account in 1613.

Harcourt, Sir Simon, his son and heir, signalized himself by feats of arms, which he first performed against the Spaniards in the Low Countries, when he was major of the regiment commanded by his heroic uncle, Horace lord Vere, of Tilbury; and afterwards still more honourably in the support of the lawful government of his country during the Irish rebellion in 1641, when he was made governor of Dublin, and on reconnoitring the castle of Carrick-Main, about four miles distant from the city, he received a shot from the garrison, which killed him on the spot. His troops were so enraged, that within a few hours after the cannon came up, having made a breach, and entered the castle, under the command of colonel Gibson, they put all therein to the sword, refusing quarter to those rebels who had slain their beloved colonel.

Harcourt, Simon, first Viscount, grandson of the preceding, was born in 1660, educated at Pembroke Hall, Oxford, studied the law in the Inner Temple, and after passing through the inferior gradations of his profession, he was appointed Lord Keeper of the Great Seal in 1710, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain in 1712, and one of the Lords Justices in 1723, 1725, and 1727, during his majesty's absence on the continent, in which latter year he died full of years and honours.

Harcourt, Simon, first Earl, began early to distinguish himself in the service of his king and country, being one of his majesty's attendants at the battle of Dettingen in 1743. On the breaking out of the insurrection in 1745, he was one of the thirteen peers who were commissioned to raise a regiment of foot each, for the defence of the government. In 1751 he was constituted governor to king George III, and sworn of the Privy Council in the same year. In 1761 he was sent as ambassador extraordinary, and plenipotentiary, to demand the princess Charlotte of Mecklenburg Strelitz, in marriage for the king; in 1768 was sent on an embassy to the court of France; in 1769 was declared Lieutenant-General, and General-Governor of the kingdom of Ireland; and was accidentally drowned in an old well in his park at Nuneham, in 1777, occasioned, as it is imagined, by his overreaching himself, in order to save the life of a favourite dog, who was found in the well, by him, standing on his lordship's feet.

Harcourt (Her.) the name of an ancient and illustrious family, of which honourable mention has already been made under History. They trace their descent from Bernard, a nobleman of the blood-royal of Saxony, who, being born in Denmark, was surnamed the Dane. This Bernard was chief counsellor, and second in command to the famous Rollo, progenitor to the kings of England, of the Norman line, who, in his descent upon Normandy, A. D. 876, obtained the lordships of Harcourt, Cailleville, and Beauficel, in recompence for his eminent services; when Rollo, who was also a Dane, made himself master of that province. Bernard was likewise minister to Rollo's son and successor William, styled Longa Spatha, and guardian to his son Richard, duke of Normandy, surnamed the Hardy, as well as regent of the Norman territories during his minority. Turchetil, the second son of Forf, and grandson of Bernard, was joint guardian with his elder brother Fouroude, to William the Conqueror, and at last basely murdered for his attachment to that prince. His eldest son Anchitel, was the first who took the surname of Harcourt; and Robert de Harcourt, his second son before-mentioned, is the ancestor of the present earl of Harcourt. Simon, the lord chancellor before-mentioned, and his descendant, was created, in 1711, a peer of Great Britain, by the style and title of baron Harcourt, of Stanton Harcourt, co. Oxford; and farther advanced to the dignity of viscount Harcourt, in 1721. His grandson Simon was in 1749 dignified with the titles of viscount Harcourt, of Nuneham-Courtney, co. Oxford, and earl of Harcourt. The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Gules, two bars or.

Crest. In a ducal coronet or, a peacock close proper.

Supporters. Two lions or, each gorged with a bar gemel gules.

Motto. "Le bon tems viendra."

HARDICANUTE (Hist.) or Hardi-knute, so called from his valorous exploits, the second son of Canute, succeeded to the crown of Denmark at the death of his father in 1035, and to that of England in 1039, at the death of his brother Harold, and died in 1041, when he was succeeded by Edward the Confessor.

HARDINGE, Captain (Hist.) a naval commander, who so gallantly captured the Piedmontese, French frigate, the terror of the Indian seas, after an action second to none in the annals of British valor. It lasted three days; when, at its successful termination, the gallant captain fell, in 1808. The House of Commons unanimously voted a monument to the memory of captain Hardinge, in the Cathedral of St. Paul's.

Hardinge (Her.) the name of the family of Lurran, co. Fermanagh, Ireland, to which the gallant captain above-mentioned belonged. His uncle, sir Richard Hardinge, was created a baronet in 1801. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Gules, on a chevron or; another argent, charged with three escallops sable.

Crest. A mitre gules, charged with a chevron or and argent, as in the arms.

HARDING (Biog.) or Hardyng, John, one of our old English historians, descended from a reputable family in the north, was born in 1378, and after serving with his patron, sir Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur, and afterwards in the service of sir Robert Umfraville, he devoted himself to the pursuits of literature, and composed his 'Chronicle of England, unto the Reign of Edward IV,' in verse, which was first printed by Grafton in 1543, and reprinted among our English Chroniclers in 1812. He was living in 1465.

Harding, Thomas, a divine of the Romish church, and the antagonist of Bishop Jewel, was born at Comb-Martin, in Devonshire, in 1512, educated at New College, Oxford, of which he was chosen fellow, in 1536, and died in 1572. When Elizabeth came to the crown he was deprived of his preferment, and retired to Louvain. He wrote, in his controversy with bishop Jewel, seven pieces on the subject of ordination.

HARDINGE, Nicholas (Biog.) a polite scholar, the son of the Rev. Gideon Hardinge, and grandson of sir Robert Hardinge, of King's Newton, in Derbyshire, who was knighted during the rebellion, was born in 1700, educated at Eton School, and at Cambridge, and died in 1758, leaving a number of Latin poems, which his son, George Hardinge, esq., printed in an octavo volume, in 1780; among these, his 'Denhill Iliad,' and his 'Dialogue in the Senate House of Cambridge,' are most admired.

HARDINGE, George, son of the preceding, was born in 1744, educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, studied law at the Middle Temple, and died in 1816, Justice of the courts of Brecon, &c. leaving 'A Series of Letters to Burke on the Impeachment of Hastings,' 8vo.; 'The Essence of Malone,' &c.; besides some poems and other things, which have been published by Mr. Nichols, with his life.

HARDION, James (Biog.) a polite French writer, was born at Tours in 1686, and died in 1766, leaving, 1. 'Histoire de l'Origine et des Progrès de la Rhetorique dans la Grèce,' 1730. 2. 'Histoire Poetique,' published with the preceding, in 3 vols. 12mo. 1751. 3. 'Histoire Universelle,' 18 vols. 12mo.; to which Linguet has added two others; besides his Dissertations in the Memoirs of the Academy.

HARDOUIN, John (Biog.) in Latin Harduinus, a French Jesuit, was born of obscure parents at Quimper, in Bretagne, in 1647, and died in 1729, leaving, 1. 'Nummi antiqui Populorum et Urbium illustrium,' 4to. 1682. 2. 'Themistii Orationes XXXIII, cum Notis,' fol. 1685. 3. 'Plinii Historiæ Naturalis,' &c. 5 vols. 4to. 1685; and an improved edition in 3 vols. fol. Paris. 1723. 4. 'De Baptismo Quæstio triplex,' 1687. 5. 'Antirrheticus de Nummis antiquis Coloniarum et Municipiorum,' 4to. 1689. 6. 'S. Joannis Chrysostomi Epistola ad Cæsarium Monachum,' &c. 4to. 7. 'Chronologia ex Nummis antiquis restituta et Prolusio de Nummis Herodiadum,' 2 vols. 4to. Paris. 1793. In 1700 was published at Amsterdam a volume in folio, entitled, 'Joannis Harduini Opera Selecta,' comprehending, besides the numismatical works above-mentioned, a treatise, in which the Chronology of the Old Testament is adjusted by the Vulgate translation, and illustrated by medals, &c.; besides which he undertook a new edition of the 'Councils,' printed in 12 vols. fol. 1715.

HARDWICKE, Philip, first Earl of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born at Dover in 1690, studied law at the Middle Temple, and at the early age of 29 attained the office of Solicitor-General, which was followed by his appointment in 1723 to that of Attorney-General, to that of Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench in 1733, and to that of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain in 1736. He was nominated in 1740 one of the Lords Justices for the administration of the government during his majesty's absence; also in 1743 and 1745. In 1746 he was appointed Lord High Steward of England for the trials of the earls Kilmarnock, Cromartie, and lord Balmerino; and in 1747 for the trial of lord Lovat. In 1748 and 1749 he was again appointed one of the Lords Justices, and died in 1764, full of years and honours. [Vide Plate XVII]

HARDWICKE, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Yorke. [Vide Yorke, and Philip, Earl of Hardwicke, under History] The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Yorke, earl of Hardwicke, viscount Royston, lord Hardwicke, baron of Hardwicke.

HARIOT (Biog.) vide Harriot.

HARLAND (Her.) the name of a family of Sproughton, in the county of Suffolk, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1771 on admiral sir Robert Harland; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Or, on a bend wavy sable, three bucks' heads caboshed argent, between two sea-lions of the second.

Crest. A sea-lion sable, supporting an anchor.

HARLEY, Sir William de (Hist.) a knight, of the family

mentioned under Heraldry, who attended Godfrey de Boulogne to the Holy Land in 1098, was, for his valorous deeds on that occasion, made a knight of the Sepulchre.

HARLEY, Sir Brian, of the same family, distinguished himself in the service of the Black Prince, for which he received the honour of knighthood.

HARLEY, Sir John, was knighted in the field of battle at Gaston, near Tewksbury, in 1471, by Edward IV, in whose cause he had distinguished himself on several occasions.

HARLEY, Sir Robert, took part against the king in the protection of the puritans, and other disaffected persons, against the courts of high commission and star-chamber; but being appointed Master of the Mint, by king Charles I, and refusing after the king's murder to affix any other stamp than that of the king, he was removed from his place.

HARLEY, Sir Edward, son of the preceding, was colonel of a regiment which he raised himself, and in 1642, in one of the first engagements, he was shot by a musket-ball, which he bore in his body 58 years; after having withstood the usurpation of Oliver Cromwell, and promoted the restoration to the utmost of his power, he was made governor of Dunkirk, and died in 1700.

HARLEY, Robert, vide Oxford.

HARLEY (Her.) the name of an ancient and noble family which flourished before the Norman conquest, and is said to have taken its origin from the illustrious house of Harlai, in France. Of this family was sir Edward Harley above-mentioned, whose son, Robert Harley, esq., was advanced to the peerage of Great Britain in 1711, by the style and title of baron Harley of Wigmore, co. Hereford, earl of Oxford, and earl of Mortimer.

HARLEY, Lord, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Oxford.

HARMAR, John (Biog.) a Greek scholar, and warden of Winchester, who died in 1613, was employed on the translation of the Bible, and published some of St. Chrisostom's Homilies, from MSS. in the Library of New College, Oxford.

HARMAR, John, son of the preceding, was born at Churchdowne, near Gloucester, in 1594; was chosen by the usurping powers to supply the place of one of the professors who had been driven from his professorship; was ejected at the restoration; and died in 1670; leaving, among his works, 1. 'Praxis Grammatica,' 8vo. Lond. 1622, 1623. 2. 'Eclogæ Sententiarum et Similitudinum e D. Chrysostomo deserptæ,' Gr. and Lat. 8vo. Lond. 1622. 3. 'Janua Linguarum,' of which the sixth or seventh edition was published in 1731. 4. 'Protomartyr Britannus,' &c. 4to. ibid. 1630. 5. 'Lexicon Etymologicon Græcum junctim cum Scapula,' fol. Lond. 1637. 6. 'Epistola ad D. Lambertum Osbaldestonum,' &c. 8vo. ibid. 1649. 7. 'M. T. Ciceronis Vita,' &c. 8vo. Oxon. 1662; besides translating into Latin part of Butler's Hudibras; from English into Greek and Latin the Assembly's 'Shorter Catechism;' and from English into Latin Howel's 'Treatise concerning Ambassadors.'

HARMER, Thomas (Biog.) a dissenting minister, was born at Norwich in 1715, and died in 1788, leaving, 1. 'Observations on divers Passages of Scripture,' the first volume was published in 1764; and was followed by an enlarged edition in 1776, in 2 vols. 8vo.; to which two others were added in 1787; and a new edition of the whole has been published lately by Dr. Adam Clarke. 2. 'Outlines of a Commentary on Solomon's Song.' 3. 'An Account of the Jewish Doctrine of the Resurrection of the Dead,' &c.

HARMODIUS (Hist.) 'Αρμόδιος, an Athenian, who, to avenge himself on Hipparchus, for offering violence to his sister, formed a conspiracy with Aristogiton to cut off the tyrant and his family. Harmodius fell in the contest, and Aristogiton was put to death, A. C. 510. Herod. l. 5; Thucyd. l. 6, c. 54; Cic. Tusc. l. 1; Senec. de Ira. l. 2, c. 25; Plin. l. 34; Gell. l. 9; Meurs de Pis. c. 13; Voss. Inst. Orat. l. 1.

HARMONIA (Myth.) vide Hermione.

HARO, Don Louis de (Hist.) nephew of Olivares, the Spanish prime minister, distinguished himself in the reign of Philip IV as a statesman and negotiator, and died in 1661, at the age of 63.

HAROLD (Hist.) the name of several kings of Denmark and England.

Kings of Denmark.

HAROLD I, one of the Danish kings at an early period of that monarchy, was murdered, as is said, by his brother Frotho V, who reigned conjointly with him.

HAROLD II, son of Frotho V, succeeded to the throne, and reigned, conjointly with his brother Haldane II; but was soon after slain in battle against the king of the Swedes.

HAROLD III, succeeded his father, Haldane III, and was slain in battle against the Swedes, after having materially raised the naval power of the Danes, which suffered considerably by his death.

HAROLD IV, as he is termed, was chosen king of the Cimbri, who had thrown off the Danish yoke; but was twice defeated by his rival Regner, the legitimate sovereign. The murder of the latter, however, left him in quiet possession of the kingdom.

HAROLD V, succeeded Gormo Angle II, as the sixtieth king of Denmark, and was succeeded after a peaceable reign by Gormo III.

HAROLD VI, grandson of the preceding, is also said to have obtained the kingdom of England, although he is not reckoned by English historians among the kings of England.

HAROLD VII, is reckoned by Meursius and Lyschander among the kings of Denmark as the successor of Sweyn; but was deposed after a very short reign.

HAROLD VIII, surnamed the Simple, the eldest son of Sweyn III, was elected in the room of his father, after warm disputes in favour of his brother Canute; but he died after an inglorious reign of only two years.

Kings of England of this Name.

HAROLD, surnamed Harefoot, second son of Canute the Great, succeeded to the throne of England in 1035, and died after a reign of four years.

HAROLD, second son of earl Godwin, and duke of East Anglia, took possession of the crown of England at the death of Edward the Confessor in 1066; but was defeated and slain at the battle of Hastings, which terminated the contest in the same year.

HARPALUS (Hist.) 'Αρπάλος, a man entrusted with the treasures of Babylon by Alexander, in whose absence he squandered them in luxury, and then fled to Crete, to escape the resentment of the conqueror; but was at last assassinated, A. C. 325. Diod. l. 17; Plut. in Phoc.; Paus. l. 1; Athen. l. 13.

HARPALUS (Biog.) an astronomer of Greece, who flourished about 400 years before Christ, corrected the cycle invented by Cleostratus, and proposed a new one of nine years, which was corrected by Meton, who added ten more, making the cycle nineteen years, when the sun and moon were supposed to return to the same point.

HARPALYCE (Myth.) the daughter of Harpalycus, king of Thrace, who, being fed on mare's milk, was early inured to the fatigues of hunting and war, and defeated Neopto-lemus, the son of Achilles, when he invaded her father's kingdom. Hygin. Fab. 193; Serv. in Æn. l. 1.

HARPALYCUS (Myth.) one of the companions of Æneas, killed by Camilla; also the father of Harpalyce above-mentioned.

HARPEDOPHORUS (Myth.) the surname of Mercury and Perseus, because they were represented armed with the harpe, an instrument by which Argus and Medusa perished.

HARPOCRATES (Myth.) a divinity, supposed to be the same as Orus, the son of Isis, among the Egyptians, and considered as the god of silence. Varro de Ling. Lat. l. 4, c. 10; Plut. de Isid. et Osir.

HARPOCRATES (Numis.) is commonly represented with one finger on his mouth, to denote silence, and with a cap on his head, sometimes squatting on the lotus, as in the annexed figure; sometimes he is represented clothed in a wolf's skin, and bespangled with ears and eyes, &c. Tristan. Hist. Comment. tom. i; Spanheim. Dissertat. Morell. Num. Imp. &c.

HARPOCRATION (Biog.) a platonic philosopher of Argos from whom Stobæus compiled his eclogues.

HARPOCRATION, Valerius, a rhetorician of Alexandria, and author of a valuable lexicon on the ten orators of Greece, the best edition of which is that of J. Gronovius, 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1696.

HARPSFIELD, John (Biog.) dean of Norwich in the reign of queen Mary, who was admitted fellow of New College, Oxford, in 1534, and died in 1578, was the author of, 1. 'Concio ad Clerum,' 8vo. Lond. 1553. 2. 'Homilia,' ibid. 1555. 3. 'Disputationes,' &c. 4. 'Supputatio Temporum a Diluvio ad A. D. 1559,' Lond. 1560.

HARPSFELD, Nicholas, brother to the preceding, who died in 1583, after 23 years imprisonment for his attachment to the Romish religion, was the author of, 1. 'Dialogi sex contra summi Pontificatus, Monasticæ Vitæ, Sanctorum Sacrorum Imaginum Oppugnatores et Pseudo-martyres,' 4to. 1566, 1573, which was published under the name of Alan Cope. 2. 'Historia Anglicana Ecclesiastica,' Duac. 1622. 3. 'Historia Hæresis Wickliffianæ,' published with the former. 4. 'Chronicon a Diluvio Noe ad Annum 1559,' MS. in verse; besides some other MSS. in the New College library, Oxford.

HARPYIÆ (Myth.) Ἁρπυῖαι, Harpies, or Winged Virgins, daughters of Pontus and Terra so called, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁρπάζειν, i. e. ab rapiendo, from their rapacity, having their feet and fingers armed with sharp claws, by which they seized every thing that came in their way. Virgil makes the number of them to be three, but Hesiod mentions only two. Hesiod. Theog. v. 265; Virg. Æn. l. 3, v. 212.

HARPYIÆ (Numis.) the Harpies are frequently represented on medals with all their attributes, as in the annexed figure, having the face of a female, and the claws of a rapacious bird. Patin. Impp. &c.; Spanh. Dissert. tom. ii; Beg. Thes. Brand. tom. iii.

HARRINGTON, John Lord (Hist.) son of sir James Harrington, or Harington, of Exton, in Rutlandshire, was entrusted by James I with the education of his daughter Elizabeth, afterwards married to Frederick, king of Bohemia. Having given great proofs of his abilities, he was honoured with the particular confidence of prince Henry, and attended him on his travels. When at Rome he is said to have been strongly solicited to change his religion, but being deaf to all entreaties, it is further alleged that poison was administered to both him and the prince, of which they shortly after died. His Latin letters to the prince are extant.

HARRINGTON, William, first Earl, embraced the profession of arms, but was sent in 1717 as Envoy into Spain; served as a volunteer in the French army, commanded by the marshal of Berwick, in 1721; and, after having been sent again to Spain to conclude the treaty of Seville, he was appointed, in 1742, Lord President of the Council; in 1744, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and died in 1756.

HARRINGTON, William, second Earl of, distinguished himself as a brave soldier on several occasions, particularly at the battle of Fontenoy, &c.; after which he was appointed to be Lieutenant General, and General in Ireland, and died in 1779.

HARRINGTON, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Stanhope [Vide Stanhope]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Stanhope, earl of Harrington, viscount Petersham, and lord Harrington.

Arms. Quarterly, ermine and gules, a crescent on a crescent for difference.

Crest. On a wreath a tower azure, with a demi-lion rampant issuing from the battlements or, holding between his paws a grenade firing proper.

Supporters. On the dexter side, a talbot guardant argent, gutte de poix; on the sinister, a wolf erminois; each supporter gorged with a garland or chaplet of oak vert, fructed or.

Motto. "A Deo et rege."

HARRINGTON, Lord, a title conferred in 1603 on sir John Harrington, or Harington, above-mentioned, which became extinct at the death of John, the second lord, in 1613.

HARRINGTON, Sir John (Biog.) an English poet, was the son of John Harrington, esq. who was imprisoned in the reign of queen Mary, for holding a correspondence with the then lady Elizabeth, with whom he continued in favour until his death. The son was born at Kelston, near Bath, in Somersetshire, in 1561, and died in 1612, leaving, 1. Some Epigrams, published first in 1618, and afterwards in 1625, under the title of 'The most elegant and witty Epigrams of Sir John Harrington, Knt. digested into Four Bookes.' 8vo. 2. 'Nugæ Antiquæ,' published some years ago by the Rev. Henry Harrington, of Bath; of these a second edition was published in 3 vols. 12mo. 1792; and a third, with additions, and a life of the author by Thomas Park, F. S. A. in 2 vols. 8vo. 1804. He likewise wrote a book against the bishops, which suited the malignant temper of the times.

HARRINGTON, Sir James, a political writer on the side of rebellion, was born in 1611, educated at Oxford, and, after rendering himself obnoxious to the government on its restoration, for which he suffered imprisonment, he died in 1677. His works, among which was his 'Oceana,' a republican piece, were first published by Toland in 1700, in 1 vol. fol.; and again by Dr. Birch in 1737; which was followed by a third edition in 1747.

HARRINGTON, Henry, a physician, and descendant of sir John Harrington, was born at Kelston in 1729, educated at Oxford, and died in 1816, leaving, An Ode to Harmony; An Ode to Discord; The Witch of Wokey, a ballad in the old English style; 'The Geometrical Analogy of the Doctrine of the Trinity;' besides several catches and other pieces of music, to which he was so much attached that he founded the musical club at Bath, called the Harmonic Society.

HARRIOT, Thomas (Biog.) a mathematician, was born at Oxford in 1560, became a commoner of St. Mary-Hall, where he took his degree of A. B. in 1579, and died in 1621, leaving, 1. 'A View of the various Editions of the Greek and Roman Classics,' 8vo.; frequently reprinted. 2. 'Introduction to the New Testament,' translated into several foreign languages. 3. An edition of the Greek Testament, in 2 vols. 8vo.; besides a wretched attempt at a 'Translation of the New Testament.'

HASAN (Hist.) son of the caliph Ali, was raised to the caliphate at his death, in the 40th year of the Hegira, A.D. 650, but resigned this dignity in the same year to his competitor Moawiyah, and died at Medina nine years after, from the effects of poison, administered to him by his wife Jaadah.

HASAN, or Abul Hasan Jawhar, vide Abul.

HASAN, Al, or Al Hasan Ebn Ali, &c. emir of Sicily, detected a conspiracy formed against him, which he suppressed by the punishment of the ringleaders. He afterwards defeated the Greeks, who had landed on the island, but was recalled by the caliph Al Moez Ledinallah from this post in the year of the Hegira 356, A. D. 966, after having held it upwards of 13 years.

HASE, Theodore de (Biog.) a minister of Bremen, was born in 1682, and died in 1731, leaving a volume of 'Dissertations,' besides the part which he took in a journal entitled 'Bibliotheca Historico-Philologico-Theologica,' which was afterwards continued under that of 'Museum Historico-Philologico-Theologicum.'

HASELRIGG, Sir Arthur, Bart. (Hist.) or Haslerig, son of sir Thomas Haselrigg, the first baronet, took a prominent part in the rebellion, for which he prepared the way by preferring a Bill in the House of Commons for the attainder of the earl of Strafford. He died in 1660, consistently hostile to every thing in the shape of monarchy, or regular government, either in church or state.

HASELRIGG (Her.) the name of a family descended from Roger de Haselrigge, who came with William the Conqueror. Sir Thomas Haselrigge, his descendant, was created a baronet in 1622, whose son is so discreditably mentioned in History above. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

HASSAN, Aga (Hist.) a Sardinian renegado, succeeded Hayradin as bashah of Algiers, at the time when the emperor Charles V, made his unsuccessful attempt to besiege that place. He died soon after, in the 63d year of his age.

HASSAN, brother of the bashah Hayradin, and nephew of Barbarossa, succeeded Haji as bashah in 1570, and died greatly esteemed and regretted, after having been twice restored to his government.

HASSAN, Corso, a renegado, was chosen by the Algerine soldiery to succeed the bashah Salha Rais, but was put to a cruel death four months after, by the new viceroy Tekelli.

HASSELQUIST, Frederic (Biog.) a naturalist, was born at Toernvalla, in East Gothland, in 1722, and died in 1752, leaving a number of papers, which were purchased by Louisa Ulrica, queen of Sweden, and after being arranged by Linnæus, were published, some in Latin, under the title of 'Iter Palæstinum,' and others in the Swedish language; they have been translated into several languages, and appeared in English in 1766.

HASTED, Edward (Biog.) the historian of Kent, descended on the father's side from the noble family of Clifford, and on the mother's from the ancient and knightly family of the Dingley's, of Woolverton, in the Isle of Wight, was born in 1732, and died in 1812, leaving a 'History of Kent,' 4 vols. fol. 1778—1799.

HASTINGS (Hist.) a Danish chief, who rendered himself formidable to Alfred the Great, by landing with a great body of his countrymen on the coast of Kent. Alfred, however, having taken his wife and two sons prisoners, restored them to him, on condition that he should depart the kingdom.

HASTINGS, John de, lord Hastings and Bergavenny, and seneschal of Aquitaine, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was in 1290 one of the competitors for the crown of Scotland, in right of his grandmother Ada, daughter of David, earl of Huntingdon, and brother to Malcolm IV, and William the Lion, kings of Scotland.

HASTINGS, Sir Ralph de, a descendant from another branch of the same family, was governor of the castle of York in 1337, and being mortally wounded at the battle of Neville's Cross, when David Bruce, king of Scotland, was taken prisoner, he died a few days after in 1346.

HASTINGS, Sir William de, first Lord Hastings, was high in favour with Edward IV, whose father Richard Plantagenet, duke of York, and also himself, he had faithfully served. He was afterwards sent as ambassador to Lewis XI in 1462, and invested with many high offices, but when Edward V succeeded to the throne, and Gloucester was made Protector, he was decoyed by the latter into the Tower, and his head struck off, that one of the greatest obstacles to the gratification of his wicked ambition might be removed.

HASTINGS, George, vide Huntingdon.

HASTINGS, Sir Edward, third son of George, the first earl of Huntingdon, was high in favour with queen Mary, by whom he was made Master of the Horse, &c. and called to her Privy Council; but upon the death of this queen, he betook himself to his devotions in the hospital of Stoke Poges, in Bucks, which was of his own erection, where he died soon after.

HASTINGS, Henry, lord Loughborough, vide Loughborough

HASTINGS, Henry, Lord, eldest son of Ferdinando, the sixth earl of Huntingdon, who died in 1649, was so noted for his learning and sweetness, that no less than 98 elegies were made on him, and published in 1650, under the title of 'Lachrymæ Musarum,' written by divers persons of nobility and worth.

HASTINGS, Lady Elizabeth, niece of the preceding, was born in 1682, and died in 1739, justly celebrated as a pattern of munificence and piety, having devoted her life and fortune to the furtherance of good and charitable works.

HASTINGS, vide Moira.

HASTINGS, Warren, the descendant of an ancient family, which had long possessed the manor of Daylesford, in Worcestershire, although not in their possession at the time of his birth, was born in that neighbourhood in 1733, and after being educated at Westminster, he went out as a writer to India, in the Company's service, and rising by his merits, he obtained the principal management of affairs in the East, and displayed great vigour and prudence in his administration; but notwithstanding the wisdom of his measures, which served to defeat the projects of Hyder Ali, and his French allies, he was exposed to a vexatious impeachment and trial, which lasted nine years, and ended in his acquittal. After this he passed the remainder of his life in privacy, although honoured with a place in the Privy Council, and died in 1818, leaving among his works as an author, 'A Narrative of the Insurrection at Benares,' 4to.; 'Memoirs relative to the State of India,' 8vo.; 'Fugitive Poetry,' &c.

HASTINGS (Her.) the name of an illustrious family, honourably mentioned under History, and so called from the town Hastings, which was in their possession at the time of the conquest. The first of this family who enjoyed the peerage was Henry lord Hastings, son of William de Hastings, steward to king Henry II. His descendant in the fourth degree, Laurence lord Hastings Bergavenny, and Weishford, was advanced in 1339 to the dignity and title of earl of Pembroke, which became extinct at the death of John, third earl of Pembroke; but the titles of lord Hastings, Bergavenny, and Weishford, devolved on Reginald, lord Grey, of Ruthen. From Thomas de Hastings, half-brother to William de Hastings above-mentioned, descended sir William de Hastings, who in 1461 was raised to the peerage by the title of baron Hastings, of Ashby-de-la-Zouch; Edward, the second lord Hastings, was summoned to Parliament on Nov. 15, 1482, as lord Hungerford, in right of his wife. His son George, the third lord Hastings, was created in 1529 earl of Huntingdon, [vide Huntingdon] and his third son, sir Edward Hastings, was in 1557 advanced to the peerage by the title of baron Hastings, of Loughborough, which title became extinct at his death, but was revived in 1643 in the person of Henry, the second son of Henry, fifth earl of Huntingdon; who, like the rest of his noble family, was zealous in the royal cause during the rebellion. At the death of Francis, tenth earl of Huntingdon, unmarried in 1790, the earldom remained for some time dormant, but was at length claimed by Henry Francis Hastings, the lineal descendant of sir Edward Hastings, knight, fourth son of Francis, second earl of Huntingdon, whose claim to this ancient earldom was confirmed. [Vide Huntingdon] The barony of Hastings devolved on his sister, the countess of Moira, whose son Francis Rawdon, earl of Moira, was advanced in 1816 to the dignity of marquis of Hastings. [Vide Rawdon] The titles, arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Titles. Rawdon Hastings, marquis of Hastings, earl of Rawdon, viscount Loudoun, baron Hungerford, Hastings, Newmarsh, Botreaux, Molines, Peverell, De Hornet, and Rawdon, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; earl of Moira, and baron Rawdon, in the peerage of Ireland, and a baronet of Ireland.

Arms. Quarterly of four coats, viz. 1st argent, a fess between three pheons' heads sable, for Rawdon; 2d sable, on a bend cottised argent, a rose gules between two annulets sable, for Conway; 3d azure, two bars or, each charged with three martlets gules, for Burdett; 4th azure, two lions passant in pale argent, for Camville.

Crest. On a wreath, a bull's head erased sable, armed and ducally gorged or.

Supporters. Two bears argent, muzzled gules, chains fixed to the muzzles, passing between their fore-legs, reflexed over their backs, and fastened by staples to trunks of trees, which they hold between their fore-paws; the chains or, the trunks of trees proper.

HASTINGS, the name of a family of Wellesley Hall, county Leicester, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1806 on Charles Hastings, son of Francis, earl of Huntingdon, and a general in the army. The arms, &c. of this family are the same as those of the earl of Huntingdon, with a suitable difference.

HASTINGS (Geog.) an ancient borough, and at present a fashionable watering-place, on the coast of Sussex, 36 miles S. E. Tunbridge, 64 S. E. London. Lon. 0° 35′ E., lat. 50° 52′ N. It is famous for being the place near which William the Conqueror landed in England; as also for the battle fought in its neighbourhood, which terminated in the defeat and death of his rival Harold.

HATCHER, Thomas (Biog.) physician to queen Mary, who became a fellow of Eton College in 1555, compiled some Memoirs of the eminent persons educated at Eton, in two books, in a catalogue of all the provosts, fellows, and scholars, to the year 1572; and published the Epistles and Orations of his fellow collegian Walter Haddon, in a book entitled 'Lucubrationes.'

HATFIELD, Thomas (Hist.) a prelate, a statesman, and warrior, was secretary to Edward III, who promoted him to the see of Durham, when he was called upon to take the lead of a body of men, in defence of the realm, against the Scottish invader king David. On the latter being taken prisoner, he was one of the commissioners with the lords Percy, and Ralph Nevill, to treat with the Scots for the ransom of their captive monarch. He afterwards attended Edward in his expedition into France, and died in 1381, after having rendered his name dear to the friends of learning, by the foundation of Trinity College, Oxford, which was at first called Durham College, but at the dissolution it was granted to Dr. Owen, who sold it to sir Thomas Pope, by whom it was refounded, endowed, and called Trinity College. Bishop Hatfield was likewise the principal benefactor, if not the founder, of the Friary at Northallerton, in Yorkshire, for Carmelites, or White Friars, and is handed down by records as having expended large sums in charitable and public purposes.

HATFIELD (Geog.) or Bishop's Hatfield, a town of Hertfordshire, situated on the river Lee, 19 m. N. London. It formerly belonged to the bishops of Ely, who had a palace here, occasionally a royal residence, where Edward VI, and Elizabeth, were crowned. A magnificent seat was erected at this place between the years 1605 and 1611, by Robert Cecil, the first earl of Salisbury, which after having been suffered to fall into decay, was restored to its former splendour by the late earl.

HATFIELD, a village in the county of York, situated in Hatfield Chase, 8 m. E. Doncaster. It is famous for the battle fought here A. D. 633, by Edwin, the first Christian king of Northumbria, against Cadwallo, king of Wales, and Penda, king of Mercia, in which, after a sanguinary conflict, the Northumbrians were defeated. William de Hatfield, the second son of Edward III, was a native of this place, which was the residence of William de Sindholm, of whom many marvellous tales are told. Several coins of Vespasian, with a battle-axe, and other vestiges of antiquity, have been dug up in this neighbourhood, as also the complete skeleton of a man.

HATTO (Ecc.) or Atto Vercellensis, bishop of Vercelli, in Italy, was born of a noble family of Piedmont, in the beginning of the 10th century, and promoted to the see of Vercelli in 945, but the time of his death is not known. He wrote, 1. 'Libellus de Pressuris Ecclesiasticis,' in three parts, inserted in D'Achery's 'Spicilegium.' 2. 'Epistolæ.' 3. 'Canones Statutaque Vercellensis Ecclesiæ,' both in the same collection; besides many other works, all of which were collected and published in 2 vols. fol. 1768.

HATTON, Sir Christopher (Hist.) a statesman and a lawyer, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, was the third and youngest son of William Hatton, of Holdenby, in Northamptonshire. He was entered a gentleman commoner of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, but removed without taking a degree to the Inner Temple, and after filling the several offices of Gentleman of the Privy Chamber, Captain of the Guard, Vice-chamberlain, and Privy Counsellor, he rose to the post of Lord Chancellor in 1587, and died in 1591, after having been employed in the deputation to the unfortunate queen Mary, who, it is said, was persuaded by him to answer before a court, that she might thereby give an appearance of legal procedure to the trial. Wood says he wrote several things pertaining to the law, none of which are extant, but the following has been attributed to him, 'A Treatise concerning Statutes or Acts of Parliament, and the Exposition thereof,' 8vo. Lond. 1677. Warton thinks he was the undoubted writer of the Fourth Act in Tancred and Gismund, which bears at the end composuit Ch. Hat. This play was the joint production of five students of the Inner Temple, and was acted at that Society before the queen in 1568, but not printed till 1592. [Vide Plate XX]

HAVANNAH (Geog.) capital of the island of Cuba. Lon. 82° 14′ W., lat. 23° 12′ N. This town, which is a landing-place for all vessels from the east coast of Spanish America, has been subject to many attacks at different times. It was taken in 1536 by a French pirate, but ransomed for 700 dollars, and after that was occupied successively by the English, the French, and the Buccaneers; but the most memorable attack was that made in 1762 by a British fleet and army, under the command of admiral sir George Pococke, and lord Albemarle, when it was captured, after a resistance of two months and eight days, and an immense booty was obtained. The specie and merchandize found in the place was estimated at three millions sterling. It was restored to the Spaniards at the peace of 1763.

HAWES, Stephen (Biog.) an English poet, and native of Suffolk in the 15th century, whose principal work is his 'Pastime of Pleasure,' first printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1517, with wooden cuts; besides which he wrote 'The Temple of Glass,' in imitation of Chaucer's 'Temple of Fame;' 'The Conversion of Swearers,' &c.

HAWES, William, an English physician, and founder of the Humane Society, was born at Islington in 1736, and died in 1808, leaving among his works, as a writer, 1. 'An Account of Dr. Goldsmith's last Illness,' 1774. 2. 'Address on Premature Death and Premature Interment,' 1777. 3. 'Examination of the Rev. John Wesley's Primitive Physick,' 1780. 4. 'An Address to the Legislature on the Importance of the Humane Society,' 1781. 5. 'Address to the King and Parliament of Great Britain, with Observations on the General Bills of Mortality.' 6. 'Transactions of the Royal Humane Society, from 1774 to 1784.'

HAWKE, Edward Lord (Hist.) a distinguished naval officer, was the son of Edward Hawke, esq. barrister-at-law. Being bred to the sea-service from his earliest youth, and having passed through the inferior gradations in the navy with credit to himself, he was in 1734 appointed captain of the Wolf; in 1747 promoted to the rank of rear-admiral of the white, when he captured nine men of war of the French fleet; in 1748 was made vice-admiral of the blue; in 1755 vice-admiral of the white; in 1757 he commanded the squadron which was sent to co-operate with sir John Mordaunt in the expedition against Rochefort; in 1759 commanded the grand fleet opposed to that of the French, equipped at Brest for the invasion of this kingdom, which on coming out, he totally defeated; in 1765 he was appointed vice-admiral of Great Britain, and first lord of the Admiralty, and died full of honours in 1781. [Vide Plate XVI]

HAWKE (Her.) the name of a family which has been ennobled by the heroic deeds of the admiral above-mentioned, who, for his numerous and splendid services, was created in 1776 a peer of Great Britain, by the style and title of baron Hawke, of Towton, in the county of York; their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a chevron erminois, between three boatswains' whistles erect proper.

Crest. On a wreath, a hawk rising proper, charged on the breast with a fleur-de-lis.

Supporters. On the dexter side Neptune crowned with an eastern crown, standing upon a dolphin, and holding in his right hand a trident, all proper; on the sinister a sea-horse, holding a union flag in his dexter paw proper.

Motto. "Strike."

HAWKESWORTH, John (Biog.) a miscellaneous writer, was born either in 1715, or 1719, in London, and died in 1773, leaving, 1. 'The Adventurer,' a well-known series of essays, in which he was assisted by Drs. Johnson, Bathurst, and Warton; besides which he published separately, in 1761, 'Edgar and Emmeline,' a fairy tale, and 'Almoran and Hamet,' another popular tale. 2. An edition of Dean Swift's Works, with explanatory Notes, and a Life written upon a plan long before laid down by Johnson in 1765. 3. Three additional volumes of Swift's Letters, with Notes and Illustrations, 1766. 4. A translation of 'Telemachus,' 4to. 1768. 5. 'Journal of a Voyage Round the World,' which contained an account of Captain Cooke's Voyages to the South Sea Islands. He was likewise editor of the 'Gentleman's Magazine,' from 1744, when he succeeded Dr. Johnson until 1760, during which period he contributed many of his earlier productions in verse, as the 'Devil Painter,' a tale; 'Chaise Percée,' from the French; 'A Series of Theological Enquiries;' 'A Thought from Marcus Antoninus,' &c. some of which are signed H. Greville.

HAWKINS, Sir John (Hist.) an able naval commander, was born in 1520; went in 1562 on his first famous voyage, when he commenced the traffic in slaves, which has since been abolished; was rear-admiral in the Victory in 1588, in the engagement with the Armada; obtained the honour of knighthood for his valour on this and other occasions, and died in 1595. He erected an hospital at Chatham for the relief of disabled and diseased seamen.

HAWKINS, Sir Richard, son of the preceding, who shared in his father's glory in the engagement with the Spanish Armada, went afterwards as commander of three vessels to the coast of Brazil, where he was taken by the Spaniards, and after being confined at Peru for two years he returned home, and died in 1622, leaving a work printed and ready for publication, entitled 'The Observations of Sir Richard Hawkins, Knight, in a Voyage into the South Sea, A. D. 1593.'

HAWKINS (Her.) the name of two families enjoying the dignity and title of a baronet.

HAWKINS of Kelston, co. Somerset, received this honour in 1778, in the person of sir Cæsar Hawkins, a distinguished surgeon. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, on a saltire engrailed sable, five fleurs-de-lis or.

Crest. On a mount vert, a hind lodged or.

HAWKINS of Trewithan, co. Cornwall, received this honour in 1791, in the person of sir Christopher Hawkins, recorder of Grampound; their arms, &c. are as follow:

Crest. A cubit arm erect habited argent, charged with two fleurs-de-lis in pale azure, grasping in the hand a baton or, tipped sable.

HAWKINS, Sir John (Biog.) an English writer, descended from sir John Hawkins, the naval commander above-mentioned, was born in 1719, and died in 1789, leaving, 1. An edition of Walton's 'Complete Angler,' 1760; to which he added a 'Life of Walton,' written by himself, and a 'Life of Cotton,' author of the second part, written by the well-known Mr. Oldys; three editions of this work were published before 1784, when a fourth appeared, with considerable addition, and a new Life of Cotton, by himself; and a fifth edition was published by his son after his death. 2. 'General History of the Science and Practice of Music,' 1776. 3. 'The Life and Works of Dr. Samuel Johnson,' 11 vols. 8vo. 1787; besides several pieces of poetry in the Gentleman's Magazine, and elsewhere.

HAWKSMOOR, Nicholas (Biog.) an architect, was born in 1666, and died in 1736, after having executed some important works, as the rebuilding of All Soul's College, Oxford, and the building of some of the fifty new churches, of all which he was the surveyor.

HAWKWOOD, Sir John (Hist.) son of a tanner, of Henningham, in Essex, and a brave officer of the 14th century, after distinguishing himself at sea, in the service of Edward III, went over to Italy, and fought in the service of several of the Italian states, particularly of the Pisans and the Florentines, which latter sustained an irreparable loss at his death in 1394. He was honoured by them with a noble funeral at the public expense, and a magnificent monument.

HAWLES, John (Biog.) an English lawyer, was born at Salisbury in 1645, educated at Winchester School, and Queen's College, Oxford, and died in 1716, leaving, 1. 'Remarks upon the Trials of Edward Fitzharris, Stephen Colledge, Count Coningsmarke, the Lord Russel,' &c. fol. Lond. 1689, &c. 2. 'The Magistracy and Government of England Vindicated,' &c. fol. ibid. 1689.

HAWLEY (Her.) the name of a family of Leybourne Grange, in the county of Kent, of which mention is made as early as the 14th century. Of this family is sir Henry Hawley, who was created a baronet in 1795; whose arms are as follow:

Arms. Vert, a saltire engrailed argent.

HAY, Thomas (Hist.) founder of the noble House of Errol, in Scotland, is said to have been only a countryman in condition; but acquired, about 890, the highest glory and honour by having with his two sons animated his flying countrymen to renew their attack on the Danes, which terminated in the entire defeat of the latter.

HAY, Sir Gilbert, a descendant of the preceding, adhered faithfully to Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, and also to his son, king David, in whose service he fell at the battle of Hallidon-Hill, in 1333.

HAY, Sir Edmund, descended from another branch of the same family, distinguished himself in the service of James IV, by whom he was employed on the most important occasions.

HAY, Sir James, Earl of Carlisle, vide Carlisle.

HAY, Sir George, vide Kinnoul.

HAY, Francis, a descendant of the first earl of Kinnoul, inherited the loyalty of his ancestors, which he testified most ardently during the rebellion, and suffered for it, both in his person and estate.

HAY, Edward, fourth son of the seventh earl of Kinnoul, was constituted Envoy-Extraordinary to his Portuguese majesty in 1757, and Plenipotentiary to the same monarch in 1762. He was afterwards made governor of Barbadoes, and died in 1780.

HAY, George (Ecc.) second son of the seventh earl of Kinnoul, and archbishop of York, took the arms and surname of Drummond, as heir entail to his great grandfather, William Drummond, viscount of Strathallan. He was appointed one of his majesty's chaplains in ordinary in 1737, and prebendary of Westminster in 1743; consecrated bishop of St. Asaph in 1748; translated to the see of Salisbury in 1761, from which he was advanced to the archbishopric of York in the same year, and died in 1777.

HAY (Her.) the surname of many illustrious families, which have flourished for many centuries in Scotland as well as in Italy and Normandy. From this province, where there were lands and a lordship denominated from them, several of the name of Hay accompanied the Conqueror into England in 1066; for, in the list of the great warriors who came over with him, Le Sieur de la Haye is expressly mentioned, besides others of the same name. The two most ancient families of this surname in Scotland are those of Errol and Tweeddale; but, although they use the same armorial bearings, as also do those in Italy, France, and England, there is no other document of their original consanguinity. Sir William Hay, descended from Thomas Hay above-mentioned, was created lord Hay by his cousin, king James I, in 1427. William, his grandson, was advanced to the dignity of earl of Errol by James II in 1452. [Vide Errol] Sir George Hay, the descendant from a younger branch of the same stock, was created in 1627 viscount Dupplin and lord Hay, of Kinfauns; and in 1633 was further advanced to the dignity of earl of Kinnoul; and George Henry, the seventh earl, was raised to the peerage of Great Britain in 1718 by the title of lord Hay, baron Hay, of Pedwardin, co. Hereford. [Vide Kinnoul] Sir James Hay, uncle to the first earl of Kinnoul, was created in 1609 lord Bewlie; and his son James, the second lord Bewlie, was created by king James lord Sawlie, viscount Doncaster, and earl of Carlisle, which titles became extinct at the death of the second earl in 1660. [Vide Carlisle]

HAY, Lord, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Errol.

HAY, another family of the same name, and descended from William de Haya, king's butler in the reign of William I, also enjoys the dignity of the peerage, conferred first on John Hay, of Yester, who was created lord Hay, of Yester, in 1487. John, eighth lord Hay, of Yester, was in 1646 raised to the dignity of earl of Tweeddale; and John, his son, the second earl, was advanced in 1694 to the dignities of marquis of Tweeddale, earl of Gifford, and viscount of Walden, &c. [Vide Tweeddale]

HAY, the name of a family of Old Luce, co. Wigtown, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1798 on sir John Dalrymple Hay. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, between three escutcheons gules, in base; and in chief a yoke proper, a crescent azure.

Crest. A falcon proper, charged on his breast with an escutcheon gules.

Motto. "Serva jugum."

HAY, William (Biog.) an English writer, was born at Glenburne, in Sussex, in 1695, and died in 1755, leaving, 1. 'Essay on Civil Government,' 1728. 2. 'Mount Caburn,' 1730, a poem. 3. 'Remarks on the Laws relative to the Poor, with proposals for their better Relief and Employment,' &c. 1735. 4. 'Religio Philosophi, or the Principles of Morality and Christianity illustrated from a View of the Universe, and of Man's Situation in it,' 1753. 5. 'Essay on Deformity,' in which he alludes to his own bodily defect. 6. A Translation of Sir Hawkins Browne's Work, 'De Immortalitate Animæ.' 7. Some 'Epigrams of Martial' translated and modernised, 1755. His works were collected by his daughter, and published in 2 vols. 4to. with his life prefixed.

HAYDN, Joseph (Biog.) a musical composer of distinction, was born at Rhorau, in Lower Austria, in 1733, and died in

1809, leaving, among his works, 'Stabat Mater,' 'Passione, 'The Creation,' 'Seasons,' &c. [Vide Plate XXXVII]

HAYE, John de la (Biog.) a Jesuit, who died in 1614, at the age of 74, was the author of 'An Evangelical Harmony,' 2 vols. fol. and other works.

HAYE, John de la, a Franciscan, was born in 1593 at Paris, and died in 1661, leaving 'Biblia Magna,' 5 vols. fol. 1643; and 'Biblia Maxima,' 19 vols. fol.

HAYER, John Nicholas Hubert (Biog.) a French ecclesiastic, was born at Sare-Louis in 1708, and died in 1780, leaving, among his works, a 'Treatise on the Immortality of the Soul, 3 vols. 12mo.; and on the Existence of God, &c.

HAYES (Her.) the name of a family which has been settled in Ireland since the grand rebellion, in which Edmund Hayes, the direct ancestor of the present baronet, took a part as a colonel in Cromwell's army; and David Hayes, his grandson, was a captain at the battle of the Boyne. Sir John Macnamara Hayes, his descendant, who was a physician to his majesty's forces serving in North America during the whole of that war, was created a baronet in 1797. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth argent, a chevron azure, between three escutcheons gules, each charged with a leopard's face or; second and third argent, a lion rampant gules, between three pheons azure.

Crest. On a perch proper, a falcon with wings endorsed or, from his mouth pendant an escutcheon as in the arms.

HAYES, Charles (Biog.) an English writer, was born in 1678, and died in 1760, leaving, 1. 'A Treatise of Fluxions,' folio. 2. 'A New and Easy Method to find out the Longitude from observing the Altitudes of the Celestial Bodies,' 1710. 3. 'The Moon, a Philosophical Dialogue,' 1723. 4. 'A Vindication of the History of the Septuagint,' 8vo. 1736. 5. 'A Critical Examination of the Holy Gospels, according to St. Matthew and St. Luke, with regard to the History of the Birth and Infancy of our Lord Jesus Christ, 8vo. 1738. 6. 'Dissertation on the Chronology of the Septuagint,' 8vo. 1741; to which a 'Supplement' was published in 1741. 7. 'Chronographiæ Asiaticæ et Ægyptiacæ Specimen,' &c. 8vo. 1759.

HAYES, William, a musical composer, was born in 1708, and died in 1777 musical professor of Oxford, where he composed many pieces for the different colleges; but his Canons, Catches, and Glees, for the Catch Club in London, procured him the greatest celebrity. He also wrote 'Remarks on the Essay on Musical Expression,' in reply to Mr. Avison, the author, who wished to detract from the merits of Handel.

HAYM, Nicholas Francis (Biog.) a native of Rome, and by profession a musician, who died in 1730, was the author of, 1. 'Il Tesoro Britannico,' 2 vols. 4to. Lond. 1719. 2. 'Notitia de Libri Rari nella Lingua Italiana,' 8vo. 1726, and several times reprinted, but the edition of Milan, 2 vols. 4to. 1771, is reckoned the best. 3. Two tragedies, entitled 'La Merope,' and 'La Demodice.' 4. An edition of Tasso in 2 vols. 4to.; besides two sets of Sonnatas, &c.

HAYMAN, Francis (Biog.) an English artist of Exeter, was born in 1708, and died in 1776, leaving a good reputation for skill in scene painting. He furnished drawings for different publications; as Moore's Fables, Congreve's Works, &c.

HAYNE, Thomas (Biog.) a schoolmaster and native of Leicestershire, was born in 1581, and died in 1645, leaving several legacies for charitable and public purposes, particularly for two scholars in Lincoln College, where he was educated. He wrote, 1. 'Grammatices Latinæ Compendium,' 8vo. 1637 and 1649, with appendices. 2. 'Linguarum Cognatio, seu de Linguis in Genere,' 8vo. Lond. 1639. 3. 'Pax in Terra, seu Tractatus de Pace Ecclesiastica,' 8vo. ibid. 1639. 4. 'The equal Ways of God in rectifying the unequal Ways of Man,' 8vo. ibid. 1639. 5. HEATH, Nicholas (Hist.) Archbishop of York, and Lord High Chancellor of England in Mary's reign, was a native of London, and educated at Christ College, Cambridge. He was deprived of his dignities for refusing to take the oath of supremacy, and died at Cobham in 1560.

HEATH, Thomas, brother of the archbishop, and a Jesuit, acted in 1568 as a missionary in disguise in England, where, by inveighing against the liturgy, he hoped to destroy the church of England; but being at length known as to his real character, he was put into the pillory, and died in prison soon after.

HEATH, James (Biog.) an English historian, was born in London in 1629, educated at Westminster and Christ Church, Oxford, whence he was driven by the usurping powers, and died in 1664, leaving, 1. 'A Brief Chronicle of the late Intestine War in the three Kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland,' 8vo. 1661, afterwards enlarged by the author, and completed from 1637 to 1663 in four parts, thick 8vo.; to this edition was again added a continuation from 1663 to 1675, by John Philips, nephew, by the mother's side, to Milton, fol. 1676. 2. 'Elegy upon Dr. Thomas Fuller,' 1661. 3. 'The Glories and Magnificent Triumphs of the blessed Restoration of King Charles II,' &c. 8vo. 1662. 4. 'Flagellum, or the Life and Death, Birth and Burial of Oliver Cromwell, the late Usurper,' 8vo. 1663; of which a third edition came out with additions in 1665. 5. 'Elegy on Dr. Sanderson, bishop of Lincoln,' 1662. 6. 'A New Book of Loyal English Martyrs and Confessors, who have endured the Pains and Terrors of Death, Arraignment, &c. for the Maintenance of the Just and Legal Government of these Kingdoms, both in Church and State,' 12mo. 1663. 7. 'Brief but exact Survey of the Affairs of the United Netherlands,' &c. 12mo.

HEATH, Benjamin, a lawyer of the last century, who died in 1766, was the author of, 1. 'An Essay towards a demonstrative Proof of the Divine Existence, Unity, and Attributes,' &c. 1740. 2. 'The Case of the County of Devon with respect to the Consequences of the new Excise Duty on Cyder and Perry,' &c. 4to. 1763. 3. 'Notæ sive Lectiones ad Tragicorum Græcorum veterum Æschyli,' &c. 4to. 1752. 4. 'A Revisal of Shakspeare's Text, wherein the Alterations introduced into it by the more modern Editors and Critics are particularly considered,' 8vo. 1765; besides furnishing the Notes on the Eton Greek Tragedies.

HEATHCOTE (Her.) the name of a family which in two of its branches enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet. This family anciently resided in the county of Derby, but for the last century have had their principal possessions in Lincolnshire. Gilbert Heathcote, whose family resided in Chesterfield, co. Derby, was created a baronet in 1732; and William Heathcote, a descendant from the third son of Gilbert Heathcote, of Chesterfield, was created in 1733. The arms, &c. of the elder branch are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth ermine, three pomeys, each charged with a cross or; second and third azure, a saltire engrailed ermine.

Crest. On a mural crown azure, a pomey charged with a cross or, between two wings displayed ermine.

The arms of the junior branch are the same, except the difference and the quartering.

HEATHCOTE, Ralph (Biog.) an English divine, and miscellaneous writer, descended from the family above-mentioned, whose property was injured during the rebellion, was born in 1721, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1795, leaving, 1. 'Historia Astronomiæ, sive de Ortu et Progressu Astronomiæ,' 8vo. 1746. 2. 'Cursory Animadversions upon the Controversy in general,' namely, the Middletonian Controversy on the Miraculous Power, &c.; and another pamphlet on the same subject, entitled 'Remarks upon a Charge by Dr. Chapman,' 1752. 3. 'A Letter to the Rev. Thomas Fothergill, &c. upon the Reasonableness and Uses of commemorating King Charles's Martyrdom,' &c. 4. 'A Sketch of Lord Bolingbroke's Philosophy,' 1755. 5. 'The Use of Reason asserted in Matters of Religion, in answer to a Sermon preached by Dr. Patten, at Oxford, July 13, 1755,' which was followed the next year by a defence of this treatise. 6. 'The Irenarch; or, Justice of the Peace's Manual,' 1771; and a second edition in 1774. 7. 'Sylva; or, the Wood,' a collection of anecdotes, &c.; besides a Life of Dr. Burnet, master of the Charter-House, and some occasional Sermons, &c.

HEBE (Myth.) Ἥβη, a daughter of Jupiter and Juno. Hom. Odyss. l. 11, v. 602.

—— καλλίσφυρον Ἥβην
Παῖδα Διὸς μεγάλοιο καὶ Ἥρης χρυσοπεδίλη.

Hesiod. Theog. v. 921.

Λοισθοτάτην δ' Ἥρην θαλερὴν ποιήσατ' ἄκοιτιν
Ἡ δ' Ἥβην, καὶ Ἄρηα καὶ Εἰλείθυιαν ἔτικτε.

But, according to some mythologists, she was the daughter of Juno alone, who conceived her after eating lettuces. She was cupbearer to the gods.

Hom. l. 4, v. 2.

Ἱδὲ θεοὶ πὰρ' Ζηνὶ καθήμενοι ἠγορόωντο
Χρυσέῳ ἐν δαπέδῳ, μετὰ δὲ σφίσι πότνια Ἥβη.

and was dismissed by Jupiter for falling down in an indecent posture while pouring out nectar in the assembly of the gods, when she was succeeded in her office by Ganymede. Hercules being raised to the rank of a deity, became reconciled to Juno by marrying Hebe.

Pind. Nem. Od. 1.

ὀλβίοις ἐν δώμασι δεξάμενον
θαλερὰν Ἥβαν ἄκοιτιν.

Propert. l. 1, el. 13.

Nec sic cœlestem flagrans amor Herculis Heben
Sensit in Œtæis gaudia prima jugis.

Ovid. Met. l. 9, v. 400.

Hoc illi dederat Junonia muneris Hebe.

Val. Flacc. l. 8, v. 231.

Seu cum cœlestes Alcidæ visere mensas
Jam vaçat, et fessum Junonia sustinet Hebe.

Juvenal Sat. 13, v. 43.

Nec puer Iliacus, formosa nec Herculis uxor
Ad cyathos.

Catul. Carm. 67.

Pluribus at cœli tereretur janua Divis:
Hebe, nec longâ virginitate foret.

She was worshipped at Sicyon under the name of Dia, and at Rome under that of Juventa, or Juventas, or the goddess of youth.

Ovid. de Pont. l. 1, ep. 10.

An edition of the Supplices Mulieres of Euripides in 1763, with the notes of Dr. Middleton; and in 1768 an edition of the two Iphiginiæ, also with his notes. 3. ΑΝΤΙΘΗΡΙΑΚΑ, an Essay on Mithridatium and Theriaca,' 8vo. 1745. 4. 'Gulielmi Heberden Commentarii de Morborum Historia et Curatione,' 8vo. 1802; to which an English edition was annexed by his son. He was also a writer in the 'Athenian Letters;' but more particularly in the work which was begun by the College of Physicians, at his especial recommendation, well known since by the name of the 'Medical Transactions,' in which he first called the attention of the faculty to the disease called Angina Pectoris.

HEBRIDES (Geog.) or Western Islands, in the Latin Ebudæ Insulæ, a cluster of islands, situated on the western coast of Scotland, in the Atlantic Ocean, extending about 180 miles in length, between north latitude 58° and 55°, and from 10 to 30 miles in breadth. The principal of these islands are Lewis, Sky, Barra, Egg, Rum, Muck, Canna, Coll, Tyne, Mull, Lismore, Bute, Arran, and Cambrays, &c.

History of the Hebrides.

In the early periods of history these islands were ruled by their own independent princes, until the eighth century, when the Pictish kingdom was overthrown by Kenneth II, after which they fell under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, who retained them till the 13th century, when the chieftains who ruled over them as independent princes, were styled Lords of the Isles, or Earls of Ross; among these were several who attempted to throw off their allegiance to the Scottish kings, and often invaded the adjacent counties of Scotland. John, the last earl of Ross, entered into an alliance with Edward IV, of England, against his own sovereign, James III; but, in consequence of a change of politics in the English king, who courted the alliance of James, the earl of Ross was reduced to submission, and his earldom was declared by act of Parliament unalienably annexed to the crown; since that period the isles have remained in the peaceable possession of the Scottish and English kings, with occasional insurrections and rebellions occasioned by refractory chieftains.

HEBRON (Bibl.) חברון, or Chebron, one of the most ancient cities, built seven years before Tanais, the capital of Lower Egypt, and rendered famous by Abraham's sojourning in its neighbourhood, and by David's having fixed his kingdom there. It was first taken by Joshua, who killed its king Hotham, when it was allotted to Judah. Gen. xiii; Numb. xiii. 22; Josh. x; 2 Sam. ii. 1, &c.; Well's Sac. Geog.

HEBRONAH (Bibl.) עברנה, an encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness between Jotbathah and Elah. Numb. xxxiii.

HEBRUS (Geog.) a river of Thrace, now Marissa, which was supposed to roll its waters on golden sands, and empty itself into the Ægean Sea by two mouths, opposite to the island of Samothrace. It is celebrated by the poets on account of the head of Orpheus having been thrown into it, after it was cut off by the Ciconian women.

Virg. Georg. l. 4.

Tum quoque marmoreâ caput à cervice revulsum,

HEGESIPPUS, an ecclesiastical historian in the second century, wrote an ecclesiastical history from the commencement of the Christian æra, to his own times, of which a few fragments remain in Eusebius; but the five books of the Jewish war ascribed to him, and inserted in the Bibl. Pat. and printed also separately at Cologne, in 8vo. 1559, are generally supposed to have been the production of a later writer.

HEGESISTRATUS (Hist.) Ἡγησίςρατος, natural son of Pisistratus, and a tyrant of Sigæum, in Troas, defeated the Mitylenians in battle, and, taking the arms of the poet Alcæus among the plunder, he hung them up in the temple of Minerva. Herod. l. 5, &c.

HEGESISTRATUS, a famous diviner of Elis, in Peloponnesus, who, being taken by the Lacedæmonians, and chained by one leg, contrived to make his escape by cutting off the limb. He took refuge in Tegeum, where he was made high-priest; but, falling a second time into the hands of the Lacedæmonians, he was put to death. Herod. l. 9.

HEGISISTRATUS, a native of Ephesus, who, being banished from his country for having killed his parents, went into Asia, and, according to an oracle, founded there Elea, &c. Plut.

HEGETORIDES (Hist.) Ἡγητορίδης, a Thasian who, when the Athenians were besieging the city, and it was forbidden by law on pain of death to speak of peace, went into the forum with a rope round his neck, and, surrendering himself to the mercy of his fellow citizens, boldly advised them to save themselves from destruction by entering into a treaty with their enemies. The Thasians, awakened by this to a sense of their danger, abrogated the law, and pardoned Hegetorides. Polyæn. l. 2, c. 33.

HEIDANUS, Abraham (Biog.) a professor of theology at Leyden, was born at Frankenthal in 1597, leaving, among other things, 'Corpus Theologiæ Christianæ in quindecim Locos digestum,' published after his death in 2 vols. 4to. 1686.

HEIDEGGER, John Henry (Biog.) a protestant divine of Switzerland, was born at Ursevellon, a village near Zurich, in 1633, and died in 1698, leaving, 1. 'Exercitationes Selectæ de Historiâ Sacrâ Patriarcharum,' 2 vols. 4to.; the first volume published at Amsterdam in 1667, and the second in 1671. 2. 'De Ratione Studiorum Opuscula Aurea,' 12mo. Tigur. 1670. 3. 'Tumulus Tridentini Concilii,' 4to. Tigur. 1690. 4. 'Historia Papatûs,' 4to. Amst. 1698; translated into French under the title of 'Histoire du Papisme;' besides 'Exercitationes Biblicæ,' &c. with a life of Heidegger, published in 1700.

HEIDELBERG (Geog.) Heidelberga, an ancient city of Baden, in Germany, situated on the Neckar, at the foot of a mountain called the Giesberg, 10 m. S. S. E. Manheim, 14 N. E. Spire. Lon. 8° 41′ E. lat. 49° 24′ N. Its University was founded in 1386, but suffered materially when the town was taken by the Bavarians in 1622, and all the books, together with a valuable collection of MSS. were carried away and presented to the pope, who deposited them in the Vatican. The foundation of a new library was laid by the celebrated J. G. Grævius, and had been gradually increased to 30,000 volumes, when, in 1815, the books and manuscripts carried to Rome were happily restored.

HEINECCIUS, John Michael (Biog.) a Lutheran divine and historian, was born at Eisemberg in 1674, and died in 1722, leaving, 1. 'Historiam Historiæ,' &c. 4to. Helmstad. 1703. 2. 'Anti-Goslariæ Tutelares,' 4to. Francof. 1706.

3. 'De Sigillis Veterum.' fol. Lips. 1709. 4. 'Eigentliche und Wahrhaftige Abbildung der alten und neuen Græchischen Kirche,' 4to. Leipsig, 1711. 5. 'Dissertatio de Ministris Cæsarum Gentilium Christianis,' 4to. Hal. and Magdeb. 1712, &c. &c.; besides the part which he took with Leuckfeldius in collecting and publishing 'Scriptores Rerum Germanicarum,' fol. Francof. 1707. Fab. Bibl.

HEINECCIUS, John Gottlieb a German lawyer, was born at Eisemberg in 1681, and died in 1741, leaving, 1. 'Antiquitatum Romanarum Jurisprudentiam illustrantium Syntagma,' 2 vols. 8vo. Argentor. 1741; the edition of 1777, which is the fifth, is reckoned the best. 2. 'Historia Juris Civilis Romani et Germanici,' &c. 8vo. 1751, or 1765, which is reckoned better than the edition of Leyden in 1740. 3. 'Elementa Juris Civilis secundum Ordinem Institutionum,' 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1751, but several times previously printed; it has also been translated into French by M. Bertholet, and published in 4 vols. 12mo. Paris. 1805. 4. 'Elementa Juris Civilis secundum Ordinem Pandectarum,' 2 vols. 8vo. Trag. ad Rh. 1772. 5. 'Jurisprudentia Romana et Attica,' &c. 3 vols. fol. Lugd. Bat. 6. 'Elementa Juris Naturæ et Gentium,' which was translated into English by Dr. Turnbull; to these might be added other works, as 'Elementa Philosophiæ Rationalis et Moralis,' &c.; 'Fundamenta Styli Cultioris,' &c. &c. which have been often reprinted separately. His works, collectively, were published under the title of 'Heineccii J. G. Opera ad Univers. Jurisprudentiam, Philosophiam, &c. pertinentia,' 9 vols. 4to. Genev. 1765-68, or 71, or, according to some accounts, 8 vols. 4to. Genev. 1744. Sax. Onom. Vol. VI.

HEINECKEN, Christian Henry (Biog.) a child of wonderful prematurity in the development of his faculties, who was born at Lubeck in 1721, and died at the age of four, when he was enabled to speak German, Latin, French, and Low Dutch; besides which he is said to have been well acquainted with sacred and profane history, with the doctrines of divinity, and their proofs from the Bible, with geography, arithmetic, and a number of other subjects, which are scarcely to be credited.

HEINSIUS, Nicholas (Hist.) a scholar and a diplomatist, the son of Daniel Heinsius, mentioned under Biography, was born at Leyden in 1620, appointed in 1654, by the States of Holland, their resident at the court of Sweden, and in 1669 deputy extraordinary at the court of Muscovy, and died in 1681, leaving, besides his poems, notes and editions of Virgil, Ovid, Valerius Flaccus, Claudian, Prudentius, &c. His poems, which are very much admired, have been several times printed, but the edition of Amsterdam, 1666, is esteemed the best.

HEINSIUS, Daniel (Biog.) a scholar and critic, was born at Ghent, of an illustrious family, in 1580, and died in 1655, after having displayed his talents as a critic upon the works of Silius Italicus, Hesiod, Seneca, Homer, Hesychius, Theophrastus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Ovid, Livy, Terence, Horace, Prudentius, Maximus Tyrius, &c.; besides which he published, 1. 'Poematum nova editio, accedunt ejusdem Libri IV de Contemptu Mortis,' 2 vols. 12mo. Lugd. Bat. 1621; other poems of his were also published by his son, under the title of 'Poemata auctiora, editore Nic. Heinsio,' 12mo. Lugd. Bat. 1640. 2. 'Laus Asini, tertia parte auctior,' 24mo. Lugd. Bat. 1629; the edition of Amsterdam, of 1723, contained only the 'Laus Asini.' This work was translated into French by L. Coupé, 18mo. Paris. 1796. 3. 'Orationes,' 12mo. Amst. 1642, and 1657, &c. 4. 'De Tragœdiæ Constructione Liber,' &c. [Vide Plate XXIII]

HEISTER, Laurence (Biog.) a physician, surgeon, and botanist, was born at Frankfort-on-the-Maine in 1683, and died in 1758, leaving among his works, 1. 'Compendium Anatomicum,' 8vo. 1717; frequently reprinted, and translated into most modern languages. 2. 'Institutiones Chirurgicæ,' 2 vols. 4to. Amstel. 1750, but first published in German in 1718; it has since passed through numerous editions and translations. 3. 'De Collectione Simplicium,' 1722. 4. 'Meditationes et Animadversiones in novum Systema Botanicum Sexuale Linnæi,' an inaugural dissertation, in which he objected to the sexual system of Linneus. 5. 'De Nominum Plantarum Mutatione utili ac noxia,' 1741. 6. 'Systema Plantarum Generale ex Fructificatione, cui annectuntur Regulæ ejusdem,' &c. 1748. 7. 'Descriptio novi Generis Plantæ Africanæ ex Bulborum Classe, cui Nomen Brunsvigia,' fol. Brunsv. 1753.

HELDER (Geog.) a small town of North Holland, opposite the Texel, with a strong fortress to defend its entrance, 24 m. N. Alkmaar. Lon. 4° 43′ E. lat. 53° N. Admiral Van Tromp was killed in 1653 in a naval engagement near this place, which was taken in 1799 by the British forces under sir Ralph Abercrombie.

HELE, Thomas (Biog.) an Englishman by birth, but a French writer, was born in Gloucestershire about 1740, and died at Paris in 1780, leaving several dramatic pieces, as 'Le Jugement de Midas;' 'L'Amant Jaloux;' 'Les Evénemens Imprevus;' which met with extraordinary success.

HELENA (Myth.) Ἑλένη, the most beautiful woman of her age, is said to have sprung from one of the eggs which Leda, the wife of king Tyndarus, brought forth after her amour with Jupiter. She was the sister of Castor and Pollux, the wife of Menelaus, and the mistress of Paris, who, by carrying her away to Troy, occasioned the Trojan war, and the destruction of the city. She returned after this to live with her husband, but, at his death, was driven from Argos, after which she was honoured as a goddess by the Spartans, and murdered, as is said, by Polyxo, a native of Argos. Some mythologists, however, give a different account of her death. Hom. Il. passim.; Pind. Nem. Od. 10; Herod. l. 2; Thucyd. l. 1; Eurip. in Hec. et Troad.; Plat. de Rep.; Apollod. l. 3; Cic. de Offic. l. 3; Diod. l. 4; Hygin. Fab. 77; Virg. Æn. l. 1; Horat. l. 3, od. 3; Senec. in Troad.; Propert. l. 2, el. 15; Lactant. l. 1; Quint. Smyr. l. 10; Max. Tyr. c. 27.

HELENA, a young woman of Sparta, frequently confounded with the preceding, who was going to be sacrificed, when an eagle came and snatched the knife from the hand of the priest, after which the barbarous custom of offering human victims was abolished. Plut. de Hist. Ro. et Gr. 35.

HELENA (Hist.) the sister and wife of Monobazus, king of the Adiabenians, a people of Arabia, became a convert to the Jewish religion; and during a famine which raged in Judæa, she bought up a store of corn, and, sending it to Jerusalem, distributed it among the poor inhabitants. Joseph. Ant. l. 20; Euseb. Hist. l. 2; Adon. in Chron.; Baron. Annal. ann. 44.

HELENA, Flavia Julia, wife of the emperor Valerius Constantius, and mother of Constantine the Great, was repudiated by her husband in 291; but honoured much by her son, who, when he arrived at the empire, bestowed on her the title of Augusta. She died at the age of 80, A.D. 327, in the arms of her son, in whom she had instilled many of the Christian virtues, which she had practised herself. She is said to have assisted at the discovery of the cross of our Saviour, and to have executed a journey to the Holy Land just before her death. [Vide Helena under Numismatics] Eusebius; Socrates; Sozomenes; Evagrius; Theodoret; Morin. Vit. Constant.; Usser. Antiq. Britan.

HELENA, Flavia Maxima, daughter of Constantine the Great, and wife of Julian the Apostate, died in 360, after having been repudiated by her husband. It has been said by some that she died of poison, and by others of mortification. Ammian. Marcellin. l. 16, &c.

HELENA, the wife of Crispus, who is only known by a law of Constantine in the Codex Theodosianus, whereby he pardons all criminals in consequence of the birth of a grandson, the son of Crispus and Helena.

HELENA (Numis.) medals are extant of the first princess of this name, bearing her effigy, as in the annexed figure; inscriptions FL. HELENA AUGUSTA—FL. JULIA HELENA AUGUSTA—HELENA FL. MAX.; on the reverse, SECURITAS REIPUBLICÆ—PIETAS AUGUSTÆ—GLORIA EXERCITUS, &c. Some medals bearing the inscription HELENA N. F., i. e. Helena nobilissima femina, have been attributed to Helena, the wife of Crispus, but on doubtful authority. Tristan. Hist. Comment.; Hard. Oper.; Du Cange, Byzant. Fam.; Band. Rom. Imp.

HELENA (Ecc.) or Selene, a native of Tyre, was mistress to Simon, the magician, who gave out that she was divinely inspired, and was the same Helen as had caused the war of Troy, with other impieties of the like kind. St. Iren. l. 1, c. 20; S. Epiphan. Hær. c. 21; Baron. Annal. ann. 34.

HELENA, St. (Geog.) an island in the Atlantic, standing by itself, detached from any group, about 1200 miles from the nearest land. Lon. 15° 50′ S. lat. 5° 49′ W. The Portuguese discovered it on the 1st of May, 1501, and soon after formed a settlement upon it; but upon the decline of their Indian commerce, the Dutch took possession of it; they however withdrew their colony in 1651 to the Cape of Good Hope, when it was occupied by the English. The Dutch afterwards captured the island in 1665, but were speedily expelled by the gallant captain Minden, who moreover took three Dutch East Indiamen that were in the harbour. In 1673 the king granted this island in perpetuity to the East India Company, by whom it has ever since been retained as a landing and victualling place for their ships. Since that period the island has remained undisturbed, except by occasional internal commotion, as in 1689, when the governor was killed; and in 1811, when several of the ringleaders were put to death. In 1815 it acquired a celebrity by being chosen as the place of Bonaparte's confinement, during which period the India ships were allowed access to it only under particular limitations. St. Helena is 10½ miles long by 6¾ broad, and about 28 miles in circumference; and has but one place which can be called a town, situated in a narrow valley between lofty mountains, called St. James's Valley.

HELENOR (Myth.) a Lydian prince, who accompanied Æneas to Italy, and was killed by the Rutulians.

HELENUS (Myth.) Ἕλενος, a celebrated soothsayer, son of Priam and Hecuba, who, on the destruction of Troy, fell to the share of Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles, whose favour he gained by warning him to avoid a dangerous tempest. He was afterwards married to Andromache, the widow of Hector; and, at the death of Pyrrhus, reigned over a part of Epirus. Hom. Il. l. 6, &c.; Eurip. in Hecub.; Sophoc. in Philoct. l. 2; Dictys. Cret.; Virg. Æn. l. 3; Ovid. Met. l. 13.

HELIADES (Myth.) Ἡλιάδες, the daughters of the Sun and Clymene, who were three in number, Lampetia, Phætusa, and Lampethusa; or, according to Hyginus, seven in number. They are sometimes called Phaetontiades, because they were the sisters of Phaeton, who were changed into poplars. Apollon. Argon. l. 1; Ovid. Met. l. 2, v. 340; Mart. l. 4, ep. 32; Senec. in Herc. Oet. &c.

HELIADES (Geog.) a name for the first inhabitants of Rhodes, because, at the deluge, this island being covered with mud was warmed with the sun, and brought forth men. Diod. l. 5.

HELICAON (Myth.) Ἑλικάων, a Trojan prince, son of Antenor, and husband to Laodice, the daughter of Priam, whose form Iris assumed to inform Helen of the state of the rival armies before Troy. Helicaon was spared by Ulysses on the taking of Troy in consideration of the hospitality which he had received from his father Antenor. Hom. Il. l. 2; Serv. in Æn.

HELICON (Geog.) a mountain of Bœotia, now Zagaro-Vouni, on the borders of Phocis, which was sacred to the Muses, who had a temple there. Strab. l. 8; Mela, l. 2; Ovid. Met. l. 2; Paus. l. 9; Ptol. l. 3; Serv. in Virg. Georg. l. 3.

HELIGOLAND (Geog.) or Helgoland, in Latin Heiligilandia; a group of small islands in the North Sea belonging formerly to Denmark, now to Great Britain, and situated about 28 miles from the mouths of the Weser, Elbe, and Eyder. It was in former ages of much greater extent than at present, having been, it is said, the residence of a chief of the Sicambri, or North Frieslanders; and the seat of worship of the Saxon deity Phoseta, of which its name Heilig Land, signifying in the German Holy Land, is a memorial. It was occupied by the English during the late revolutionary war for the purpose of keeping up a communication with the continent.

HELIODORUS (Hist.) prime minister to Seleucus Philopator, king of Syria, attempted to plunder the temple of the Jews, A. C. 176, by order of his master, but it is related that he was prevented by a supernatural appearance. Joseph. Antiq. l. 12, c. 4.

HELIODORUS (Ecc.) a sophist of Emesus, in Phœnicia, in the age of Theodosius, who was made bishop of Tricca. He wrote a romance in his youth, entitled 'Ethiopica,' of which the best editions are that of Commelin, 8vo. 1596, and that of Bourdelot, Paris, 1619. According to Nicephorus, he was deposed because he would not disavow or cancel this work; but other ecclesiastical writers are silent on this point, which is generally discredited.

HELIODORUS (Biog.) a sophist, whose life is written by Philostratus; also a mathematician of Athens, mentioned by Pliny; and a friend of St. Jerome, to whom some of his epistles are addressed. Plin. l. 33, &c.; S. Hieron. Epist. ad Heliodor.; Philostrat. in Vit. Soph.

HELIOGABALUS (Hist.) Ἑλιογάβαλος, or Elagabalus; the name by which the emperor M. Aurelius Antoninus Bassianus is best known in history, being the name given to his father, Varius Marcellus, because he was the priest of the Sun in Phœnicia. He was invested with the imperial purple after the death of Macrinus; but having displeased the populace by the extravagance of his vices and his cruelties, he was killed in a sedition, and his head was severed from his body in the 18th year of his age, after a reign of three years, nine months, and four days, A. D. 222. [Vide Heliogabalus under Numismatics] Herod. et Lamprid. in Vit.; Eutrop. l. 8; Aurel. Victor. Epit. &c.

HELIOGABALUS (Numis.) or Elagabalus, a name used on some few medals; as IMP. CÆS. M. AUR. ANTO. ELAGAL. PIUS AUG.; or IMP. CÆS. M. AUR. ANTONINUS ELAGABAL. PIUS AUG.—SANCTO DEO SOLI ELAGAB. or ELAGABAL.: but, for the most part, the inscriptions are ANTONINUS PIUS AUG.—ANTONINUS PIUS FELIX AUG.—IMP. C. M. AUR. ANTONINUS, &c.; and in the Greek ΑΝΤΩΝΙΝΟϹ ϹЄΒ.—Μ. ΑΥΡ. ΑΝΤΩΝΙΝΟϹ ΑΥΓΟΥ.—ΑΥΤ. Μ. ΑΥΡ. ΑΝΤΩΝΕΙΝΟϹ CEB. &c.: on the reverse, ABUNDANTIA AUG.—ADVENTUS AUG.—ÆQUITAS AUG. &c.—ANNONA AUGUSTI—CONCORD. MILIT. or EXERCITUS, &c.—CONSERVATOR AUG.—FELICITAS AUG.—FELICITAS TEMP. &c.—FIDES EXERCITUS, &c.—FORTUNA REDUX, &c.—HILARITAS AUG.—INVICTUS SACERDOS AUG.—JOVI CONSERVATORI; VICTORI, &c.—JULIA SOEMIAS, &c. JUVENTA IMPERII—LÆTITIA PUBLICA—LIBERAL. AUG. &c.—MARS VICTOR.—MINERVA VICTRIX.—MUNIFICENTIA AUG.—PROVID. DEOR.

&c. SACER DEI SOLIS ELAGAB. &c.—SALUS ANTONINI AUG. &c.—SANCTO DEO SOLI ELAGAB. &c.—SPEI PERPETUÆ, &c.—SUMMUS SACERDOS AUG.—VICTORIA AUG. &c.; to which are added on some the titles of P. M. i. e. Pontifex Maximus; TR. P. I—V. i. e. tribunitia potestate, from one to five times; and COS. I—III, or consul, from one to three times, from A. D. 218 to 222. As the medals of Caracalla and Heliogabalus are both marked with the inscription M. AUR. ANTONINUS, they are to be distinguished by the effigy which they bear. [Vide Plate I] Heliogabalus is for the most part represented without a beard. Vaill. Num. Gr. &c.; Patin. Num. Imp.; Tristan. Hist. Comm.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Morell. Thes. Imp. Numis.; Hard. Oper.; Pembr. Mus.; Oiscl. Num. Sel.; Eckel. Cat. &c.

HELIOPOLIS (Geog.) Ἡλιόπολις, i. e. the city of the sun; the name of two celebrated cities, namely, 1. A city of Egypt, now Matarea, in which was a temple sacred to the Sun. Cic. de Nat. Deor. l. 3; Diodor. l. 1; Strab. l. 17; Plin. l. 36; Ptol. l. 4. 2. A city of Cœlo-Syria, at the foot of Mount Libanus, whither a colony being sent by Julius Cæsar, it was called Julia; and receiving afterwards an accession from Augustus, the name of Augusta was added. [Vide Heliopolis under Numismatics] Strab. l. 16; Plin. l. 5; Ptol. l. 5; Sozom. l. 1; Zosim. l. 1.

HELIOPOLIS (Numis.) some few medals are ascribed to the Heliopolis in Egypt, bearing the head of Sol, and Λ. ΙΔ, i. e. Anno 14, the date of Adrian's reign; or a mutilated inscription, ΛΙΟΠΟΛΕΙΤΩΝ for ΗΛΙΟΠΟΛΕΙΤΩΝ; but a far greater part are ascribed, without any doubt, to the town of Syria as a colony, struck in honour of Adrian, Septimus Severus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, Geta, Macrinus, Philippus sen. Otacilia, Philippus jun., Valerianus, sen., and Gallienus, bearing, for the most part, for its type the ordinary symbol of a colony; namely, a husbandman driving oxen, or a figure of Mercury, &c.; inscriptions, COL. HEL.—COLONIA JUL*ia* AUG*usta* FEL*ix* HEL*iopolis*—COL*onia* HEL*iopolis* LEG*ionum* V. MACED*onicæ* AUG*ustæ*—COL*onia* JUL*ia* AUG*usta* FEL*ix* HEL*iopolis* CERT*amen* SAC*rum* CAP*itolinum* OECU*menicum* ISEL*asticum* HEL*iopolitanum*. Medals bearing this and similar inscriptions have three urns with palm branches for their type to denote the celebration of games in the reign of Valerian; this game was called sacrum et Capitolinum, because they were celebrated in honour of Jupiter Capitolinus; œcumenicum, because celebrated not only by natives of Syria, but by all who resorted thither; Iselasticum, from εἰσελαύνω, because the victors were carried back to their homes. One inscription designates the situation of this place as ΗΛΙΟΠΟ. ΠΡΟϹ. ΛΙΒΑΝΟΝ. Vaill. Col.; Hard. Oper. &c.

HELL, Maximilian (Biog.) a mathematician, an astronomer, and a Jesuit, was born at Chemnitz, in Hungary, in 1720, and died in 1792, leaving, 1. A new edition of Crevellius' 'Arithmetica Numeralis et Literalis,' 1745. 2. 'Adjumentum Memoriæ Manuale Chronologico-Genealogico-Historicum,' 1750, which has passed through different translations and editions, the best of which is reckoned to be that of 1774. 3. 'Elementa Arithmeticæ,' 1752. 4. The 'Ephemerides,' which contained the result of his astronomical observations every year from 1757 to 1767.

HELLANICUS (Biog.) a Greek historian of Mitylene, who wrote an account of the founders of the most famous towns in every kingdom. He died, A. C. 411, in the 85th year of his age. Cic. de Orat. l. 2, c. 53; Aul. Gell. l. 15; Paus. l. 2.

HELLANICUS, an historian of Miletus, who wrote a description of the earth. Voss. Hist. Græc. l. 1.

HELLAS (Geog.) an ancient name of Thessaly.

HELLE (Myth.) a daughter of Athamas and Nephele, who fled from her father's house, with her brother Phryxus, to escape the oppression of her mother Ino, and was drowned in her way to Colchis in that part of the sea which was called after her, Hellespont. [Vide Hellespont] Phryxus, after having given his sister a burial on the neighbouring coasts, pursued his journey, and arrived safe in Colchis. Diod. l. 4; Hygin. P. A.; Ovid. Her. &c.; Paus. l. 9, &c.

HELLEN (Myth.) Ἕλλην, the son of Deucalion and Pyrrha, who is said to have reigned in Phthiotis about 1495 years A. C., and gave the name of Hellenians to his subjects. His sons Æolus, Dorus, and Xuthus, or rather his grandson Ion, the son of Xuthus, gave their respective names to the Æolians, Dorians, and Ionians. Apollod. l. 1; Diod. l. 5; Paus. l. 6.

HELLESPONTUS (Geog.) Ἑλλησπόντος, a narrow strait between Europe and Asia, near the Propontis, now the Dardanelles, which received its ancient name from Helle, who was drowned there. [Vide Helle] It afterwards became memorable by the death of Leander.

Ovid, in Epist. Leand.

Hoc mare cùm primum de virgine nomina mersi
Quæ tenet, est nactum, tale fuisse puto,
Et satis amissa locus hic infamis ab Helle,
Utque mihi pareat, crimine nomen habet.

It is called πλατὺς, by Homer.

Hom. Il. l. 7, v. 86.

Σῆμα τε οἱ χεύωσιν ἐπὶ πλατεῖ Ἑλλησπόντῳ.

Also Quintus Calaber.

Q. Calab. l. 9.

Μεσσηγὺς τε πόλησς ἰδ' εὐρέος Ἑλλεσπόντα.

Ovid calls it longus.

Ovid. Met. l. 13.

Longus in angustum quà clauditur Hellespontus

Homer gives it likewise the epithet of ἀγάῤῥοος.

Hom. Il. l. 2, v. 845.

Ὅσσους Ἑλλήσποντος ἀγάῤῥους ἐντὸς ἐέργει.

So Musæus.

Νήξομαι Ἑλλήσποντον ἀγάῤῥοον.

Catullus ascribes rapidity to it.

Catull. in Epith.

Quæ passim rapido diffunditur Hellesponto.

Xerxes built a bridge over it when he invaded Greece. Herod. l. 7; Polyb. l. 4; Liv. l. 31; Strab. l. 13; Mel. l. 1; Plin. l. 8; Ptol. l. 5.

HELLESPONTUS, the name given to the country on the Asiatic coast, which runs along the Hellespont. Cic. in Verr. 1, &c.; Strab. l. 12; Plin. l. 5.

HELLESPONTUS (Numis.) this strait is represented on a medal of Abydos, in allusion to the tale of Hero and Leander.

HELLOPIA (Geog.) a small country of Eubœa.

HELLOT, John (Biog.) a French chemist, was born in 1686, and died in 1766, leaving, 1. A translation of Schlutter's work, entitled 'De la Fonte des Mines,' &c. 2 vols. 1750—1753. 2. 'L'Art de la Teinture des Laines et Etoffes de Laines,' 12mo. 1750; besides having compiled the 'Gazette de France,' from 1718 to 1732, and made several contributions to the Memoires de l'Academie.

HELMICH, Werner (Biog.) a Dutch Protestant divine, and one of the early promoters of the reformation, was born at Utrecht in 1551, and died in 1608, leaving an Analysis of the Psalms, and 'Gladius Goliathi,' a controversial work against Coster the Jesuit.

HELMONT, John Baptist Van (Biog.) generally called Van Helmont, a natural philosopher, of a good family, so called from a castle in Brabant, was born in 1577, and died in 1644, leaving, 1. 'De Magnetica Vulnerum Naturali et Legitima Curatione contra Johannem Robertum, Soc. Jesu HENIOCHI (Geog.) a people of Asiatic Sarmatia, descended from Amphytus and Telechius, who were said to be ἡνίοχοι, i. e. charioteers of Castor and Pollux, whence they derived their name. The country they inhabited is now called Arregaria, in Circassia.

HENLEY, Morton Eden Baron (Hist.) son of sir Robert Eden, bart. and brother of the first lord Auckland, was appointed in 1776 Minister Plenipotentiary to the Elector of Bavaria, and Minister to the Diet at Ratisbon; in 1769 Envoy Extraordinary to the court of Copenhagen; in 1783 Envoy Extraordinary to the court of Dresden; in 1791 Minister Plenipotentiary to the Duke of Saxe-Gotha; in the same year, Envoy Extraordinary, and Minister Plenipotentiary to the court of Berlin; in 1793 Ambassador and Minister Plenipotentiary to the court of Madrid; and the same year reappointed to the court of Vienna till 1799.

Henley, Baron (Her.) the title conferred in 1799 on Morton Eden, the above-mentioned diplomatist.

Henley, Robert, Earl of Northington, vide Northington.

Henley, Anthony (Biog.) a gentleman descended from the Henleys, of Henley, in Somersetshire, and son of sir Robert Henley, died in 1711, after having distinguished himself by his patronage of learning. He also contributed to the 'Tattler,' and the 'Medley,' and wrote several poems for music, and an Opera entitled 'Alexander,' which he left unfinished. His second son Robert, rose to the dignity of the peerage. [Vide Northington]

Henley, John, well known by the name of "Orator Henley," was born at Melton Mowbray, Leicestershire, in 1692, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1756, after having miserably disgraced his profession by his buffoonery and low arts, leaving among his publications 'Oratory Transactions,' a work which contains some account of himself; also 'Universal Grammar;' 'Esther,' a poem; and a weekly paper of unintelligible nonsense, entitled 'The Hyp Doctor.'

HENNIKER (Her.) the name of a family which has been resident in the county of Kent from the time of Henry II, and enjoys, in different branches, the dignity of the peerage, as also the dignity and title of a baronet. Sir John Henniker, bart. was created in 1800 a peer of Ireland, by the title of lord Henniker, of Stratford upon Slaney, co. Wicklow; and his third son sir Brydges Trecotheck, a lieutenant-general in the army, was created a baronet in 1813. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, 1st and 4th or, on a chevron gules, between two crescents in chief, and an escallop shell azure, three estoiles argent for Henniker. 2d and 3d azure, three pillars of the Corinthian order, on the top of each a bull or, for Major.

HENNINGS, Jerome (Biog.) an historian of the 16th century, and a native of Germany, was the author of, 1. 'Genealogiæ Familiarum Saxonicarum,' fol. Hamb. 1596. 2. 'Theatrum Genealogicum omnium Ætatum et Monarchiarum Familias complectens,' 7 vols. fol. Magdeb. 1598.

HENNUYER, John (Ecc.) bishop of Lisieux, so justly celebrated for his humanity at the time of the dreadful massacre of St. Bartholomew, was born at St. Quentin, in Picardy, in 1497, made confessor to Henry II of France, and in 1557 bishop of Lodéve. In 1560 he was nominated to the see of Lisieux, and when the royal lieutenant of the province communicated to him the order to massacre all the Protestants in the diocese, he signed a formal and official opposition to the order. He died in 1577, universally respected.

HENRY (Hist.) the name of several emperors, kings, princes, and illustrious persons.

German Emperors of this Name.

HENRY I, surnamed the Fowler, son of Otho, duke of Saxony, succeeded Conrad, his brother-in-law, in 919, and died in 936, at the age of 60, after having strengthened the empire by his prudent measures. He was succeeded by Otho I. The effigy of this and the following emperors are given, as in the annexed figures.

HENRY II, surnamed the Lame, also the Pious, and the Hungarian Apostle, was born in 972, elected after his cousin Otho III, in 1002, and died in 1024, leaving many memorials of his piety and benevolence. He was succeeded by Conrad II.

HENRY III, duke of Franconia, surnamed the Black, succeeded his father Conrad III, in 1039, and died in 1056, after having made war in Poland, Hungary, and Bohemia, and expelled Benedict IX, Sylvester IV, and Gregory VI, in the room of whom he elected Clement II, and was crowned by him. He was succeeded by HENRY IV, his son, surnamed the Aged, or Great, who was then only five years old; after the prudent administration of the government by his mother Agnes, he begun to reign in 1062, and was deposed in 1097 by his sons, through whose unnatural rebellion he died at Liege in 1106, a wanderer and an outcast. Henry was embroiled with the pope Gregory VII, who aimed at increasing the papal power by the humiliation of the German emperor, for which he was deposed by Henry, and another pope elected in his place. This emperor is said to have been present at not less than 66 battles.

HENRY V, surnamed the Young, deposed his father in 1106, but pursued his measures in opposing the encroachments of the papal see. He compelled Pascal II to restore to him the power of ecclesiastical investitures, nevertheless he was in his turn obliged, by the force of ecclesiastical excommunications, to submit to the new pope Gelasius II, whose election he had opposed. Henry died at Utrecht in 1125. He was succeeded by Lotharius II.

HENRY VI, surnamed the Severe, succeeded his father Frederic Barbarossa, on the throne of Germany, in 1190, and was poisoned in 1197, aged 32, by his wife Constance, whose family he had treated with great cruelty. He was succeeded by Philip.

HENRY VII, was elected emperor after Albert in 1308, and died in 1313, at the age of 51; when after an interregnum, he was succeeded by Frederick III. He visited Italy, where the factions of the Guelphs and Gibelins had spread devastation, and in the midst of these public disorders, he was obliged to enter Rome sword in hand, where he proceeded to be crowned.

HENRY, son of the emperor Conrad III, was associated with his father in the empire in 1148, when he led a powerful army to the Holy Land, at the same time as Lewis the Younger, and died shortly after in 1149.

HENRY, count of Raspenburg, and margrave of Thuringia, was named emperor on the deposition of Frederick II in 1246, but died the following year.

Emperor of Constantinople.

HENRY, one of the French emperors of Constantinople, succeeded his brother Baldwin VIII, count of Flanders, who had been elected emperor in 1204. He was placed on the throne in 1206, and died of poison in 1216, at the age of 40.

Kings of France.

HENRY I, succeeded his brother Robert in 1031, and died in 1060, at the age of 55, after having defeated his enemies by the assistance of Robert, father of William the Conqueror. He was succeeded by Philip I. His effigy, as also that of the following prince, are given, as in the annexed figures.

HENRY II, succeeded his father Francis I in 1547, and died of a wound accidentally given in a tournament by Montgomery, in 1559, at the age of 41, after having been engaged in wars with England, in which he was successful; and against the emperor Charles V, by whom he was severely beaten at the battle of St. Quentin, and elsewhere. He was succeeded by his eldest son Francis II.

HENRY III, third son of Henry II, was elected king of Poland in 1573, and quitted this dignity three months after to succeed his brother Charles IX, on the French throne. In 1575 he made peace at Blois, with the Huguenots, to whom he granted religious toleration; but this did not put an end to the intestine commotions which agitated France, through the violence of the two powerful parties, namely, that of the league with Henry, duke of Guise, at their head; and that of the Huguenots, headed by Henry of Navarre; which were no less opposed to the royal authority than to each other. After endeavouring in vain to destroy the league, by causing the assassination of the duke of Guise, Henry was stabbed by a fanatical priest, and died of the wound in 1589, aged 39, when he was succeeded by

HENRY IV, surnamed the Great, who succeeded to the kingdom of Navarre in 1572, and after placing himself at the head of the Huguenots, he, by making a profession of the Roman Catholic religion, ascended the throne of France in 1589, at the death of Henry III, as the descendant of Lewis IX, and perished by the dagger of the assassin Ravillac, who stabbed him in 1610 in his coach, in the streets of Paris. [Vide Plate V]

Kings of England.

HENRY I, duke of Normandy, and third son of William the Conqueror, succeeded to the crown on the death of William Rufus in 1100, during the absence of his elder brother Robert, in Italy, whom on his return he defeated and kept in confinement at Cardiff Castle. Henry died in Normandy in 1135, at the age of 68, after having relieved his English subjects from the galling oppressions laid upon them by his father. He was succeeded by Stephen. The effigies of this and the following kings are given in Plates III and IV.

Henry II, son of Geoffry Plantagenet, duke of Anjou, by Matilda, daughter of Henry I, was born in 1132, made duke of Normandy in 1150, was acknowledged successor to the English throne, which he ascended at the death of Stephen, and died in 1189. His reign, which was marked by peculiar vigour and wisdom, has been rendered memorable by the murder of Thomas à Becket, who insolently and ungratefully set himself up in opposition to his royal master.

Henry III, the son and successor of John, begun his long, but unhappy reign, in 1216, which was terminated in 1272, at the age of 65, after his having experienced great vicissitudes during his struggle with his rebellious subjects. He was succeeded by

Henry IV, son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, and third son of Edward III, who ascended the throne in 1399, after the deposition of his brother Richard II, and by this usurpation gave rise to the civil wars which afterwards raged so long between the Houses of York and Lancaster. He died in 1413, at the age of 46, after a prudent reign, and was succeeded by his son

Henry V, who was as distinguished for his greatness as a monarch, as he had been for his debaucheries as a prince, died in 1422, at the age of 36, after a glorious reign, rendered memorable by his victories in France, which made him master of that kingdom.

Henry VI, son of Henry V, was only ten months old when he succeeded to the throne of his father, and after a desperate struggle with the House of York, in which the talent of his queen Margaret, of Anjou, for some time upheld the fallen fortunes of this prince, he fell at length into the hands of the victor, and being sent to the Tower, was soon after murdered in 1471, as is supposed, by the duke of Gloucester, Richard III.

Henry VII, son of Edmund, earl of Richmond, and of Margaret, of the House of Lancaster, invaded England by the assistance of the duke of Britanny, and of Charles VIII, and by the defeat and death of the usurper Richard III, at the battle of Bosworth Field in 1485, secured to himself the English throne, on which he sat with distinguished honour, until his death in 1509, at the age of 52. His marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Edward IV, united the claims of the two rival Houses, and thus put an end to a contention which had deluged England with blood.

Henry VIII, son and successor to Henry VII, ascended the throne in 1509, at the age of 18, and wrote a book in defence of the papal power against Luther. but his attachment to the see of Rome soon after vanished, when the pope refused to grant him a divorce from his queen Catherine, that he might marry his new favourite Anne Bolyn. He then proclaimed himself head of the church, abolished all monasteries, and seizing the ecclesiastical funds, lavished them wantonly on his favourites. The death of his ill-fated queen Anne Bolyn, on the scaffold, was succeeded by his marriage the next day with Jane Seymour, who, dying the following year in childbed, he married Anne of Cleves, whom he shortly after divorced, that he might take for his fifth wife Catherine Howard, but she being beheaded on a charge of adultery, he married his sixth and last queen, Catherine Parr, who by her prudence, escaped the fate that awaited her, and survived him. He expired in 1547, at the age of 57, after having rendered his name odious to posterity by his lust, cruelty, and violence. Sir Thomas More, Fisher, and Cromwell, and other illustrious characters, were sacrificed to his caprice and his passions.

Henry, prince of Wales, eldest son of James I, a promising youth, died in 1612, at the age of 18. [Vide Plate VIII]

Kings and Princes of Poland.

Henry, brother of Boleslaus IV, distinguished himself by his valour and piety in the crusades, and was afterwards killed in battle against the Prussians.

Henry, surnamed the Honest, succeeded Lechus VII in 1290, as duke of Poland, but was opposed by Uladislaus Locticus, and died of poison about five years after.

Henry, vide Henry III of France.

King of Bohemia.

Henry, duke of Carinthia, succeeded to the throne of Bohemia in 1307, after Rudolphus, and was deposed in the public assembly in 1320.

Kings of Castille.

Henry I, son of Alphonsus IX, succeeded his father at the age of seven or eight, in 1214, and died in 1217, in consequence of a tile falling on his head. The effigies of this and the three following princes are given, as in the annexed figures.

Henry II, count of Trastamare, natural son of Alphonsus XI, by his mistress Elenora de Gusman, opposed his brother, Peter the Cruel, in whose place he was proclaimed king in 1365, and notwithstanding the assistance which Peter received from Edward the Black Prince, he was at length defeated and killed in 1368. Don Henry died in 1379, after a vigorous reign of 14 years.

Henry III, son of John, and grandson of Henry II, succeeded his father at the age of 11, in 1390, and died at Toledo in 1406, after having remedied many abuses, and introduced good regulations into his state.

Henry IV, surnamed the Impotent, and the Liberal, succeeded his father John II, in 1454, and died in 1474.

Henry, of Castille, son of Ferdinand III, engaged in a war against his brother Alphonsus, king of Castille, and of Leon, in which he was aided by Charles I, king of Sicily, but proving ungrateful for the favours he had received, he was defeated in battle by the same Charles, and being taken prisoner, was carried about in a cage, with a chain about his neck.

King of Denmark.

Henry, vide Eric.

Kings of Jerusalem and Cyprus.

Henry, of Champagne, surnamed the Younger, succeeded his father Henry I, surnamed the Rich, as count of Champagne, and going to the Holy Land, he married Isabella, queen of Jerusalem, and died of a fall in 1197.

Henry de Lusignan, vide Lusignan.

Henry II, son of Hugh III, succeeded his brother John about 1283, as king of Jerusalem, and died without posterity.

Kings of Navarre.

Henry I, surnamed the Fat, king of Navarre, son of Theobald, surnamed the Posthumous, succeeded his brother Theobald II, as king, in 1270 or 1271, and died of suffocation from fat in 1274.

Henry, d'Albret II, was born at Sanguesse in 1503, and succeeded his father on the throne of Navarre in 1516, of which he was deprived by the usurper Ferdinand, of Arragon, in 1520, and died in 1544.

Henry (Ecc.) patriarch of Constantinople for the Latins, was legate of the Holy See in that city in the time of Clement VI.

Henry, surnamed the Pacific, bishop of Liege, was the son of Frederick, count of Toul, nearly allied to Godfrey, duke of Boulogne, was nominated to the bishopric of Liege in 1075, and died in 1091, after having distinguished himself by his zeal in promoting the good order of his church.

Henry, an heresiarch in the 12th century, who died in prison about 1148, denied the necessity of any external church or fixed form of worship.

Henry, archbishop of Rheims, wrote two letters; namely, one to the pope Alexander III, and another to the cardinals in favour of Dreux, chancellor of the church of Noyen, who had fallen under the papal censure. These letters were published by M. Baluze in his 'Miscellanea.' The reply of the pope to the archbishop, containing a civil refusal of his request, is also in the same collection.

Henry, the name of three bishops of Nantes. Henry I was consecrated in 1228, and died in 1234. Henry II, surnamed of Calestria, was elected in 1292, and died about 1297. Henry III succeeded Henry II, and died in 1304, after having assisted at the council of Chateau-Gontier, and also signed the reply of the clergy to Philip the Fair as to the manner in which the differences between the king and the pope, Boniface VIII, might be terminated.

Henry de Suze, archbishop of Embrun, and cardinal bishop of Ostia, on that account surnamed Ostiensis, is well known for his knowledge in the canon and civil law, which he displayed in his work, entitled, 'Summa Ostiensis,' &c. Basil. 1537, 1575, and Lugd. 1588, 1597; besides a Commentary on the Decretals,' &c. Rom. 1470, &c.

Henry of Huntingdon (Biog.) an ancient historian, whose history of England to 1154 was published by Saville in 1576. He likewise wrote 'De Contemptu Mundi.'

Henry, the Minstrel, or Blind Harry, a Scotch poet of the 15th century, was the author of 'Actis et Deidis of Syr William Wallace;' the only manuscript of which that is known is in the Advocate's library at Edinburgh, and bears date 1688. The first printed edition was that of Edinburgh, 1570; but that of the Morisons of Perth, in 3 vols. 12mo. 1790, is reckoned the most complete.

Henry, Philip, a nonconformist, who is held in great repute by his party, was born at Whitehall in 1631, educated at Westminster under Dr. Busby, and at Christ-Church, Oxford, and died in 1696, after having spent the last 28 years of his life in preaching to his followers in a barn.

Henry, Matthew, son of the preceding, and a professed Dissenter, was born in 1662, and died in 1714, leaving numerous works written after the style of his party. He likewise published a life of his father.

Henry de St. Ignace, a Carmelite, died about 1720, at an advanced age, leaving several theological works, the principal of which is his 'Ethica Amoris,' 3 vols. fol. Leod. 1709.

Henry, Nicholas, a Hebrew scholar, was born at Verdun in 1692, and was killed by the fall of an entablature in the street in 1752, leaving a Hebrew Grammar in folio, and an edition of Vatable's Bible, in 2 vols. fol. which was considered as good.

Henry, Robert, author of a History of England on a new plan, and son of James Henry, of Muirton, in Sterlingshire, was born in 1718, and died in 1790. His History of Great Britain was first published in 1771, the second volume in 1774, the third in 1777, the fourth in 1780, the fifth in 1785, and the sixth, which was posthumous, in 1793, and has been published both in the 4to. and the 8vo. form. A history of England, 'from the Death of Henry VIII to the Accession of James VI,' was published by James Pettit Andrews as a Continuation of Dr. Henry's, and professedly on the same plan. [Vide Plate XXVI]

Henry, Thomas, a physician and chemist of Manchester, who died in 1816, at the age of 82, was a considerable practical chemist. His son William is the well known author of a work on that science, entitled 'The Elements of Experimental Chemistry,' which has passed through several editions.

HENRYSON (Biog.) or Henderson, Robert, a Scotch poet in the reign of Henry VIII, was the author of 'Fabils,' printed at Edinburgh in 1621, and 'Testament of Fair Creseide,' which is to be found in the common editions of Chaucer's works; besides other things mentioned by lord Hailes in his 'Ancient Scottish Poems;' Irving's 'Lives of the Scotish Poets;' and Ellis's 'Specimens.'

HEPBURN (Her.) the name of a family of Smeaton, co. Haddington, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1815 on sir George Buchan Hepburn, one of the Barons of the Exchequer in North Britain. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth gules, on a chevron argent, a rose between two lions rampant of the first for Hepburn; second argent, three lions' heads erased gules for Buchan; third argent, an anchor in bend azure; on a chief of the last three cranes or, for Beck.

Crest. A horse argent, furnished gules, tied to a yew tree proper for Hepburn; the sun in the dexter chief, with a sun-flower in full blow open to it proper, for Buchan.

Motto. "Domum antiquam redintegrare."

Hepburn, James Bonaventura (Biog.) a philologist, was born at Hamstocks, in Haddingtonshire, in 1573, and is supposed to have died about 1620, leaving among his works a Hebrew and Chaldaic Dictionary, and an Arabic Grammar, 4to. Rom. 1591; besides translations from Hebrew MSS. most of legendary authority.

Hepburn, Robert, a miscellaneous writer, and a native of Scotland, was born in 1690, and died in 1712, leaving 'The Tatler, by Donald Macstaff of the North,' a periodical paper, which he made the vehicle of personal attack on living characters.

HEPHÆSTII (Geog.) mountains of Lycia, which, according to Pliny, were to be set on fire by the application of a burning torch.

HEPHÆSTION (Hist.) a Macedonian, well known as the friend and companion of Alexander the Great, who died at Ecbatana, A. C. 325. The king was so inconsolable at the loss of his friend that he ordered the sacred fire to be extinguished, which had never been done but at the death of a Persian monarch. Arrian. Alex. Exped. l. 7; Q. Curt. l. 3, &c.; Ælian. Var. Hist. l. 7; Plut. in Alex.

HEPHÆSTIUM (Geog.) Ἡφαιστίον, the name of four places; namely, a people of Acamantis; a town of Lemnos; another of Lycia; and a small island between Melites and Gaulus.

Hephaestium (Numis.) some medals are extant bearing the inscription ΗΦΑΙ; but whether they belong to the town of Lemnos or Lycia is doubtful.

HEPHER (Bibl.) חפר, father of Zelophehad, head of a family. Numb. xxvi.

Hepher, a place in Canaan, the king of which was killed by Joshua. Josh. xii.

HEPHZIBAH (Bibl.) חפציבה, the mother of Manasseh, king of Judah. 2 Kings xxi.

HERACLEA (Geog.) Ἡράκλεια, the name of very many towns called after Hercules, in honour of whom they were built; the principal of these are a town of Pontus, or Bithynia; of Acarnania; of Lucania; of Metapontus; of Lydia; of Macedonia; of Gallia Narbonensis; of Sicily; of Cœlosyria, of which a farther account may be found under Numismatics.

Heraclea (Numis.) many coins or medals are extant bearing the inscription ΗΡΑΚΛΕΙΩΝ, ΗΡΑΚΛΕΩΝ, ΗΡΑΚΛΕΩΤΑΝ, ΗΡΑΚΛΕΩΤΩΝ, ΗΡΑΚΛΗΙΩΝ, ΗΡΑΚΛΗΤΩΝ; but it is not possible to ascribe many of these with certainty to any particular city for want of some specific mark, except Heraclea of Bithynia, which is known by the inscription ΗΡΑΚΛΕΙΑC ΕΝ ΠΟΝΤΩ; ΗΡΑΚΛΕΩΤΑΝ. Ε. ΠΟΝΤΩ; and on a medal of Gordian, ΗΡΑΚΛΕΩΤΑΝ ΜΑΤΡΟ= ΑΠΟΙΚΩΝ ΠΟΛΕΩΝ; i. e. Heracliotarum Matris Coloniarum Civitatum vel Deductarum Urbium. This town struck medals as an independent state, and also in honour of Commodus, Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, Geta Macrinus, Diadumenianus, Heliogabalus, Alexander Severus, Balbinus, Gordianus Pius, Gallienus. The figure of Hercules with his attributes is the common type on most medals struck by towns of this name. Goltz. Sicil.; Vaillant. Num. Gr.; Parut. Sicil.; Hunt. Num. Vet. Urb. &c.

HERACLEONAS (Hist.) vide Constantine IV.

HERACLEOTES (Biog.) a stoic of Heraclea, who professed to believe, according to the doctrine of his sect, that pain was no evil, but was compelled to acknowledge his error when attacked with a severe illness, accompanied by extreme pain. Diog. in Vit.

HERACLIANUS (Hist.) a general of Honorius, who, after having served the emperor faithfully, attempted to set himself up, but was killed at Carthage in 414 His effigy is given on a coin as in the annexed figure.

HERACLIDES (Biog.) a philosopher of Heraclea, in Pontus, for some time a disciple of Aristotle, who wanted it to be believed that he was carried to heaven on the day of his death. Cic. Tusc. l. 5; Diog. in Pyth.

Heraclides, an historian of Pontus, who flourished A. C. 177.

HERACLITUS (Biog.) a Greek philosopher of Ephesus, A. C. 500, who professed to mourn over the follies of mankind, and to shun human society. [Vide Plate XXI] Diog. in Vit.; Clem. Alex.; Strom. 5.

Heraclitus, an ecclesiastical writer in the second century, quoted by Eusebius and St. Jerome.

HERACLIUS, Flavius (Hist.) an emperor, and son of Heraclius, a governor of Africa, succeeded to the empire on the death of Phocas, whose head he caused to be cut off, in 610, and died in 641, after having made peace with the Persians, who had harassed the empire. [Vide Heraclius under Numismatics]

Heraclius II, another name for Constantine III.

Heraclius (Numis.) the medals of the first emperor of this name bear on the obverse his effigy, as in the annexed figure: inscription, D. N. HERACLIUS P. F. AUG; sometimes with the heads of the emperor and his son Constantine: inscription, D.D. N.N. HERACLIUS ET HERA. CONST.— on the reverse, VICTORIA AUGUST. or AUGUSTORUM.—DEUS ADJUTA ROMANIS, &c. Du Cang. Fam. Byzant.

HERALDUS, Desiderius (Biog.) in French Didier Herault, a scholar, who died in 1649, wrote 'Adversaria,' which appeared in 1599; besides notes on Tertullian's Apology, on Minutius Felix, Arnobius, and Martial, &c. which have been much esteemed.

HERBELOT, Bartholomew d' (Biog.) a distinguished orientalist, was born at Paris in 1625, and died in 1695, leaving his 'Bibliotheque Orientale,' which was published in folio, in 1697, and again at Maestricht in 1776—1780; but the best edition is that of 4 vols. 4to. Hague, 1777—1788.

HERBERT, William (Hist.) vide Pembroke.

Herbert, Philip, vide Montgomery.

Herbert, Edward, Lord, of Chirbury, in Shropshire, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1581, at Montgomery Castle, in Wales; entered as a gentleman commoner at University College, Oxford; distinguished himself in the service of the prince of Orange in 1609; was sent ambassador to Louis XIII of France in 1616, to mediate for the relief of the Protestants of that realm; but was recalled in 1621, on account of a dispute between him and the constable de Luines. At the commencement of the rebellion he adhered to the rebel party for some time; but growing dissatisfied with their measures, he returned to his duty, and died in 1648, a considerable sufferer in his fortune, from the vengeance of those whom he had left. He wrote, 1. 'De Veritate,' a deistical book, which was answered by Gassendi. 2. 'De Religione Gentilium Errorumque apud eos Causis,' the first part of which was printed in London in 1645, and completed in 1663; an English translation was published in 1705. 3. 'History of the Life and Reign of Henry VIII,' published in 1649, a year after his death. 4. 'Expeditio Buckinghami Ducis in Ream Insulam,' published in 1656. 5. 'Occasional Verses,' published in 1665, by his son, Henry Herbert. 6. 'His own Life,' written by himself, which was printed by lord Orford, at Strawberry-Hill, in 1764; and reprinted in 4to. by Dodsley, in 1770.

Herbert, Sir Thomas, Bart. of the same family as the preceding, was born at York, where his grandfather was an alderman, and admitted of Jesus College, Oxford, in 1621. He joined the disaffected party on the breaking out of the rebellion; but being appointed by the usurping powers to attend his royal master while in confinement, he conducted himself so much to his majesty's satisfaction, that at the restoration he was made a baronet by Charles II, "for faithfully serving his royal father during the last two years of his life." He died in 1681, leaving, 1. 'Threnodia Carolina,' containing an historical account of the last two years of the life of Charles I. 2. An Account of the last Days of King Charles I, which was published by Wood in the second volume of his 'Athenæ Oxonienses.' 3. A translation of some parts of the 'India Occidentalis,' of his friend John de Laet, of Leyden; besides assisting sir William Dugdale in compiling the third volume of his 'Monasticon Anglicanum;' and several collections of his, which he made from the registers of the archbishops of York, given by sir William Dugdale to the Ashmolean Museum, at Oxford. In 1813 Mr. Nicol, of Pall-Mall, reprinted sir Thomas's 'Memoirs of the last two Years of the Reign of Charles I,' with the addition of 'A particular Account of the Funeral of the King,' in a letter of sir T. Herbert to Dugdale.

HERBERT, Sir Edward, of the same family, who was commissioned by Charles I, as his Attorney-General, to accuse lord Kimbolton, and the five Commoners, of high treason, was on that account impeached by the Commons; but continued to serve the king as Lord Keeper of the Great Seal until his majesty found it needful to lay down the office.

HERBERT, Edward, Lord, eldest son of the marquis of Worcester. [Vide Worcester]

HERBERT (Her.) the name of a family descended from sir William Ap Thomas, of Ragland Castle, whose descendants took the name of Herbert, and have enjoyed the peerage in different branches. His eldest son, William Herbert, lord of Ragland, mentioned under History, was in 1467 advanced to the dignity of earl of Pembroke, which title became extinct at the death of his son Richard; but was revived in 1551 in the person of sir William Herbert, son of sir Richard Herbert, who was the natural son of William before-mentioned; and Philip, the fourth earl of Pembroke, was created in 1605 earl of Montgomery. [Vide Pembroke and Montgomery] Sir William Herbert, son of sir Edward Herbert, second son of the first earl of Pembroke, was created in 1629 lord Powis of Powis; his son Percy was created in 1674 earl of Powis; and William, the second earl, was created in 1676 marquis of Powis; and on following the fortunes of James II he was advanced to be duke of Powis. His son William, the second marquis, was restored to his titles, which at his death became extinct; but Edward Herbert, a descendant from sir Richard Herbert, younger brother to the first earl of Pembroke, was created in 1626 an Irish peer, by the title of lord Herbert of Castle-Island, co. Kerry, and advanced to the English peerage by the title of lord Herbert of Chirbury in 1629, which titles became extinct at the death of Henry, the fourth lord Herbert, in 1691; but were revived again about three years after in the person of Henry Herbert, nephew of the first peer, and became again extinct at the death of Henry, second lord Herbert, in 1738. But Henry Arthur Herbert, who was descended in the male line from the first lord Herbert of Chirbury, and on the female side from William Herbert, the last marquis of Powis, was elevated to the peerage by the title of lord Herbert of Chirbury in 1743, and advanced in 21 George II to the dignities of viscount Ludlow and earl of Powis, which titles became extinct in the Herbert family, on the male side, at the death of George Edward Henry Arthur, second earl of Powis; but was revived in the family of Edward, second lord Clive, who married the sister of this second earl, and was created in 1804 baron Powis of Powis Castle, baron Herbert of Chirbury, viscount Clive of Ludlow, and earl of Powis. Arthur Herbert, another descendant from Edward, first lord of Chirbury, was elevated to the peerage in 1689, by the titles of baron of Torbay and earl of Torrington; but dying without issue in 1716 his titles became extinct. Another branch of this family descended from major-general William Herbert, fifth son of Thomas, eighth earl of Pembroke, also enjoy the dignity of the peerage, conferred on his son Henry, who was created a peer in 1780, by the title of baron Porchester, co. Southampton, and further elevated to the title of earl of Caernarvon in 1793.

HERBERT, Lord, the title commonly enjoyed by the eldest son of the earl of Pembroke and Montgomery.

HERBERT, George (Biog.) an English divine, younger brother of lord Herbert of Chirbury, before-mentioned under History and Heraldry, was born in 1593, educated at Westminster School, and Trinity College, Cambridge, and died in 1632, leaving, 1. 'Oratio quà Auspicatissimum Serenis. Princ. Caroli Reditum ex Hispaniis celebravit G. H. Acad. Cantab. Orator,' 1623. 2. 'The Temple; sacred Poems and private Ejaculations,' 12mo. Cambridge, 1633. 3. A translation of Cornaro 'On Temperance.' 4. 'Herbert's Remains,' &c. 12mo. Lond. 1652. There are some Latin poems by Herbert in the 'Epicedium Cantabrigiense,' 1612; and the 'Lachrymæ Cantabrigiences,' 1619; and a series of his letters are in the orator's book at Cambridge.

HERBERT, Mary, Countess of Pembroke, sister of sir Philip Sidney, was married to Henry, earl of Pembroke, in 1576; and died in 1601, leaving a high reputation for cultivation and superior talents, of which she gave specimens in some works. She translated from the Hebrew into English verse many of the Psalms, which are said to be preserved in the Library at Wilton; besides which, she translated and published 'A Discourse of Life and Death, written in French by Philip Mornay, done into English by the Countess of Pembroke, dated May 13, 1590, Wilton,' 12mo. Lond. 1600. Likewise 'The Tragedie of Antonie, done into English by the Countess of Pembroke,' 12mo. Lond. 1595. To these may be added, 'An Elegy on Sir Philip Sidney,' printed in Spenser's 'Astrophel,' 1595; and a 'Pastoral Dialogue in Praise of Astræa,' i. e. queen Elizabeth, published in Davison's 'Poetical Rhapsody,' 1602.

HERBERT, William, a typographical antiquary, was born in 1718, and died in 1795, leaving an edition of Ames' 'Typographical Antiquities,' greatly enlarged and improved, the first volume of which was published in 4to. in 1785, under the title of 'Typographical Antiquities; or, an Historical Account of the Origin and Progress of Printing in Great Britain and Ireland, &c., begun by the late Joseph Ames, F. R. and A.S.S., and considerably augmented both in the Memoirs and Number of Books, by William Herbert of Cheshunt, Herts;' the second volume appeared in 1785, and the third and last in 1790.

HERBIN, Augustus Francis Julian (Biog.) an orientalist, was born in 1783, and died in 1806, leaving, 1. 'Developement des Principes de la Langue Arabe Moderne,' &c. 4to. and fol. Paris, 1803; the first part of which only was published. 2. A Treatise on Antient Music, and an Account of Hafiz the Persian Poet, &c. 1806; besides many MSS. which were considered valuable.

HERBINIUS, John (Biog.) a native of Bitschen, in Silesia, was born in 1632, and died in 1676, leaving, 1. 'De Admirandis Mundi Cataractis,' 4to. Amst. 1678. 2. 'Kiovia Subterranea.' 3. 'Terræ Motus et Quietis Examen.' 4. 'De Statu Ecclesiarum Augustinæ Confessionis in Polonia,' 4to. 1670. 5. 'Tragi-comœdia et Ludi innocui de Juliano Imperatore Apostata,' &c.

HERBITA (Geog.) Ἕρβιτα, a town of Sicily, now Nicosia, memorable for the stand which it made against Dionysius, the tyrant of Syracuse, who, failing in his attempt upon this place, made peace with the inhabitants. Cic. in Verr. 3, &c.; Diodor. l. 12; Plin. l. 3; Ptol. l. 2; Fazell. decad. 1, l. 4; Cluv. Sicil. Antiq. l. 2, &c.

HERBST, John Andreas (Biog.) a writer on music, and a musical composer, who was born at Nuremberg, and died in 1660, published, 1. 'Musica Poetica,' 1643. 2. A translation of the 'Arte Prattica e Poetica di Giov. Chiodino,' in ten books. 3. 'Musica Moderna Prattica overo Maniere del buono Canto,' Francfort. 1658; besides a small tract on Thorough Bass, and a Discourse on Counterpoint, &c. Of his musical compositions there are extant in print 'Meletemata sacra Davidis,' and 'Suspiria S. Gregorii ad Christum,' for three voices, 1619.

HERCULANEUM (Geog.) a town of Campania, swallowed up with Pompeii by an earthquake, occasioned by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, August 24, A. D. 79, in the reign of Titus. After being buried under the lava for more than 1600 years, these famous cities were discovered in the beginning of the 18th century: Herculaneum in 1713, about 24 feet under ground, by labourers digging for a well; and Pompeii 40 years after, about 12 feet below the surface; which have afforded a rich harvest to the antiquarian, by the numerous remains of antiquity found among the houses in a state of wonderful preservation. The antiquities thus recovered are preserved in the Museum of Portici, a small town in the neighbourhood, and the engravings taken from them have been presented to the different learned bodies of Europe. Cic. ad Attic. l. 7 ep. 3; Senec. Nat. Quæst. l. 6, c. 1, &c.; Mela, l. 2; Paterc. l. 2.

HERCULES (Myth.) Ἡρακλῆς, the name of several celebrated heroes, as the Egyptian Hercules, Phœnician or Tyrian Hercules, Cretan Hercules, Indian Hercules, the Græcian or Theban Hercules, which was also the Roman Hercules, who has given so much celebrity to the name, on account of his numerous exploits. He is said to have been the son of Amphitryon and Alcmene; to have been born A. C. 1280; to have performed a prodigy of valour and strength while in his cradle, by strangling two serpents, sent by Juno to destroy him; to have afterwards travelled and filled the world with admiration at his deeds of heroism; and to have perished by means of an enchanter's tunic, which his wife Dejanira, having received from Nessus, unconsciously sent to him. After being consumed in the flames caused by this tunic, he is said to have been carried up into heaven by Jupiter, in a chariot drawn by four horses; wherefore he was afterwards honoured in an especial manner by the Greeks as a god. A farther account of this deity may be found under the head of Numismatics, in the following article. Hom. Il. &c.; Hesiod. in Scut. Herc. &c.; Theocrit. Idyl.; Pind. Olymp. od. 3; Herodot.; Eurip. in Herc.; Sophocl. in Trachin.; Callimach. Hym. in Dian.; Apollon. Argon. l. 2; Apollod. l. 1; Xenoph. Memorab.; Cic. de Nat. Met. l. 9, &c.; Lucan. l. 3; Stat. Theb. l. 5; Plin. l. 4; Lucian. Dial.; Paus. l. 3; Arnob. l. 4; Lactant. de Fals. Rel. &c.

HERCULES (Numis.) no deity is more commemorated on medals, nor represented under a greater diversity of forms, than Hercules. He is commonly represented naked, having his club, his bow, and his lion's skin, either standing, sitting, or resting on his club, &c.; but the most interesting representations of him are those which depict his labours. Of these, the first in order is his strangling the two serpents, as in fig. 1; next to which is his killing a vast lion, is, however, not only celebrated for his virtues, but his vices have also engaged the pencil of the artists, as his propensity for drinking, which is depicted in fig. 18; and his love of women, which was sometimes represented under the figure of Cupid stealing his club, or he himself bending to a little boy; and sometimes he is depicted, as in fig. 19,

Crest. In a ducal coronet or, a talbot's head argent, eared gules.

Supporters. On the dexter-side, a talbot argent, eared gules, gorged with a ducal coronet of the second; on the sinister, a rein-deer of the last, attired, gorged with a ducal coronet, and chained or.

Motto. "Virtutis Comes Invidia."

HEREFORDSHIRE (Geog.) one of the western counties of England, on the borders of Wales.

Boundaries. This county is bounded on the N. by Shropshire, S. by Gloucestershire and Monmouthshire, E. by Worcester, and W. by Brecknock and Radnorshire.

Towns. Besides Hereford, the capital, it has seven market towns; namely, Weobly, Leominster, Ross, Ledbury, Kington, Bromyard, and Pembridge.

Rivers. The principal rivers are the Severne, the Wye, the Frome, the Lug, the Arrow, and the Munmow, &c.

History. The ancient inhabitants of this county were the Silures, and under the Saxons it formed part of the kingdom of Mercia. Hereford, the capital, suffered during the wars of the houses of York and Lancaster, as also during the rebellion.

HERENNIA, gens (Hist.) a plebeian family of Rome, which rose to some distinction in the state. [Vide Herennius]

HERENNIA, gens (Numis.) the name of this family is commemorated on a few coins which are extant, bearing the inscription M. HERENNI. — M. HERENN. C. F. &c. Morell. Fam. Rom.

HERENNIA, Etruscilla, was generally considered by antiquaries, on the authority of medals, to be the daughter of Decius, the sister of Herennius Etruscus, and the wife of the emperor Volusianus; but Seguin makes her to be the wife of Decius, according to a medal given by him, bearing the heads of Decius and Herennia, as in the annexed figure; inscription ΑΥΤ. Κ. Γ. ΜΕΣ. ΤΡΑ. ΔΕΚΙΟΣ ΣΕΒ ΕΡΕΝ. ΕΤΡΟΥΣΚΙΛΛΑ ΣΕΒ.; Imperator Cæsar Caius Messius Trajanus, Decius Augustus, Herennia Etruscilla Augusta.

HERENNIANUS (Hist.) the son of Odenathus and Zenobia, succeeded his father, at his death, as emperor of the East; but is said to have been killed by order of Aurelian in 273. Trebel. Poll. de Trigint. Tyrann. l. 26.

HERENNIUS, M. (Hist.) an orator, who obtained the consulship against L. Philippus, U. C. 660.

HERENNIUS, an officer of Sertorius, was defeated by Pompey, &c.

HERENNIUS, a centurion sent in pursuit of Cicero by Anthony, cut off the orator's head. Plut. in Cicero.

HERENNIUS, Etruscus Messius Decius (Numis.) son of Decius and Herennia above-mentioned, is known to have shared his father's honours by inscriptions on medals, &c. bearing his effigy, as in the annexed figure. He is entitled Cæsar, A. D. 249, and Augustus, A. D. 251. The Latin inscriptions are—Q. HERENNIUS DECIUS NOB. C.—Q. HERE. TRAJANUS DECIUS NOB. C. — Q. HEREN. ETR. MES. DEC. CAES. — Q. HER. MESS. DECIUS P. F. AUG.—IMP. C. HER. ETR. MES. DEC. AUG.: in the Greek ΕΡ. ΕΤΡΟΥ. ΔΕΚΙΟC ΚΑΙ. Α.—ΕΡΕΝΝ. ΕΤΡΟΥ. Μ. Ε. C. ΚΥ. ΔΕΚΙΟC ΚΑΙCΑΡ. On the reverse, ADVENTUS AUG. — CONCORDIA AUG. — GENIUS EXERC. ILLYRICANI.—MARTI PROPUGNATORI. — PRINC. JUVENT.—VERITAS AUG.—VICTORIA GERMANICA.

HERENNIUS (Biog.) the name of a person to whom four books on rhetoric are addressed, which are commonly inserted in Cicero's works, although attributed by some to Cornificius.

HERENNIUS, Senecio, an historian in the reign of Domitian. Tac. Agric. c. 2, &c.; Plin. l. 7; Ep. ad Prisc.

HERENNIUS, Dexippus, a philosopher and historian in the third century, whose history of the Scythians is quoted often by the writers of the Augustan history. Lamprid. in Vit.; Alex. Seve. Capitolin. in Vit.; Max. Jun.

HERENNIUS, Modestinus, a lawyer in the reign of Alexander Severus, with whom he was in great favour. He left several works which are not now extant. Lampridius, Capitolinus, &c.

HERIBERT (Hist.) archbishop of Cologne, and chancellor to Otho III, was with this prince at his death, and charged with the execution of his last will. He died in 1621 in the service of Henry, the successor of Otho.

HERICOURT, Julian de (Hist.) of a noble family of Soissons, who died in 1704, was entrusted by the French court with some important commissions, and wrote in Latin a History of the Academy of Soissons, which had taken its rise from meetings at his house. This account was printed at Montauban in 8vo. 1688.

HERICOURT, Lewis de (Biog.) grandson of the preceding, who died in 1753, was the author of, 1. 'Traité des Loix Ecclesiastiques mises dans leur Ordre Naturel,' fol. 1771. 2. An Abridgment of Father Thomassin's 'Discipline de l'Eglise,' 4to. 3. 'Traité de la Vente des Immeubles,' 4to. 4. Some Posthumous Works, in 4 vols. 4to.

HERITIER, Marie Jeanne l' (Biog.) daughter of Nicholas L'Heritier, a French dramatic writer of no great distinction, was born at Paris in 1664, and died in 1734, leaving several works in prose and verse; as, 1. A Translation of Ovid's Epistles, sixteen of them in verse. 2. 'La Tour ténébreuse,' an English tale. 3. 'Les Caprices du Destin,' another novel. 4. 'L'Avare puni,' a novel in verse; with some other poems of an elegiac kind.

HERITIER, Charles Louis l', de Brutelle, a French botanist, was born at Paris in 1746, and was murdered in the streets of Paris in 1801, and, as was suspected, by his own son, a child of the revolution. He wrote, 1. 'Stirpes Novæ,' the first fasciculus of which appeared in 1784, and was followed by five others. 2. 'Geraniologia,' &c. fol. Paris. 1787. 3. 'Sertum Anglicanum,' fol. Paris. 1788.

HERMAGORAS (Biog.) a rhetorician, who distinguished himself in the time of Cicero. Cic. Br. 70.

HERMANN, Paul (Biog.) a botanist, who was born at Halle, in Saxony, and died in 1695, was the author of, 1. 'Catalogus Horti Academici Lugduno-Batavi,' 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1687; reprinted in 1720, under the title of 'Index Plantarum quæ in Horto Leidensi aluntur;' to which Boerhaarve added a History of the Garden. 2. 'Paradisus Batavus,' 8vo.; a posthumous work, which was reprinted in 4to. 1705. 3. 'Musæi Indici Catalogus, continens varia Exotica Animalia,' &c. 8vo. 1711; besides which is ascribed to him 'Floræ Lugduno-Batavæ Flores,' though published under the name of Zumbach.

HERMANN, James, a mathematician of Berlin, was born at Basil in 1678, and died in 1733, leaving a work, entitled 'Phoronomia,' &c.; besides several mathematical and philosophical pieces in the Memoirs of the several academies.

HERMANN, John, a botanist and physician, was born at Strasburg in 1738, and died in 1800, after having collected one of the finest and richest cabinets of natural history in Europe. He also published numerous dissertations in the literary journals of Germany and France.

HERMANT, Godfrey (Biog.) a doctor of the Sorbonne, was born at Beauvais in 1617, and died in 1690, leaving, among his works, 1. 'Les Vies de S. Athanase, de S. Basile, de S. Gregoire de Nazianze, de S. Chrysostom, et de S. Ambroise,' &c. 2. 'Clavis Disciplinæ Ecclesiasticæ,' &c. fol. 1693; besides some works on theological and controversial subjects.

HERMAS (Bibl.) Ἑρμῆς, a disciple whom St. Paul salutes in his epistle to the Romans (Rom. xvi. 14), generally supposed to be the same as the author of the 'Pastor,' or Shepherd. He was also ranked among the apostles, and 72 disciples, and is said to have been bishop of Philippi, in Macedonia. The original Greek of this work is lost, but a Latin version of it is extant; the best edition of which is that of 1698. It was also translated into English by archbishop Wake, and published with a large preliminary discourse relating to each father; the best edition of which translation is that of 1710.

HERMENGARDE (Hist.) the name of some empresses; as the first wife of Charlemagne, who was repudiated; also the first wife of Louis I, who died in 818; of Lotharius I, who died in 851, and of Louis II, who defended Vienne against the kings Louis and Carloman, and compelled them to raise the siege in 890.

HERMENGILDUS (Hist.) a Spanish prince, and son of Leuvigildus, king of the Goths, married in 579 Ingonda, daughter of Sigebert I, king of Austrasia, and by her persuasion was induced to renounce the Arian heresy, for which he was killed by order of his father in 586.

HERMES (Bibl.) another disciple whom St. Paul salutes in his epistle to the Romans (Rom. xvi. 14), who, according to the Greeks, was one of the 72. His festival is observed on April 8th.

HERMES (Myth.) the name of Mercury among the Greeks.

HERMES, Trismegistus, a priest and philosopher of Egypt, who is said to have taught his countrymen the art of cultivating the olive, and various other arts; whence he is supposed to have acquired the epithet of "Trismegistus," i. e. thrice great. Clemens Alexandrianus makes him to be the author of 36 books of divinity and philosophy, and six of physic, all of which are lost. The work entitled 'Pœmander,' which goes under his name, is generally admitted to be supposititious, and probably written by some platonizing professor of Christianity in the second century. This work was first published in Latin by Marsilius Ficinus in 1471; but the best edition is that of Roselli, fol. Colon. 1630. Clemens. Strom.; Fabric. Bibl. l. 1, c. 7; Lambec. Prodr. Hist. Lit.; Brucker. Hist. Philos.

HERMESIANAX (Biog.) an elegiac poet of Colophon, of whose works some fragments are quoted by Athenæus. Athen. l. 13; Paus. l. 6.

HERMIAS (Hist.) or Hermeas, Ἑρμείας, a tyrant of the Acarnanians, who revolted against Artaxerxes Ochus; but was dispossessed of his usurped power in the 107th Olympiad, A. C. 349. Diodor. l. 16; Polyæn. l. 6.

HERMIAS, a native of Caria, and minister to Antiochus the Great, with whom he was in great favour; but, by whose order he was finally put to death, on suspicion of treachery.

HERMIAS (Biog.) a Christian philosopher, supposed to have flourished in the reign of Commodus, who is known only by a work, entitled 'Irrisio Philosophorum Gentilium,' which was first published by Ralph Seiler, Gr. and Lat. 8vo. Basil. 1553; but the edition of Gale, with Seiler's version, Gr. and Lat. 8vo. Oxon. 1700, is reckoned the best.

HERMIAS, Sozomenes, vide Sozomenes.

HERMINIUS (Hist.) a Roman, who defended a bridge, with Cocles, against the army of Porsenna. Liv. l. 2.

HERMINIUS, a general of the Hermanni.

HERMIONE (Myth.) Ἑρμίονη, a daughter of Mars and Venus, who married Cadmus. She was changed into a serpent with her husband. Apollod. l. 3; Ovid. Met. l. 4.

HERMIONE, a daughter of Menelaus and Helen, who was married to Pyrrhus; but being secretly attached to Orestes, assisted in the murder of her husband. Hom. Odyss. l. 4; Eurip. in Andr. et Orest.; Ovid. Heroid. 8, &c.

HERMIONE (Geog.) a town of Argolis, where Ceres had a splendid temple. The sea on the neighbouring coast was called the Sinus Hermionicus. Thucyd. l. 2; Virg. in Cir. v. 472; Strab. l. 8; Mela, l. 2; Plin. l. 4; Ptol. l. 3.

HERMIONE (Numis.) this town is known by the inscription ΕΡΜΙΩΝΕΩΝ, or ЄΡΜΙΩΝЄΩΝ, on some medals of Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, and Plantilla.

HERMIPPUS, (Biog.) a dramatic poet, who wrote 40 theatrical pieces, and other poems, some of which are quoted by Athenæus. He is said to have accused Aspasia, the mistress of Pericles, of impiety and prostitution.

Hermippus, a freedman and disciple of Philo in the reign of Adrian, with whom he was in great favour, wrote five books on dreams.

Hermippus, a peripatetic philosopher of Smyrna, who flourished, A. C. 210.

HERMOCRATES (Hist.) Ἑρμοκράτης, son of Hermon, a general of Syracuse against Nicias the Athenian, whose lenity towards his prisoners awakening the suspicion of his countrymen, he was banished without a trial, and murdered when he attempted to return, A. C. 408. Thucyd. l. 4, &c.; Plut. in Nic.

Hermocrates, a Rhodian employed by Artaxerxes to corrupt the Grecian states.

Hermocrates, the father-in-law of Dionysius, tyrant of Syracuse.

Hermocrates (Biog.) a sophist, preceptor to Pausanias, the murderer of Philip. Diod. 16.

Hermocrates, a sophist celebrated for his talents, who died at the early age of 28 in the reign of the emperor Severus.

HERMODORUS (Biog.) a philosopher of Ephesus, who is said to have assisted the Roman decemvirs in the composition of the ten tables of laws which had been collected in Greece. Cic. Tusc. l. 5, c. 36; Plin. l. 34.

HERMOGENES (Bibl.) Ἑρμογένης, a false disciple, to whom St. Paul alludes. 1 Tim. i. 15.

Hermogenes (Biog.) an architect of Alabanda, who built a temple of Diana at Magnesia, and another of Bacchus at Teos; and composed a work on the subject of Architecture, containing his own inventions on the subject. Vitruvius speaks of him in high terms of commendation. Vitruv. l. 3, c. 1.

Hermogenes, a heretic, who broached his doctrines, consisting of a mixture of Platonism and Christianity, about A. D. 170, in Africa, and was answered by Tertullian in a treatise against him. Tertull. cont. Hermog.; Baron. Annal. ann. 170.

Hermogenes, an historian in the reign of Domitian, who was put to death for writing something which displeased the emperor. Sueton. in Domit. c. 10.

Hermogenes, a physician in the reign of Adrian, whose works are quoted by Galen. Gal. de Med. l. 1, c. 27, &c.; Dio. in Hadrian.

Hermogenes, a rhetorician in the reign of the emperor Antoninus, the philosopher, or, according to others, of Adrian, is said to have taught rhetoric at the age of 15, composed his works at the age of 18, and, at the age of 24, forgot all he knew. He died A. C. 161; and it is said that when his body was opened, his heart was found to be hairy, and of an extraordinary size. Of his book on oratory, which consisted of five parts, the first part only is lost; the four remaining parts are, 1. 'Ars Rhetorica.' 2. 'De Inventione Oratoria Libri IV.' 3. 'De Formis Oratoriis.' 4. 'Methodus apti et ponderosi dicendi.' These were first published by Aldus in his 'Rhetores Græci,' Gr. 2 vols. fol. Venet. 1508; but the best edition is that of Gaspar Lawrence, published under the title of 'Ars Oratoria absolutissima et Libri omnes Græcè cum nova Versione Lat. et Comment. &c. 8vo. Colon. Allobr. 1614.

HERMOGINIAN (Biog.) or Hermogenes, a lawyer in the reign of Constantine the Great, or his sons, wrote an abridgment of law in six books. Lampridius calls him Hermogenes.

HERMOLAUS (Hist.) a young Macedonian in the train of Alexander the Great, who conspired against his master; but the plot being discovered, he was put to death. Q. Curt. l. 8.

HERMON (Bibl.) חרמן, a very high mountain in Palestine, the northern boundary of the land beyond Jordan. Deut. iii. &c. It was called by the Sidonians Sirion, and by the Amorites Shenir.

Hermon, a mountain on this side of Jordan, in the tribe of Issachar, south of mount Tabor, which is distinguished by the name of the "Little Hill of Hermon" in the Psalms; but some are of opinion that this mountain, of which St. Jerome speaks, is not mentioned in Scripture. Euseb. et Hieron. de Loc. Heb.; Boch. Itin.; Adrichom. Theat. Sanct. Terr.; Maundrell's Travels; Well's Sacred Geography, &c.

HERMONDURES (Geog.) vide Hermunduri.

HERMOTIMUS (Myth.) a soothsayer of Clazomenæ, whose soul is said to have separated itself from his body; and that his wife, perceiving this separation, burnt his body, and deprived the soul of its receptacle. He received divine honours after his death. Plin. l. 7; Apollon. in Hist. Mirab.; Tertullian. de Anim. l. 2, c. 28; Origen. contra Cels.

HERMUNDURI (Geog.) a people of Germany, at the north of the Danube, who were subdued by Aurelius. Vell. Pater. l. 2; Tacit. Annal. l. 13.

HERMUS (Geog.) a river of Asia Minor, now Kedous, or Sarabat, which took its rise near the Dorylaus, a town of Phrygia; and, receiving the waters of the Pactolus, fell into the Ægean Sea. Its sands, according to the poets, were mingled with gold.

HERNANDEZ, Francis (Biog.) a naturalist and physician sent out by Philip II to the Indies to make observations on the natural productions of the country, did not live, as is supposed, to publish the result of his labours, which was edited at Rome under the title of 'Historia Naturalis novæ Hispaniæ, seu Mexicanæ, post Francis, Hernandez a Nardo Antonio Recchо digesta, cum Notis et Additamentis Joan. Terrentii, Joan. Fabri, et Fabri Columnæ,' 2 vols. fol. Rom. 1651. He is also said to have written other works; as a History of the Church at Mexico, &c.; all which were published together under the title 'Opera cum edita, tum inedita,' &c. 3 vols. fol. Matrit. 1790. Anton. Bibl.: Ambros. Mor. in Antiq. Hispan.; Leo. Bibl. Jud.

HERNE, Thomas (Biog.) a controversialist, and a native of Suffolk, was educated at Cambridge, became fellow of Merton College in 1718, and died in 1722, leaving 'Three Discourses on Private Judgment against the Authority of the Magistrate over Conscience,' &c. 1718; 'An Account of all the considerable Books and Pamphlets written in the Controversy concerning the Trinity,' from 1712 to 1720; 'Vindication of the Archbishop of Canterbury from being the Author of a Letter on the State of Religion in England, printed at Zurich,' Lond. 1719, &c.

HERNICI (Geog.) a people of Campania celebrated for their hostility to the rising power of Rome. Dionys. Hal. l. 8; Liv. l. 9; Virg. Æn. l. 7; Sil. l. 4; Juv. Sat. 14, v. 180.

HERO (Myth.) a beautiful priestess of Venus at Sestos, celebrated for her unfortunate love of Leander, a youth of Abydos, who being drowned as he swam to her across the Hellespont, she threw herself in despair into the sea and perished. Mus. de Leand. et Her.; Ovid. Heroid. 17, &c.

HERO (Numis.) the tale of these two lovers is commemorated on some medals of Abydos. [Vide Abydos]

HERO (Biog.) the name of two mathematicians, distinguished commonly by the epithets of the Elder and the Younger.

HERO the Elder, was a native of Alexandria, and the disciple of Ctesias, who flourished in the reigns of Ptolemy Philadelphus, and Evergetes I. He was the author of, 1. A treatise, 'De Constructione et Mensura Manubalistæ;' of which a fragment was published in Greek by Bernardino Baldi. 2. 'Spiralia;' published by Frederic Commandine in 4to. Urbin. 1585. 3. 'Beolpœcia, sive de Telis conficiendis jaculandisque Liber,' Gr. and Lat. 4to. Aug. Vind. 1616. 4. 'De Automatorum Fabrica. These are all to be found in the 'Mathematici Veteres,' Gr. and Lat. fol. Paris. 1693.

HERO the Younger, is supposed to have flourished under the reign of the emperor Heraclius. He wrote 'De Machinis Bellicis;' of which only a Latin version has been published by Barocius, 4to. Venet. 1572; 'Geodæsia;' which is annexed by Barocius to the former work; 'Liber de Obsidion Repellenda,' &c. Gr. inserted without the name of the author in the 'Mathematici Veteres;' 'De Vocabulis Geometricis,' &c. edited by Conrad Dasypodius in Gr. and Lat. separately in the first book of Euclid's Elements, 8vo. Argent. 1571. Voss. de Scient. Math. c. 28; Fabric. Bibl. Græc. l. 3; Montuc. Hist. Math. Tom. 1.

HEROD (Bibl.) Ἡρώδης, the name of some kings of Judæa, who are mentioned in Scripture.

HEROD, surnamed the Great, or the Ascalonite, because he was a native of Ascalon, a city of Idumæa, was the son of Antipater, and was born A. M. 3932, A. C. 72. He followed the fortunes of Brutus and Cassius, and afterwards that of Anthony, by whose means he was made king of Judæa; and, by paying his devotions to Augustus, he was permitted to reign until his death, which happened in the 70th year of his age, and the 40th of his reign. His cruelties rendered him odious to his subjects, and have blackened his character in the pages of history; but the part which he acted at the birth of our Saviour, as narrated by the Evangelist, is that which has given a peculiar celebrity to the name in the christian world. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17.

HEROD, who is called Philip by the Evangelists, Mark vi. 17, Luke iii, the son of the preceding by his wife Mariamne, was at first named by his father to be his successor; but the king having discovered that his mother, Mariamne, was implicated in Antipater's conspiracy, he substituted Archelaus in his stead. It was this Philip whose wife Herodias married his brother Antipas. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17.

HEROD, Antipas, son of Herod the Great and Malthace, was, in his father's last will, styled Tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa. He was reproved by John the Baptist for his incestuous marriage with Herodias, his brother Philip's wife, in consequence of which Herodias contrived his death, as narrated by Matth. xiv. and Mark vi. He fell into disgrace with the emperor Caligula, who deprived him of his tetrarchy, and banished him into Spain, where he died. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2.

HEROD, Agrippa, son of Aristobulus, brother to Herodias, and grandson to Herod the Great. [Vide Agrippa]

HEROD (Hist.) king of Chalcis, brother to Agrippa Herodias, the son of Aristobulus, and the grandson of Herod the Great, obtained the kingdom of Chalcis from the emperor Claudius A. D. 41. Three years after he obtained authority to inspect the temple and the sacred money, with a power of appointing or deposing the high-priests, and died A. D. 48. His first wife was Mariamne, daughter of Olympias; and afterwards he married Berenice, his niece. This prince is not mentioned in Scripture. Joseph. Antiq. l. 20; de Bell. Jud. l. 2.

HERODES, vide Herodianus.

HERODES (Numis.) the coins or medals of the first Herod bear, instead of his effigy, a bunch of grapes: inscription — ΗΡΩΔΟΥ; and on the reverse, ΕΘΝΑΡΧΟΥ; some are likewise inscribed ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΗΡΩΔΟΥ. Some medals are also extant of his two sons, bearing the inscriptions —ΗΡΩΔ. ΤΕΤΡΑΡΧΗΣ, and ΦΙΛΙΠΠΟΥ ΤΕΤΡΑΡΧ.; on the reverse, ΓΑΙΩ ΚΑΙ. ΓΕΡΜ. CEB.; i. e. Caio Cæsari Germanico Augusto, &c. Herodes, the brother of Agrippa, and king of Chalcis, testified his gratitude to Claudius by calling himself Philo-Claudius on his medals, as in the annexed figure bearing his effigy: inscription—ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ φιλοκλΥΔΙΟΣ; on the reverse, ΚΛΑΥΔΙΩ ΚΑΙΣΑΡΙ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΩ ΕΤ. Ε; i. e. Claudio Cæsari Augusto, Anno 3; designating, as is supposed, the year of his reign, which commonly occurs on the medals of these kings. Spanh. Dissert.; Hard. Num. Her.; Froel. Not. Elem.

HERODES, Agrippa, vide Agrippa.

HERODES, Atticus, vide Atticus.

HERODIANUS (Hist.) a Greek historian, who flourished A. D. 247, was born at Alexandria, and served the Roman emperors in a public capacity; but he is now principally known by his history of the empire from the death of Marcus Aurelius to Maximinus, in which he professed to give an account of what passed under his own observation. This history was translated into Latin by Politianus, and appeared at Rome in folio, in 1490, but the first edition of the original is among the 'Res Gestæ,' of Xenophon, published by Aldus, fol. 1503. Politian's translation, which is highly esteemed, has since been frequently reprinted with the original; the best editions are, that of Louvaine, 4to. 1525; of Oxford, 8vo. 1708; and of Leipzig, 5 vols. 8vo. 1789. Suidas, Vossius, and Fabricius, speak of another Herodian, a grammarian, whom they make to be the son of Apollonius, surnamed Discolus, and to have lived prior to the historian. It is of him that Ammianus Marcellinus and Priscian speak in terms of commendation, and of whose works some fragments are to be found in the 'Grammatici Veteres' of Aldus, Gr. fol. Venet. 1496. Auct. Vit. Apollon.; Prisc. de Art. Gramm.; Voss. de Art. Gramm.; Fab. Bibl. Græc. l. 5, c. 7.

HERODIANUS, or Herodes, the son of Odenatus, and one of the thirty tyrants, was associated with his father in the empire, and was slain with him, A. D. 267. Poll. de Trigint. Tyrann.

HERODIANUS (Numis.) this prince is represented on his coins as in the annexed figure, bearing the inscriptions, IMP. C. HERODIANUS, or HERODES, P. F. AUG.—ΑΥΤ. ΚΑΙ. ΗΡΩΔΙΑΝΟC CEB.; on the reverse, PAX AUGUSTI.—PRINCEPS JUVENTUTIS.—SALUS AUGUSTI. Spanh. Dissert.; Tristan. Hist. Comment.; Harduin. Oper. Sel.; Osel. Sel. Num.

HERODIAS (Bibl.) Ἡρωδίας, daughter of Aristobulus and Berenice, sister to king Agrippa, and grand-daughter to Herod the Great, left her husband and uncle, Herod and Philip, to live with Herod Antipas, which John Baptist having censured as an incestuous marriage, she in revenge contrived his death; and, when her husband was banished by Caligula, she followed him in his banishment to Lyons. Matth. xiv; Mark vi; Hieron. in Ruffin. l. 3.

HERODICUS (Biog.) a physician, surnamed the Gymnastic, who flourished A. C. 443; also a grammarian, surnamed

Crateus, who flourished A. C. 123. Aristot. Rhet. l. 2; Athen. l. 5; Voss. de Hist. Græc. &c.

HERODION (Bibl.) Ἡρωδίων, St. Paul's cousin, Rom. xvi. 11, who is said to have been bishop of Patræ.

HERODIUM (Geog.) a castle built by Herod on the spot where he had defeated his enemies in his flight. This castle was sixty furlongs from Jerusalem. Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv.

HERODOTUS (Hist.) Ἡρόδοτος, the historian, whom Cicero calls the Prince of Historians, was a native of Halicarnassus, whose father's name was Lyxes, and that of his mother Dryo. He left his country and retired to Samos, whence he travelled over Egypt, Italy, and Greece; but on his return he assisted in the expulsion of Lygdamis the tyrant; which drawing upon him the resentment of his countrymen, he fled to Greece, where, at the Olympic games, he rehearsed the history which he had composed in the 39th year of his age, A. C. 445. This was received with universal applause, and, as a token of honour, the names of the nine Muses were given to the nine books into which it is divided. [Vide Plate XXV] The first edition of Herodotus was that of Aldus, in Greek, fol. 1502; but the best is that of Wesseling, fol. Amst. 1763; there is also a good Oxford edition in 3 vols. 8vo., and one of Strasburgh, by Schweighauser, in 8 vols. 8vo. 1814. The first Latin translation was published at Venice in folio, in 1474; and the second English translation was published by Mr. Beloe in 4 vols.; a French translation, by M. Larcher, was published in 7 vols. 8vo. 1786, and 9 vols. 8vo. 1802. Cic. de Orat. l. 2; Dionys. Hal. l. 1, &c.; Quintil. l. 10; Plut. de Mal. Herod.; Lucian. in Ætion.

HERODOTUS, a Theban wrestler of Megara, in the age of Demetrius, son of Antigonus, who is reported to have eaten 20 pounds of meat, with bread in proportion, at his meals.

HERON (Her.) Heroun, or Hern, a name to be found in the Battle Abbey Roll of such noblemen and gentlemen of marque as came into England with the duke of Normandy. This family is one of the 270 most noble and ancient in the kingdom (the barons by tenure), some of the branches of which at length failed for want of male heirs, and others became united. Sir Richard Heron, a descendant, and chief representative of this family, was created a baronet in 1778, after having been sworn a Privy Councillor of Ireland in 1777, and held the office of Chief Secretary nearly four years under the viceroyalty of John, second earl of Buckinghamshire. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms of Heron, of Ford Castle. Quarterly, first and fourth azure, three herons argent; second and third barry of six argent and azure, a bend gules, charged in the canton with an annulet or, for Grey, of Horton.

Crest. A heron, as in the arms.

Arms of Heron of Bokenfield, and of Newark. Gules, a chevron between three herons argent, quartered with Grey, of Horton, as above.

Crest. Out of a ducal coronet, a heron's head and neck proper.

Motto. "Ardua petit ardea."

HERON (Biog.) vide Hero.

HEROPHILUS (Hist.) an impostor in the time of Julius Cæsar, who pretended to be the grandson of Marius. He was banished from Rome for exciting a sedition, and afterwards strangled in prison.

HEROPHILUS (Biog.) a Greek physician of Chalcedon, who flourished above 500 years before Christ, was so skilled in anatomical dissections, as to have discovered the principal parts of the body, to which he gave the names that they still bear. Cic. Quæst. Acad.; Plin. l. 20, &c.; Plut. de Plac. Phil.; Tertull. de Anim.; Neand. Syntag. de Med. Vet.

HEROSTRATUS (Biog.) vide Erostratus.

HEROTIANUS (Biog.) vide Erotianus.

HERRERA, Tordesillas Antonio de (Biog.) a Spanish historian, was born in 1565, and died in 1625, leaving, 1. 'Historia de lo Sucedido en Escocia, y Ingalaterra, en Quarenta y Quatro Añosque vivio la Reyna Maria Estuarda,' Matrit. 8vo. 1589; Olisip. 1590. 2. 'Cinco Libros de la Historia de Portugal, y Conquistas de las Islas,' &c. 4to. ibid. 1591. 3. 'Historia General de los Hechos de los Castellanos, en las Islas y Tierra Firme del Mar Oceano,' 4 vols. fol. Matrit. 1601; of which an English translation was published by capt. J. Stevens, in 6 vols. 8vo. 1725, 1726. 4. 'Historia General del Mundo del Tiempo del Señor Rey D. Felipe el Segundo,' &c. 3 vols. fol. Matrit. 1601—1612. 5. 'Comentarios de los Hechos de los Españoles Franceses, y Venecianos en Italia,' &c. fol. Matrit. 1624, &c.

HERRERA, Ferdinand de, a Spanish poet of the 16th century, published a collection of his works, entitled 'Obras en Verso,' &c. 4to. Hispal. 1582 and 1619; besides which he edited, 1. 'Relacion de la Guerra de Chipre,' &c. 2. 'Obras de Garcilaso de la Vega con Annotaciones,' 4to. Hispal. 1580. 3. 'Vida y Muerte de Thomas Moro,' 8vo. 1592 and 1625.

HERRICK, Robert (Biog.) one of the minor English poets, of considerable merit, was born in London in 1591, educated at Cambridge, and driven from his living during the rebellion, but the time of his death is not known. His poetical works are contained in a scarce volume, entitled 'Hesperides; or, the Works, both Humane and Divine, of Robert Herrick, Esq.' London, 8vo. 1648; to this volume was appended his 'Noble Numbers; or, his Pious Pieces.' In 1810 Dr. Nott, of Bristol, published a selection from the 'Hesperides.'

HERRIES, John, Lord (Hist.) was sent by Mary, queen of Scots, to Elizabeth, to testify her readiness to justify herself on the subject of her husband's murder; and was afterwards appointed one of the commissioners on the part of his queen to meet the English commissioners for the investigation of the king's murder, when he defended his royal mistress with great zeal and ability, and died in 1594, after having been in the service and confidence of her successor James VI.

HERRING, Thomas (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in 1691 at Walsoken, in Norfolk; educated at Jesus College, Cambridge; and after various preferments was nominated to the see of Bangor in 1737; translated in 1743 to the metropolitan see of York; and in 1747 to that of Canterbury; and died in 1757. Besides a volume of Sermons, he also left some 'Letters,' which were published by the Rev. Mr. Duncombe. By his last will he left 1000*l.* to the Incorporated Society for the Relief of the Widows and Sons of Poor Clergymen, and to the Master and Fellows of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; also the sum of 1000*l.* Old South Sea Stock, towards rebuilding or repairing the College.

HERSCHEL, Sir William (Biog.) an astronomer, and a native of Germany, was born in 1738, and died in 1822, after having acquired great celebrity by the discovery of the Georgium Sidus, or Uranus, &c. recorded in the Transactions of the Royal Society.

HERSE (Myth.) a daughter of Cecrops, king of Athens, and the mother of Cephalus by Mercury, received divine honours after her death. Apollod. l. 3; Ovid. Met. l. 2: Paus. l. 1; Fulgent. l. 2.

HERSENT, Charles (Biog.) or Hersan, a French divine, who died in 1660, left a work on the supremacy of the pope, entitled 'Optati Galli de cavendo Schismate Liber Parænеticus,' 8vo. Paris, 1640. He concealed his name under that of Optatus Gallus, because his work was aimed at the cardinal Richelieu, and was in consequence condemned by the parliament of Paris, and burnt: it was also answered by Isaac Habert, in his treatise 'De Consensu Hierarchiæ et Monarchiæ.' He likewise wrote a panegyric on St. Louis, in which he offended the Romish church on some doctrinal points.

HERSILIA (Myth.) one of the Sabine women, who is said to have been the wife of Romulus, was presented after her death with immortality by Juno, and was worshipped under the name of Ora, or Hora. Liv. l. 1; Ovid. Met l. 14; Ital. l. 13; Plut. Quæst. Rom.; Macrob. Sat. l. 1.

HERTFORD, Edward, Earl of (Hist.) vide Somerset.

HERTFORD, Edward, Earl of, son of the first duke of Somerset, married lady Catherine Grey, the sister of lady Jane Grey, for which they suffered imprisonment for a long time. He died in 1621, after having been sent on an embassy to the Netherlands.

HERTFORD, William, Marquis of, grandson of the preceding, was married by stealth to lady Arabella Stuart, which was the cause of much trouble to them both; but on the death of the lady in 1615, his lordship came into favour, and steadfastly adhering to his sovereign during the rebellion, was restored to the honours which had been forfeited by the first duke of Somerset.

HERTFORD, Francis, first Earl, and Marquis of, of the second creation, mentioned under Heraldry, [vide Seymour] was in 1763 sworn of his majesty's Privy Council, and sent as Ambassador Extraordinary to the court of France; and after having held several high posts in his majesty's government, he died in 1794.

HERTFORD, Marquis of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by a branch of the family of Seymour; [Vide Seymour] which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Conway Seymour, marquis and earl of Hertford, earl of Yarmouth, viscount Beauchamp, lord Conway, baron of Ragley, co. Warwick, and baron of Killultagh, co. Antrim, in Ireland. Title of the eldest son, earl of Yarmouth.

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth sable, on a bend cotised argent, a rose between two annulets gules, for Conway; second and third quarterly, first and fourth or, on a pile gules, between six fleurs-de-lis azure, three lions passant gardant or, being a coat of augmentation; second and third gules, two wings conjoined in lure or, for Seymour.

Crest. On a wreath, the bust of a Moor, side-faced, couped proper, wreathed about the temples argent and azure.

Supporters. Two Moors habited; each wreathed as in the crest, holding in their exterior hands a shield azure, garnished or; the dexter charged with the sun in its glory; the other with a crescent argent.

Motto. "Fide et amore."

HERTFORD (Geog.) the capital of Hertfordshire, situated on the river Lea, 21 m. N. London. Lon. 0° 4′ W. lat. 51° 48′ N.

History of Hertford.

Hertford, in Latin Hertfordia, is a town of considerable antiquity, where a synod was held by the Saxons in 673. The castle, which is now the property of the marquis of Salisbury, and rented by the East India Company as a preparatory school for the college, is said to have been built about the time of Alfred, and was afterwards the occasional residence of the kings John, of France, and David, of Scotland, during their captivity.

HERTFORDSHIRE (Geog.) one of the midland counties of England.

Boundaries and Extent.—It is bounded on the N. by Bedfordshire and Cambridgeshire, E. by Essex, S. by Middlesex, and W. by Buckinghamshire, being about 32 miles long and 16 broad.

Principal Towns.—Hertford, St. Alban's, Ware, and Royston.

Principal Rivers.—The Lea, Stort, Colne, and the artificial stream called the New River.

History.—The original inhabitants of this county were the Cassi, whose chief, Cassivelaunus, is supposed to have resided at St. Alban's, the ancient Verulam. It was afterwards divided between the kingdoms of East and West Mercia. The Romans had several stations in this part of the country.

HERTIUS, John Nicholas (Biog.) a civilian, was born in Oberklee, near Giessen, in 1651, and died in 1710, leaving, 1. 'Notitia Veteris Francorum Regni,' 4to. 1710. 2. 'Commentationes et Opuscula ad Historiam et Geographiam antiquæ Germaniæ spectantia,' 4to. 1713, &c.

HERTSBERG, Edward Frederick Von (Hist.) a Prussian statesman, who rose by his merits to the post of prime minister, died in 1795, leaving some state papers and memorials, which were much esteemed.

HERVET, Gentain (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Olivet, near Orleans, in 1499, and died in 1584, leaving a number of translations or original works on controversial subjects, of which Niceron has given a list. He also acquired such a knowledge of English during his stay in England, that he translated into this language Xenophon's 'Treatise of Householde,' 8vo. 1532; and a sermon from the Latin of Erasmus, 'De immensa Dei Misericordia,' 8vo. Lond. 1533, and reprinted in 4to.

HERVEY, Count (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was a famous soldier, and governor of the Castle of Devizes in the reign of king Stephen, which he held out against the earl of Gloucester, and powerfully assisted that king in his wars with the empress Maud, but was at length forced to retire beyond the seas with a few attendants.

HERVEY, de Yuon, accompanied king Henry in his conquest of Ireland.

HERVEY, Henry, son of the preceding, embarked for the Holy Land with Richard I, where he distinguished himself at the capture of the island of Cyprus, &c.

HERVEY, Sir George, a descendant of the preceding, signalized himself in the service of Henry VII and Henry VIII, by which latter prince he was knighted for his valiant conduct at the battle of the Spurs in 1513. He afterwards attended his sovereign in the meeting between the king and the emperor Charles V, who came over to England, and landed at Dover; also at the meeting which took place between the kings and queens of France and England, and died in 1526.

HERVEY, Thomas, of Ickworth, in Suffolk, brother of the preceding, and chief heir male of the family, served Henry VIII in the wars in France, and was one of the council of the city of Tournay under the earl of Bedford, the governor, at the time of the delivery of it to Francis I. in 1519.

HERVEY, Sir Nicholas, second son of the above-mentioned Thomas, was so much in favour with his sovereign, Henry VIII, that he was one of those gentlemen who were appointed to furnish the days of justs, when the king, and seven whom he had selected, challenged the French king and as many on the part of France. He was also one of the challengers on the occasion of another just, given by Henry VIII, when he received the honour of knighthood for his valour, and was afterwards sent as ambassador to the emperor's court, at Ghent.

HERVEY, William, Lord, grandson of sir Nicholas, signalised himself in 1588, in the memorable engagement with the Spanish Armada, wherein he was principally concerned in boarding one of the Spanish galleons. He afterwards behaved valiantly at the taking of Cadiz, and the town of Fyal; and going over into Ireland he rendered essential service in reducing the rebels, for which eminent services he was honoured with the peerage, and died in 1642.

HERVEY, John, descended from the elder branch of the Herveys at Ickworth, was a particular favourite with the earl of Leicester, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; and, concurring heartily in the restoration, he was in the peculiar esteem and constant attendance of his majesty Charles II.

HERVEY, John, vide Bristol.

HERVEY, John, Lord, eldest son of the first earl of Bristol, was born in 1696; appointed Vice-Chamberlain to king George I in 1730; created a Peer in 1733; constituted Lord Privy Seal in 1740; and died in 1743, before his father. He is particularly distinguished by having been the subject of Pope's scurrilous attack, under the name of Sporus, which he drew down upon himself by condescending to write verses against the poet. He wrote many political pieces, particularly in defence of sir Robert Walpole, of which lord Orford has given a list in the Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors.

HERVEY (Ecc.) of the same family as the preceding, was successively bishop of Bangor and Ely, of which last see he was the first bishop in 1109, and died in 1131.

HERVEY (Her.) or Harvey, a surname anciently written with Fitz, i.e. the son of Harvey, is derived from Robert Fitz-Harvey, a younger son of Harvey, duke of Orleans, who accompanied William the Conqueror in his expedition into England. From him descended the Herveys of Ickworth above-mentioned, of whom, in the eldest male line, was John Hervey, who was created a peer of this realm by the title of lord Hervey of Ickworth; and in 1714 was advanced to the dignity of earl of Bristol. [Vide Bristol] William Hervey, of a junior branch of the same family as above-mentioned, was created in 1619 a peer of Ireland, by the title of baron of Ross, co. Wexford; and in 1627 a peer of Great Britain, by the title of lord Hervey of Kidbrook, which titles became extinct at his death in 1642. Another junior branch of the same family also enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1818 on sir Felton Ellwill Bathurst Hervey, a descendant from Felton Hervey, eighth son of John, the first earl of Bristol. The arms, &c. of this branch of the family are as follow:

Arms. First and fourth for Hervey [vide Bristol]; second and third for Bathurst [vide Bathurst]

Motto. "Je n' oublierai jamais."

HERVEY, Lord, the title commonly enjoyed by the eldest son of the earl of Bristol.

HERVEY, James (Biog.) an English divine, was born at Hardingstone, about a mile from Northampton, in 1713, entered of Lincoln College, Oxford, at the age of 17, and died in 1748, leaving, 1. 'Meditations and Contemplations,' &c. 8vo. 1746. 2. 'Contemplations on the Night and Starry Heavens,' &c. 8vo. 1747. 3. 'Remarks on Lord Bolingbroke's Letters on the Study and Use of History,' &c. 8vo. 1753. 4. 'Theron and Aspasio,' &c. 3 vols. 8vo. 1755; besides some other things included in the genuine edition of his whole works, published in 6 vols. 8vo. In 1811 appeared for the first time what may be considered a seventh volume, entitled 'Letters, Elegant, &c. illustrative of the Author's amiable Character,' &c. which were edited by colonel Burgess.

HERULI (Geog.) one of the savage tribes of the North, who attacked the Roman empire. According to Procopius and Jornandez, they were a Gothic tribe, and first dwelt in Scandinavia; but, being expelled by the Danes, they wandered as far as the Palus Mæotis, whence they made incursions into the empire. A large body settled in Pomerania, and afterwards removed into North Dacia. They were subsequently subdued by the Ostrogoths, the Hunns, and the Lombards, and mingled with their conquerors.

HERWART (Biog.) or Hervart, John, a chancellor of Bavaria, of a noble family, at the beginning of the 17th century, was the author of, 1. 'Chronologia Nova et Vera,' 4to. 1622 and 1626. 2. 'Admiranda Ethicæ Theologicæ Mysteria propalata,' &c. 4to. Monach. 1626. 3. An Apology for the Emperor Louis of Bavaria against the Falsehoods of Bzovius.

HESHAM, Ebn Abdalmelec (Hist.) succeeded his brother in the khalifate, in the year of the Hegira 105, A. D. 715, and died in the 125th year.

HESHBON (Bibl.) חשבון, a celebrated city, which was given to Reuben, but was transferred to Gad, and by Gad to the Levites. It had been conquered from the Moabites by Sihon, and was taken by the Israelites a little before the death of Moses. Josh. xiii. 17; Cant. vii. 4, &c. It was called by the Latins and others Essebon, Chesbon, Chasphon, &c. Pliny and Ptolemy assign it to Arabia. Eusebius says it was 20 m. E. from Jordan; and St. Jerome says it was in his time a very considerable city, situated in the mountains of Arabia. Plin. l. 5; Ptol. l. 5; Euseb. et Hieron. de Loc. Heb.

HESHUSIUS, Tillemannus (Biog.) a German Protestant, was born at Wesel, in the duchy of Cleves, in 1526, and died in 1588, leaving several theological works.

HESIODUS (Biog.) an ancient Greek poet, of Ascra, in Bœotia, supposed to have been contemporary with Homer, and, according to Varro and Plutarch, is said to have obtained a poetical prize in competition with him. Quintilian however, and others, maintain that Hesiod lived before the time of Homer. His father's name was Dius, and his mother's Pycemede; but of his personal history nothing further is related, except that he was murdered by the sons of Ganyctor of Naupactum, and his body thrown into the sea. To this it is added, that some dolphins brought the body to the shore, which being immediately known, the murderers were discovered by the poet's dogs, and thrown into the sea. The best editions are those of Grævius, Gr. and Lat. Amst. 1667; of Robinson, 4to. Oxon. 1737; and of Loesner, 8vo. Lips. 1778. His 'Works and Days' have been translated by Chapman, 4to. 1618; and by Cooke, 1729 and 1740. The effigy of this poet has been preserved, as in Plate XXVII, taken from a gem; but, according to Ursinus, there is still remaining a brass statue of him in the public College at Constantinople.

HESIONE (Myth.) a daughter of Laomedon, king of Troy, and sister of Priam, was exposed to a sea-monster, from which she is said to have been delivered by Hercules. Virg. Æn. l. 8, v. 157; Ovid. Met. l. 2, &c.

HESKETH (Her.) the name of a family in Lancashire, derived probably from the lordship of Hesketh, or Heskaythe, which has been in their possession from the Conquest. Of this family was sir Thomas Hesketh, who in 1761 was created a baronet; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, an eagle displayed with two heads proper.

Crest. A garb proper.

HESPERIA (Geog.) a name common to Italy and Spain. Virg. Æn. l. 1; Horat. l. 1, &c.

HESPERIDES (Myth.) Ἑσπερίδες, the daughters of Hesperus, the brother of Atlas, were three in number, namely, Ægle, Arethusa, and Hesperethusa, who, according to mythologists, were appointed to guard the golden apples, given by Juno to Jupiter on the day of their nuptials, in a delightful garden, which was moreover guarded by a dragon that never slept. It was one of the labours of Hercules to procure some of these apples, which he effected by killing the dragon. Hesiod. Theog. v. 215; Diodor. l. 4; Apollon. Argon. l. 4; Hygin. Fab. 30; Ovid. Met. &c.

HESPERIDES (Numis.) these nymphs are represented on a medal of Hercules.

HESPERUS (Myth.) the father of the Hesperidæ.

HESSE (Hist.) one of the most ancient and illustrious Houses in Germany, which derives its origin from the House of Brabant.

Hesse, William, Landgrave of, who was born in 1533, and died in 1592, was distinguished, not only by the wisdom of his government, but also by his skill in astronomy. He built an observatory at Cassel, and left some astronomical observations, which were published at Leyden in 1618.

HESSELS (Ecc.) or Hesselius, John, a divine, was born in 1522, and died in 1566, after having been sent to the council of Trent, where he distinguished himself by his learning. He left several works against the Protestants, besides Commentaries, &c.

HESUS (Myth.) a god of the ancient Gauls, answering to the Mars of the Romans.

HESYCHIUS (Ecc.) a bishop of Egypt, whom Eusebius speaks of as a very illustrious martyr. Euseb. l. 8.

Hesychius, a patriarch of Jerusalem, succeeded Hamos in 601, and died in 609. S. Gregor. Ep. l. 9; Baron. Annal. ann. 601.

Hesychius (Biog.) a grammarian of Alexandria, supposed to have flourished about the third century; is well known as the author of a Greek Lexicon, the first edition of which was published by Aldus, fol. Venet. 1513, in Greek only; but the best is that of Alberti, 2 vols. fol. Lugd. Bat. 1746.

HETH (Bibl.) חת, Χέθ, father of the Hittites, was the eldest son of Canaan, and dwelt south of the promised land, near Hebron. Gen. ix.

HETRURIA (Geog.) or Etruria, a celebrated country of Italy, west of the Tiber, consisting originally of 12 different people, namely, the Veientes, Clusini, Perusini, Cortonenses, Arretini, Vetuloni, Volaterrani, Rusellani, Volsinii, Tarquinii, Falisci, and Cæretani, who were all powerful enemies to infant Rome, and were not conquered without the effusion of much blood.

HEVELIUS, John (Biog.) or Hevelke, an astronomer, and a mathematician, was born at Dantzig in 1611, and died in 1687, leaving, 1. 'Selenographia, sive Lunæ Descriptio,' Dantsic. 1647. 2. Two Epistles, one to Ricciolus, 'De Motu Lunæ Libratorio;' and one to Bulialdus, 'De utriusque Luminaris Defectu,' 1654. 3. 'De Natura Saturni Faciei, ejusque Phasibus certa Periodo redeuntibus,' 1656. 4. 'Mercurius in Sole visus,' 1661. 5. 'Historiola de nova Stella in Collo Ceti,' 1662. 6. 'Prodromus Cometicus,' &c. 1664. 7. The History of another Comet, which appeared in 1665, 1666. 8. 'Cometographia; Cometarum Naturam, et omnium a Mundo condito Historiam exhibens,' 1668. 9. 'Machina Cœlestis,' the first part in 1673, and the second in 1679. 10. 'Firmamentum Sobiescianum,' and 'Prodromus Astronomiæ et Novæ Tabulæ Solares,' &c. both posthumous works, were published in 1690. [Vide Plate XXXIV.]

HEURMIUS, John (Biog.) a physician, was born at Utrecht in 1543, and died in 1601, leaving, among other things, 'Praxis Medicina nova,' &c. 4to. 1590, and reprinted several times since; besides publishing an edition of Hippocrates in Greek and Latin, the fourth reprint of which was in 12mo. Amst. 1688.

HEUSINGER, John Michael (Biog.) a German divine, was born at Sunderhausen, in Thuringia, in 1690, and died in 1778, leaving Observations on the Electra of Sophocles, and an edition of Plutarch on Education, &c.

Hexham (Geog.) a town of Northumberland, a county of England, situated near the top of the Vale of the Tyne, 20 miles W. Newcastle, and 285 N. N. W. London. Lon. 2° 5′ W., lat. 54° 58′ N.

History of Hexham.

Hexham, which is a place of great antiquity, is presumed to have been a Roman station, from the numerous inscriptions, altars, and other vestiges, which are found in its neighbourhood. The cathedral dates its foundation as early as 674, and is described as having been the most magnificent of any in its time. It was destroyed by the Danes, and rebuilt by Henry I; but the nave being burnt by the Scots in 1296, the choir has since been used as the parish church. A battle was fought near this town between the Houses of York and Lancaster, in which Henry VI was completely defeated by the army of Edward IV, under John Neville, marquis of Montacute, and brother of the earl of Warwick.

HEYLIN, Peter (Biog.) an English divine, descended from an ancient family at Pentre-Heylin, in Montgomeryshire, was born at Burford, in Oxfordshire, in 1600, entered at Hart Hall, Oxford, in 1613, and died in 1662, leaving, 1. 'Microcosmus, or Description of the World,' 1621 and 1624, and was afterwards reprinted several times in folio. 2. 'History of that most famous Saint and Soldier of Jesus Christ, St. George, of Cappadocia,' &c. 1631, to which he subjoined 'The Institution of the most noble Order of St. George, named the Garter,' &c. 3. 'An Help to English History,' &c. 8vo. 1641, under the name of Robert Hall, gent., but reprinted in 1670, with his name; and again in 1709 and 1773, to which Captain Beatson's 'Political Index,' may be considered a continuation. 4. 'History of the Sabbath,' 4to. 1636. 5. 'Theologia Veterum; the Sum of the Christian Theology, contained in the Creed according to the Greeks and Latins,' &c. fol. Lond. 1654 and 1673. 6. 'Ecclesia vindicata; or the Church of England justified,' &c. 4to. Lond. 1657. 7. 'Short View of the Life and Reign of King Charles the First, Monarch of Great Britain, from his Birth to his Burial,' 8vo. London, 1658, which is supposed to be the same as he prefixed to 'Reliquiæ Sacræ Carolinæ,' printed at the Hague in 8vo. 1649. 8. 'Examen Historicum, or a Discovery and Examination of the Mistakes and Defects in some Modern Histories,' &c. 8vo. 1658. 9. 'Historia Quinquarticularis; or a Declaration of the Judgment of the Western Churches, and more particularly of the Church of England, in the five controverted Points, reproached in these last times by the name of Arminianism,' &c. 4to. London, 1660. 10. 'History of the Reformation of the Church of England, from the first Preparations to it made by King Henry VIII, until the legal settling and establishing of it under Queen Elizabeth,' &c. fol. London, 1661, 1670 and 1674. 11. 'Cyprianus Anglicus, or the History of the Life and Death of William (Laud) Archbishop of Canterbury,' &c. fol. Lond. 1668 and 1671. 12. 'Aerius Redivivus, or the History of the Presbyterians; containing the Beginning, Progress, and Successes of that Sect,' &c. fol. 1670 and 1672. Many of his small pieces were published together in a folio volume in 1681, with a Life of the author, by the Rev. George Vernon, which, having given offence to his relations, a new Life was published by his son-in-law Dr. Barnard, in 12mo. 1682.

HEYNE, Christian Gottlieb (Biog.) a critic, and native of Glogau, in Silesia, was born in 1729, and died in 1812, leaving, as specimens of his critical skill, editions of Homer, Virgil, and Tibullus, &c.; besides his Opuscula Academica.

HEYWOOD, John (Biog.) a poet, and one of the oldest English dramatic writers, who died in 1756, wrote among other things, 1. 'A Play between Johan the Husband, Tyb the Wife, and Sir Johan the Priest,' 4to. 1533. 2. 'A merry Play between the Pardoner and the Friar, the Curate, and Neighbour Prat,' 4to. 1533. 3. HICKES, Thomas (Hist.) brother of Dr. George Hickes, mentioned hereafter, was ejected from his living in Devonshire in 1662, and joining, in 1685, the duke of Monmouth's rebellion, was, for this disloyal act, seized and executed.

HICKES, George (Ecc.) an English divine, and a distinguished nonjuror, was born at Newsham, in Yorkshire, in 1642, sent to St. John's College, Oxford, in 1659, promoted to a prebend of Worcester in 1679, to the deanery of Worcester in 1683, was deprived of all his preferments in 1689, for refusing to take the oaths of allegiance, and died in 1715, leaving, 1. 'Institutiones Grammaticæ Anglo-Saxonicæ et Mæso-Gothicæ,' &c. 4to. Oxon. 1689. 2. 'Antiquæ Literaturæ Septentrionalis Libri duo,' &c. 3 vols. fol. Oxon. 1705. 3. 'A Letter sent from beyond the Seas to one of the chief Ministers of the Nonconforming Party,' &c. 1674, afterwards reprinted in 1684, under the title of 'The Judgment of an Anonymous Writer concerning these following Particulars; first, a Law for disabling a Papist to inherit the Crown; secondly, the Execution of Penal Laws against Protestant Dissenters; thirdly, a Bill of Comprehension; all briefly discussed in a Letter sent from beyond the Seas to a Dissenter Ten Years ago;' this letter was in reality an answer to his elder brother Mr. John Hickes, a Dissenter, whom he in vain endeavoured to recal from his errors. 4. 'Ravillac Redivivus, being a Narrative of the late Trial of Mr. James Mitchel, a Conventicle Preacher, who was executed Jan. 18, 1677, for an Attempt on the Person of the Archbishop of St. Andrew's,' &c. 5. 'The Spirit of Popery speaking out of the Mouths of fanatical Protestants, or the last Speeches of Mr. John Kid, and Mr. John King, two Presbyterian Ministers who were executed for High Treason at Edinburgh, on Aug. 14, 1679;' these two pieces were published in 1680. 6. 'Jovian, or Answer to Julian the Apostate,' 8vo. printed twice in 1683; a tract in defence of passive obedience and non-resistance, against Samuel Johnson, the author of 'Julian.' 7. 'The Case of Infant Baptism,' 1689, printed in the second volume of the London Cases, 4to. 1685. 8. 'Speculum beatæ Virginis,' &c. 9. 'An apologetical Vindication of the Church of England, in Answer to her Adversaries, who reproach her with the English Heresies and Schisms,' 4to. 1686, reprinted with many additions, &c.; and an appendix of 'Papers relating to the Schisms of the Church of Rome,' 8vo. 1706. 10. 'The celebrated story of the Theban Legion no Fable; in answer to the objections of Dr. Gilbert Burnet's Preface to his Translation of Lactantius' 'De Mortibus Persecutorum,' with some remarks on his Discourse of Persecution, written in 1687, but not published till 1714, for reasons given in the preface. 11. 'Reflections upon a Letter out of the Country to a Member of this present Parliament,' &c. 1689. 12. A Letter to the Author of a late Paper entitled ' A Vindication of the Divines of the Church of England, &c. in Defence of the History of Passive Obedience,' 1689. The author of the ' Vindication,' was Dr. Fowler, bishop of Gloucester, though his name was not to it. 13. ' A Word to the Wavering, in Answer to Dr. Gilbert Burnet's Inquiry into the present State of Affairs,' 1689. 14. ' An Apology for the new Separation in a Letter to Dr. Sharp, Archbishop of York,' &c. 1691. 15. ' A Vindication of some among ourselves against the false Principles of Dr. Sherlock,' &c. 1692. 16. ' A seasonable and modest Apology in Behalf of the Rev. Dr. Hickes, and other Nonjurors, in a Letter to Dr. Thomas Wise,' 1710, which was followed by a farther ' Vindication of Dr. Hickes,' &c. 23. ' Two Letters to Robert Nelson, Esq. relating to Bishop Bull,' published in Bull's Life. 24. ' Some Queries proposed to Civil, Canon, and Common Lawyers,' 1712, printed after several editions in 1714, with another title, ' Seasonable Queries relating to the Birth and Birthright of a certain Person.'

HICKMAN, Henry (Biog.) a nonconformist, and a native of Worcestershire, was first educated at Cambridge, then removed to Oxford in 1647, ejected from his fellowship at Magdalen College at the Restoration, and died in 1692, leaving several controversial works, written principally against Mr. Thomas Pierce, Mr. Durell, Dr. Heylin, Mr. Scrivener, and others, who supported the cause of the established church; among others, of which Wood has given a list, is one entitled ' Apologia pro Ministris in Anglia vulgo Nonconformistes,' &c.

HICKS (Her.) the name of a family of Beverston, in Gloucestershire, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1619 on William Hicks, a descendant of John Hicks, of Tolworth, co. Gloucester, of whom mention is made as early as Henry VII. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Gules, a fess wavy, between three fleurs de lis or.

Crest. A buck's head couped at the shoulders or, gorged with a chaplet of roses gules.

Hicks, Francis (Biog.) a scholar and native of Worcestershire, was born in 1566, and died in 1630, leaving a translation of ' Lucian,' published in 4to. 1634, by his son Thomas Hicks, Chaplain of Christ Church, Oxford, who also presented to the library of that college, manuscript translations by his father of ' Thucydides,' and ' Herodian.' The Life of Lucian and the notes were written by this son, who died young in 1634.

Hicks, William, son of Nicholas Hicks, a Cornish gentleman, and a captain of the train-band during the rebellion, who died in 1659, wrote a folio volume entitled ' Revelation revealed; being a Practical Exposition on the Revelation of St. John,' London, 1659, and published with a new title page, and a portrait of the author, in 1661.

Hicks, William, the first compiler of a jest book, under the title of ' Oxford Jests,' was a captain in the recruiting service in the reign of Charles II, who owed nothing to Oxford for his education, as Wood informs us, notwithstanding the connection which he claimed with the place by the title of his book.

HIDALGO, Don Joseph Garcia (Biog.) a Spanish artist in the 17th and 18th centuries, was made painter to the court, and knight of St. Miguel by Philip V. He likewise wrote ' Principios para estudiar el Nobilissimo Arte de la Pintura,' 1691.

HIERA (Myth.) a woman who married Telephus, king of Mysia, and was said to surpass Helen in beauty.

HIERAPOLIS (Geog.) the name of several towns; as two in Cilicia; one in Phrygia, now called Bambukkalasi, famous for its baths; and one in Syria, near the Euphrates, now Membeg. Plin. l. 4 and 5; Ptol. l. 5; Steph. Byz.

Hierapolis (Numis.) medals are extant of three of the above-mentioned towns; namely, Hierapolis, in Cilicia, which is known by the inscription ΙΕΡΑΠΙΟΛΙΤΩΝ ΤΩΝ ΠΡΟΣ ΤΩ ΠΥΡΑΜΩ; i. e. Hierapolitarum qui sunt ad Pyramum; which determines its situation near the river Pyramus. This town struck coins or medals as an independent state; and also in honour of Diadumenianus and Heliogabalus.

Hierapolis, in Phrygia, is known to have been situated near the Mæander by the inscription ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΕΙΤΗϹ ΠΡΟϹ ΜΑΙΑΝΔΡΟΝ ΠΟΤΑΜΟΝ. This town struck coins or medals as an independent state; and also in honour of Augustus, Tiberius, Claudius, Agrippina, Trajan, Marciana, Antinous, who is inscribed ΑΝΤΙΝΟΟΝ ΘΕΟΝ, M. Aurelius, Faustina junior, Commodus, Sept. Severus, Caracalla, Plautilla, Heliogabalus, Alexander Severus, Tranquillina, Philippus senior, Otacilia, Philippus junior, and Gallienus; bearing the title of Neocori; as, ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΙΤΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ; also giving the name of their prætors, as, Μ. ΣΥΙΛΛΙΟΣ ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΙΤΩΝ; or ΕΠΙ ϹΤΡ ΑΥΡ. ΑΝΤΙΠΑΤΡΟΥ ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΙΤΩΝ; and marking their alliances with other cities, as ΕΦΕΣΙΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΕΙΤΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.—ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΕΙΤΩΝ ΚΕΡΕΤΑΠΕΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ; i. e. Hierapolitarum et Cereptacorum Concordia.—ΙΕΡΑΡΟΛΕΙΤΩΝ ϹΥΝΝΑΔΕΩΝ, &c. They bore for their types the figures or heads of Jupiter, Diana, Lunus, Apollo, Cybele, Proserpine, Bacchus, Minerva, an Amazon, &c.; also a figure of the river Chrysorhoas, or Pactolus, whom they worshipped as a deity, and distinguished by the inscription on one medal, ΧΡΥΣΟΡΟΑΣ.

Hierapolis, in Syria, most commonly inscribed Hieropolis on medals, is known by the inscription ΘΕΑϹ ϹΥΡΙΑϹ ΙΕΡΟΠΟΛ, ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛ, or ΙΕΡΑΠΟΛΕΙΤΩΝ. This town struck coins or medals as an independent state; and also in honour of Alexander I, king of Syria, and the Roman emperors Trajan, Antoninus Pius, M. Aurelius, L. Verus, Caracalla, Heliogabalus, Alexander Severus, Julia Mamæa, Philippus senior, and Philippus jun. Vaill. Num. Gr.; Tristan. Comment. Hist.; Harduin. Oper.; Hunt. Num. Urb. &c. &c.

HIERAPYTNA (Geog.) a town of some distinction, formerly in Crete, now Giera Petra, which derived its name from Pytna, a hill near mount Ida, on which this town was built. It had a temple of Minerva and Æsculapius, as may

HIERAPYTNA (Numis.) medals are extant of the above-mentioned town in Crete, bearing the inscription, ΙΕΡΑΠΥ. ΙΕΡΑΠΥΤΝΙ; with the name of their magistrates, as ΙΕΡΑΠΥΤΝΙΩΝ ΑΚΡΥΠΑΝΝΙΣ.—ΜΕΝΕΣΘΕ.—ΕΠΙ ΑΥΓΟΥΡΕΙΝΟΥ.—ΕΠΙ ΦΛΑΟΥΙΟΥ, &c. This town struck medals as an independent state; and also in honour of Caligula. Vaill. Num. Gr.; Patin. Thes. Imp.; Spanh. Dissert.; Morell. Thes. Parut. Sicil. Discrit. &c.

HIERAX (Myth.) Ἱέραξ, a youth, who awoke Argos to inform him that Mercury was stealing Io, for which he was changed into a bird, called the hawk. Apollod. l. 2, c. 1; Anton. Lib. l. 3.

HIERAX (Hist.) the surname of Antiochus, king of Syria, and brother to Seleucus, so called on account of his rapacity. Justin. l. 37.

HIERICHUS (Geog.) the ancient name of Jericho, in the Holy Land, called the City of Palm-trees, from its abounding in dates. Plin. l. 5.

HIERO (Hist.) Ἱέρων, the name of two kings of Sicily.

HIERO I, son of Deinomenes, succeeded his brother Gelo in the 75th Olympiad, A. C. 480, and died at Catana in the 11th year of his reign, after having conquered Theron, tyrant of Agrigentum, and obtained three different crowns at the Olympic games. [Vide Hiero under Numismatics] Pind. Olymp. Od. 30, &c.; Herod. l. 7; Plut. Ep. ad Dionys.; Diodor. l. 11; Cic. de Nat. Deor. l. 1; Plut. in Apoph.; Athen. l. 14.

HIERO II, a descendant of Gelo, who, from an unsuccessful enemy, became one of the firmest and most devoted allies of the Romans, died in the 94th year of his age, about 225 years before the Christian æra, after a reign of 54 years, in which he had acquired the love of his subjects. Polyb. l. 1; Liv. l. 15, &c.; Val. Max. l. 4; Justin. l. 23; Flor. l. 2; Ælian. Var. Hist. l. 4.

HIERO (Numis.) coins or medals were struck of these two kings in their lifetime, bearing their effigies, as in the annexed figures: inscription, ΙΕΡΩΝΟΣ, or ΒΑΣΙΛΕΟΣ ΙΕΡΩΝΟϹ; and on those of the first Hiero sometimes the addition of Δ. Υ.; i. e. Δεινομένυ Ὑιὸ, Deinomenis Filii; on those of the second Hiero sometimes ΙΕΡΩΝΟϹ ΙΕΡΟΚΛΕΟϹ. Instead of their effigies their medals frequently bear the head of Arethusa; or a chariot with two horses; or half the body of the river Gelas, &c. *Goltz. Sicil.; Haverkamp. Parut. Sicil. HIEROCÆSAREA (Geog.) Ἱεροκαισαρεία, a town of Lydia, which was among the number of the cities of Asia rebuilt by Tiberius after an earthquake, wherefore the senate decreed a temple to him. It was a bishop's see in the early periods of Christianity. Tac Annal. l. 3; Paus. Eliac. c. 27; Ptol. l. 2; Notit. Imp.

HIEROCÆSAREA (Numis.) this town is known by some medals bearing the inscription, ΙϾΡΟΚΑΙϹΑΡϾΩΝ; with the addition sometimes of ΔΗΜΟϹ; i. e. Populus: ΙΕΡΑ ΣΥΝΚΛΗΤΟϹ; i. e. Sacer Senatus; or ΠΕΡΣΙΚΗ; i. e. Persica Diana, who was held in particular honour; frequently with the name of their magistrates; as, ΙΕΡΟΚΑΙϹΑΡΕΙΑ ΙΕΡΟΚΛΗ ΥΠΑΤΩ.—ΙΕΡΟΚΑΙϹΑΡΕΟΝ ΙΕΡΑ ϹΥΝ. ΕΠΙ ϹΤΡ. ΑΥΡ. ϹΤΡΑΤΟΝΕΙΚΟΥ; i. e. Hierocæsariensium, Sacer Senatus, sub Prætore Aurelio Stratonico. The æra marked on their medals is dated from the restoration of their liberty by Tiberius. Vaill. Num. Gr.; Harduin. Oper.; Span. Dissert.

HIEROCLES (Ecc.) a bitter persecutor of the Christians under Diocletian, was at first president of Bithynia, and afterwards governor of Alexandria, in both which situations he displayed his animosity towards the professors of Christianity. He likewise wrote two books on this subject, entitled, λόγοι φιλαλήθεις πρὸς Χριςιανὺς; i. e. 'Sermones Veri Amantes ad Christianos,' in which he endeavoured to prove that the Holy Scripture is false, by showing it to be inconsistent with itself; and also drew a parallel between the miracles of our Saviour, and the feigned miracles of Apollonius Tyaneus. Eusebius answered the latter part of this work; but Lactantius, though not in a direct, yet in a more complete manner answered not only all his objections, but those which had been advanced by any of the heathens against Christianity. The remains of Hierocles were collected into one volume by bishop Pearson, and published in 8vo. Lond. 1654, with a dissertation on him and his writings.

HIEROCLES (Biog.) a Platonic philosopher of Alexandria, who flourished A. D. 485, philosophized at Alexandria, and wrote a book on Providence and Fate, fragments of which are preserved by Photius; besides a Commentary on the golden verses of Pythagoras. The best edition of Hierocles is that of Asheton and Warren, 8vo. Lond. 1742; from which an English translation was published by the Rev. William Rayner, vicar of Calthorpe, 8vo. Norwich, 1797.

HIERON, Samuel (Biog.) an English divine, was born in 1572, educated at Eton, and King's College, Cambridge, and died in 1617, leaving some sermons and theological works, which were printed separately, both in 4to. and 8vo. and afterwards published collectively by himself in fol. 1614, and reprinted in 1620, with an additional volume, edited by Doctor Hill, rector of St. Bartholomew, with an account of his life prefixed.

HIERONYMUS (Hist.) a tyrant of Sicily, who succeeded his grandfather Hiero II when only 15 years of age, but, having rendered himself odious to his subjects by his oppressions, and abjured the alliance of the Romans, which Hiero had observed with so much honour to himself, and advantage to his country, he was assassinated, and all his family perished with him, A. C. 214. Liv. l. 24; Sil. l. 14.

HIERONYMUS, or Hiero, an Athenian, set over the fleet while Conon went to the king of Persia. Xenoph. Hellen. l. 2.

HIERONYMUS, was left with Demophon, Timotheus, and others, in Judæa, after the agreement made between the Jews, and the young king Antiochus Eupator, where they endeavoured by their ill-treatment to oblige the Jews to break the treaty. 2 Macc. vii. 2.

HIERONYMUS (Numis.) the coins or medals of the king of Syracuse of this name are known by the inscription ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΙΕΡΩΝΥΜΟΥ, sometimes with the addition ΣΥΡΑΚΟΣΙΩΝ; bearing also his effigy, as in the annexed figure, or the head of Proserpine or Ceres; the figure of winged thunder, emblematical of Jupiter, &c. Goltz. Sicil.; Haverkamp. Parut. Sicil.; Dorville. Sicul.; Beger. Thes. Brand.

HIERONYMUS, St. (Ecc.) or St. Jerome, an illustrious father of the church, and a Christian writer, was born of Christian parents at Stridon, a town situated upon the confines of Pannonia and Dalmatia in the year 331. His father, Eusebius, being a man of rank and substance, gave him a liberal education, when he travelled over various parts of the world; and, having stored his mind with a diversity of knowledge, he employed the remainder of his life in the improvement of mankind, and in the advancement of Christianity, and died A. D. 420, in the 91st year of his age. He wrote Commentaries on the Prophets, St. Matthew's Gospel, &c.; a Latin version known by the name of the Vulgate; polemical Treatises; an Account of Ecclesiastical Writers who lived before him; an Account of Hebrew Places, Epistles, &c. The first edition of his works is that of Erasmus, who wrote his life, in 6 vols. folio, 1516—1526; but the best is that of Paris by father Martiany, a Benedictine monk of the congregation of St. Maur and Anthony Pouget, in 5 vols. fol. 1698—1706; there is, however, a more recent edition by Vallarsius in 11 vols. fol. Veron. 1734-42. [Vide Plate XX]

HIERONYMUS (Biog.) an historian of Rhodes, who wrote an Account of the Actions of Demetrius Poliorcetes, by whom he was set over Bœotia, A. C. 254.

HIEROPHILUS (Biog.) a Greek physician, who taught his daughter Agnodice the art of midwifery. [Vide Agnodice]

HIEROSOLYMA (Bibl.) ירושלים, anciently called Jebus, or Salem, in the Greek Ἱεροσόλυμα, and in modern times Jerusalem, the celebrated city of Judæa; was given by Joshua to Benjamin after he had slain its king in the famous battle of Gibeon, and became the metropolis of the Jewish nation, when God made choice of it for the place of his habitation, and his Holy Temple. The city of Jerusalem was built on hills, and was encompassed with mountains, having, in its neighbourhood, the fountains of Gihon and Siloam, and the brook Kidron; also the waters of Ethan, which Pilate conveyed through aqueducts into the city. The ancient city Jebus, which David took from the Jebusites, was not large, and stood on a mountain south of that whereon the temple afterwards stood. Here David built a new city, which he called the City of David, wherein was the royal palace. Between these mountains lay the valley of Millo, which David and Solomon filled up to join the two cities. The Maccabees considerably enlarged Jerusalem on the north by inclosing a third hill. The fate of this city was involved in that of the Jewish nation, and exposed to its different vicissitudes. Amaziah, king of Israel, having defeated Joash, king of Judah, and taken him prisoner, entered Jerusalem, and carried away the treasures of the temple, and of the royal palace, A. M. 3178, A. C. 826; Necho, king of Egypt, entered Jerusalem, A. M. 3394, A. C. 610; Nebuchadnezzar besieged and took the city, A. M. 3398, A. C. 606, when he carried the Jews captive to Babylon. This same prince took the city three several times afterwards, when he also carried its treasures to Babylon. After the captivity, Jerusalem was rebuilt and repeopled, A. M. 3468, A. C. 536; and the walls were rebuilt, A. M. 3550, A. C. 454; but it fell into the hands of Alexander the Great, A. M. 3672, A. C. 332; and, after the death of that prince, it remained under the kings of Egypt, but it suffered much from Antiochus Epiphanes, who pillaged it and the temple, A. M. 3834; and two years after Apollonius, the collector of his revenues, fell upon the inhabitants, of whom he made great slaughter, and after getting a great booty, he burnt most of the houses, and put a stop to the sacrifices in the temple, which were, however, restored by Judas Maccabæus three years after, when he had defeated Nicanor, Gorgias, and Lysias. Jerusalem suffered another siege from Antiochus Sidetes in the time of Hyrcanus, but the brave resistance made by this prince prevented its capture. It was, however, exposed to a more grievous assault from Pompey, who profaned the temple by entering the sanctuary, A. M. 3490, A. C. 64; and, finally, after experiencing divers vicissitudes under the Roman emperors, it was besieged, taken, burnt, and demolished in such a manner that those who had never seen it before could scarcely persuade themselves that it had ever been inhabited, whereby the prophesy of our Saviour was fulfilled, 'That not one stone should be left on another.' The emperor Adrian began to rebuild this city, A. D. 132, and gave it the name of Ælia Capitolina, but he forbad the Jews from having access to it. The subsequent account of this city may be found under the modern name of Jerusalem. Josh. xviii.; 1 Kings ix.; 2 Kings xiv.; 2 Chron. xxiv. &c.; 1 Maccab. i. &c.; Joseph. de Bell.; Antiq. l. 14; Judg. l. 2, &c.; Euseb. Demonstrat. Evang. l. 6; Hieron. in Zach. c. 8; Rel. Hist. Palæst.

HIEROSOLYMA (Numis.) this town is distinguished on a medal of Vespasian by the inscription HIEROSOLYMA CAPTA. Morell. Thes. Impp.

HIGDEN, Ranulph (Biog.) or Ralph, the author of an old chronicle, and a Benedictine of S. Werberg's monastery, died in 1360, at the age of between 80 and 90. His work, entitled 'Polychronicon, was published by Dr. Gale, or at least as much of it as relates to the Britons and Saxons, among his 'Quindecem Scriptores;' but the English translation of the 'Polychronicon,' by John de Trevisa, which was printed by Caxton in folio in 1482, in seven books, and to which Caxton added an eighth, is an object of curiosity among book collectors. The 'Chester Mysteries,' exhibited in that city in 1328 at the expense of the several trading corporations, have been ascribed to Higden.

HIGFORD, William (Biog.) a writer who was born in 1580, educated at Oxford, and died in 1657, was the author of 'Institution, or Advice to his Grandson,' of which an abridgment was published by Barksdale in 12mo. 1660; besides several other things which remained in MS.

HIGGINS (Biog.) or Higins, John, one of the principal writers in the fourth edition of the 'Mirror for Magistrates,' was educated at Oxford, and was living at Winsham, in Somersetshire, in 1602, but the period of his death is not known. He compiled, 1. The 'Flosculi of Terence.' 2. 'Holcot's Dictionnaire,' &c. fol. 1572. 3. 'The Nomenclator of Adrian Junius,' 8vo. 1585. 4. 'An Answer to a Work of Controversy by one William Perkins concerning Christ's Descent to Hell,' Winsham, 1602. The former editions of the 'Mirror for Magistrates' were published in 1563, 1571, and 1574; his appeared in 1587.

HIGGONS, Sir Thomas (Hist.) a diplomatist, and a native of Shropshire, was born in 1624, and died suddenly of an apoplexy in the court of King's Bench, whither he had been summoned as a witness in 1691, after having been sent in 1669 as envoy-extraordinary to invest John George, duke of Saxony, with the order of the Garter; and, about four years after, as envoy to Vienna. His works, as an author, are, 1. 'Oratione Funebri a Marito ipso, More prisco laudata fuit,' an oration delivered at the funeral of his lady, widow of Robert, earl of Essex, 1656. 2. 'A Panegyric to the King,' fol. 1660. 3. 'The History of Isoof Bussa,' 1684. 4. A Translation into English of 'The Venetian Triumph.'

HIGGONS, Bevil, younger son of sir Thomas Higgons by Bridget, his second wife, was born in 1670, educated first at Oxford, and afterwards at Cambridge, and died in 1735, leaving, 1. A Poem 'On the Peace of Utrecht.' 2. 'Historical and Critical Remarks on Bishop Burnet's History of his own Times,' the second edition of which appeared in 8vo. 1727. 3. 'A short View of the English History, with Reflections Political and Historical,' &c. 1727.

HIGGS, Griffin (Biog.) or Griffith, descended from a considerable family in Gloucestershire, was born at Stoke Abbot, near Henley, in Oxfordshire, in 1589, and died in 1659, deprived of all his preferments by the usurping powers, leaving, among his published works, 1. 'Problemata Theologica,' 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1630. 2. 'Miscellaneæ Theses Theologicæ,' ibid. 1630.

HIGHMORE, Nathaniel (Biog.) a physician and anatomist, was born at Fording-bridge, in Hampshire, in 1613, and died in 1684, leaving, 1. 'Corporis Humani Disquisitio Anatomica,' fol. Hag. 1651. 2. 'History of Generation,' 8vo. 1651. 3. 'Exercitationes duæ, quarum prior de Passione Hystericâ, altera de Affectione Hypochondriacâ,' Oxon. 1660.

Highmore, Joseph, a painter, was born in London in 1692, and died in 1780, after having acquired a high reputation in portrait-painting. He also left, among his works as an author, 'A Critical Examination of the two Paintings by Rubens in the Banquetting House at Whitehall,' 4to.; 'The Practice of Perspective,' &c.; 'Essays Moral, Religious, and Miscellaneous,' &c.

HILARION, St. (Ecc.) founder of the monastic life in Palestine, was born about 291 at Tabatha, near Gaza, of a pagan family; but, having embraced Christianity, he went afterwards to join St. Anthony in the desert, whence he returned into his own country, and founded several establishments, over which he exercised a vigilant superintendance, and died in the island of Cyprus, at the age of 80. Sozom. Hist. Eccles. l. 3, &c.; Baillet. Vies des Saintes.

HILARITAS (Myth.) Cheerfulness, a virtue of the mind, which was deified by the Romans, and represented under the form of a female with a sprig of myrtle (the plant of Venus, the goddess of gaiety), which is her distinguishing mark, and a cornucopia. Spence. Polym.; Vaill. Præst. tom. i.; Harduin. Aper. &c.

HILARIUS (Ecc.) or Hilary, the name of one pope, and two bishops, &c.

Hilarius, St., the Roman pontif, originally of the island of Sardinia, was elected in 461, and died in 467, after having assembled a council at Rome for the re-establishment of ecclesiastical discipline. He also wrote a circular, in which he condemned afresh the heresies of the Eutychians and Nestorians.

Hilarius, St., an ancient father of the Christian church, bishop of Poictiers, his native city, was ordained to that see about 350, strenuously supported the orthodox faith at the councils of Milan in 355, and that of Beziers in 356, whence he was banished through the arts of Saturninus of Arles, an Arian. He however again maintained the truth at the council of Nice in 359; and, after labouring with indefatigable zeal in repairing the injuries which schism and heresy had produced, he died in 368. The works of St. Hilarius have been published several times, but the best edition of them was given by the Benedictines in fol. Paris, 1693; that of the Marquis de Maffei, in 2 vols. fol. Veron. 1730, although it contains some additions is not so much esteemed; but there has since appeared an edition, in 4 vols. 8vo. by Oberthur at Wurzberg. 1785—1788. The principal articles are the twelve Books on the Trinity, Treatise on the Synods, Commentaries on St. Matthew, &c. To this Hilarius, the great church at Poictiers is dedicated, and in the midst of the city is a column erected to him, with an inscription expressive of their admiration of his virtues.

Hilarius, another Romish saint of that name, and bishop of Arles, was born in the year 401, of rich and noble parents, succeeded St. Honoratus in the see of Arles, where he held several councils, and presided at that of Rome in 441. In consequence of some false accusations, he was for a time degraded by pope Leo; but his merit was afterwards acknowledged before his death, which took place at the age of 48, when he left some Homilies, the Life of St. Honoratus, and some smaller works, of which however no collection has been made. Prosper. in Chron.; Adon. Vienn. et Isidor. in Chron.; St. Marth. Gall. Christ. &c.

Hilarius, a deacon of the church of Rome, was sent to the emperor Constantius by pope Liberius, during which legation he defended the orthodox faith at the council of Milan with so much zeal that the emperor ordered him to be whipped, and sent into exile. He was aftewards engaged in the schism of the Luciferians. S. Athan. Epist. ad Solit.; S. Hieron. adv. Lucif.; Baron. Annal. ann. 354; Bellarmin. de Script. Eccles.

HILARY (Ecc.) vide Hilarius.

HILDA (Hist.) a princess of Scotland, grand-daughter of Edwin, king of Northumberland, distinguished herself by her piety, and knowledge of the Scriptures. She wrote a book on the Observance of Ancient Customs, &c. and died in 685, after having been abbess of the convent she had founded 23 years.

HILDEBERT (Ecc.) archbishop of Mentz, said by some to have been brother to the emperor Conrad II, was raised to this dignity in 931, and crowned Otho the Great in 938; but, having afterwards fomented some disturbances between Otho and his father, Henry, he was banished to Hamburg. He wrote the Lives of some Saints. Voss. de Hist. Lat.

Hildebert de Lavardin, archbishop of Tours, succeeded Hugh de Cluni as bishop of Mans in 1097, was imprisoned by William Rufus, of England, on account of the part he took in favour of the count of Mans, with whom that king was at war; was translated to the archiepiscopal see of Tours in 1125; and died in 1136, after having governed the see of Mans 39 years, and that of Tours 10 years and some months. He left 83 letters on moral and religious subjects.

HILDEBOLD (Hist.) archchaplain of the palace of Charlemagne, was afterwards chancellor of France, and died in 818.

HILDEBRAND (Hist.) king of the Lombards, succeeded his uncle Luitprand in 744, but was obliged to renounce his throne seven months after. Paul. Diac. de Reb. Gest. Longobard.; Sigon. de Regn. Ital.

Hildebrand (Ecc.) vide Gregory VII.

HILDEGARDE (Hist.) second wife of Charlemagne, was, according to some, daughter of Childebrand, duke of Suabia. She was married in 772, and died in 783.

HILDERSHAM, Arthur (Biog.) an English divine, descended from the royal family of England, was the son of Thomas Hildersham, a gentleman of an ancient family, by Anne Pole, or Poole, his second wife. Mr. Hildersham, was born at Stechworth, in Cambridgeshire, in 1563, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1631, leaving several theological works, among others, 'Lectures on John IV,' fol. 1628; and 'Lectures on Psalm XXXIV,' &c. fol. 1632. His son Samuel was ejected for nonconformity in 1674.

HILDERIC (Hist.) called by some Huneric, nephew to Genseric, king of the Vandals, succeeded Thrasimond in 523; but, being of a nature too easy for his subjects, he was compelled to resign his throne to Gilimer after a reign of seven years.

HILDESHEIM (Geog.) in Latin Hildesia, or Heildesheimia; a town of Lower Saxony, in Germany, 20 miles S. E. Hanover, 20 W. by S. Wolfenbuttel. Lon. 9° 55′ E lat. 52° 9′ N. The district of Hildesheim was, for a long time, an independent state, having been formed into a bishopric by Charlemagne in 822, after which it was governed by a succession of warlike bishops, one of whom engaged in a contest with the dukes of Brunswick and Hanover, which terminated in the loss of his states. They were afterwards partially restored in 1643; but the treaty of Westphalia placed the bishopric of Hildesheim under the protection of Hanover. During the French revolution this district was annexed to the kingdom of Prussia; and in 1815 it was annexed by the Congress of Vienna to that of Hanover.

HILDESLEY, Mark (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in 1698 at Murstone, near Sittingbourne, in Kent, educated at the Charter House, whence he was sent to Trinity College, Cambridge, at the age of 19, where he took his degrees, A. B. in 1720, and A. M. 1724. In 1731 he was presented by his college, of which he was fellow, to the living of Hitchin, in Hertfordshire, which he held for 30 years; in 1755 he was promoted to the see of Sodor and Mann on the death of bishop Wilson; and died in 1772. He had his predecessor's translation of the Bible completed and printed under his direction; besides that of the 'Book of Common Prayer,' 'The Christian Monitor,' 'Mr. Lewis' Exposition of the Catechism,' and bishop Wilson's 'Form of Prayer,' for the use of the herring fishery. He is known as an author only by a small tract published without his name, entitled 'Plain Instructions for Young Persons in the Principles of the Christian Religion.

HILDUIN (Hist) abbot of St. Dionysius, rendered himself very distinguished during the reigns of Louis le Debonnaire and his son Lothaire. He also wrote a 'Life of St. Denys, or Dionysius, Bishop of Paris,' whom he confounded with Dionysius the Areopagite. Sigibert, c. 2; Bellarmin, Trithemius, Vossius, &c.

HILDUIN (Ecc.) a bishop of Verdun in the reigns of Louis le Debonnaire and his son Lothaire, who is said to be distinct from the preceding. He attached himself to the cause of Charles the Bald, which drew upon him the resentment of Lothaire.

HILKIAH (Bibl.) חלקיה, father of Eliakim. 2 Kings xviii.

HILKIAH, son of Amaziah, a Levite of Merari's family. 1 Chron. vi. 45.

HILKIAH, father of Jeremiah. Jer. i. 1.

HILKIAH, the high-priest, grandson to Shallum, and father of Azariah, who succeeded him. During his pontificate, the book of the law was found in the treasury of the temple. 2 Kings xxii. &c. His father, Hilkiah, lived in the reign of Hezekiah. Baruch i.

HILL, Moyses (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, distinguished himself under the earl of Essex in Ireland during the rebellion of O'Neile, to the suppression of which he greatly contributed; and, for his many services, was constituted in 1606 the first Provost-Marshal of the forces at Carickfergus, and died in 1629, in the 76th year of his age.

HILL, Peter, Esq., son of the preceding, was in 1641 sheriff of the county of Downe, and Provost-Marshal thereof at the first breaking out of the rebellion, for the suppressing of which he did many acceptable services for his majesty until 1644, when he was driven from his dwelling, and compelled to seek his safety by flight.

HILL, Arthur, Esq. a younger son of sir Moyses, was also active in his endeavours to suppress the rebellion in Ireland; and at the restoration, which he contributed to bring about in that country, he was sworn a member of his Majesty's Privy Council.

HILL, William of Hillsborough, Esq. of the same family, was made Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Downe, and was of the Privy Council successively of Kings Charles II, James II, and William III, after which he died in 1693.

HILL, Sir Rowland, Knt., of the second family mentioned under Heraldry, was twice Lord Mayor of London in the time of Henry VIII, and the munificent founder of many churches, schools, and other works of public utility.

HILL, Rowland, of Hawkstone, Esq., of the same family, suffered much for his loyalty during the rebellion, as did also his father, who was detained a prisoner at his house in Hawkstone.

HILL, Richard, second son of the preceding, and a distinguished statesman, was Envoy-Extraordinary at the court of Brussels in the reign of king William; and again in the reign of Queen Anne at the court of Turin, and several others of the Italian princes. He likewise held the post of Lord Admiral of England, as he had done previously that of Lord High-Treasurer of England; but, retiring from all his public employments, he became a fellow of Eton, which he retained until his death in 1727.

HILL (Her.) the name of a family of great antiquity, worth, and distinction, in the counties of Devon and Stafford, and from the reign of queen Elizabeth of considerable note in the counties of Downe and Antrim, as has been already noticed under History. [Vide Hill and Hillsborough] The first of this family that was ennobled was Trevor Hill, esq. who was created in 1717 a peer of Ireland, by the style and titles of baron Hill of Kilwarlin, and viscount of Hillsborough. His second son, William Hill, was created in 1751 viscount of Kilwarlin and earl of Hillsborough, and in 1761 was promoted to the peerage of Great Britain, by the style and title of lord Harwich, baron Harwich in Essex; in 1772 advanced to the dignity of viscount and earl of the said kingdom, by the style and title of viscount Fairford, and earl of Hillsborough. His son Arthur, second earl of Hillsborough, was farther advanced to the dignity of marquis of Downshire, in Ireland, in 1789. [Vide Downshire] The barony of Sandys, which became extinct in 1797, was revived in the marquis's family, in the person of Mary, the niece of the last lord Edwin Sandys, who married Arthur, the second marquis of Downshire.

HILL, the name of a family in Shropshire, originally written Hull, from the place of their residence in that county. Of this family, which has also distinguished itself in History, as above-mentioned, two branches have been ennobled, the elder of which also enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1726 on Rowland Hill of Hawkstone, nephew of Rowland Hill, the statesman. Noel Hill, his grand-nephew, was advanced to the dignity of a peer of Great Britain, by the style and title of baron Berwick of Attingham, in Shropshire [vide Berwick]; and Rowland Hill, fourth son of sir John Hill, the third baronet, was, for his distinguished services as a general under the duke of Wellington, created in 1815 baron Hill of Almarez, and of Hawkestone and Hardwicke, co. Salop. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Ermine, on a fess sable, a castle triple-towered, argent.
Crest. A tower argent, surmounted with a garland of laurel proper.

HILL, William (Biog.) an annotator on Dionysius Periegetes, was born in 1619 at Cudworth, in Warwickshire; educated at Oxford; ejected from his fellowship of Merton at the restoration, in consequence of the part he took during the rebellion; and died in 1667, leaving 'Dionysii Orbis Descriptio Annotationibus Eustathii et Hen. Stephani, nec non Gul. Hill, Commentario Critico et Geographico, ac Tabulis illustrata,' 8vo. Lond. 1658; reprinted in 1659, 1663, 1678, and 1688, which last is considered by Harwood as a valuable edition.

HILL, Joseph, a nonconformist, and a lexicographer, was born at Bromley, near Leeds, in 1625, educated at Merton College, Oxford, of which he was a fellow until 1663, when he was obliged to give up his fellowship on account of his principles, and died in 1707. He is particularly known as the editor of Schrevelius's Lexicon, which he enlarged by very considerable additions.

HILL, Aaron, an English poet, dramatist, and miscellaneous writer, was born in London in 1685, and died in 1750, leaving, 1. 'History of the Ottoman Empire,' 1709. 2. 'Elfrida,' a tragedy, 1709. 3. 'Rinaldo,' an opera, the music of which was the first piece of composition of Handel, after his arrival in England. 4. 'Art of Acting,' a poem; and a number of other pieces, which were collected and published in 4 vols. 8vo. after his death. [Vide Plate XXXI]

HILL, Abraham, a gentleman, and a scholar, who was fellow and treasurer of the Royal Society, and died in 1721, is still remembered by a volume of his 'Familiar Letters,' published in 1767.

HILL, Sir John, an English writer, was born in 1716, and died in 1775, bearing the reputation of a literary quack, who turned his pen to any subject by which he could get money. He vented his spleen against the Royal Society, in a quarto volume, entitled 'A Review of the Works of the Royal Society,' &c.

HILL, Robert, a tailor by trade, and a self-taught scholar, who, in the time that he could spare from his business, is said to have acquired a knowledge of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, was born at Miswell, near Tring, in Hertfordshire, and died in 1777, leaving, 1. Remarks on Berkeley's 'Essay on Spirit.' 2. 'The Character of a Jew.' 3. 'Criticisms on Job.'

HILLAH (Geog.) a town of Asiatic Turkey, in the province called Irak Arabi, or the Pachalic of Bagdad, which is supposed by some to be the site of Babylon, the ruins of which consist at present of immense heaps of earth, bricks, and rubbish, which at first view are scarcely distinguishable from natural mountains.

HILLARY (Her.) the name of a family of Danbury Place, co. Essex, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1805 on sir William Hillary; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, three fleurs-de-lis sable, between six cross crosslets azure, within a bordure of the second.

Crest. Out of a mural crown gules, a cubit arm armed and gauntleted proper, holding a cheval-trap or.

Motto. "Virtuti nihil invium."

HILLEL (Bibl.) הלל, father of Abdon, judge of Israel.

HILLEL (Biog.) a famous Rabbin, who, according to St. Jerome, lived a little before the time of our Saviour. He was a disciple of Sameas, or Schamaï, and became the head of one of the most celebrated schools of the Jews. He is supposed to be the same as is mentioned by Josephus, under the name of Pollio. An ancient MS. of the Bible bearing his name is ascribed to him, part of which is among the MSS. of the Sorbonne. Joseph. Antiq. l. 14, c. 17; Hieron. Isai. viii. l. 3.

HILLEL, the name of another famous Rabbin among the Jews in the fourth century, who is thought to be the person that fixed their epoch of the creation of the world. Bartolocci. Bibl. Rabbin. t. ii. &c.; Prideaux, Hist. of the Jews, t. ii.; Basnage, Hist. des Juifs.

HILLIER, Matthew (Biog.) a German divine, was born at Stutgard in 1646, and died in 1725, leaving, 1. 'Sciagraphia Grammaticæ Hebrææ,' Tubing. 1674. 2. 'Institutiones Linguæ Sanctæ.' 3. 'Lexicon Latino-Hebraicum.' 4. 'Onomasticum Sacrum,' 1704. 5. 'Matthæi Hilleri Hierophyticon,' &c. 4to. Ultraj. 1725, &c.

HILLIARD, Nicholas (Biog.) an English artist, was born at Exeter in 1547, and died in 1619, leaving a high reputation for skill in his art. He executed a portrait of Mary, queen of Scots, and also of queen Elizabeth.

HILLSBOROUGH, Earl (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the marquis of Downshire.

HIMELLA (Geog.) now Aia, a small river of the Sabines.

HIMERA (Geog.) Ἱμέρα, now Termine, a town of Sicily, near a river of the same name, now called Fiume di Termini. This town was built by the people of Zancle, and destroyed by the Carthaginians about 240 years after. It was once a place of some importance. Not far from this town were the Θερμαὶ Ἱμεραὶ, Thermæ Himerenses, which Pindar designated Θερμὰ νυμφᾶν λουτρὰ. Thucyd. l. 4; Polyb. Legat.; Scylax. in Perip.; Diodor. l. 13; Cic. in Varr. l. 2; Mel. l. 2; Plin. l. 3, &c.

HIMERA (Numis.) this town is known by many medals, bearing the inscription, IMEPAION, or HIMEPAION, and the type of a faun bathing in the waters, or the water flowing out of the mouth of a lion, as in fig. 1, in allusion to the celebrated Thermæ Himerensis. Sometimes a chariot with two or three horses is depicted, in reference to the victories gained by the inhabitants at the Olympic Games, and sometimes they represented the dice or pebbles, as in fig. 2, which were thrown by the ancients into the waters for the purpose of divining. Gruterus has also given an inscription, showing that the Thermæ Himerenses became a colony, COL. AUG. HIMERÆORUM THERMIT. Goltz. Sicil.; Haverkamp. Parut.; Sic. Descrip.; Hunt. Num. Urb. Vet. &c.

HIMERIUS (Biog.) a Greek sophist and grammarian of Prusias, in Bithynia, in the reigns of Constantius and Julian, employed himself in declamations against the Christians. A copy of his declamations has been found, of which an edition was published by Wernsdorf, under the title of 'Himerii Sophistæ Eclogæ et Declamationes,' 8vo. Gr. and Lat. Gotting. 1790.

HIMILCO (Hist.) a celebrated general of the Carthaginians, son of Amilcar, was sent with a formidable army against the Syracusans, but was totally defeated, and himself killed in battle by Gelo, in the 75th Olympiad, A. C. 480, or, according to some, he died of the plague. Diodor. Sicul. l. 2; Justin. l. 19.

HIMILCO, a Carthaginian, who was sent by the senate on a voyage of discovery, of which he afterwards gave an account. Fest. Avien.

HINCHLIFFE, John (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in London in 1731; educated at Westminster School, whence he was elected in 1750 to Trinity College, Cambridge; took his degrees of A. B. and A. M in 1754 and 1757; was elected master of Trinity College in 1768; raised to the see of Peterborough in 1769; and died in 1791. A volume of his Sermons was published after his death.

HINCKLEY, John (Biog.) an English divine, and native of Warwickshire, was born in 1617, and died in 1695, leaving, 1. 'Epistola Veridica ad Homines φιλοπρωτεύοντες,' 4to. 1659; reprinted in his 'Fasciculus Literarum.' 2. 'Oratio pro Statu Ecclesiæ fluctuantis.' 3. 'A Persuasive to Conformity, by Way of Letter to the Dissenting Brethren,' 8vo. 1670. 4. 'Fasciculus Literarum,' or Letters on several Occasions; besides some Sermons.

HINCHENBROOK, Viscount (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Sandwich.

HINCMAR (Ecc.) archbishop of Rheims, and one of the most learned men in his time, was appointed to that see in 845, and died in 882 at Eparnay, whither he had fled to escape from the Normans. Several of his works remain, the best edition of which is that by Sirmond, in 2 vols. fol. 1645; in which he has treated of matters connected with ecclesiastical history, theology, and jurisprudence. There is also something more of his in Labbe's Councils, and in the Council of Douzi, 4to. 1658.

HINCMAR, nephew of the preceding, by whose interest he was raised to the see of Laon, was guilty of such irregularities, that he was accused at the council of Verberie, by Charles the Bald; and, although he escaped punishment through the interference of the pope, he was accused again at the council of Douzi in 871; and being convicted of sedition and disobedience, he was banished, confined in irons, and his eyes put out, his uncle having pronounced sentence against him. He was, however, reinstated in 878, and died soon after. His vindications may be found in the Council of Douzi. 4to. 1658.

HINDOSTAN (Geog.) or Hindoostan, that part of ancient India which comprises all the countries between the mountains of Tartary and Thibet on the N., Bootan, Assam, and Cassay on the E., the Indian Ocean on the S., and the same ocean with Persia on the W.

Division. Hindostan comprehends Hindostan Proper, the Deccan, and the Peninsula. Hindostan Proper includes the provinces of Bengal, Baha, Agra, Allahabad, Cashmere, Delhi, Guserat, Lahore, Malwa, Moultan, Oude, Rotulcund, Sindy, &c. The Deccan comprehends properly Candeish, Dowlatabad, Berar, Orissa, the Circars, the chief part of Golconda, Visiapour, and Concan, &c. The Peninsula includes the Mysore, the Carnatic, and Madura, with some smaller districts.

Towns. The principal towns are Madras, Calcutta, Seringpatam, Delhi, Allahabad, Oude, &c.

Rivers and Mountains. The principal rivers are the Brahmapootra, Pudda, Kistna, Mahanudda, Soane, &c.; but there are no lofty mountains except the Himmaleh, and those which divide Bengal from Ava.

History. This region has from time immemorial been inhabited by an idolatrous people, generally known by the name of Hindoos, who are divided into a number of principalities, whose princes, called rajahs, were mostly independent of each other. The first important change which took place in modern times in the political state of this country, was the introduction of some Scythian tribes, who afterwards assumed the name of Afghans, and by degrees spread themselves along the mountainous regions lying between Persia and the Indus; this was followed by the invasion of the Arabs, who changed the religion of the inhabitants from the Hindoo worship to that of Mahomet. A part of this country afterwards fell into the hands of the Persians, who made many conquests during the reign of Ilek Khan, Sabektcken, and particularly the famous sultan Mahmoud; but the most important revolution was brought about in 1389, when the Mongul Tartars, under the conduct of Timur, or Tamerlane, invaded Hindostan; the entire conquest of which was effected in 1525, by sultan Baber, one of his descendants, who became the founder of the Mongul dynasty; and hence Hindostan has been called the Mogul empire, and its chief the Great Mogul. From the year 1555 till 1707 the throne of Hindostan was occupied by Akbar, Jehan Ghir, Shah Jehan, and Aurengzeb, whose territories, by continual conquests, extended from Candahar to Arracan, a distance in a straight line of not less than 2000 miles. About 50 years after the death of Aurengzeb, this empire began to decline. The attacks of the Mahrattas, the Rajpoohs, and the Sciks, joined to domestic dissensions, shook the throne, which was filled in succession till the year 1719 by Shah Azem, Jehander Shah, and Mohammed Furrukhsir, besides two princes of the same family, who both died in the same year. They were succeeded in 1720 by Mohammed Shah, in whose inauspicious reign the Persian usurper Nadir Shah invaded Hindostan, and gave a finishing blow to the tottering throne by taking and sacking Delhi, and by separating from Hindostan all the countries to the west of the Indus. After an unfortunate reign of 27 years Mohammed died, and was succeeded by Ahmed Shah, who being deposed and blinded was succeeded by Alum Shah, who died in 1806, after a nominal reign of 44 years, under the protection of the Mahrattas, during which time Delhi was taken by the British. With this prince the Mogul dynasty may be said to have terminated; for, although the British have conferred on his son Akber the title of emperor, and permitted him to reside in the palace of his ancestors, yet he is entirely dependant upon them for his support.

HINTON, Viscount (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Poulet.

HIPPARCHIA (Biog.) a woman of Maronea, in Thrace, who, falling in love with Crates, the Cynic philosopher, avowed her passion to him, and became his wife. She is also said to have written 'Hypotheses Philosophicæ,' &c. and some other things in Greek. Diog. in Vit. Suidas.

HIPPARCHUS (Hist.) Ἵππαρχος, a son of Pisistratus, who succeeded his father as tyrant of Athens, with his brother Hippias, but was assassinated by a band of conspirators, at the head of which were Aristogiton and Harmodius, A. C. 513. He is said to have first arranged the poems of Homer, but Cicero attributes this work to his father. Herod. l. 5, c. 55; Thucyd. l. 6; Aristot. Rhet. l. 2; Cic. Orat. l. 3; Ælian. Var. Hist. l. 8.

HIPPARCHUS, the name of the first person who was banished by the ostracism at Athens.

HIPPARCHUS, an Athenian, conspired against Heraclides, who kept Athens for Demetrius. Polyæn. l. 5.

HIPPARCHUS (Biog.) a mathematician and astronomer of Nicæa, in Bithynia, who divided the heavens into 49 constellations, gave name to the stars, found out the time of eclipses, of which he made a calculation for 600 years; and rendering other essential services to the science of astronomy, and publishing several treatises, he died 125 years before the Christian æra. His 'Commentary upon Aratus' Phænomena,' is still extant, and was first published by Peter Victorius, under the title of 'Hipparchi in Arati et Eudoxi Phænomena, et Asterismorum Liber,' Gr. fol. Florent. 1567. Petavius published a more correct edition, with a Latin version by himself, which is inserted in the third volume of his works, fol. 1630.

HIPPARINUS (Hist.) a son of Dionysius, who, expelling Calipus from Syracuse by a stratagem, seized the sovereign power, which he held for two years. Polyæn. l. 5.

HIPPARIS (Geog.) a river of Sicily, now Fiume di Camerina, which empties itself into the sea on the South coast.

HIPPARIS (Numis.) this river received divine honours from the inhabitants of Camarina, and was represented on medals under the form of a youth's head with the horns of a bull: inscription, ΙΠΠΑΡΙΣ.

HIPPASUS (Biog.) a disciple of Pythagoras, who maintained that every thing was produced from fire.

HIPPIAS (Hist.) Ἱππίας, a son of Pisistratus, who succeeded his father as tyrant of Athens, with his brother Hipparchus, whose death he wished to revenge, but, being driven from Athens, he fled to the court of Darius, and fell at the battle of Marathon fighting against the Athenians, A. C. 490. He had five children by Myrrhina, the daughter of Callias. Herod. l. 6; Thucyd. l. 6; Cic. ad Attic. l. 9, ep. 11.

HIPPIAS (Biog.) a philosopher of Elis, who made all virtue to consist in making oneself independent of men. He boasted at the Olympic games that the tunic cloak and shoes which he then wore, as also the ring upon his finger, were all the work of his own hands. Cic. de Orat. l. 3, &c; Quintil. l. 12; Apul. in Flor. l. 2.

HIPPIS (Biog.) an historian and poet of Rhegium, in the reign of Xerxes. Ælian. Hist. An. l. 8.

HIPPIUS (Myth.) a surname of Neptune, so called from his having raised a horse from the earth in his contest with Minerva. Paus. Eliac.

HIPPIAS (Geog.) a town of Thessalia; also called Phalauna by Strabo. Strab. l. 9.

HIPPIAS (Numis.) this town is known by one medal, bearing the inscription ΙΠΠΙΑΣ.

HIPPISLEY (Her.) or Hippesley, the name of a family of considerable antiquity in Somersetshire, of which mention is made as early as Edward III. One branch of this family, settled at Warfield Grove, co. Berks, enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1796 on sir John Coxe Hippesley, a gentleman who has been employed both at home and abroad on many occasions as a diplomatist. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth sable, three mullets of the first between two bendlets or, with a besant in chief for difference, for Hippesley; second, those for Coxe; third, for Webbe, of Clifford; the whole surmounted with an escutcheon of the arms of Ulster.

Crest. A hind's head erased, gorged with a collar sable, with three mullets or, issuant from a ducal collar.

Supporters. On either side an eagle regardant rising sable, the interior of the wings peaned, beaked and membered or; on the breast pendant by a chain from the neck gold, a shield, thereon the arms of Wurtemberg, being a grant by letters patent of his Serene Highness Frederick Eugene, duke of Wurtemberg, and confirmed by his majesty's sign manual.

Motto. "Amicitiæ virtutisque fœdus," being the inscription of the great order of Wurtemberg; the family motto of the Hippesleys of Yallon, "Non mihi sed patriæ."

HIPPO (Hist.) a daughter of Scedasus, who, upon bein ravished by the ambassadors of Sparta, killed herself, cursing the city that gave birth to such men. Paus. l. 9.

Hippo (Geog.) a celebrated town of Africa, on the Mediterranean, at the West of Carthage. According to Strabo there were two towns of this name, one of which was by distinction called Hippo regius.

Sil. l. 3.

Tum vaga et antiquis dilectus regibus Hippo.

Liv. l. 29; Strab. l. 17; Mela, l. 1; Plin. l. 5; Solin. c. 29.

Hippo, or Vibo, now Monte Leone, a town of the Brutii, in Calabria.

Hippo (Numis.) the town called Regius was made a colony by Julius Cæsar, as we learn from medals which it struck in honour of Antoninus Pius, M. Aurelius, Commodus, Caracalla, Gordianus Pius, Philippus, sen. Valerianus, sen. Gallienus, Valerianus, jun. bearing the inscription, C. G. J. H. P. A.; i. e. Colonia Gemella Julia Hippo Pia Augusta.

HIPPOBOTUS (Biog.) a Greek historian, who composed a treatise on philosophers. Diog. in Pyth.

HIPPOCOON (Myth.) Ἱπποκόων, a son of Œbalus, and brother to Tyndarus, was put to death by Hercules, because he had driven his brother from the kingdom of Lacedæmon. Apollod. l. 2; Diodor. l. 4; Hygin. Fab. 173.

HIPPOCRATES (Biog.) the prince of physicians, was born in the island of Cos in the first year of the 80th Olympiad, A. C. 460. He is said to have been descended from Æsculapius through a line of physicians, who had all promoted the fame of the Coan school; and by his mother's side he is reported to have been the 18th lineal descendant from Hercules. He spent a great part of his time in travelling, but took up his abode very much in the provinces of Thessaly and Thrace, especially at Larissa, where, after a long life spent in the successful practice of his art, he died at the age of 99, or, as some will have it, of 102. The books attributed to Hippocrates amount to 72 in number, of which, however, a considerable part are regarded as spurious. The following, however, are generally deemed the genuine productions of his pen: 'De Aeribus, Aquis, Locis;' 'Popularium, Lib. I et II;' 'Prænotiones;' 'Prædictorum, l. I, II;' 'Aphorismi;' 'De Victu Acutorum,' &c.; 'De Capitis Vulneribus;' but the rest which are ascribed to him will likewise be found included in his works, of which innumerable editions and versions, with commentaries, &c. have been made at different times. The principal Greek editions are those of Aldus, fol. Venet. 1526; of Frobenius, fol. Basil. 1538. The Latin editions are those of Cratander, fol. 1526, from the version of different writers; of M. F. Calous, translated from the MSS. in the Vatican by order of pope Clement VII, Rom. 1525, and 1549, which has been frequently reprinted; and the version of Fœsius, 8vo. Francof. 1596. The principal Greek and Latin editions are those of Mercurialis, fol. Venet. 1578: of Zwinger, with the version of Cornarius, fol. Basil. 1579; of Anutius Fœsius, Francof. 1595, and several times reprinted; of J. A. Vander Linden; also with the Latin version of Cornarius, 2 vols. 8vo. 1665, and 2 vols. 4to. Venet. 1757; of Renatus Chartrier, with the works of Galen, 14 vols. fol.; and of Stephen Mack, in 2 vols. fol. 1743, 1749, and 1759. The memory of Hippocrates is still held dear in the island of Cos, where the inhabitants point out a house in which it is said he once dwelt. [Vide Plate XXXII] Cic. de Orat. l. 3, &c.; Plin. l. 7; Cels. in Præf. Galen, &c. &c.; Fab. Biblioth. Græc. &c.

HIPPOCRENE (Myth.) a fountain of Bœotia, near mount Helicon, sacred to the Muses.

HIPPODAMIA (Myth.) Ἱπποδάμεια, a daughter of Œnomaus, king of Pisa, in Elis, who, fearing that, according to an oracle, he should be slain by one of her children, refused to marry her to any one, except to him who should conquer him in the chariot-race, on condition that the suitor if defeated should die. After the defeat and death of many candidates, Pelops ensured himself success by bribing Myrtilus, the charioteer of Œnomaus, who provided his master with a chariot that broke down in the course and killed him. Hippodamia, or Hippodame, as he is called by Virgil, was the mother of Atreus and Thyestes.

Virg. Geog. l. 3, v. 7.

Hippodameque, humeroque, Pelops insignis eburno.

Propert. l. 1, el. 2, v. 19.

Hippodamia, a daughter of Adrastus, king of Argos, who married Perithous, king of the Lapithæ. Hygin. Fab. 33; Eustath. in Hom. Odyss.

HIPPODAMUS (Hist.) Ἱπποδάμος, a man of Miletus, who formed a republic without any previous knowledge of government. Arist. Polit. l. 2.

Hippodamus, an Athenian archon in the second year of the 101st Olympiad, A. C. 375.

Hippodamus, an Athenian, who gave his house to the state for the improvement of the Piræus. Suidas.

HIPPODORUS (Hist.) an Athenian of the family of Codrus, who, to gain the reputation of a just prince, exercised great severity towards his own family. Ælian. Var. Hist.

HIPPODROMUS (Biog.) a Thessalian, who was at the head of a school at Athens in the age of M. Anthony Philostrat.

HIPPOLOCHUS (Myth.) a son of Bellerophon, father to Glaucus, who commanded the Lycians during the Trojan war. Hom. Il. l. 6.

HIPPOLYTE (Myth.) Ἱππολύτη, called also Antope, a queen of the Amazons, was given in marriage to Theseus by Hercules who had conquered her, and taken away her girdle by order of Eurystheus.

Propert. l. 4, el. 3.

HIPPOLYTUS (Myth.) Ἱππολύτος, a son of Theseus and Hippolyte, was accused by his step-mother Phædra of offering her violence, because he would not gratify her passion; and, flying from his father's presence, he was torn in pieces by sea-calves, whom Neptune at the desire of Theseus had purposely placed in his way.

Ovid. Fast. l. 3.

Hic jacet Hippolytus loris distractus equorum,
Unde nemus nullis illud aditur equis.

Propert. l. 4, el. 5.

Docta vel Hippolytum Veneri mollire negantem.

Martial. l. 14.

Masturbatorem fecerit Hippolytum.

Horat. l. 4, od. 7.

Infernis neque enim tenebris Diana pudicum
Liberat Hippolytum.

HIPPOLYTUS, S. (Ecc.) a bishop, martyr, and celebrated writer of the third century, suffered martyrdom in the reign of Alexander Severus, after having been a bishop of Arabia, or, according to others, of Portus Urbis, or Augusti, which was a suffragan of the metropolitan see of Rome. He is well known to have been the author of many works, but whether he wrote all that are ascribed to him is doubtful. Fabricius published an edition of his works in Gr. and Lat. 2 vols. fol. Hamb. 1716 and 1718. Euseb. in Chron. Hieron. Catal.; Nicephor. l. 15; Anastas. in Collect.; Georg. Syncell. in Chron.; Gelas. de Duab. Natur.; Isidor. Orig. l. 6; Photius, in Bibl.

HIPPOLYTUS, d'Este, son of Hercules, duke of Ferrara, and one of the most celebrated cardinals in his age, died in 1520. His life or eulogy was written by Paul Jovius, Ciaconius, Victorel, Garimbert, Ughel, Sainte Martha, and many others.

HIPPOLYTUS, d'Este, son of Alphonso I, was successively archbishop of Milan, of Auch, Arles, and Lyons, and died in 1572, after having been employed in different embassies. He was a great patron of learning and learned men; above all of Paul Manutius, Muretus, and others.

HIPPOLYTUS, de Medicis, a cardinal, and nephew of Leo X and Clement VII, was archbishop of Avignon, and legate to the emperor Charles V, and died in 1535.

HIPPOMACHUS (Biog.) a musician, who rebuked one of his pupils for being praised by the multitude, which he held to be a certain proof of his ignorance. Ælian. Var. Hist. l. 2.

HIPPOMEDON (Myth.) son of Nisimachus, and one of the seven leaders who went against Thebes, was killed in a combat with Ismenus. Hygin. Fab. 69; Stat. Theb. l. 1.

HIPPOMENES (Myth.) a son of Macareus and Merope, who, by the assistance of Venus, outran his mistress Atalanta, and obtained her as the prize of his victory; but, having neglected to acknowledge the favour of the goddess, he and Atalanta were changed into lions by the goddess of Cybele, whose temple they defiled. Ovid. Met.

HIPPOMENES (Hist.) an Athenian archon, who was deposed by the people for having exposed his daughter to be torn by horses because she had given herself up to her lover. Dio. Chrysostom. Orat. 23; Suidas.

HIPPOMOLGI (Geog.) Ἱππομόλγοι, a people of Scythia, so called from their living on the milk of horses. Hom. Il. l. 13; Hippocrat. Deliq.; Strab. l. 7, &c.

HIPPONA (Myth.) a goddess, who presided over horses. Plut. in Par.; Tertull. Apoll. c. 16; Juv. Sat. 8; Apul. Met. l. 3.

HIPPONAX (Biog.) a Greek poet of Ephesus, who flourished 540 years before the Christian æra. Being deformed in his person, two brothers, Buphalus and Anthermus, of Chios, made a statue so correct in its resemblance as to make his deformity exceedingly striking; for which he wrote such a keen and bitter satire against them that they hanged themselves in despair. Hipponax is said to be the inventor of the Scazontic verse, which is an iambic terminating with a spondee instead of an iambus. Cic. Orat. c. 56; Plin. l. 36; Athen. l. 12.

HIPPONIUM (Geog.) or Hippo, a town of the Bruttii, where Agathocles built a dock. Scylax. in Perip.; Strab. l. 6; Mela, l. 2; Plin. l. 3.

HIPPONOUS (Myth.) the father of Peribœa and Capaneus, was killed by the thunderbolts of Jupiter before the walls of Thebes. Apollod. l. 1; Hygin. Fab. 70.

HIPPONOUS, a son of Hercules, who burnt himself to death in consequence of an unfavourable answer he received from an oracle. Hygin. Fab. 242.

HIPPOTADES (Myth.) a patronymic of Æolus, grandson of Hippotas, and also of Amastrus, his son. [Vide Æolus]

HIPPOTHOON (Myth.) a son of Neptune and Alope, who was bred by mares, and ascended the throne of his grandfather Cercyon by the friendship of Theseus. Hygin. Fab. 187; Paus. l. 1.

HIRAM (Bibl.) חירם, king of Tyre and son of Abibal, is well known in Scripture for his alliance and friendly intercourse with the kings David and Solomon. 2 Kings v. &c.; Joseph. Antiq. l. viii; Cont. App. &c.

HIRAM II, an excellent artificer, son of a Tyrian father and of a Jewish mother, of the tribe of Naphthali according to 1 Kings vii. 13; or of the tribe of Dan according to 2 Chron. ii. 14.

HIRCANUS (Hist.) vide Hyrcanus.

HIRE, Philip de la (Biog.) a French mathematician and astronomer, was born at Paris in 1640, and died in 1718. His principal works are, 1. 'Nouvelle Methode en Geometrie pour les Sections des Superficies Coniques et Cylindriques,' 4to. 1673. 2. 'De la Cycloide,' 12mo. 1677. 3. 'Nouveaux Elemens des Sections Coniques,' &c. 12mo. 1679. 4. 'La Gnomonique,' &c. 12mo. 1682. 5. 'Sectiones Conicæ in novem Libros distributæ,' 1685. 6. 'Tabulæ Astronomicæ,' 4to. 1687, and 1702. 7. 'Veterum Mathematicorum Opera Græce et Latinè, pleraque nunc primum edita,' fol. 1693; besides his papers in the 'Memoires de l'Academie,' &c.

HIRPINI (Geog.) a people of the Samnites, who inhabited the country now called the Ulterior Principality, a province of Naples. Their chief town was Hirpinum, now Arpaia, a small village; their other towns were Beneventum, Abellinum, Compsa, &c. Liv. l. 22, &c.; Strab. l. 5; Plin. l. 3; Sil. l. 8; Ptol. l. 3; Leand. Descript. Ital.; Cluv. de Ant. Ital. &c.

HIRTIA, gens (Hist.) a Roman family, supposed to be plebeian, although some of that name arrived at the consulship. [Vide Hirtius]

HIRTIA, gens (Numis.) the name of this family occurs on some coins, as, A. HIRT. A. F.—A. HIRTIUS PRÆTOR, &c.

HIRTIUS, Aulus (Hist.) a consul with Pansa, who assisted Decimus Brutus when besieged at Mutina by Anthony. They defeated the latter, but were both killed in battle, A. C. 43. Cic. ad Attic. l. 14, ep. 6, &c. &c.; Sueton in Aug c. 7.

HIRTIUS, supposed to be the same as the preceding, Cicero's pupil and Cæsar's lieutenant, is supposed to have been the author of the supplementary part of Cæsar's commentaries, which are always published with Cæsar's work.

HISLOP (Her.) a family of Tothill, co. Devon, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1813 on sir Thomas Hislop, Commander-in-Chief at Fort St. George, Madras; the arms, &c. of which are as follow;

Arms. Argent, on a mount vert, a buck courant or, under a tree proper.

Crest. Out of a mural crown, a buck's head couped proper.

HISPALIS (Geog.) one of the largest, most ancient, and beautiful towns of Hispania Bætica, now called by the Spaniards Sevilla; by the Italians Seviglia; by the French and English Seville. It is said to derive its name from Hispalis, a son of Hercules, its founder; and, being restored by Julius Cæsar, it was made a Roman colony, under the name of Romulensis. [Vide Seville] Strab. l. 3; Mel. l. 2; Plin. l. 3, &c.

HISPANIA (Geog.) Spain, a peninsula of Europe, called by the poets Iberia, Hesperia, or Hesperia Ultima.

Boundaries and Extent.—It was bounded on the N. by the Pyrenees, which separated it from Gaul, and on the other sides by the Mediterranean, the Sinus Gaditanus, or Bay of Cadiz, the Fretum Herculaneum, or Streights of Gibraltar, the Western Ocean, and Sea of Cantabria. It extended from East to West about 13°, and from North to South about 9°.

Division.—It was divided by the Romans into three provinces; namely, Hispania Bætica, Hispania Tarraconensis, and Lusitania.

Principal Towns.—The following list contains the principal towns, with the ancient and modern names:

Ancient.	Modern.
Asturica,	Astorga.
Barcino,	Barcelona.
Bilbilis,	Calatayud.
Brigantia,	Braganza.
Cæsar Augusta,	Saragossa.
Carthago nova,	Carthagena.
Complutum,	Alcala de Henares.

Ancient.	Modern.
Baleares,	Majorca and Minorca.
Ebusus,	Yvica.
Ophiusa,	Formentera.
Capraria,	Cabrera.
Gades,	Cadiz.

History.—The Celtes are generally admitted to have been the first inhabitants of Spain, which derived its name, according to the accounts of Spanish writers, from Hispan, the son of Hercules, or Hispalis, one of their fabulous kings, but the more probable derivation is that given by Bochart from the Phœnician, שפניה, Sphanija, or שפן, a rabbit; because the country abounded in rabbits. Its poetical names of Hesperia, &c. are derived from its western situation. Of this country, previous to, and during its occupation by the Carthaginians, little is known. It was taken from them at the conclusion of the second Punic war, and remained a part of the Roman empire till about the fourth century, when it came into the hands of the Goths. [Vide Spain]

'Muscipula,' a poem, of which there is a good English translation by Dr. John Hoadley, in Vol. V. of Dodsley's 'Collection;' and another among Dr. Cambden's poems. 2. 'Pharsalia and Philippi,' &c. 4to. 1741. 3. 'Remarks and Dissertations on Virgil,' &c. 4to. 1768.

HOLINGSHED, Raphael (Biog.) an English historian in the 16th century, well known as the author of the 'Chronicles,' which were first published in 2 vols. fol. 1577; then in 1587, in three volumes, the first two of which are commonly bound together; in this second edition several sheets were castrated, because they were objectionable at that period; but the castrations were reprinted in 1723, and the work is now among the first of the collection of English Chronicles, published in 6 vols. 4to. by the London booksellers.

HOLLAND, Henry, first Lord (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1705, and died in 1774, after having been constantly engaged in public life, and holding the highest posts in the government of his country; but he is still better known as the father of the Hon. Charles James Fox.

Holland, Lord (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by a junior branch of the family of Fox [vide Fox]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Fox, lord Holland, baron of Holland, co. Lincoln, and baron Holland of Foxley, co. Wilts.

Arms. Ermine, on a chevron azure, three foxes' heads erazed or, and on a canton azure, a fleur-de-lis or.

Crest. On a chapeau azure, turned up ermine, a fox sejant or.

Supporters. On the dexter side a fox ermine, frettee or, collared dove-tail azure, thereon three fleurs-de-lis of the second; on the sinister a fox proper, collared in like manner.

Motto. "Faire sans dire."

Holland, Philemon (Biog.) a translator, descended from the Hollands of Lancashire, was born at Chelmsford, in Essex, in the reign of Edward VI, and died in 1636, leaving translations of Livy, Pliny's Natural History, Suetonius, Ammianus Marcellinus, Xenophon's Cyropædia, and Camden's Britannia, to the last of which he made several additions. He also translated into Latin the geographical part of Speed's Theatre of Great Britain, and a French Pharmacopœia of Brice Bauderon.

Holland, Henry, son of the preceding, was the editor of the 'Heroologia Anglicana,' i. e. a collection of English Portraits, sixty-five in number. He also published 'Monumenta Sepulchralia Ecclesiæ S. Pauli,' Lond. 4to.; and 'A Book of Kings, being true and lively Effigies of all our English Kings from the Conquest,' 1618.

Holland (Geog.) or Dutch Netherlands, a maritime country of Europe.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the W. and N. by the German Ocean, E. by Westphalia, and S. by Liege and Brabant, or Belgium. It extends 150 m. from N. to S., and 100 from W. to E., and consists of seven provinces, namely, Holland, Gelderland, Zealand, Utrecht, Friesland, Overyssel, and Groningen.

Towns. The principal towns are Amsterdam, Rotterdam, the Hague, Leyden, Haerlem, Dort, Delft, Gouda, Alkmaar, Hoorn, &c. all lying in the province of Holland, Nimeguen, Arnheim, and Zutphen, in Guelderland; Flushing and Middleburg, in Zealand; Utrecht, in Utrecht; Lewarden, in Friesland; Deventer, in Overyssel; and Groningen, in Groningen.

Rivers. The principal rivers are the Rhine, Meuse, Dommel, Waal, Yssel, and Scheldt, &c.

History. This country was a part of that inhabited by the Batavi, whence it was called by the Romans Insula Batavorum, and afterwards The Seven United Provinces, or more usually Holland, from the principal province, which is so denominated, from its being hollow or low ground. Each of these provinces had at first independent princes; but were united in 1579 into one state, which was then called the Republic of Holland, or the Seven United Provinces, and also the Dutch Netherlands, of which a further account may be seen under the head of Netherlands. The province of Holland, or Holland properly so called, was erected into a country by Charles the Bald, in favour of Thierri, duke of Elsace, who was its first count, and the emperor, Charles V, its last. The following is a list of their counts, in chronological order.

Chronological Succession of the Counts of Holland.

863	Thierri I.	1223	Florent IV.
903	Thierri II.	1235	William II.
947	Thierri III.	1256	Florent V.
988	Arnold.	1296	John I.
993	Thierri IV.	1299	John II.
1039	Thierri V.	1304	William III.
1049	Florent I.	1337	William IV.
1062	Gertrude of Saxony.	1345	Margaret.
		1351	William V.
1069	Robert.	1358	Albert.
1070	Geoffrey.	1404	William VI.
1075	Thierri VI.	1417	Jacqueline.
1092	Florent II.	1436	Philip the Good.
1123	Thierri VII.	1467	Charles the Hardy.
1163	Florent III.	1477	Mary of Burgundy.
1190	Thierri VIII.	1482	Philip II, Archduke of Austria.
1203	Ada.
1204	William I.	1506	Charles V, Emperor.

HOLLAR, Wentzel (Biog.) or Hollard, Wenceslaus, an engraver, was born at Prague in 1607, and died in 1677. Among his works, which procured him universal admiration, are etchings from the noble collection of lord Arundel; as also from the choicest pieces of Titian, Durer, Vandyk, Holbein, and others.

HOLLIS, Denzil, Lord (Hist.) second son of the first earl of Clare, one of the leaders of the rebellious faction in Parliament during the reign of Charles I, and one of the five members who was impeached by the king, was afterwards employed by the usurping powers to negotiate with France. At the restoration he was raised to the peerage, and died in 1680, at the age of 82. [Vide Plate XVIII]

Hollis (Her.) the name of a family which originally enjoyed the peerage in two branches. John Hollis was created earl of Clare in 1624; and John, the fourth earl, was created duke of Newcastle in 1694, which titles became extinct at his death in 1711. [Vide Newcastle] Denzil Hollis abovementioned, was created in 1661 lord Hollis of Ifield, which title became extinct at the death of Denzil, third lord Hollis, in 1694.

Hollis, Thomas (Biog.) a literary gentleman, and a native of Shropshire, who was born in 1720, and died in 1774, is known by his 'Memoirs,' printed in two volumes, 4to. 1780.

HOLMES (Her.) or Worsley Holmes, the name of a family which derives its descent from sir Elias de Workesley, or Workedeley, who flourished soon after the conquest, and took his name from his lordship, so called in Lancashire. He is said in the Chronicles of the Holy Wars to have made an expedition to Palestine, where he fought many battles, and died at Rhodes. Descended from him in the 17th generation was sir Richard Worsley Holmes, who was created a baronet in 1611. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. First grand quarter, first and fourth, first barry wavy of or and azure, on a canton gules, a lion passant gardant or; second argent, a chevron between three hawks sable; third as the second and fourth as the first. Second grand quarter argent, a chevron between three hawks sable; third or, on a cross engrailed gules, a lion's head erased or; fourth argent, on a chief embattled sable, three plates, &c.

Crest. An arm and hand in armour, embowed proper, out of a naval coronet holding a trident, speared or, &c.

Motto. "Vectis."

HOLMES, George (Biog.) an English antiquary, and native of Yorkshire, was born in 1662, and died in 1748, leaving an edition of Rymer's 'Fœdera,' published in 17 vols. 1727; besides a number of MSS. respecting the Records, for which government gave his widow 2000*l.*

HOLMES, Robert, an English divine, and native of Hampshire, was born in 1749, and died in 1805, leaving, 1. 'Alfred,' an ode, 1778. 2. 'Bampton Lectures,' in 1782. 3. 'Divinity Tracts,' 8vo. 1788. 4. 'An Ode for the Duke of Portland's Installation.' 5. 'A Latin Letter to the Bishop of Durham respecting his Collation of the Septuagint,' fol. This work was begun by him under the auspices of the University of Oxford, and by his diligence no less than 73 MS. folio volumes were deposited in the Bodleian in 1795. He lived to publish only the first volume of his collections; but, after an interruption of four years, the work was continued by the Rev. James Parsons, A. M. of Wadham, who in 1810 published the first part of Vol. II.

HOLOFERNES (Bibl.) הלפרנחש, lieutenant-general of the armies of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Assyria, who, marching against the Jews and besieging Bethulia, was ensnared by Judith, who cut off his head. Judith v. &c.

HOLROYD (Her.) a family of great antiquity in the West Riding of Yorkshire, where they possessed lands in the reign of Edward I, although they have but lately attained to the dignity of the peerage, conferred on John Holroyd, who in 1780 was created an Irish peer, by the title of lord Sheffield, baron of Dunamore; in 1782, he was further created baron Sheffield of Roscommon; in 1802, he was made an English peer by the title of lord Sheffield of Sheffield, co. York; and in 1816 received the additional titles of viscount Pevensey and earl of Sheffield in Ireland.

HOLSTENIUS (Biog.) or Holstein, Lucas, a German scholar, was born at Hamburgh in 1596, and died in 1661, leaving notes on Eusebius' Book against Hierocles; on Porphyry's Life of Pythagoras; on Apollonius's Argonautics; and upon the Fragments of Demophilus, Democritus, Sallust, &c.; which are to be found in the best editions of those authors; besides which he wrote a Dissertation upon the Life and Writings of Porphyry, which is printed with his notes on Porphyry's Life of Pythagoras; and other dissertations of his are inserted in Grævius's 'Collection of Roman Antiquities.'

HOLT, Sir John, Knt. (Hist.) Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, was born at Thame, in Oxfordshire, in 1642; educated at Oxford; studied law at Gray's Inn; was called to the degree of serjeant in 1686; made Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench at the revolution; and after maintaining his post for 22 years with great reputation for steadiness and integrity, he died in 1709. He published 'A Report of divers Cases in Pleas of the Crown, adjudged and determined in the Reign of King Charles II,' &c.; to which is added, the Report of three Modern Cases, &c. fol. 1708, and republished, but only with a new title, in 1739.

HOLT, John (Biog.) a miscellaneous writer, was born at Mottram, in Cheshire, in 1742, and died in 1801, leaving, 1. 'Characters of the Kings and Queens of England,' 3 vols. 12mo. 1786—1788. 2. 'An Essay on the Curle in Potatoes.' 3. 'A Report, published by the Board of Agriculture in the County of Lancaster,' &c.

HOLTE, John (Biog.) author of the first Latin Grammar of any note in England, who was admitted fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1491, published his grammar under the title of 'Lac Puerorum,' 4to. 1497, printed by Wynkyn de Worde.

HOLWELL, John (Hist.) a mathematical and political writer, who took an active part against the succession of the duke of York, wrote, among other things, 'Catastrophe Mundi,' a tract which reflected severely on the Roman Catholics. He died in 1685, and his death has been attributed to poison.

HOLWELL, John Zephaniah, grandson of the preceding, was born at Dublin in 1711; and going to Calcutta, he was in 1756 made governor of that place, at the time that it was attacked by Surajah Dowlah, nabob of Bengal, when he bravely held out, with a few gallant followers, and so incensed the nabob by his obstinate valour, that on the surrender of the place he shut Mr. Holwell and his companions, in violation of his promise, into a dungeon, known by the name of the Black Hole, from which only himself, and a few of his companions, escaped alive. He afterwards returned to England, and died in 1798, leaving, 1. 'Narrative of the Sufferings endured by himself and his Companions in the Black Hole in 1758.' 2. 'A Journal of his Voyage from India,' published in 1757. 3. 'India Tracts,' 4 vols. 12mo. 1764; containing an account of his administration of the government, &c. in India. 4. 'Interesting Historical Events relative to Bengal and Hindostan,' &c. 8vo. Lond. 1765. 5. 'A new Experiment for the Prevention of Crimes,' 1786. 6. 'Dissertations on the Origin, Nature, and Pursuits of intelligent Beings,' &c. 1788.

HOLYDAY, Barten (Biog.) an English divine, was born in the parish of All Saints, Oxford, in 1593, educated at Christ Church, and died in 1661, leaving, 1. 'Technogamia,' or the Marriage of Arts, a comedy, 1630. 2. 'Philosophiæ Polito-barbaræ Specimen, in quo de Anima, &c. Quæstiones aliquot illustrantur,' 4to. 1633. 3. 'Survey of the World, in ten Books, a Poem,' 8vo. 1691. 4. 'A Translation of the Satires of Juvenal and Persius,' 8vo. 1661; the fourth edition of his 'Persius' was published at the end of the 'Satires of Juvenal,' illustrated with notes and prints, fol. 1673.

HOLYOAKE, Francis (Hist.) an English scholar, and native of Warwickshire, who was educated at Oxford, and died in 1653, after having suffered much for his loyalty, was the author of an 'Etymological Dictionary of Latin,' which was first printed in 4to. 1606; the fourth edition in 1633.

HOLYOAKE, Thomas, son of the preceding, was born in 1616 at Stony Thorp, near Southam, in Warwickshire, educated at Oxford, and died in 1677, after having served in the royal army during the rebellion.

HOLYWOOD, vide Sacro-bosco.

HOMAN (Her.) the name of a family in Ireland, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1801 on sir William Jackson Homan; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Vert, a chevron between three pheons, with their pinions downward argent.

Crest. On a lion's head erased or, a chapeau gules, turned up ermine.

Motto. "Homo sum."

HOMBERG, William (Biog.) a chemist, was born at Batavia, in the island of Java, in 1652, and died in 1715, leaving many papers in the 'Memoirs of the Academy;' containing an account of his discoveries on phosphorus, pneumatics, and other branches of natural philosophy.

HOME, Alexander, second Lord (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, joined the party of the Prince against his father James III, and was one of the envoys sent to England by that party in 1488. On the accession of James IV he was sworn Privy Councillor; constituted High-Chamberlain of Scotland; and continued to hold, during the reign of this king, the highest posts in the state.

Home, Alexander, third Lord, led the van of the Scottish army at the battle of Flodden, and, dispersing the English who opposed him, he was one of the few who escaped the carnage of that day. He joined the party of the queen dowager, and her husband Angus, for which, notwithstanding he had made his peace with the duke of Albany, and had been restored to his honours and estates, he was arrested, tried on a charge of high treason, and being convicted, was executed in 1516.

Home, William, brother of the preceding, who had also acted on the same side, was arrested and tried at the same time, and shared his fate.

Home, Alexander, fifth Lord, at first took the part of the association in favour of king James VI, and fought on that side at the battle of Langside in 1568; but, deserting the party of Moray, he joined the friends of queen Mary in 1569; held the Castle of Edinburgh in 1573 against the king, which, being surrendered, he was convicted of treason the year following, and died in 1575.

Home, Alexander, Earl of, stood high in favour with James I, whom he accompanied into England, was sworn of his Privy Council, and died in 1619.

Home, Sir James, third Earl of, maintained a steady and active loyalty throughout the rebellion, and died in 1666.

Home, Charles, sixth Earl of, was one of the most determined opponents to the Union, and died in 1707, whilst the business was pending.

Home, Sir David, of another branch of the same family, fell, along with his son George, at the fatal battle of Flodden in 1513.

Home, Sir Patrick, second son of David Home the Younger, of Wedderburn, had a summons of treason issued against him in 1478, for his adherence to Alexander, duke of Albany. He afterwards went on a pilgrimage to Canterbury, and died in 1505.

Home, George, of Wedderburn, eldest son of George Home, engaged in the insurrection in 1715, and being taken at the battle of Preston Pans, he was tried, found guilty, and condemned; but obtained a pardon, and died in 1720.

Home, or Hume, Sir Patrick, of Polwarth, first earl of Marchmont, an active partisan in his day, rendered himself obnoxious to the government, for which he was imprisoned; but being afterwards released, and going to the Continent, he landed with the prince of Orange in 1688, with whom he continued in favour until the king's death. He lost his office of Chancellor soon after the accession of queen Anne, and died in 1724, after having been very strenuous in support of the Union.

Home, Hugh, Earl of Marchmont, vide Marchmont.

Home, Henry, Lord Kames, vide Kames.

Home (Her.) or Hume, the name of a Scotch family of great antiquity, which traces its descent from Patrick, the second son of [illegible] March. His descendant [illegible] a lord of [illegible] family, which became possessors of the barony of Wedderburn, was also ennobled in the person of sir Patrick Home, mentioned under History, who was created in 1697 earl of Marchmont, which title became dormant at the death of Hugh, fourth earl of Marchmont, in 1794. The titles, arms, &c. of the elder branch are as follow:

Titles. Home, earl of Home, lord Home, and lord Dunglass.

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth vert, a lion rampant argent, armed and langued gules, for Home; second and third argent, three papingoes or parrots vert, beaked and membered gules, for Pepdie of Dunglass; over all or, an orle azure, for Landale.

Crest. Or, on a cap of state gules, turned up ermine, a lion's head erased of the first.

Supporters. Two lions rampant argent, armed and langued gules, standing on a compartment.

Home, the name of a family of Greenlaw Castle, co. Berwick, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1813 on sir Everard Home, serjeant-surgeon to his majesty; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Vert, a lion rampant between two piles engrailed, issuing from the chief argent; all within a bordure engrailed of the last, charged with six papingoes of the first, beaked and membered gules.

Crest. A lion's head erased proper, charged with a label of three points argent, the middle charged with a fleur-de-lis azure; and each of the other points with St. George's Cross.

Home, David (Biog.) a Protestant divine of Scotland, but educated in France, who flourished in the reign of James I, of England, was the author of, 1. 'Apologia Basilica; seu Machiavelli ingenium examinatum,' 4to. 1626. 2. 'Le Contr' Assassin, ou Reponse à l'Apologie des Jesuites,' 8vo. Genev. 1612. 3. 'L'Assassinat du Roi, ou Maximes du Vieil de la Montagne, pratiquées en la Personne de defunt Henri le Grand,' 8vo. 1617; besides several compositions in the 'Deliciæ Poetarum Scotorum.'

Home, John a clergyman of the church of Scotland, but known only as a dramatic writer, was born in the vicinity of Ancrum, in Roxburgshire, in 1724, and died in 1808, leaving, among other things, 'Agis,' his first tragedy; 'Douglas;' 'The Siege of Aquileia;' 'The Fatal Discovery;' 'Alonzo;' 'Alfred,' &c.; besides 'The History of the Rebellion in Scotland in 1745.'

HOMER (Biog.) vide Homerus.

Homer, Henry, a scholar and native of Warwickshire, was born in 1752, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1791, leaving, 1. 'Tractatus varii Latini a Crevier, Brotier,' &c. 1788. 2. 'Ovidii Epistolæ ex Editione Burmann,' 1789. 3. 'Sallustius ex Edit. Cortii,' 1789. 4. 'Plinius ex Edit. Cort. et Longol,' 1790. 5. 'Cæsar ex Edit. Oudendorp,' 1790. 6. 'Persius ex Edit. Heninii.' 7. 'Tacitus ex Edit. Brotier,' complete all but the index, besides Livy and Quintilian, which were in the press at the time of his death.

HOMERUS (Biog.) Ὅμηρος, Homer, the father of poetry, and the most ancient of all profane writers, is supposed to have lived about 168 years after the Trojan war, although, according to Paterculus, he flourished 968 years before the Christian æra, and 884 according to Herodotus; but the Arundelian Marbles fix his æra 960 years before Christ. There is no less diversity of opinion and uncertainty concerning the place of his nativity; this honour being disputed by seven illustrious cities, as the following lines denote:

Smyrna, Chios, Colophon, Salamis, Rhodos, Argos, Athenæ,
Orbis de patriâ certat, Homere, tua.

He was called Melesigenes, because supposed to be born on the banks of the river Meles, and afterwards Homer, when he was blind. The only incontestable works which Homer has left behind him are his Iliad and Odyssey; but several other pieces are attributed to him; as the 'Batrachomyomachia,' and several hymns, &c. Among the best editions of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey will no doubt be reckoned that of Barnes, 2 vols. 4to. Cantab. 1711; that of Glasgow, 2 vols. fol. 1758; that of Berglerus, 2 vols. 12mo. Amst. 1707; that of Dr. Clarke, of the Iliad, 2 vols. 1729, and of the Odyssey, 1740; and that of Oxford, 5 vols. 8vo. 1780; containing likewise the scholia, hymns, and an index. Of the numerous commentaries published on Homer, that of Eustathius, bishop of Thessalonica, is by far the most extensive and erudite. A Life of Homer is attributed to Herodotus, whose name it bears. Herod. l. 7, &c.; Aristot. Poet.; Dionys. Hal. in Jud.; Strab. l. 1; Val. Max. l. 8; Paterc. l. 1; *Aul. HOMMEL, Charles Frederick (Biog.) a lawyer, philologer, and historian, of Leipzig, was born in 1722, and died in 1781, leaving, 1. 'De Legum Civilium et Naturalium Natura,' 4to. 1743. 2. 'Oblectamenta Juris Feudalis, sive Grammaticæ Observationes Jus Rei Clientelaris,' &c. 4to. 1755. 3. 'Literatura Juris,' 8vo. 1761. 4. 'Jurisprudentia Numismatibus illustrata, necnon Sigillis, Gemmis,' &c. 8vo. 1763. 5. 'Corpus Juris Civilis, cum Notis variorum,' 8vo. 1768. 6. 'Palingenesia Librorum Juris veterum,' 3 vols. 8vo. 1768.

HONAIN (Biog.) an Arabian translator, and a Christian, native of Hira in the ninth century, translated the Elements of Euclid; the Almagest of Ptolemy; the writings of Aristotle, Hippocrates, and other Greek authors.

HONDEKOETER, Giles (Biog.) a painter of Utrecht in the 16th century, excelled greatly in painting landscapes and flowers.

Hondekoeter, Gysbrecht, son of Giles, and a painter, who was born in 1613, excelled in the representation of flowers.

Hondekoeter, Melchior, son of the preceding, who died in 1695, at the age of 59, obtained a reputation in his art superior to that of his father and grand-father. His works are still in great request, and bear a high price.

HONDIUS, Abraham (Biog.) an artist, was born at Rotterdam in 1638, and died in 1695. His most capital picture is 'The Burning of Troy;' besides which his pictures of dogs are highly esteemed; one in particular, in which thirty different species of dogs are represented with some characteristic air and action.

HONE (Biog.) or Hönn, George Paul, a lawyer of Nuremberg, was born in 1662, and died in 1747, leaving, 1. 'Iter Juridicum per Belgium, Angliam, Galliam, Italiam.' 2. 'Lexicon Topographicum Franconiæ.' 3. 'Betrugs-Lexicon worinnen die meisten Betrügereyen in Allen Ständen entdeckt werden,' 2 Th. 8vo. Coburg. 4. 'Das Chur-und Fürstlichen Hauses Sachsen Wappen und Geschlechts Untersuchung,' &c. 8vo. Coburg.

Hone, Nathaniel, a painter of Dublin, who died in 1784, obtained some reputation in his day.

HONESTIS, Petrus de (Biog.) vide Damien.

HONOR (Myth.) a deity among the Romans, to whom a temple was first erected by Scipio Africanus, and afterwards another by Claudius, by the side of one to Virtue, through which it was made necessary to pass in one's way to that of Honor. Cic. de Nat. Deor. l. 2; Val. Max. l. 1; Liv. l. 29; Ovid. Fast. l. 5; Fast. de Verb. Signif.

Honor (Numis.) this deity is sometimes represented in a long habit, after the fashion of a Roman magistrate, to denote that magistrates ought to spring from him; holding a spear in his hand, and resting with his foot on a globe, to betoken his readiness for action; but sometimes he is represented in company with Virtue, which ought to be his constant companion. On the annexed cut their heads are coupled; namely, that of Honor crowned with laurel, and that of Virtue helmeted: inscription—HOnor VIRTus KALENI; i. e. Fufius Kalenus, of the gens Fufia, whose coin is here represented. Morell. Fam.; Pembroch. Mus.; Oisel. Sel. Num.

HONORATUS (Ecc.) bishop of Marseilles, who flourished in the fifth century, was the author of several lives, none of which are extant except that of St. Hilary, of Arles.

HONORIA, Justa Gratiana (Hist.) daughter of Constantius Cæsar, and Galla Placidia, was born in 417, and banished to Constantinople for her debaucheries in 434, but she afterwards promised to give Attila, king of the Huns, a share in the empire in case he would marry her. The time of her death is not known. [Vide Honoria under Numismatics] Marcellin. in Chron.

Honoria (Numis.) the medals of this princess, which bear her effigy as in the annexed figure, also testify that she bore the title of Augusta; as D. N. JUST. GRAT. HONORIA P. F. Honorius (Ecc.) the name of four popes.

Honorius I, a native of Campania, succeeded Boniface V in 626, and died in 638, after having governed the church with great zeal and wisdom. He was succeeded by Severinus. Baron. Annal. ann. 645, &c.; Bellarmin. de Rom. Pont. &c.

Honorius II, originally named Lambert, bishop of Ostia, was elected pope after Callixtus II by a powerful party, which superseded the election of Theobald, who had already taken the title of Celestin. The latter, however, yielded to his rival, who died in 1130, and was succeeded by Innocent II. Gul. Tur. l. 12; Baron. Annal. ann. 1124; Du Pin, Biblioth.

Honorius III, a Roman, of the name of Cencius Savelli, was elected after Innocent III in 1216, and died in 1227, after having essayed in vain to set on foot a crusade. He was succeeded by Gregory IX. Onuph. et Platin. de Vit. Pontif.

Honorius IV, a native of Rome, whose name was James Savelli, was elected pope in 1285, four days after the death of Martin IV, and died in 1287, after having defended the rights of the church, and preached the crusades. He had Nicholas IV for a successor.

Honorius, an antipope. [Vide Cadalous]

Honorius (Numis.) numerous medals are extant of the Roman emperor, bearing his effigy [vide Plate II] and the inscription—D. N. HONORIUS P. F. AUG. On the reverse — CONCORDIA AUGG. — GLORIA ROMANORUM AUGGG.—TRIUMFATOR BARB. GENT.; i. e. Triumphator Gentium Barbararum; this last medal was struck in the year 412, when the emperor triumphed over the barbarous nations which invaded the empire. Ducang. Byz. Fam.; Med. Imp.; Bandur. Rom. Imp.

HONORIUS, de Sancta Maria (Biog.) a barefooted Carmelite, whose proper name was Blaize Vauzelle, was born in 1651, at Limoges, and died in 1729, leaving, 1. 'Expositio Symboli Apostolorum Dogmatica, Historico-Hæretica,' &c. Perpinian. 1689. 2. 'Traité des Indulgences et du Jubilé,' Clermont. 12mo. 1725, and 1745. 3. 'Tradition des Pères et des Auteurs Ecclésiastiques, sur la Contemplation,' &c. 2 vols. 8vo. Paris, 1708, translated into Spanish, Saragossa, 1725, and also into Italian. 4. 'Réflexions sur les Règles et sur l'Usage de la Critique,' &c. 3 vols. 4to. the first volume printed at Paris in 1713, the second in 1717, and the third at Lyons in 1720. 5. 'Dissertations Historiques et Critiques sur les Ordres Militaires,' &c. 4to. Paris, 1718, besides a number of controversial works.

HONTAN, Baron de (Biog.) a native of Gascony in the 17th century, was the author of some travels in North America, which were published at Amsterdam in 2 vols. 12mo. 1705.

HONTHEIM, John Nicholas de (Ecc.) suffragan to the archbishop of Treves, was born in that city in 1700, and died in 1790, leaving 'Historia Trevisensis Diplomatica,' &c. 5 vols. fol.; 'De præsenti Statu Ecclesiæ,' &c.

HONTHORST, Gerard (Biog.) an artist of Utrecht, also called Gerardo delle Notti, was born in 1592, and died in 1660. He left many specimens of his skill, both in England, where he was patronized by Charles I, and in Holland, where he had the prince of Orange for his patron.

HONTHORST, William, brother of the preceding, and also a painter, who died in 1683, at the age of 79, excelled in portrait painting, but was not equal to his brother.

HONYMAN (Her.) the name of a Scotch family of Armadale, co. Orkney, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1804 on sir William Honyman; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a bend engrailed voided gules.

Crest. An arrow, in point downwards in pale or, feathered argent.

Supporters. Two lions rampant gardant proper.

HONYWOOD (Her.) or Honewood, as it was anciently written, the name of a family derived from the manor of Honewood, in the parish of Portling, co. Kent, where they resided temp. Henry III, when Edmund de Honewood is mentioned as a liberal benefactor to the priory of Horton, in that neighbourhood. They afterwards resided at Hythe, for which port John Honywood served in Parliament in 1396. The descendant of this family, sir Edward Honywood, was created a baronet in 1660. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a chevron between three hawks' heads erased, azure.

Crest. A wolf's head couped ermine.

Motto. "Omne bonum desuper."

HOOD, Samuel, first Viscount (Hist.) eldest son of the Rev. Samuel Hood, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, entered early into the navy, was made a post-captain in 1756; promoted to the rank of admiral in 1780; received the thanks of Parliament in 1782, for his gallant conduct in the West Indies, in the engagement with the French fleet under Count de Grasse, and after distinguishing himself by firmness and intrepidity on every occasion that called forth his exertions, he died full of honour in 1816.

HOOD (Her.) the name of a family of considerable respectability in the county of Dorset, which is now become memorable in the annals of the navy, and has justly earned the dignity of the peerage in two of its branches. Samuel viscount Hood above-mentioned, was, for his distinguished services, created a baronet in 1678; a peer of Ireland in 1782, by the title of baron Hood, of Catherington; and a peer of Great Britain by the title of viscount Hood, of Whitley, co. Warwick. The viscountess was also created a peeress in her own right, by the title of baroness Hood, of Catherington, co. Hants. Alexander Hood, younger brother of the preceding, and a no less distinguished officer, was created in 1794 a peer of Ireland, by the title of baron Bridport, of Cricket St. Thomas, in Ireland; and a peer of Great Britain in 1796, by the title of baron Bridport, of Cricket St. Thomas, co. Somerset; and in 1801 was further advanced to the dignity of viscount Bridport; but the titles of viscount and baron Bridport became extinct at his death, without issue in 1814. [Vide Bridport] The titles, arms, &c. of the elder branch are as follow:

Titles. Hood, viscount Hood, of Whitley, in Warwickshire; baron Hood, of Catherington, and a baronet.

Arms. Azure, a fret argent, on a chief sable, three crescents or.

Crest. A Cornish chough proper, on a wreath vert and argent.

Motto. "Veritis secundis."

HOOD, another branch of the same family, enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1815 on the late sir Samuel Hood, for his signal services in the navy, which terminated only with his death. The arms, &c. of this branch are as follow:

Arms. As above.

Crest. A Cornish chough, holding an anchor in its dexter claw.

Supporters. On the dexter side, a triton crowned with an eastern crown, holding in the dexter hand a trident; on the sinister, a sagittarius armed with a bow and arrow regardant.

Motto. "Zealous."

HOOFT, Peter Cornelius Van (Biog.) a Dutch poet and historian, was born at Amsterdam in 1581, and died in 1647, leaving, 1. Epigrams, Comedies, and other Poems, in Dutch. 2. 'Historia Henrici IV, cognomine Magni Galliæ Regis,' fol. Amst. 1626, and 12mo. 1652. 3. A History of the Family of Medici, in Flemish, Amsterdam, 1649. 4. A History of the Revolution in the Low Countries, in Dutch, fol. Amst. 1654, and another edition in 2 vols. 1703. 5. A Translation of Tacitus into the Dutch, which was executed so well, as to give him the title of the Batavian Tacitus.

HOOGEVEN, Henry (Biog.) a Dutch philologer, was born at Leyden in 1712, and died in 1791, leaving, 1. An edition of Vigerus 'De Idiotismis Linguæ Græcæ,' 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1743, and several times republished. 2. 'Doctrina Particularum Linguæ Græcæ,' 2 vols. 4to. Amst. 1769, besides a number of Odes, and pieces of Poetry, in Latin, which were made on different occasions.

HOOGSTRATEN, David Van (Biog.) a professor of Belles Lettres, was born at Rotterdam in 1658, and died in 1724, leaving Latin Poems: Flemish Poems; a Flemish and Latin Dictionary; Notes upon C. Nepos and Terence; an edition of Phædrus, and an edition of Janus Broukhusius' Poems.

HOOGUE, Romain de (Biog.) a Dutch designer and engraver of the 17th and 18th centuries, left several works, which are extant in the editions of certain books for which he was employed, as Basnage's edition of the Bible in 1704, Boccace in 1695, Fontaine's Tales in 1685.

HOOKE, Robert (Biog.) a mathematical and mechanical genius, was born at Freshwater, in the Isle of Wight, in 1635, and died in 1702, leaving, 'Micographia, or Philosophical Descriptions of Minute Bodies made by Magnifying Glasses, with Observations and Inquiries,' fol. 1666, besides posthumous works published from his manuscripts, in folio, 1705, under the care of R. Walker, secretary to the Royal Society, to whom the MSS. had been referred.

Hooke, Nathaniel, an English historian, who died in 1764, is known by his 'History of Rome,' 4 vols. 4to., the first volume of which appeared in 1738, the second in 1745, the third in 1764, and the fourth in 1771. He wrote, likewise, Observations on the Roman Senate, 1758, and a translation of Ramsay's Travels of Cyrus, 4to. 1739; besides having assisted the duchess of Marlborough in arranging and digesting her papers for a history of her conduct at court till the year 1710, which was published in 8vo. in 1742.

HOOKER, John (Biog.) an antiquary, was born at Exeter in 1524, educated at Oxford, and died in 1601, leaving, 1. 'Order and Usage of keeping of Parliaments in Ireland,' the MS. of which is in Trinity College, Dublin, and it is printed with his Chronicle in Holingshed. 2. 'The events of Comets, or blasing Stars,' &c. 8vo. Lond. 1577. 3. 'An addition to the Chronicles of Ireland, from 1546 to 1568,' in the second volume of Holingshed. 4. 'Catalogue of the Bishops of Exeter,' and 'A Description of Exeter,' in the third volume of Holingshed. 5. A translation of the 'History of the Conquest of Ireland,' from Giraldus Cambrensis, in the second volume of Holingshed, and some other pieces not printed.

Hooker, Richard, a truly eminent English divine, and nephew of the preceding, was born at Heavytree, near Exeter, in 1554, admitted of Corpus Christi College, in Oxford, in 1567, chosen scholar of Corpus in 1573, elected fellow of his college in 1577, and died in 1600, after having rendered essential service to the church, and established his fame by his 'Ecclesiastical Polity,' the first four books of which were registered in Stationers' Hall in 1592, but not printed till 1594; the fifth book was published by himself in 1597; the sixth, seventh, and eighth books were not published until after his death, but some have imagined that they are not genuine. Dr. Gauden published 'Hooker's Works,' in folio, 1662, with a Life; a second edition, with a Life, by Walton, appeared in 1666; reprinted in 1676, 1682, and 1723, which last some call the best edition; but a commodious edition was printed at Oxford in 3 vols. 8vo. 1793. 'A faithful Abridgment of the Works of Hooker, with an Account of his Life, by a Divine of the Church of England,' was published at London in 1705.

Hooker, Thomas, a nonconformist, who died a preacher in New England in 1647, left several religious works, suited to the sect to which he belonged.

HOOLE, Charles (Biog.) a divine and schoolmaster of some note in his day, was born at Wakefield, in Yorkshire, in 1610, educated at Oxford, and died rector of Stock, near Billericay, in Essex, in 1666, leaving 'Pueriles Confabulatiunculæ;' 'Aditus facilis ad Linguam Latinam;' 'Corderius' Colloquies;' 'Rudiments of the Latin Grammar;' 'Examination of the Common Accidence,' &c.; which continued in use in schools for more than a century.

Hoole, John, a dramatic poet and translator, was born in 1727, and died in 1803, leaving, 1. A translation of Tasso's 'Jerusalem Delivered,' published in 1763. 2. Two Volumes of the Dramas of Metastasio, 1767. 3. His own dramas, 'Cyrus,' 1768; 'Timanthes,' 1770; and 'Cleonice,' 1775, none of which succeeded on the stage. 4. A translation of 'Orlando Furioso,' the first volume of which was published in 1773, and the whole completed in 5 vols. 8vo. 1783. 5. 'The Orlando, reduced to twenty-four Books, the Narrative connected, and the Stories disposed in a regular Series,' 2 vols. 8vo. 1791, but his first work was republished afterwards, notwithstanding this abridgment. 6. A translation of Tasso's juvenile poem of 'Rinaldo.' 7. A complete collection of Metastasio's 'Dramas and other Poems,' 3 vols. 8vo. which was his last publication; besides which, he had previously written some poems, and a Life of his friend Mr. Scott, the poet, of Amwell.

HOOPER (Ecc.) or Hoper, John, an English prelate and reformer, was born in Somersetshire in 1495, entered of Merton College, Oxford, in 1514, admitted A. B. in 1518, left England in the reign of queen Mary; and returning on the accession of Edward VI, he was nominated bishop of Gloucester in 1550; but suffered for his opinions in the reign of queen Mary in 1554. He was one of those English refugees, who, having imbibed the spirit of the Genevan school, returned full of conceits against the discipline of the English church, and refused to wear a canonical habit when he was consecrated. He wrote several works, as, 1. Answer to the lord Winchester's book entitled, a detection of the 'Devil's Sophistry,' &c. 4to. Zurich, 1547. 2. 'A Declaration of Christ and his Office,' 8vo. 1547, and afterwards in 12mo. 3. 'A Lesson of the Incarnation of Christ,' 8vo. Lond. 1549. 4. 'A Godly Confession and Protestation of the Christian Faith,' ibid. 1550. 5. 'Certain Sentences written in Prison,' 1559. 6. 'An Apology against the untrue and slanderous Report that he should be a Maintainer and Encourager of such that cursed the Queen's Highness,' ibid. 1562. 7. 'Twelve Lectures on the Creed,' 8vo. ibid. 1581, besides other works mentioned by Fox, in his 'Acts and Monuments,' &c.; and Burnet, in his 'History of the Reformation.' [Vide Plate XIX]

Hooper, George, another English prelate, was born at Grimsby, in Worcestershire, in 1640, educated at St. Paul's, and afterwards at Westminster School, whence he was elected to Christ Church, Oxford, in 1657; and, after taking his degrees at the regular time, and obtaining various preferments in the church, he was in 1703 nominated to the bishopric of St. Asaph, translated the year following to that of Bath and Wells, where he presided 23 years and 6 months, and died in 1727, leaving, besides occasional Sermons, 1. 'The Church of England free from the Imputation of Popery,' 1682. 2. 'A Fair and Methodical Discussion of the first and great Controversy between the Church of England and the Church of Rome, concerning the Infallible Guide, in three Discourses,' the first two of these were licensed by Dr. Morrice, but the last was never printed. 3. 'The Parson's Case under the present Land-Tax recommended in a Letter to a Member of the House of Commons,' 1689. 4. 'A Discourse concerning Lent, in two Parts,' &c. 1694. 5. 'A Calculation of the Credibility of Human Testimony,' a Paper in the Philosophical Transactions for Oct. 1699. 6. 'New Danger of Presbytery,' 1737. 7. 'Marks of a Defenceless Cause.' 8. 'A Narrative of the Proceedings of the Lower House of Convocation from Feb. 10, 1700, to June 25, 1701, vindicated.' 9. 'De Valentinianorum Hæresi Conjectura, quibus illius Origo ex Ægyptiaca Theologia deducitur,' 1711. 10. 'An Enquiry into the State of the Ancient Measures, the Attic, the Roman, and especially the Jewish, with an Appendix concerning our English Money and Measures of content,' 1721. 11. 'De Patriarchæ Jacobi Benedictione Gen. i. 49 Conjecturæ,' published by the Rev. Dr. Hunt, afterwards the Hebrew Professor, with a preface and notes, according to the bishop's directions to the editor respecting his MSS., which he left in his charge. Dr. Hunt likewise published a beautiful edition of his works in folio, Oxford, 1757.

HOORNEBECK, John (Biog.) a professor of divinity in the universities of Utrecht and Leyden, was born at Haarlem in 1617, and died in 1666, leaving, 1. 'Disputationes X Antijudaicæ,' 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1644. 2. 'De convertendis et convincendis Judæis,' 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1655. 3. 'De Baptismate Antiquorum,' 4to. Ultraj. 1647. 4. 'Socinianismum confutatum,' 3 vols. 4to. Ultraj. 1650, and the following years. 5. 'Miscellanea Sacra,' &c. 2 vols. 4to. Ultraj. 1677.

HOORNE, John van (Biog.) an anatomist and physician, was born at Amsterdam in 1621, and died in 1670, leaving, 1. 'Exercitationes Anatomicæ,' &c. 4to. Leod. 1649. 2. 'Novus Ductus Chyliferus,' &c. ibid. 1652. 3. 'Microcosmus, seu brevis Manuductio ad Historiam Humani Corporis,' &c. ibid. 1660, and several times since reprinted. 4. 'An edition of the works of Botallus, 1660. 5. 'Microtechne, id est, brevissima Chirurgiæ Methodus,' ibid. 1663, 1668, and Lips. 1675. 6. An edition of Galen 'De Ossibus,' with the Commentaries of Vesalius and others, 1665. 7. 'Prodromus Observationum suarum circa Partes Genitales in utroque Sexu,' Lugd. Bat. 1668; this work was afterwards republished by Swammerdam under the title of 'Miraculum Naturæ,' 4to. 1672. 8. 'Observationes Anatomico-Medicæ,' 12mo. Amst. 1674. 9. A posthumous collection under the title of 'Opuscula Anatomico-Chirurgica,' 8vo. 1707, by professor Pauli at Leipsic, with annotations.

HOPE, Sir Thomas (Hist.) a Scotch lawyer, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, attached himself decidedly to the Covenanters; but was nevertheless appointed by king Charles I in 1643 Commissioner to the General Assembly in Scotland, and died in 1646, leaving, besides some Latin poems, also 'Minor Practices and Decisions,' which still continue to be valued. Three of his sons being Lords of Session, while he was King's Advocate, it was thought indecent for him to plead uncovered before them; whence the origin of the privilege ever since enjoyed by King's Advocates of pleading with their hats on if they please.

Hope (Her.) the name of a family of considerable antiquity in Scotland, of which was sir Thomas Hope above-mentioned, who was created a baronet in 1627. Charles Hope, a descendant in the fourth degree from this baronet, was created in 1703 a Scotch peer by the titles of earl Hopetoun, &c.; and James, the third earl, was raised to the British peerage in 1809 by the title of baron Hope, of Hopetown, co. Linlithgow. [Vide Hopetown]

Hope, John (Biog.) a professor of botany in the university of Edinburgh, was born in 1725, and died in 1786, leaving a work on botany in manuscript, besides two Dissertations in the Philosophical Transactions, one on the Rheum Palmatum, and the other on the Ferula Assafœtida. Linnæus gave the name of Hopea to a shrub in honour of him.

HOPETOUN, John, Earl of (Hist.) a general in the English army, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1765, entered the army very young, and after distinguishing himself in a long course of service, particularly in the peninsular war under sir John Moore and the duke of Wellington, he died in 1823.

Hopetoun, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Hope [vide Hope], which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Hope Johnstone, earl of Hopetoun, viscount Aithrie, lord Hope, and lord Hopetoun, of Hopetoun.

Arms. Azure, on a chevron, between three besants or, a laurel-leaf proper (to denote his maternal descent from Foulis, of Leadhills, who carried three laurel leaves).

Crest. A broken globe, surmounted of a rain-bow proper.

Supporters. Two women, their hair hanging down, with loose garments, holding anchors in their hands.

Motto. "At spes non fracta."

HOPHNI (Bibl.) חפני, and Phineas, the sons of Eli, the high-priest, who are denominated in Scripture the sons of Belial on account of their dissolute life. They were both slain in battle when the ark was taken by the Philistines. 1 Sam. ii. &c.

HOPHRAH (Bibl.) חפרע, a king of Egypt in the time of Zedekiah, king of Judah, and Nebuchadnezzar, king of Judah. Jer. xliv. &c. Herodotus calls him Apries. Herod. l. 2, c. 161.

HOPKINS, Ezekiel (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born at Sandford, in Devonshire, in 1632, educated at Oxford, consecrated bishop of Raphoe in 1671, translated to Londonderry in 1681, from which see, being driven by the forces of the earl of Tyrconnel in 1688, he retired to England, and died minister of Aldermanbury in 1690, leaving, besides sermons, 'An Exposition of the Ten Commandments,' 4to. 1692; and 'An Exposition of the Lord's Prayer,' which were printed in folio in 1710, and a new edition afterwards in 4 vols. 8vo.

Hopkins, Charles (Biog.) a son of the preceding, died at the age of 36 in 1700, leaving, 1. 'Epistolary Poems and Translations,' 1694; also inserted in Nichol's 'Select Collection.' 2. 'Pyrrhus, King of Egypt,' 1695, a tragedy, to which Congreve wrote the epilogue. 3. 'The History of Love,' 1695, a collection of select fables from 'Ovid's Metamorphoses,' 1695. 4. 'The Art of Love.' 5. 'Boadicea, Queen of Britain,' 1697, a tragedy. 6. 'Friendship improved, or the Female Warrior,' another tragedy; besides some pieces of poetry preserved in Nichol's Collection.

Hopkins, John, a younger brother of the preceding, published, 1. 'The Triumphs of Peace, or the Glories of Nassau,' a Pindaric poem occasioned by the conclusion of the peace between the confederacy and France,' &c. 1698, a poem. 2. 'The Victory of Death, or the Fall of Beauty,' &c. 8vo. 3. 'Amasia, or the Works of the Muses, a Collection of Poems,' 3 vols. 1700.

Hopkins, John, vide Sternhold.

Hopkins, an English divine, was born at Evesham, in Worcestershire, in 1647, educated at Oxford, and died in 1700, leaving, 1. 'Bertram, or Rhatram, concerning the Body and Blood of the Lord, &c. wherein M. Boileau's Versions and Notes upon Bertram are considered, and his unfair Dealings in both detected,' of which a second edition appeared in 1688. 2. 'Animadversions on Mr. Johnson's Answer to Jovian, in three Letters to a Country Friend,' &c. 3. A Latin Translation, with Notes, of a small Tract, written in the Saxon Tongue, on the Burial-Places of the Saxon Saints, which Dr. Hickes published in his 'Septentrional Grammar,' Oxford, 1705. Dr. Hopkins also assisted Gibson in correcting his Latin version of the Saxon Chronicle, and made a new translation, with notes and additions, of the article Worcestershire in Camden's Britannia published by Gibson.

Hopkins, William, an English clergyman, was born at Monmouth in 1706, and died in 1786, leaving, notwithstanding his connexion with the establishment, two or three writings in favour of Arianism.

HOPTON, Ralph, Lord (Hist.) an English officer, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, after distinguishing himself in the Low Countries, returned to England at the breaking out of the rebellion, and gained a memorable victory at Stratton. He afterwards retired to Bruges, where he died in 1652.

Hopton, Lord (Her.) the titles conferred on sir Ralph Hopton, of Wytham, in Somersetshire, above-mentioned in 1644, which became extinct at the death of his uncle, sir Arthur Hopton, in 1654.

Hopton, Arthur (Biog.) a mathematician and native of Somersetshire, who was educated at Lincoln College, Oxford, and died in 1614, at the age of 26, was the author of a treatise on the 'Geodetical Staff;' 'The Topographical Glass, containing the Uses of that Instrument, the Theodolite,' &c.; 'A Concordance of Years, containing a new and most exact Computation of Time, according to the English Accompt;' 'Prognostications for the Years 1607 and 1614.'

HOR (Bibl.) הר, a mountain in Arabia Petræa on the confines of Idumæa, where Aaron was buried. Deut. xxxiii. 50; Numb. xx. 26; Joseph. Antiq. l. 4.

HORA (Myth.) a goddess at Rome, supposed to be Hersilia, who married Romulus. Ovid. Met. l. 14.

HORÆ (Myth.) Ὧραι, three sisters, daughters of Jupiter and Themis, were called, according to Hesiod, Eunomia, Dice, and Irene; they were the same as the Seasons. Hesiod. in Theog. v. 902.

> Δεύτερον ἠγάγετο λιπαρὴν Θέμιν, ἣ τίκεν Ὧρας
> Εὐνομίηντε, Δίκηντε καὶ Εἰρήνην τεθαλυῖαν
> Αἵτ' ἔργ' ὠρεύησι καταθνητοῖσι βροτοῖσι.

So also Orpheus.

> Ὧραι θυγατέρες Θέμιδος καὶ Ζηνὸς ἄνακτος
> Εὐνομίητε δίκητε καὶ Εἰρήνη πολύολβε
> Εἰαριναὶ λειμωνιάδες.

They are generally represented as the ministers of Sol gliding on with a quick and easy motion. Ovid. Met. l. 2.

> Jungere equos Titan velocibus imperat Horis.

Theocrit. in Syracus.

> Μηνὶ δυωδεκάτω μαλακαίποδες ἤγαγον Ὧραι
> Βαρδισται μακάρων Ὧραι φίλαι, ἀλλὰ ποθειναὶ
> Ἔρχονται πάντεσσι βροτοῖσιν ἀεὶ τὶ φέροισαι.

Statius, Theb. l. 3.

> —— Rapidis occurrunt passibus Horæ.

Flaccus, l. 4.

> —— Sol auricomus, cingentibus Horis
> Multifidum jubar, et bisseno sidere textam
> Loricam induitur, &c.

Homer makes them not only keep the gates of Heaven, but also to bring or disperse the clouds at pleasure. Hom. Il. l. 5.

> Αὐτόμαται δὲ πύλαι μύκον οὐρανῶ, ἃς ἔχον Ὧραι
> Τῇς ἐπιτέτραπται μέγας οὐρανὸς, Οὔλυμπός τε
> Ἠ μὲν ἀνακλῖναι πυκνὸν νέφος, ἠδ' ἐπιθεῖναι.

Aratus designates them fructiferæ. Arat. in Phænom.

> Ἐν τοῖς ἠέλιος φέρεται δυοκαίδεκα πάντα
> Πάντ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἄγων, καὶ οἱ περὶ τῦτον ἰόντι

HORAM (Bibl.) הורם, Ἐλαμ, a king of Gezer, who, assisting the king of Lachish, was defeated, and his country ravaged. Josh. x. 33.

HORAPOLLO (Biog.) or Horus Apollo, a grammarian of Panoplus, in Ægypt, according to Suidas, who flourished in the fourth century, is known by a work, entitled 'Hieroglyphica,' which is still extant, and was published first in Greek by Aldus, fol. 1505, and frequently reprinted since with a Latin version and notes; but the edition of de Pauw, Gr. and Lat. 4to. Ultraj. 1727, is esteemed the best. As there are several of that name in antiquity, it is not certain that the author of the 'Hyieroglyphica' did not live before the time of the grammarian of Egypt. Fab. Bibl. Græc. l. 1, c. 13.

HORATIA (Hist.) the sister of the Horatii, killed by her victorious brother for mourning the death of her lover, who was one of the slain Curiatii. Liv. l. 1; Cic. de Inv.

HORATIA, gens, an ancient Patrician family of Rome, of whom were the three twin brothers, the Horatii and Horatius Cocles so well known in history. [Vide Horatius] Two branches of this family are known by the surnames of Pulvillus and Cocles.

HORATIA, gens (Numis.) the memory of Horatius Cocles is preserved on some consular coins, bearing the inscription COCLES, and the head of Roma, &c. Morell. Fam.

HORATII (Hist.) the brothers among the Romans, who were born at the same birth, and fought against the Curiatii, A. C. 667; between the hostile camps of Alba and Rome, on whose success depended the fate of the war for their countrymen. In the first attack two of the Horatii were killed, when the third, by pretending to fly, disjoined his antagonists, and thus slew them separately. The victor was afterwards sentenced to death for the murder of his sister; but this sentence was, in consideration of his services, commuted for the more ignominious one of passing under the yoke. Cic. de Inv. l. 2; Dionys. Hal. l. 3; Liv. l. 1.

HORATIUS, P. (Hist.) father of the Horatii, defended his son in the murder of his daughter, and implored his pardon from the people. Liv. l. 1, c. 26.

HORATIUS PULVILLUS, M. a consul, U. C. 245, A. C. 509, dedicated a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus.

HORATIUS COCLES, vide Cocles.

HORATIUS PULVILLUS, C. a consul, U. C. 277, A. C. 477, routed the Æqui, and died of the plague while filling the office of augur, U. C. 301.

HORATIUS BARBATUS, M. a violent opponent to the Decemviri, expelled Appius from the Forum; and, being created consul, U. C. 305, A. C. 449, he conquered the Sabines, and obtained a triumph by the voice of the people against the consent of the senate. Liv. l. 3.

HORATIUS, Q. Flaccus, a celebrated Latin poet in the reign of Augustus, was born at Venusia, having a freedman for his father, who bestowed upon him a liberal education. He was at the battle of Philippi on the side of Brutus; but, finding the profession of arms unsuited to his turn of mind, he applied himself to the cultivation of poetry, for which his genius qualified him in no small degree. By the happy exercise of his talent in writing poetry, he acquired the patronage and friendship not only of Mæcenas, but also of Augustus, and died in the 57th year of his age, A. C. 8, leaving all his possessions to Augustus. [Vide Plate XXVII] The editions of Horace are numerous beyond those of any other poet, no less than 450 having been collected by Dr. Douglas. The first edi ion in 4to. without date or place, is supposed to have been printed at Milan in 1470. Among those editions, which hold the pre-eminence in the estimation of the classical world, are that of Basil, fol. 1580, illustrated by 80 commentators; that of Baxter edited by Gesner, 8vo. Lips. 1752; that of Bentley, 4to. Cantab. 1728; and that of Glasgow, 12mo. 1744. Ovid. Trist. l. 4, el. 10; Sueton. in August.

HORBERY, Matthew (Biog.) an English divine, was born at Haxay, in Lincolnshire, in 1707, educated at Oxford, and died in 1773, leaving a pamphlet on the Trinity, entitled, 'Animadversions upon a late Pamphlet, entitled Christian Liberty,' and a 'Treatise on the Eternity of Hell Torments,' 1744; besides a volume of Sermons, published after his death.

HORCYAS (Hist.) a general of the Macedonians, who revolted from Antigonus in Cappadocia. Polyæn. l. 4.

HOREB (Bibl.) חרב, Χωρὴβ, a mountain in Arabia Petræa, so near mount Sinai, that Horeb and Sinai seem to be two hills of the same mountain. It was on this mountain that God appeared to Moses in the burning bush. Exod. iii. 1, 2, 3.

HOREM (Bibl.) חרם, a city of Naphthali. Josh. xix.

HORHAGIDGAD (Bibl.) an encampment of the Israelites when they came out of Egypt. Numb. xxxiii.

HORI (Bibl.) חרי, son of Lotan, of the race of Seir, the Horite. Gen. xxxvi.

HORITES (Bibl.) חרים, a people who dwelt in the mountain of Seir, beyond Jordan. Gen. xiv.

HORMAH (Bibl.) חרמה, a place, the king of which was overcome by Joshua, and afterwards belonged to the tribe of Simeon.

HORMISDAS (Hist.) the name of several kings of Persia.

Hormisdas I, succeeded his father Sapor A. D. 273, and died after a reign of only one year. Agath. de Imp. et Reb. gest. Justin.

Hormisdas II, son of Narses, succeeded his father in 301, and reigned seven years and five months.

Hormisdas III, also named Khosroes Hormudy, succeeded his father Khosroes Nouschir Wan in 578, and was put to death by order of his son, Khosroes II, who had usurped his throne, and put him in prison after a reign of four years.

Hormisdas IV, the same as Isdegerdes, the son of Serofs, became king in 630; but was driven some years after from his throne, and his kingdom, by the Saracens, who took possession of it. Sigebert. in Chron.

Hormisdas, brother of Sapor, king of Persia, being driven from his native country, took refuge at the court of Constantinople, where he found an asylum. Ammian. Marcellin. l. 16.

Hormisdas (Ecc.) a pope, and native of Frosilone, succeeded Symmachus in the papal chair in 514, and died in 523, after having exerted himself against the heretics.

HORN, Charles de (Hist.) a Swedish nobleman, and general in the 16th century, distinguished himself on several occasions, particularly in the defence of Revel in 1577, when besieged by the czar Iwan Basilowitz, who was compelled to raise the siege

Horn, Everhard de, son of the preceding, and a field-marshal in the Swedish army, served Charles IX with distinction during the wars in Livonia and elsewhere, and after having signalized himself no less in the service of Gustavus Adolphus, he was killed in a skirmish with the Russians in 1616, at the age of 32.

Horn, Gustavus, son of the preceding, was early engaged in the service of Gustavus Adolphus, both as a soldier and a statesman. He was sent into France in 1631 on an embassy, to treat about an alliance, after which he accompanied his master into Germany, where he gave signal proofs of his skill and valour; but being taken prisoner at the battle of Nordlingen in 1634, he died soon after.

HORNE, George (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in 1730, at Otham, near Maidstone, in Kent; elected to a Maidstone scholarship at University College, Oxford, at the age of 15; and taking his degrees at the right times, he was, after various preferments, nominated to the see of Norwich in 1789; and died in 1792; leaving, 1. 'The Theology and Philosophy in Cicero's Somnium Scipionis explained,' &c. 8vo. Lond. 1751. 2. 'A fair, candid, and impartial State of the Case between Sir Isaac Newton and Mr. Hutchinson,' 8vo Oxford, 1753. 3. 'Spicilegium Shuckfordianum; or, a Nosegay for the Critics,' &c. 12mo. Lond. 1754. 4. 'Christ and the Holy Ghost, the Supporters of the Spiritual Life,' two sermons, preached before the University of Oxford, 8vo. 1755. 5. 'The Almighty justified in Judgement,' a sermon, 1756. 6. 'An Apology for certain Gentlemen in the University aspersed in a late anonymous Pamphlet,' 8vo. 1756. 7. 'A View of Mr. Kennicott's Method of correcting the Hebrew Text,' &c. 8vo. Oxford, 1760. 8. 'Considerations on the Life and Death of John the Baptist,' 8vo. Oxford, 1772; and 12mo. 1777. 9. 'Considerations on the projected Reformation of the Church of England. In a Letter to the Right Hon. Lord North, by a Clergyman,' 4to. London, 1772. 10. 'A Commentary on the Book of Psalms,' &c. 2 vols. 4to. Oxford, 1776; reprinted in 8vo. 1778, and three times since. 11. 'A Letter to Dr. Adam Smith on the Life, Death, and Philosophy, of David Hume, Esq. by one of the People called Christians,' 12mo. Oxford, 1777. 12. 'Discourses on several Subjects and Occasions,' 2 vols. 8vo. Oxford, 1779, and reprinted five times since. 13. 'Letters on Infidelity,' 12mo. Oxford, 1784. 14. 'The Duty of contending for the Faith,' Jude, v. 3; preached at the primary visitation of the most Reverend John, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, July 1, 1786; which, with a Discourse on the Trinity, and some other Sermons, were collected into one volume, 8vo. Oxford, 1792; and the first two have also been printed in 12mo. by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. 15. 'A Letter to the Rev. Dr. Priestley, by an Undergraduate,' Oxford, 1787. 16. 'Observations on the Case of the Protestant Dissenters. with Reference to the Corporation and Test Acts,' 8vo. Oxford, 1790. 18. 'Discourses on several Subjects,' &c. Vols. III and IV, 8vo. Oxford, 1794; a posthumous publication; the four volumes have since been printed in an uniform edition; and a complete edition of his works has also been printed, with his Life by Mr. Jones, in 6 vols. 8vo. [Vide Plate XI]

Horne, John Van, vide Hoorne.

HORNECK, Anthony (Biog.) an English divine, was born at Baccharach, a town in the Lower Palatinate, in 1641, entered of Queen's College, Oxford, at the age of 19, and died a prebendary in the church of Wells in 1696, leaving, 1. 'The great Law of Consideration, or a Discourse, wherein the Nature, Usefulness, and absolute Necessity of Consideration in order to a truly serious and religious Life are laid open,' 8vo. London, 1675; and several times reprinted since. 2. 'A Letter to a Lady revolted to the Romish Church,' 12mo. London, 1678. 3. 'The happy Ascetic; or, the best Exercise,' 8vo. London, 1681; to which is subjoined 'A Letter to a Person concerning the Holy Lives of the Primitive Christians.' 4. 'Delight and Judgement; or, a Prospect of the great Day of Judgement,' &c. 12mo. London. 1683. 5. 'The Fire of the Altar,' &c. 12mo. London, 1683; to which is prefixed 'A Dialogue between a Christian and his own Conscience,' &c. 6. 'The Exercise of Prayer,' &c. 8vo. London. 1685. 7. 'The first Fruits of Reason,' &c. 8vo. London, 1685; besides these, and some other small pieces, he translated from the German into English 'A wonderful Story; or, Narrative of certain Swedish Writers,' &c. printed in Glanvil's 'Sadducismus Triumphatus.' He translated also, from the French into English, 'An Antidote against a careless Indifferency in Matters of Religion,' &c. London, 1693.

HORNIUS, George (Biog.) an historian in the 17th century, was born in the Palatinate, and died in 1670, leaving, 1. 'Historia Philosophica,' 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1655. 2. 'Dissertatio de vera Ætate Mundi,' 4to. ibid. 1659. 3. 'Commentaria et Notæ in Sulpicium Severum.' 4. 'Arca Moysis, sive Historia Mundi,' 8vo. ibid. 1668, written against Vossius, which was followed by other tracts on the same subject. 5. An edition of the Works of Sir Isaac Newton, in 5 vols. 4to. 1785. 5. 'A Charge delivered to the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of St. Alban's, at a Visitation held May 22, 1783;' in which he entered on the controversy with Dr. Priestley, which, while it served to display his abilities, was of still more service in opening the eyes of the thinking part of the community to the dangers which threatened the very existence of society: this was followed by 'Letters from the Archdeacon of St. Alban's, in Reply to Dr. Priestley, with an Appendix, containing short Strictures on Dr. Priestley's Letters, by an unknown Hand,' 8vo. 1784; and by other Letters by way of Reply in 1788. 6. 'On the Properties of the Greek and Latin Languages,' 8vo. 1796, without his name. 7. 'On the Achronical Rising of the Pleiades,' a dissertation appended to his friend Dr. Vincent's 'Voyage of Nearchus,' 1797. 8. 'A Circular Letter to the Diocese of Rochester, on the Scarcity of Corn,' 1796. 9. 'Another Circular Letter to that Diocese on the Defence of the Kingdom,' 1798. 10. 'Critical Disquisitions on the Eighteenth Chapter of Isaiah; in a Letter to Edward King, Esq. F. R. S.' &c. 4to. 1799. 11. 'Hosea translated from the Hebrew, with Notes, Explanatory and Critical,' 4to. 1801; and reprinted in 1804. 12. 'Elementary Treatises on the fundamental Principles of practical Mathematics, for the Use of Students,' 8vo. 1801; properly the last in order of three volumes of practical geometry, which were to issue one after another from the University Press of Oxford. 13. 'Euclidis Elementorum,' &c. 8vo. Oxon. the first of this series; and 'Euclidis Datorum Liber,' &c. 8vo. 1804, the second. After his death appeared 'Sermons,' 3 vols. 8vo. 1810 and 1812; 'Tracts in the Controversy with Dr. Priestley, upon the historical Question of the Belief of the first Ages in our Lord's Divinity, originally published in the Years 1783, 1784, and 1786; afterwards revised and augmented, with a large Addition of Notes and supplemental Diquisitions by the Author; the third Edition; to which is added an Appendix, by the Rev. Heneage Horsley,' 8vo. 1812; 'The Speeches in Parliament of Samuel Horsley,' &c. 8vo. 1813; and, lastly, 'The Charges delivered at his several Visitations of the Dioceses of St. David's, Rochester, and St. Asaph,' 8vo. 1813.

HORSLEY, John (Biog.) an antiquary, and a native of Northumberland, who died in 1731, is known and honourably remembered by his 'Britannia Romana,' 1732. A few letters from him to Roger Gale, Esq. on antiquarian subjects, are inserted in Hutchinson's book.

HORSTIUS, James (Biog.) a physician of Torgau, was born in 1537, and died about 1600, leaving, 1. 'Physica Hippocratea Takenii Helmontii, &c. aliorumque Recentiorum Commentis illustrata.' 2. 'Decas Observationum et Epistolarum Academicarum.' 3. 'Pharmacopœa Galeno-chymica Catholica.'

HORSTIUS, Gregory, nephew of the preceding, and a physician, who died in 1636, at the age of 58, wrote a number of medical works, which were collected and published under the title of 'Opera Medica,' 3 vols. fol. Nuremb. 1660.

HORT (Ecc.) or Horte, Josiah, archbishop of Tuam, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was, after some preferments, consecrated bishop of Ferns and Leighlin in 1721, translated to Kilmore and Ardagh in 1727, preferred to the archiepiscopal see of Tuam in 1742, and died in 1751, leaving, 1. A Volume of Sermons, 8vo. Dublin, 1738, and Lond. 1757. 2. A Charge, entitled 'Instructions to the Clergy of the Diocese of Tuam at the primary Visitation, July 8, 1742;' reprinted in London after the death of the author. In Swift's works may be seen a humourous paper of Dr. Hort's, entitled 'A new Proposal for the better Regulation and Improvement of Quadrille,' and some letters respecting it.

HORT (Her.) a family of Castle Strange, co. Middlesex, descended from Josiah Horte, archbishop of Tuam, whose second son John was created a baronet in 1767; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Azure, a cross or, in the first quarter a rose argent.
Crest. An eagle regardant with wings expanded proper, in his beak a chaplet vert.

HORTA (Myth.) the same as Hersilia.

HORTENSIA (Hist.) a Roman lady, daughter of the orator Hortensius, inherited her father's eloquence, which she exercised at the bar, and, as is said, successfully pleaded the cause of the females, who, to the number of 14,000, were called upon by the Triumviri to give upon oath an account of their possessions.

HORTENSIUS, Q. (Hist.) an orator and statesman, whose name is handed down to us by Cicero, his friend and successor, in terms of strong commendation. He was prætor and consul, and died A. C. 50, in the 63d year of his age. His orations and pieces of amorous poetry, which he is said to have written, are all lost. Cic. in Brut. c. 64, &c.; Varr. de Re Rus. l. 3; Quintil. l. 4.

HORTENSIUS, a rich Roman, who is said to have borrowed the wife of Cato, and that the latter was not ashamed to receive her again at the death of Hortensius, although his conduct was highly censured at Rome. Plut. in Cat.

HORTENSIUS, Lambert (Biog.) a philologer, whose real name is unknown, was born at Montfort in 1501, and died in 1577, leaving, besides Latin poems, also, 1. 'Secessionum Civilium Ultrajectinarum et Bellorum ab Anno 1524 usque ad Translationem Episcopatus ad Burgundos Libri VII,' fol. Basil, 1546. 2. 'De Tumultibus Anabaptistarum,' 4to. ibid. 1548; Amstel. 1636. 3. 'De Bello Germanico,' &c. 4to. ibid. 1560. 4. 'Enarrationes in Virgilii Æneida,' fol. ibid. 1569 and 1577. 5. 'Explicationes in Annæi Lucani Pharsaliam,' fol. ibid. 1578.

HORTENSIUS, Martinus, a native of Delft, who died in 1639, is known by his translation from the Belgic into Latin of 'Philippi Lansbergii Commentationes in Motum Terræ Diurnum et Annuum.'

HORTON (Her.) the name of a family of Lancashire, which enjoys the title and dignity of a baronet, conferred in 1764 on William Horton; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. First and fourth gules, a lion rampant argent, charged on the breast with a boar's head couped azure, all within a bordure engrailed argent. Second and third per bend sinister ermine and sable, a lion rampant argent.
Crest. A red rose seeded and barbed proper, surrounded with two laurel branches proper.

HORTON, Thomas (Biog.) an English divine, and native of London, was admitted a pensioner of Emanuel College, Cambridge, in 1623, ejected from his professorship at Gresham in 1661, and died in 1673, leaving some sermons and religious works, some of which Dr. Wallis published, with an account of his life.

HORUS (Myth.) vide Orus.

HOSAI (Bibl.) חוזי, a prophet in the time of Manassch, king of Judah. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 19. The Jews suppose him to be the same as Isaiah.

HOSEA (Bibl.) הושע, the first name of Joshua, son of Nun. [Vide Joshua]

Hosea, son of Beeri, the first of the minor prophets, who, according to Epiphanius, was of the town of Belemoth, in Issachar. He prophesied in the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and under Jeroboam II, king of Israel. Hieron. in Prolog. Gal. &c.; Epiphan. de Vit. Prophet.; Usser. Annal. &c.

Hosea, son of Elah, the last king of Israel, A. M. 3265, A. C. 739. Having conspired against Pekah, son of Remaliah, king of Israel, he killed him and seized his dominions; but was taken prisoner by Salmanesar, king of Assyria, in the ninth year of his reign, and carried away with the ten tribes to countries beyond the Euphrates. 2 Kings xv. &c.; Usser. Annal.

HOSHAIAH (Bibl.) הושעיה, father of Jezaniah, a principal Jew of Jerusalem. 1 Chron. iii.

HOSIUS, Stanislaus (Hist.) a cardinal, and native of Cracow, who, although born of obscure parents in 1503, nevertheless by his talents rose to the first dignities both in church and state. He was sent by pope Pius IV to engage the emperor Ferdinand to continue the Council of Trent, and succeeded effectually in his mission. He was then made a cardinal by the pope, and died in 1579, leaving several speeches and writings in favour of the Romish church, which were published in two volumes folio, and often printed during his life.

HOSKINS (Her.) or Hoskyns, the name of a family of Hereford, which obtained, in 1676, the dignity and title of a baronet, in the person of sir Bennet Hoskyns, son of John Hoskyns, above-mentioned; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Party per pale azure and gules, a chevron between three lions rampant or.

Crest. A lion's head erased or, out of a ducal coronet, with flames of fire out of his mouth proper, and crowned or.

Hoskins, John (Biog.) an English lawyer and poet, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1566 at Lanwarne, in Herefordshire, educated at Westminster, and New College, Oxford, and died in 1638, after having been confined in the Tower for too great freedom of speech in parliament. He is said to have entertained his majesty king James I at Morehampton, the seat of the family at that period, when he amused the king with a morris-dance by ten people, whose united ages made up more than one thousand years. He was the author of a Greek Lexicon; a treatise, entitled 'The Art of Memory;' and some law treatises, which became the property of sir John Hoskins, knt.; and one of the first members of the Royal Society, of which he was president in 1682.

HOSPINEAU, Ralph (Biog.) a Swiss divine, was born at Altdorf, near Zurich, in 1547, and died in 1626, leaving, 1. 'De Templis, hoc est, de Origine, Progressu, Usu, et Abusu Templorum,' &c. fol. 1587; the object of which, as of his following works, was to show the rise of the doctrine and discipline of the Romish church. 2. 'De Monachis,' &c. fol. 1588. 3. 'De Festis Judæorum,' &c. fol. 1592. 4. 'Festa Christianorum,' &c. fol. 1593. 5. 'Historia Sacramentaria,' &c. fol. 1598. 6. 'Pars Altera,' fol. 1602. 7. 'Concordia Discors,' &c. 1607. 8. 'Historica Jesuitica,' &c. fol. 1619. These works went through several editions, separately and collectively; a new edition of which was published at Geneva, in 7 vols. fol. 1681.

HOSPITAL, Michael de l' (Hist.) Chancellor of France during the reign of Henry II, was born in 1503, and died in 1573, after having filled the office of Chancellor during a troublesome period, and been at length deprived of it from the suspicion of his attachment to Protestantism, which, though he did not think proper openly to avow, yet, as is generally admitted, he privately encouraged. He left among his works, 1. Latin Poems, published first at Paris, in folio, 1585, and afterwards at Lyons, 8vo. 1592. 2. 'Memoires,' &c. containing treaties of peace, Cologne, 1672. In 1807 M. Bernardo published his 'Essai sur la Vie, les Ecrits, et les Loix de Michel de l'Hopital,' 8vo.; from which Charles Buller, esq. has lately published an 'Essay on the Life of l'Hopital.'

Hospital, Michael Herault de l', grandson of the preceding, was in the service of Henry, king of Navarre, as his Chancellor, and was sent by the king as ambassador to England and Holland, and died in 1592. To him is attributed 'Discours sur l'Etat present de la France,' 1588; also 'Sixtus et Anti-Sixtus, sive Sixti V de Morte Henrici III Sermo,' &c. 4to. and 8vo. 1590. Thuan. Hist. l. 4, &c.; Brant. Elog.; Sainte Marthe in Elog. Doct. Gall. &c.

Hospital, Nicholas de l', of a family distinct from the preceding, duke and marquis of Vitri, was made Marshal of France by Lewis XIII in 1617, and died in 1644, after having distinguished himself in the high posts which he had filled.

Hospital, Francis de l', of the same family, and also a marshal of France, adhered steadily to the king, Henry IV, in the midst of all his domestic troubles, and died in 1660.

Hospital, William Francis Anthony, Marquis de (Biog.) a French mathematician, descended from the second family of this name above-mentioned, was born in 1661, and died in 1704, leaving, 1. 'L'Analyse des Infiniment petits,' 1692. 2. 'Les Sections Coniques,' &c. 4to. 1707. 3. 'Une Theorie, des Courbes Mechaniques;' which was left unfinished at his death. He also wrote six papers in the 'Memoires' of the Academy. [Vide Plate XXXV]

HOSTE (Her.) the name of a family, originally of Middleburgh, in Zealand. Jacques Hoste, son of Jacques, governor of Bruges, was driven from his native country during the troubles in the time of the duke of Alba, and came to England in 1569. Sir William Hoste, his descendant, a distinguished officer in the English navy, was, in consideration of his zeal and intrepidity, successfully displayed on many important occasions, created a baronet in 1814. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. A bull's head caboshed, couped at the neck between two wings, and the following honourable augmentation; in chief a naval crown pendant by a riband, a representation of the gold medal given by his royal highness the prince regent for his distinguished conduct on March 13, 1811, subscribed "Lissa."

Crest of honourable augmentation. Out of a naval crown, the rim encircled with a branch of laurel, an arm embowed, grasping a flag-staff, flowing therefrom a flag inscribed "Cattaro."

Crest of the family. On a wreath two wings addorsed or.

Motto. "Fortitudini."

Hoste (Biog.) or L'Hoste, John, a mathematician of Nancy, who died in 1631, was the author of, 1. 'Le Sommaire et l'Usage de la Sphere Artificielle,' 4to. 2. 'La Pratique de Geometrie,' 4to. 3. 'Du Quadran et Quarré,' &c.

Hoste, Paul, a mathematician and a Jesuit, was born in 1652 at Pont-de Vesle, and died in 1700, leaving, 1. 'Recueil des Traités de Mathematiques les plus necessaires à un Officier,' 3 vols. 12mo. 2. 'L'Art des Armées Navales, ou Traité des Evolutions Navales,' fol. Lyons, 1697, and 1727. In 1762 lieutenant O'Bryen published in 4to. 'Naval Evolutions; or a System of Sea Discipline,' extracted from Father L'Hoste's 'L'Art des Armées Navales,' &c.

HOSTILIUS, Tullus (Hist.) vide Tullus.

HOSTILIUS, Hostius, a warlike Roman, presented with a crown of boughs by Romulus for his intrepid behaviour in battle. Dionys. Hal.

HOSTILIUS (Biog.) a Latin poet in the age of Julius Cæsar, who composed a poem on the wars of Istria. Macrob. Sat. l. 6.

HOTHAM (Bibl.) חותם, son of Heber, of Asher. 1 Chron. vii.

HOTHAM, Sir John (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was appointed governor of Hull during the rebellion; but, being suspected of holding a correspondence with the king, he was, after a trial set up by the usurping powers, beheaded on Tower Hill, together with his son, sir John Hotham, knt.

HOTHAM, William, first Lord, third son of sir Beaumont Hotham, the seventh baronet, entered early into the royal navy, and signalized himself in such manner, that he not only rose to the rank of an admiral, but was ennobled for his distinguished services. He died in 1813.

HOTHAM (Her.) the name of an ancient family, which derives its descent from sir John de Trehouse, who, for his services at the battle of Hastings, had a grant from the Conqueror of the castle and manors of Colling-Weston, co. Northampton, and Hotham, co. York, from which his posterity assumed the name of Hotham. Sir John Hotham above-mentioned, the twentieth in lineal descent from sir John de Trehouse, was created a baronet in 1621; and William Hotham, the admiral above-mentioned, and the tenth baronet, was created, in 1797, baron Hotham, of South Dalton.

HOTMAN, Francis (Biog.) in Latin Hotomannus, a French civilian, but of German extraction, was born at Paris in 1524, and died in 1590, leaving a number of works on the subject of civil law, of which a new edition was published by himself at Geneva, in 3 vols. fol. 1599.

HOTTINGER, John Henry (Biog.) a Swiss scholar, was born in 1620, and was drowned in the river which passes through Zurich in 1667, leaving, 1. 'Exercitationes Anti-Morianæ de Pentateucho Samaritano,' &c. 4to. 1644. 2. 'Thesaurus Philologicus, seu Clavis Scripturæ,' 4to. 1649; and a second edition in the same year. 3. 'Historia Orientalis ex variis Orientalium Monumentis collecta,' 4to. 1651. 4. 'Promptuarium, sive Bibliotheca Orientalis Exhibens Catalogum, sive Centurias aliquot tam Auctorum quam Librorum Hebraicorum, Syriacorum, Arabicorum, Ægyptiacorum,' &c. 4to. 1658. 5. 'Etymologicon Orientale, sive Lexicon Harmonicum Heptaglotton,' &c. 4to. 1661; besides some other works mentioned in the 'Bibliotheca Tigurina.'

HOTTINGER, John James, son of the preceding, was a prolific writer, who left a vast number of theological pieces.

HOUBIGANT, Charles Francis (Biog.) a translator of, and commentator on, the Sacred Scriptures, was born at Paris in 1686, and died in 1783, leaving, 1. A translation of the Psalter from the Hebrew, 12mo. 1746. 2. An edition of the Hebrew Bible, with a Latin version and notes, 4 vols. fol. Paris, 1753. 3. A translation of the Old Testament at large, 8 vols. 8vo. 1753. 4. 'Racines Hebraiques,' 8vo. 1732, against the Hebrew points. 5. 'Examen du Psautier des Capuchins,' 12mo. 6. A French translation of an English work by Forbes, entitled, 'Thoughts on Natural Religion.' 7. Most of the works of Charles Leslie translated, Paris, 8vo. 1770; besides several works in MS.

HOUBRAKEN, Arnold (Biog.) a painter of Holland, who died in 1719, is less known as an artist than as the author of a work in Dutch, entitled, 'The Great Theatre of the Dutch and Flemish Painters,' 3 vols. fol.

HOUBRAKEN, Jacob, son of the preceding, and a distinguished engraver, who died at Amsterdam in 1780, is principally known by his portraits of illustrious persons, accompanied with short lives by Birch, the first volume of which was completed in 1747, and the second in 1752.

HOUDRY, Vincent (Biog.) a French Jesuit, was born in 1631, and died in 1729, leaving, 1. 'La Bibliothèque des Predicateurs,' 18 vols. 4to. Lyons, 1712–23; and 22 vols. 4to. 1733; also at Liege in 4 vols. fol. 1716; besides 'Traité de la Manière d'imiter les bons Predicateurs,' &c. 4to. Paris, 1702; and, 2. 'Ars Typographica; Carmen,' &c.

HOVEDEN, Roger de (Biog.) an English historian, who flourished in the reign of Henry II, was born in Yorkshire, and lived beyond 1204. His 'Annales,' which commence at the year 731, where Bede left off, and continued to the third year of king John in 1202, were first published by Saville among the 'Historici Anglici in 1595,' and reprinted at Francfort in folio, 1601.

HOUGH, John (Ecc.) an English prelate, who distinguished himself by his opposition to king James II, was born in Middlesex in 1651, entered of Magdalen College in 1669, of which he was elected president in 1687, contrary to the express wishes of the king; and, for his resistance to the king's mandate, was expelled. After the revolution he was nominated bishop of Oxford in 1690, translated to the see of Worcester in 1717, and died in 1743. He is not supposed to have prepared any thing for the press; but many of his letters, &c. are to be found in a publication entitled 'The Life of the Rev. John Hough, D.D.' &c by John Wilmot, esq.

HOULIERS, Antoinette de la Garde des (Biog.) a French poetess, was born at Paris in 1638, and died in 1694, leaving epigrams, odes, and eclogues, which, with the works of her daughter, who was also a poetess, were published collectively in 2 vols. 12mo. 1747.

HOUSTON, William (Biog.) an English botanist and surgeon, who died in 1733, was the author of, 1. 'Experimenta de Perforatione Thoracis, ejusque in Respiratione Affectibus,' published in the 'Philosophical Transactions.' 2. 'Reliquiæ Houstonianæ,' 4to. 1781, which was published after his death by sir Joseph Banks, from his catalogue of plants.

HOUTEVILLE, Claude Francis (Biog.) a native of Paris, and perpetual secretary to the French Academy, who died in 1742, was the author of a work entitled 'La Vérité de la Religion Chrétienne prouvée par les Faits;' the latter editions of which are said to be far superior to the first; that of Paris, in 3 vols. 4to. 1741, is reckoned the best.

HOW, William (Biog.) a physician and botanist, was born in London in 1619, educated at Merchant Taylor's School, and St. John's College, Cambridge, and died in 1656, after having served in the royal army until the decline of the king's affairs. He was the author of 'Phytologia Britannica Natales Exhibens Indigenarum Stirpium Sponte Emergentium,' 12mo. Lond. 1650.

HOWARD, Sir John (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, attended Edward II in his expedition into Gascony; was afterwards, on different occasions, one of the commissioners for arraigning men; and was also commissioned with Thomas Bigod, earl of Norfolk, and others, to punish certain riots in Norfolk and Suffolk. He died in 1331.

HOWARD, Sir John, son of the preceding, was constituted by Edward III Admiral and Captain of the king's navy in the North, in the ninth year of that king's reign, and again in the twenty-first of the same, and afterwards assisted at the siege of Calais.

HOWARD, Sir John, grandson of the preceding, was also in the service of king Henry IV and V, both in a civil and military capacity.

HOWARD, Sir John, first Duke of Norfolk, vide Norfolk.

HOWARD, Lord, Edward, second son of the second duke of Norfolk, signalised himself on several expeditions in Flanders, in behalf of Maximilian the emperor, against the French; and in 1497 in company with his father in the expedition into Scotland. In 1512 he was, in consideration of his loyalty, valour, and other virtues, constituted Admiral, Commander-in-Chief, and Leader of all ships, captains, and men, to be employed in the service of the pope; and the year after he was constituted Lord High Admiral of England. In that capacity he performed many exploits against the French, but was unhappily killed in an engagement in 1513.

Howard, Lord, Edmund, third son of the duke, was Marshal of the Horse at the battle of Flodden in 5 Henry VIII; and in 1520, on the famous interview between Henry and Francis I, he was one of the challengers on the part of England; and, after distinguishing himself in the expedition into Scotland, he died in 30 Henry VIII, being then Comptroller for Calais and its marches.

Howard, Catherine, second daughter of the preceding, and fifth wife of Henry VIII, was married to the king in 1540, but, being suspected of infidelity to the king's bed, she was tried on a charge of high treason, condemned, and beheaded in 1542. [Vide Plate VI]

Howard, Henry, son of the third duke, and earl of Surry, vide Surry.

Howard, Henry, son of the earl of Surry, vide Northampton.

Howard, Thomas, fourth Duke of Norfolk, vide Norfolk.

Howard, William, Lord, first Lord Howard of Effingham, eldest son of the second duke of Norfolk by the second marriage, was early engaged in the service of his sovereign, Henry VIII, and, saving the temporary disgrace which he fell into in consequence of his relationship to queen Catherine Howard, he continued to enjoy the favour, not only of this prince, but also of his successors, Edward, Mary, and Elizabeth, by all of whom he was employed on different occasions, particularly in the post of Lord High Admiral, to which he was appointed in the first of Mary's reign. He died in 1572, soon after he had been made Lord Privy Seal.

Howard, Charles, second Lord Howard, and first Earl of Nottingham, vide Nottingham.

Howard, Thomas, Earl of Suffolk, vide Suffolk.

Howard, Charles, first Earl of Carlisle, vide Carlisle.

Howard, Frances, Countess of Essex, vide Essex.

Howard, Sir William, Viscount Stafford, vide Stafford.

Howard, Sir Edward, Lord Howard of Escrick, seventh son of Thomas, first earl of Suffolk, was one of the cabal with Russel and Sydney, who had entered into a treasonable conspiracy against the state; but afterwards turning king's evidence, he was pardoned and rewarded with the peerage.

Howard, Philip (Ecc.) third son of Henry Frederick, earl of Arundel, Lord Almoner to queen Catherine, consort of Charles II, and a cardinal of the Romish Church, was born in 1629, obtained a cardinal's cap from pope Clement X in 1675, and died in 1694, in the 65th year of his age. He was generally styled abroad the Cardinal of Norfolk, or the Cardinal of England.

Howard (Her.) the name of a family which, if it cannot boast an antiquity equal to that of some families, may be entitled to the name of illustrious from the number of its branches which have enjoyed the peerage, and the distinction which they have acquired in the state. The first of this name on record is William Howard, who was Chief Justice of the Common Pleas from 1297 to 1308. The first of his descendants that was ennobled was sir John Howard, who was created baron Howard in 1470, earl of Surry, and duke of Norfolk in 1483, which titles were lost and regained more than once. The last time they were restored in 1664 to Thomas, earl of Arundel, the lineal descendant of the fourth duke of Norfolk, who had been attainted. [Vide Norfolk] Thomas Howard, the eldest son of Thomas, the fore-mentioned fourth duke of Norfolk, by the second marriage, being restored in blood in 27 Eliz. was summoned to parliament two years after by the title of lord Howard of Walden; and on the accession of James I in 1603 he was advanced to the honour of earl of Suffolk. Henry Howard, son of the fifth earl of Suffolk, was created in the life-time of his father, in 1706, earl of Bindon, in the county of Dorset, and baron Chesterford, in the county of Essex, which titles became extinct in 1721 at the death of the second earl of Bindon; and on the death of Henry, tenth earl of Suffolk, this title devolved on the right hon. Henry Bowes Howard, fourth earl of Berkshire, who was descended from Thomas, the second son of Thomas, first earl of Suffolk; which Thomas was created in 1621 lord Howard, of Charlton, and viscount Andover, and in 1625 was advanced to the degree and dignity of earl of Berkshire. [Vide Suffolk] Sir Edward Howard above-mentioned, seventh son of the first earl of Suffolk, was created lord Howard, of Escrick, in 1628, which title became extinct at the death of the fourth lord in 1714. Another branch of this family has been ennobled in the person of lord William Howard, eldest son of the second duke of Norfolk by the second marriage, who was created in 1532 lord Howard of Effingham; and his son Charles, second lord Howard, was, in 1596, advanced to the dignity of earl of Nottingham, which title became extinct in 1681 at the death of Charles, the third earl; but Francis, the seventh lord Howard, was, in 1731, created an earl, by the style and title of earl of Effingham. [Vide Effingham] There yet remain three other branches of this noble family which have received honours. The first of these, which enjoyed the title of earl of Stafford, is now extinct in the male line; but the two last continue to enjoy their respective titles of earl of Carlisle, and of lord Howard of Walden. The title of earl of Stafford was derived from sir William Howard, second surviving son of Thomas, earl of Arundel and Surrey, and uncle to the fifth duke of Norfolk, who was created in 1640 viscount Stafford; and his son Henry, second viscount Stafford, was created earl of Stafford, which titles became extinct at the death of John Paul, fourth earl. The family of the earl of Carlisle is descended from lord William Howard, the second surviving son, by a second marriage, of the fourth duke of Norfolk, who, being restored in blood by act of parliament, his great grandson, Charles Howard, was, in 1661, advanced to the dignity of baron Dacre, of Gillesland, viscount Howard, of Morpeth, and earl of the city of Carlisle. [Vide Carlisle] Lord Howard, of Walden, whose family name is now Ellis, is descended on the mother's side from James, third earl of Suffolk, and third lord Howard, of Walden, who, dying without male issue, left two daughters, lady Essex and lady Elizabeth. Lady Essex married Edward Griffin, esq. who was created lord Griffin, which title became extinct at the death of the third lord in 1742; but John Griffin, his nephew, was allowed to take the title of lord Howard, of Walden, as heir to his great-grandmother, the lady Essex Howard above-mentioned, but he dying without issue, the title was for some time in abeyance, until Charles Augustus Ellis, who was descended from lady Elizabeth Howard, younger sister of lady Essex, put in his claim for the barony, which claim was allowed in 1807. [Vide Ellis] The arms, &c. of this last family are as follow:

Arms. Erminois, on a cross sable five crescents argent.

Crest. On a wreath of the colours, a goat's head argent, issuant from a mount vert.

Supporters. On either side a lion argent, on the neck within a collar gemel gules, three trefoils slipped vert.

Motto. "Non quo sed quomodo."

Howard, another branch of this family, which have been long seated at Shelton, co. Wicklow, of which was Robert Howard, bishop of Elphin, whose eldest son, Robert, was created in 1773 baron Clonmore, of Clonmore Castle, co. Carlow, viscount of Wicklow in 1785, and in 1793, earl of Wicklow.

HOWARD, Hon. Sir Robert (Biog.) younger son of Thomas, earl of Berkshire, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1626, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1698, leaving, 1. 'Poems and Plays.' 2. 'The History of the Reigns of Edward and Richard II, with Reflections and Characters of the chief Ministers,' &c. 8vo. 1690. 3. 'A Letter to Mr. Samuel Johnson, occasioned by a scurrilous pamphlet, entitled Animadversions on Johnson's Answer to Jovian,' 8vo. 1692. 4. 'The History of Religion,' 8vo. 1694. 5. 'The fourth Book of Virgil translated,' 8vo. 6. Statius' Achilleis translated.

HOWARD, Hon. Edward, brother of the preceding, exposed himself to the ridicule of the wits and satyrists, by writing bad plays.

HOWARD, Hon. James, probably a relative of the preceding, was the author of two plays about the same time, called 'All Mistaken,' and the 'English Monsieur,' which were successful.

HOWARD, Samuel, a composer, who died about 1783, was the author of the Overture in the 'Amorous Goddess,' a happy imitation of Handal's overture in 'Alcina,' but his reputation was principally gained by his ballads, which were great favourites with the public, until the appearance of Arne's Vauxhall Songs.

HOWARD, John, the son of a tradesman, who kept a carpet-warehouse in Long Lane, Smithfield, was born at Hackney in 1726, and died in 1790, of a malignant epidemic fever, which he caught in visiting a sick person at Cherson. He made himself celebrated in his day as the visitor of prisons, for which he obtained the appellation of the Philanthropist, and the eulogiums of many enthusiastic theorists, who expected wonders to be wrought by his haunting the receptacles of vice, but he is now to be remembered only as the introducer of an impertinent interference on the part of private individuals in the criminal jurisprudence of the country, which, by encouraging criminals, tends to the increase of crimes. He wrote, 1. 'The State of the Prisons in England and Wales, with preliminary Observations,' &c. 4to. 1777, to which he added in 1780, an Appendix, containing a narrative of his travels; republished in 1784. 2. A translation of a French Account of the Bastille, 1780. 3. 'An Account of the principal Lazarettos in Europe,' &c. 1789. 4. The Duke of Tuscany's new Code of Civil Law, with an English translation.

HOWE, Sir George, Knight (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, supplied king Charles I with money during the rebellion.

HOWE, Scroop, first Viscount, was one of the most determined opponents to the duke of York, afterwards James II, and one of the first promoters of the revolution, which placed William and Mary on the throne, for which he obtained the peerage, and died in 1712.

HOWE, John, Esq. second brother of the preceding, distinguished himself by his violent opposition in Parliament to the measures of government, in the reign of king William, who is said to have degraded himself on one occasion, by declaring, that if it were not for the disparity of their rank, he would demand satisfaction with the sword. He afterwards acted as Privy Counsellor to queen Anne, and held other posts during her reign, from which he was dismissed on the accession of George I, and died in 1721. He was the father of the first lord Chedworth, and was the author of a 'Panegyric on King William.'

HOWE, Emanuel, fourth brother of the preceding, who took to a military life, in which he rose to the rank of a general, was sent in 1705, by queen Anne, as her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary to the Elector of Hanover, afterwards George I.

HOWE, Augustus George, third Viscount, was bred to the military service, and commanded as brigadier-general in the expedition against Ticonderoga, in North America, where he was slain in 1758, in a skirmish with the French, on the march towards that place.

HOWE, Richard, fourth Viscount, and first Earl, brother of the preceding, was born in 1725, and, entering the sea-service early, was raised to the rank of a commander, in the Baltimore sloop of war, when he distinguished himself by attacking two French frigates off the coast of Scotland; made post-captain in 1746; appointed to the command on the Guinea station, in the La Gloire 44 guns in 1750; and after various promotions, which he earned by his skill and valour, he was made in 1758 commodore of a small squadron; in 1763, a Lord of the Admiralty; in 1770, promoted to be Rear Admiral of the Blue; in 1775, to be Rear Admiral of the White; in 1776, naval Commander in Chief in America, where he closed the campaign with honour; in 1794, commander of the fleet against the French, over whom he gained a splendid victory, and died full of years and honours in 1799.

HOWE, Sir William, fifth Viscount Howe, brother of the preceding, served as a major-general, and afterwards as a commander in North America, where he did as much as could be effected by individual exertions, opposed to every obstacle, natural and political.

HOWE (Her.) the name of a family distinguished in History, of which mention is made as early as the reign of Henry VII. Sir John Howe, son of sir George Howe, knight, above-mentioned, was created a baronet in 1660. Sir Scrope Howe, the fifth baronet, was advanced to the peerage of Ireland in 1701, by the title of baron Clenawley, and viscount Howe; and Richard, the fourth viscount, was raised to the English peerage by the title of viscount Howe, of Langar, co. Nottingham, and in 1788 was elevated to an earldom by the title of earl Howe, and also to the title of baron Howe, of Langar. The earldom became extinct at his death, and the viscounty at the death of his brother in 1817, but the barony devolved on his daughter lady Charlotte Sophia, who was married, first to Penn Asheton Curzon, and afterwards to sir Jonathan-Wathen-Waller, bart. and succeeded to the title as baroness Howe, of Langar. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. On a fess between three wolves' heads couped sable.
Supporters. Two Cornish choughs proper, beaked and legged gules.

A junior branch of this family also enjoyed the peerage, by the title of lord Chedworth, which is now extinct. [Vide Chedworth]

HOWE, John (Biog.) a nonconformist preacher to Oliver Cromwell, was born at Loughborough in 1630, educated at Cambridge, whence he removed to Oxford in 1643, and after being ejected at the Restoration, he died in 1705, leaving a number of religious works, which were printed in 2 vols. fol. 1724.

HOWE, Josiah, an English divine, and native of Crendon, in Buckinghamshire, was elected fellow of Trinity College in 1637, and remained so until his death in 1701, with the exception of the period that he was deprived of it by the usurping powers. He wrote a copy of recommendatory English verses, prefixed to the folio edition of Beaumont and Fletcher, printed in 1647; another to Randolph's Poems, and another to Cartwright's Comedies and Poems, 1651.

HOWE, Charles, third son of John Howe, mentioned under History, was born in Gloucestershire in 1661, and died in 1745, leaving 'Devout Meditations, or a Collection of Thoughts upon Religious and Philosophical Subjects,' 8vo. the second edition of which appeared in 1752, with his name.

HOWEL, Laurence (Hist.) a nonjuring divine, was born soon after the restoration, educated at Cambridge, and died in Newgate in 1720, in consequence of having written a pamphlet entitled 'The Case of Schism in the Church of England truly stated,' in which he maintained that English subjects could not transfer their allegiance from James II, and that Catholic bishops cannot be deprived by a lay power only. He was for this sentence to pay a fine of 500*l.*, to be imprisoned for three years, to find four securities of 500*l.* each, himself bound in 1000*l.* for his good behaviour during life, and to be twice whipped. The corporal punishment was, however, afterwards remitted. This sufferer for his principles, who was of irreproachable character, and great learning, left among his other works, 1. 'Synopsis Canonum SS. Apostolorum et Conciliorum Œcumenicorum et Provincialium ab Ecclesiâ Græcâ receptorum,' fol. 1710. 2. 'Synopsis Canonum Ecclesiæ Latinæ,' fol. the third and last volume of which were published in 1715. 3. 'The View of the Pontificate, from its supposed Beginning, to the End of the Council of Trent, A. D. 1563,' &c. printed in 1712; and a second time while he was in prison; as also a second edition of his 'History of the Bible,' 3 vols. 8vo.; and that of his 'Orthodox Communicant.'

HOWELL, James (Hist.) a steady loyalist, son of Thomas Howell, minister of Abernant, in Caermarthenshire, was born about 1594, educated at Jesus College, Oxford, of which he became a fellow in 1610, and after enduring a long imprisonment on account of his loyalty, and surviving the Restoration, he died the first historiographer Royal in England in 1666, leaving a number of works, many of which were written to supply his necessities, as, 1. 'Dodona's Grove, or the Vocal Forest,' 1640. 2. 'The Vote,' a poem, presented to the king on New Year's Day, 1641. 3. 'Instructions for Forraine Travell,' &c. 1642, dedicated to prince Charles, and reprinted in 1650, with additions. 4. 'Casual Discourses and Interlocutions between Patricius and Peregrin touching the Distractions of the Times;' written soon after the battle of Edge-Hill, and the first book published in favour of the royal cause. 5. 'Mercurius Hibernicus; or a Discourse of the Irish Massacre,' 1644. 6. 'Parables reflecting on the Times,' 1644. 7. 'England's Tears for the present Wars,' &c. 1644. 8. 'Preheminence and Pedigree of Parliaments,' 1644. 9. 'Vindication of some Passages reflecting on him in Mr. Prynne's Book called the Popish Royal Favourite,' 1644. 10. 'Epistolæ Ho-Elianæ, or Familiar Letters, Domestic and Foreign,' &c. 1645; another collection was published in 1647; and both these, with the addition of a third, came out in 1650; a few additional letters appeared in subsequent editions, one of which was published in 1754. 11. 'A Nocturnal Progress, or a Perambulation of most Countries in Christendom, performed in one Night by strength of Imagination,' 1645. 12. 'Lustra Ludovici, or the Life of Lewis XIII, King of France,' &c. 13. 'An Account of the Deplorable State of England in 1647,' 1647. 14. 'Letter to Lord Pembroke concerning the Times, and the sad Condition of both Prince and People,' 1647. 15. 'Bella Scot-Anglica, or a Brief of all the Battles betwixt England and Scotland, from all Times to this Present,' 1648. 16. 'Corollary declaring the Causes, whereby the Scot is come of late years to be so heightened in his Spirits.' 17. 'The Instruments of a King, or a short Discourse of the Sword, Crown, and Sceptre,' &c. 1648. 18. 'Winter-Dream,' 1649. 19. 'A Trance, or News from Hell, brought first to Town by Mercurius Acheronticus,' 1649. 20. 'Inquisition after Blood,' &c. 1649. 21. 'Vision, or Dialogue between Soul and Body,' 1651. 22. 'Survey of the Signory of Venice,' 1651. 23. 'Some sober Inspections made into the Carriage and Consults of the late long Parliament, whereby occasion is taken to speak of Parliaments in former Times, and of Magna Charta; with some reflections upon Government in general,' 1653, the fourth edition of which was published in 1660, with several additions. He dedicated this book to Oliver Cromwell, as Lord Protector, and in a strain of compliment little consistent with that abhorrence which the lawless assumption of the regal power by this usurper must have excited, which is only to be reconciled by the consideration that he felt a still greater abhorrence of the revolutionary and ruffianly Parliament which Cromwell had put down. 24. 'History of the Wars of Jerusalem epitomized.' 25. 'Ah Ha, Tumulus Thalamus; two Counter Poems, the first an Elegy on Edward, late Earl of Dorset; the second an Epithalamium to the Marquis of Dorchester,' 1653. 26. 'The German Diet, or Balance of Europe,' &c. fol. 1653. 27. 'Parthenopeia, or the History of Naples,' &c. 1654. 28. 'Laudinopolis,' 1657. 29. The principal lakes are those of Balaton, Nieusied, Palitsch, and Gran See.

History of Hungary.

This country, which was originally a part of Pannonia, is called by the Turks Magiar, by the Germans Ungern, by the Italians Ongheria, by the French Hongrie, and in the Latin of the middle ages Hungaria and Ungaria; all which names are derived from the Hunni, or Huns, who first took possession of this country on the decline of the Roman empire under their kings, Attila and his brother, who about 372 expelled the Goths, that had been permitted by Constantine to live there. This people were subdued by Charlemagne, and, according to some, were extirpated; but it is probable that they became intermingled with some other tribes from Asiatic Scythia, as the Avari and the Ugni, or Jugni, from whom the modern Hungarians are immediately descended. They were at first governed by dukes; the first of whom was Almus, a victorious chief, among whose descendants was Geysa, the first that embraced Christianity in 949. His successors, who were styled kings, were as follow:

A. D.	Kings of Hungary.	A. D.	Kings of Hungary.
997	S. Stephen.	1114	Stephen II.
1034	Peter.	1131	Bela II.

1382	Mary.	1527	Ferdinand I.
1385	Charles II.

From the time of the emperor Ferdinand above-mentioned, Hungary continued in the possession of the princes of the house of Austria, and its history has accordingly been interwoven with that of Germany.

Writers on Hungary.

Bonfinius; Æneas Sylvius; Volateranus; Paul Jovius; Sambuchus; Ciaconius; Blondus; Thevet; Ortelius; Sanson; Cluverius; Bertius, &c.

HUNGERFORD, Robert, second Lord (Hist.) otherwise called Lord Molines, a zealous Lancastrian, was beheaded in 3 Edward IV. His son and heir, Thomas, fourth lord Hungerford, also suffered in the same cause.

HUNGERFORD, Walter, a younger son of the preceding, was very active on the side of Henry at the battle of Bosworth, where he contributed much to the victory.

HUNGERFORD, Walter, Lord, grandson of the preceding, was attainted in Parliament in 31 Henry VIII, and suffered death the following year on Tower-hill, when the title became extinct.

HUNIADES (Hist.) or Hunniades, John Corvinus, vaivode of Transylvania, and a general in the armies of Ladislaus V, king of Hungary, was one of the greatest captains of the age, who gained many important victories over the Turks. At the death of Ladislaus, he became governor of Hungary, over which he reigned without taking the title of king until 1456, the year of his death. He rendered himself so formidable to the infidels that they used to call him Jancus Lain, i. e. John the Wicked. Bonfin. Hist.; Thurosius in Chron.

HUNLOCKE, Sir Henry, Bart. (Hist.) a distinguished loyalist, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, assisted his sovereign Charles I, not only by the loan of money, but also by raising a troop of horse at his own expense, which he commanded as lieutenant-colonel, and led on at the battle of Edge-hill with such valour that the king knighted him on the field. He was afterwards desperately wounded in making a bold attempt upon the enemy near Bestwood Park, and died in 1641, after having suffered severely in his property, which was taken from him by the rebel party.

HUNLOCKE (Her.) the name of a family which possessed a considerable estate in the counties of Middlesex and Notts, and rose to distinction in the reign of Charles I, when sir Henry Hunlocke above-mentioned obtained the honour of the baronetcy. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Azure, a fesse between three tigers' heads erased or.

Crest. On a chapeau azure, turned up ermine, a cockatrice with wings expanded proper, comb, beak, and wattles or.

HUNNI (Geog.) a people of Asiatic Sarmatia, who invaded the Roman empire in the fourth century, and settled in Pannonia, to which they gave the name of Hungary. [Vide Hungary]

HUNNIUS, Giles (Biog.) a Lutheran divine, was born in 1550 at Winende, a village in the duchy of Wirtemburg, and died in 1603, leaving a number of works, consisting of Funeral Orations, Prayers, Colloquies, Notes on some of the Evangelists, &c. which were collected and published in five volumes.

HUNSDEN, Lord (Her.) a title conferred on Henry Carey in 1559, which became extinct at the death of William Ferdinand, the eighth lord, in 1765.

HUNT, Jeremiah (Biog.) a dissenting minister, was born in London, and died in 1744, leaving, besides four volumes of sermons published after his death, 'An Essay towards explaining the History and Revelations of Scripture,' &c.; and some other tracts, &c.

HUNT, Thomas, an oriental scholar and divine, was born in 1696, educated at Oxford, and died in 1774, leaving, 1. 'A Fragment of Hippolitus taken out of two Arabic MSS. in the Bodleian Library,' printed in the fourth volume of 'Parker's Bibliotheca Biblica,' 1728. 2. 'De Antiquitate, Elegantia, Utilitate Linguæ Arabicæ,' a speech delivered, as Laudian professor of Arabic, in the school at Oxford in 1738. 3. 'De Usu Dialectorum Orientalium,' &c. 1748. 4. 'An Edition of Bishop Hooper's Works,' 1757. 5. 'Observations on the Book of Proverbs,' edited by Dr. Kennicott.

HUNTER, Robert (Hist.) the supposed author of the famous 'Letter on Enthusiasm,' attributed by some to Swift, and by others to Shaftsbury, in whose works it is to be found. He was made governor of Virginia in 1708, which, being taken by the French, he was sent out governor of New York and the Jerseys in 1710; in 1728 he was appointed governor of Jamaica, and died in 1734. He is said to have written a farce, entitled 'Androboros.'

HUNTER (Her.) the name of a family of considerable eminence in the city of London in the reign of Charles I, from which is descended the present sir Claudius Hunter, created a baronet in 1802. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Or, a lion rampant gules, between eight crosses pattées.

Crest. A demi-lion holding between his paws a cross pattée fitchy, as in the arms.

HUNTER, Christopher (Biog.) a physician and antiquary of Durham, was born in 1675, and died in 1757, leaving, 1. 'The Ancient Rites and Monuments of the Church of Durham,' 1733. 2. 'An Illustration of Mr. Daniel Neale's History of the Puritans in the Article of Peter Smart, M. A.' &c. 8vo. 1736.

HUNTER, William, an anatomist and physician, was born at Kilbride, in the county of Lanark, in 1718, and died in 1783, leaving, as an excellent specimen of his skill in his favourite science, 'Anatomy of the human gravid Uterus,' published in 1775; besides several papers in the volumes of the Philosophical Transactions. A description of the coins of which his cabinet consisted was published after his death by his friend Mr. Combe, under the title of 'Nummorum Veterum Populorum et Urbium qui in Museo Gulielmi Hunter asservantur Descriptio Figuris illustrata,' &c. [Vide Plate XXXII]

HUNTER, John, younger brother of the preceding, was born in 1728, and died in 1793, leaving, 1. 'A Treatise on the Natural History of the Human Teeth,' 4to. 1771; with a second part in 1778. 2. 'A Treatise on the Venereal Disease,' 4to. 1786. 3. 'Observations on certain Parts of the Animal Œconomy,' 4to. 1786. 4. 'A Treatise on the Blood, Inflammation, and Gun-shot Wounds,' 4to. a posthumous work, printed in 1794; besides several papers in the 'Transactions of the Society for the Improvement of Medical and Chirurgical Knowledge.' He also formed an Anatomical Museum, which was purchased by government for the public use.

HUNTER, Henry, a Scotch minister, and native of Culross, in Perthshire, was born in 1741, and died in 1802, leaving, 'Sacred Biography,' 7 vols. 8vo. 1783; besides several translations; as of Lavater's 'Essays on Physiognomy,' 1789; of Euler's 'Letters to a German Princess on different Subjects in Physics and Philosophy;' 'St. Pierre's Studies of Nature,' &c.

HUNTINGDON, George, Earl of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was of the Privy Council to King Henry VIII, whom he attended in 1512 at the taking of Terouenne and Tournay, and died in 1544.

HUNTINGDON, Francis, second Earl of, was sent into France in 1550 with considerable forces, to dislodge the French from between Bologne and Calais, which he successfully executed; and in the first year of queen Mary he suppressed the insurrection of Henry Grey, duke of Suffolk, whom he brought prisoner to the Tower, and died in 1561.

HUNTINGDON, Henry, third Earl of, who was one of the Privy Council to queen Elizabeth, was also one of the peers who had charge of Mary, queen of Scots, and died in 1595.

HUNTINGDON, Henry, fifth Earl of, was one of the peers on the trial of the earl and countess of Somerset for the poisoning of sir Thomas Overbury, and died in 1643.

HUNTINGDON, Theophilus, seventh Earl of, was at first one of the adherents of the duke of Monmouth, but, finding that the views of that party were directed to the overturning the government and constitution of the country, he withdrew from them, and, being received into favour with his prince, he was appointed one of the Privy Council in 1683. At the revolution he remained faithful to his sovereign, James II, on which account he was divested of all his offices. In 1692, upon advice of a descent from La Hogue in favour of king James, he was sent to the Tower, and died in 1701.

HUNTINGDON, George, eighth Earl of, was born in 1677, carried the sceptre at the coronation of queen Anne in 1702, signalized himself at the sieges of Venlo and Ruremond in the same year, and died in 1704.

HUNTINGDON, Lady Selina, Countess of, second daughter of Washington, earl Ferrars, and widow of the ninth earl of Huntingdon, who died at a very advanced age in 1791, is celebrated as the patroness of a religious sect, for whom she built chapels in different parts of the kingdom, and entertained their leading preachers, Whitfield, Romaine, and others.

HUNTINGDON, Earl of (Her.) a title conferred in 1337 on sir William Clinton, which became extinct in 1354, but was revived in 1472 in the person of William Herbert, second earl of Pembroke, which became extinct at his death.

HUNTINGDON, Earl of, the title enjoyed by the family of Hastings [Vide Hastings]; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a maunch sable.

Crest. On a wreath, a buffalo's head erased sable, crowned and gorged with a ducal coronet, and armed or.

Supporters. Two man-tigers affrontée or, their visages like the human proper.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE (Geog.) a county of England, which was formerly inhabited by the Iceni.

Boundaries. It is bounded on the N. W. and N. by Northamptonshire, E. by Cambridgeshire, and S. W. by Bedfordshire.

Towns. The principal towns are Huntingdon, the capital, which was the birth-place of Oliver Cromwell, 15 m. N. W. Cambridge, 58½ N. London; Kimbolton, St. Ives, St. Neot, &c.

Rivers. The principal rivers are the Ouse and Nen.

HUNTINGFOLD, Lord (Her.) the title enjoyed by the family of Vanneck. [Vide Vanneck]

HUNTINGTON, Robert (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born at Deerhurst, in Glocestershire, in 1636, educated at Oxford, and, after travelling in Syria, Palestine, and Egypt, where he collected many curiosities and manuscripts, he was appointed Master of Trinity College, Dublin, in 1683, resigned it in 1693, and died in 1701, twelve days after his consecration to the see of Raphoe. He sold his fine collection of MSS. to the curators of the Bodleian Library, having previously made them a present of thirty-five. He published 'An Account of the Porphyry Pillars in Egypt,' in the Philosophical Transactions, No. 161. Some of his 'Observations,' are printed in 'A Collection of Curious Travels and Voyages,' 2 vols. 8vo. by Mr. I. Ray; and 39 of his letters, written chiefly while he was abroad, were published by Dr. T. Smith at the end of his life.

HUNTINGTON, Henry of (Biog.) an ancient English historian in the 12th century, was the author of a General History of England, from the Earliest Accounts to the Death of King Stephen, in eight books, published by sir Henry Saville. In the Bodleian is a MS. Latin poem by Henry on the death of king Stephen, and the arrival of Henry II in England; and in Trinity College library is a fine MS. of his book, 'De Imagine Mundi.'

HUNTINGTOWER, Lord (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Dysart.

HUNTLEY, Marquis (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the duke of Gordon.

HUNTORST (Biog.) or Hunthorst, Gerard, a Dutch painter, and a native of Utrecht, who painted for some time in the service of Charles I. His night pieces are most admired.

HUR (Bibl.) חור, son of Caleb, the son of Esron, different from Caleb, the son of Jephunneh. He attended Moses and Aaron when they went up the mountain. Exod. xxiv. 14.

HUR, a prince of Midian, who was killed in an encounter between Phineas and the Midianites. Numb. xxxi.

HURD, Richard (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born at Congreve in 1720, educated at Cambridge, and, after various preferments, he was promoted in 1775 to the bishopric of Coventry and Lichfield; from which he was translated in 1781 to that of Worcester, where he died in 1808, after having refused to be translated to the metropolitan see of Canterbury. He wrote, 1. 'Remarks on a late Book entitled, An Enquiry into the Rejection of the Christian Miracles by the Heathens, by William Weston,' &c. 1746. 2. Commentary on Horace's 'Ars Poetica,' 1746, and 1757, with the addition of two dissertations; one on the Province of the Drama, the other on Poetical Imitation; and a letter to Mr. Mason on the 'Marks of Imitation;' a fourth edition, corrected and enlarged, was published in 3 vols. 8vo. 1765, with the addition of another dissertation on the idea of Universal Poetry; the whole of which was reprinted in 1776. 3. 'The Opinion of an Eminent Lawyer (the Earl of Hardwicke) concerning the Right of Appeal from the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge to the Senate,' &c. 8vo. 1751; which passed through three editions, and was followed by some other pamphlets on the same subject. 4. 'Commentary on the Epistle to Augustus,' 8vo. 1751. 5. 'The Delicacy of Friendship; a Seventh Dissertation, addressed to the Author of the Sixth,' 8vo. 1755; a satire directed against Dr. Jortin, author of six 'Dissertations,' in consequence of his remarks on Warburton; reprinted in 1788 in a volume, entitled, 'Tracts by Warburton and a Warburtonian.' 6. 'Remarks on Hume's Essay on the Natural History of Religion,' 1759. 7. 'Dialogues on Sincerity, Retirement, the Golden Age of Elizabeth, and the Constitution of the English Government,' 8vo. 1759. 8. 'Letters on Chivalry and Romance,' which, with his 'Dialogues on Foreign Travel,' were republished in 1765 under the general title of 'Dialogues, Moral and Political.' 9. 'An Introduction to the Study of the Prophecies, &c. concerning the Christian Church, and in particular concerning the Church of Papal Rome,' the substance of 'Twelve Discourses' delivered at Cambridge, on the opening of the lecture founded by bishop Warburton for the illustration of the prophecies. He also edited 'The Select Works of Mr. Abraham Cowley,' &c. in 2 vols. 8vo. 1769; also Jeremy Taylor's 'Moral Demonstration of the Truth of the Christian Religion,' 8vo. 1775; and in 1788 was published a complete edition of the works of bishop Warburton; which was followed in 1795 by his Life. To the above list of bishop Hurd's works must be added several sermons and controversial tracts, which are to be found in the collection published in 1810 in 8 vols. 8vo.

HURDIS, James (Biog.) an English poet, was born at Bishopstone, in Sussex, in 1763, educated at Oxford, and died in 1801, leaving, among his works, 'The Village Curate,' published in 1788, and reprinted the next year; 'Adriano; or, the First of June,' 1790, which was quickly followed by his 'Panthea,' 'Elmer,' and 'Opelia;' and the 'Orphan Twins.' He likewise published, in the way of his profession in 1790, 'A short Critical Disquisition on the true Meaning of the Word תנינים,' found in Gen. i. 21: and 'Select Critical Remarks upon the English Version of the first ten Chapters of Genesis. To these may be added his tragedy of 'Sir Thomas More,' in 1791; his 'Cursory Remarks upon the Arrangement of the Plays of Shakspeare,' &c. in 1792; his 'Favourite Village;' and 'Twelve Dissertations on the Nature and Occasion of Psalm and Prophecy,' 8vo. in 1800. A correct and elegant edition of his 'Poems,' in 3 vols. was printed at the University press, Oxford; part of which have since been reprinted.

HURE, Charles (Biog.) a French divine, was born at Champigny-sur-Youne in 1639, and died in 1717, leaving, 1. A Latin edition of the New Testament, with short notes, that were much esteemed, 2 vols. 12mo. 1692. 2. 'Novum Testamentum Regulis illustratum,' &c. 12mo. 1696; which he abridged, and published in French, under the title of 'Grammaire Sacrée, ou Regles pour entendre le Sens litteral de l'Ecriture Sainte,' 1707. 3. A French Translation of the New Testament, with the Notes from the Latin augmented, 4 vols. 12mo. 1702. 4. 'Dictionnaire de la Bible,' Rouen, 1715; which was not so complete as the one afterwards executed by Calmet.

HURI (Bibl.) חורי, son of Jaroah, of the tribe of Gad, father of Abihail. 1 Chron. v.

HUSHAI (Bibl.) חושי, the Archite, who assisted David in defeating the counsels of Absalom.

HUSS, John (Ecc.) a divine of Bohemia, was born at a town called Hussenitz, in 1376, studied at Prague, and early imbibing the notions of Wickliff, he propagated them with such rancorous zeal against the see of Rome, that after having caused various tumults throughout the country, he was at length seized and burnt alive as an heresiarch, in 1415. His ashes were collected, and then sprinkled in the Rhine. His numerous writings, which were violent, after the manner of such partisans, were collected and published in 2 vols. fol. 1558, under the title of 'Johannis Hussi Opera.' [Vide Plate XIX]

HUSSEY, John, Lord (Hist.) son of sir William Hussey, Chief Justice in the reign of Edward IV, was summoned to Parliament as lord Hussey in 21 Henry VIII; but having engaged in a commotion in Lincolnshire, occasioned by the assessment of a subsidy, he suffered death for his offence in the same year.

HUSSEY (Her.) vide Beaulieu.

HUSSEY, Lord, a title conferred on John Hussey above-mentioned, which was forfeited at his death. His sons were restored in blood, but not to the peerage.

HUSSEY, Giles (Biog.) an artist, descended from an ancient family in Dorsetshire, was born in 1710, and died in 1788, leaving a considerable reputation for skill in his art.

HUTCHESON, Francis (Biog.) the son of a dissenting minister in Ireland, was born in 1694, and died in 1747, leaving, 1. 'Enquiry into the Ideas of Beauty and Virtue.' 2. 'Treatise on the Passions.' 3. Some Philosophical Papers in 'Hibernicus's Letters,' and in the 'London Journal,' 1728. 4. 'A System of Moral Philosophy,' 2 vols. 4to. published after his death by his son Francis Hutcheson, a physician, in 1755; to which is prefixed 'Some Account of the Life, Writings, and Character, of the Author,' by Dr. Leechman.

HUTCHINS, John (Biog.) a topographer, was born at Bradford Peverel, in Dorsetshire, in 1698, educated at Oxford, but took his master's degree at Cambridge, and died in 1773, leaving, 'The History and Antiquities of the County of Dorset,' &c. 2 vols. fol. Lond. 1774; reprinted in 1796—1803, with the additions of Mr. Gough and Mr. Nichols, in 4 vols. fol.

HUTCHINSON, John (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, being bred to the law, was appointed Prime Serjeant at Law in 1762; Secretary of State for Ireland, and Keeper of his Majesty's Signet, in 1777; and died in 1795.

HUTCHINSON (Her.) the name of a family of Gertrough, in Ireland, which was assumed by John Hely, or Hutchinson, the lawyer and statesman above-mentioned, whose lady was raised to the Irish peerage in 1783, by the title of baroness Donoughmore of Knocklofty; and their son Richard, baron Donoughmore, was in 1797 created viscount Donoughmore, and in 1800 earl of Donoughmore. [Vide Donoughmore] Their second son, sir John Hely Hutchinson, who distinguished himself in Egypt, as the second in command under sir Ralph Abercrombie, was for his military services raised to the British peerage in 1801, by the title of lord Hutchinson of Alexandria, and of Knocklofty, co. Tipperary. The arms, &c. of this branch of the family are as follow:

Arms. Per pale gules and azure, a lion rampant within an orb of cross crosslets fitchy, a crescent for difference.

Crest. A wyvern standing on a ducal coronet.

Supporters. Two wyverns, each charged on the breast with a crescent.

Motto. "Fortiter gerit crucem."

HUTCHINSON, John (Biog.) the well-known founder of a philosophical sect, was born in 1674, at Spennythorn, in Yorkshire, and died in 1737, leaving a number of works on the Hebrew language, which were collected in 12 vols. 8vo. 1748. He imagined all knowledge to be contained in the Hebrew Scriptures, and, rejecting the points, he gave a fanciful meaning to every one of the Hebrew letters. Although his theory amused some and alarmed others, yet it is now scarcely remembered, having sunk deservedly into oblivion.

HUTTEN, Ulric von (Biog.) a miscellaneous writer, of a respectable family, but of an adventurous turn of mind, was born at Steckenburg, in Franconia, in 1488, and died in 1523, leaving, among his numerous works, a collection of Latin Poems, published in 8vo. Francof. 1538; all which, except two, were reprinted in the 'Deliciæ Poetarum Germanorum.' His prose works were mostly satirical, among which were his Latin Dialogues on Lutheranism, published in 4to. 1520.

HUTTEN, Jacob, a Silesian in the 16th century, and the leader of a sect of Anabaptists, is said to have been burnt as a heretic at Inspruck; but this is not certain. It is however well known that he provoked the resentment of the magistrates, by the levelling doctrines which he held. His followers, who afterwards adhered to count Zinzendorf, are now known by the name of Moravians, or, in German, Herrenhuters.

HUTTEN, Leonard, also a native of Ulm, was born in 1563, and died in 1616, leaving a number of theological works, enumerated by Freher in his 'Theatrum.'

HUTTER, Elias (Biog.) a native of Ulm, was born in 1553, and died in 1602, leaving, 1. Two Polyglotts, one in four languages, fol. Hamb. 1596; and the other in six, Nuremb. 1599. 2. A Hebrew Bible, remarkable for being printed with the radical letters in black type, the servile in hollow types, and the quiescent letters in smaller characters above the lines, Hamb. 1597.

HUTTON, Matthew (Ecc.) an English prelate, and native of Lincolnshire, was educated at Cambridge, and after various preferments was raised to the see of Durham in 1589, from which he was translated to that of York five years after, and died in 1605, at the age of 59.

HUTTON, James, a mineralogist and geologist, was born at Edinburgh in 1726, and died in 1797, leaving, among other things, his 'Theory of the Earth,' &c.

HUTTON, Charles, a mathematician, was born in 1737, at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and died in 1823, leaving, among his works, 'A Treatise on Mensuration,' 4to. 1768; 'Elements of the Conic Sections,' 8vo. 1777; 'Tracts, Mathematical and Philosophical,' 4to. 1786; 'Mathematical and Philosophical Dictionary,' 2 vols. 4to.; several treatises on Mathematics, Projectiles, and Philosophy; besides Mathematical Tables, &c.

HUXHAM, John (Biog.) a physician, who died at Plymouth in 1768, was the author of a 'Treatise on Fevers;' and 'Observationes de Aere, et Morbis Epidemicis,' 3 vols. 8vo. 1728—1770.

HUYGENS, Constantine (Biog.) author of Latin Poems and Miscellanies, entitled 'Monumenta Desultoria,' was a native of the Hague, and died president of the council of the prince of Orange in 1687, at the age of 91.

HUYGENS, Christian, a mathematician, and son of the preceding, was born at the Hague in 1629, and died in 1695, leaving, 1. 'Theoremata de Quadratura Hyperboles, Ellipsis,' &c. Hag. 1651. 2. 'Horologium Oscillatorium, sive de Motu Pendulorum,' Hag. 1658; which had been preceded by a smaller work on the same subject, entitled 'Brevis Institutio de Usu Horologiorum ad inveniendas Longitudines.' 3. 'Systema Saturninum,' &c. 1659. 4. 'Cosmotheoros,' 1695. 5. 'Opuscula posthuma, quæ continent Dioptricam, Commentarios de Vitris figurandis,' &c. 4to. 1703. The principal part of the above-mentioned works were published in 4 vols. 4to. 1700, under the title of 'Opera Varia;' and in 1728 were printed at Amsterdam, in 2 vols. 4to. his 'Opera Reliqua.' [Vide Plate XXXV]

HUYGHENS, Gomarus (Biog.) a doctor of Louvain, was born in 1631, at Lier, a town of Brabant, and died in 1702, leaving a number of theological works, mentioned by Moreri.

HUYSUM, John Van (Biog.) a painter of Amsterdam, was born in 1682, and died in 1749, after having acquired a high reputation, which raised the productions of his pencil in the public estimation, and enhanced their price very materially.

HUYSUM, Justus Van, brother of the preceding, who died at the age of 22, was very happy in painting battles.

HUYSUM, Jacob Van, another brother of the preceding, who was born at Amsterdam in 1680, and died in 1740, was distinguished by his happy imitation of his eldest brother's style.

HYACINTHUS (Myth.) Ὑακίνθος, a son of Amyclas and Diomede, being killed accidentally by Apollo, to whom he was very dear, this deity changed his blood into the flower called after him, and placed him among the constellations. Apollod. l. 1, &c.; Ovid. Met. l. 10; Lucian. Dial. Deor. l. 15; Palæph. &c.

HYADES (Myth.) Ὑάδες, the five daughters of Atlas, who, pining with grief at the death of their brother Hyas, were changed into stars, and placed near the constellation Taurus. Euripid. in Jon. 1155; Procl. in Hes.; Hygin. Fab. 182; Aul. Gell. l. 13; Ovid. Fast. l. 5; Schol. in Theoc.

HYAGNIS (Biog.) a Phrygian, who was reputed to be the inventor of the flute.

HYAS (Myth.) Ὕας, son of Atlas, king of Mauritania, is said to have been killed by a lioness, in attempting to take her whelps from her. His sisters, in mourning his fate, were changed into stars. [Vide Hyades]

HYBLA (Geog.) a mountain of Sicily, otherwise called Megara, famous for its honey, and the sweet herbs from which it is procured.

Mart. l. 13, ep. 105.

HYDE, Edward, Earl of Clarendon (Hist.) vide Clarendon.

Hyde, Lawrence, second son of the earl of Clarendon, the chancellor, was early engaged about the court, being made in 1661 master of the robes to the king; was sent in 1676 as ambassador to Poland, and was present as Plenipotentiary at the congress at Nimeguen. He was made first Lord of the Treasury in 1679; and after being raised to the peerage in 1681, by the title of viscount Hyde and earl of Rochester, he lost his offices for his refusal to change his religion; but was taken into the favour and service of king William, as also of queen Anne, and died in 1711.

Hyde, Lord (Her.) and viscount Cornbury, the titles enjoyed by Henry, eldest son of Henry, earl of Clarendon, who died in 1753, a little before his father.

Hyde, Henry, Lord (Biog.) and viscount Cornbury abovementioned, is only known as the author of some pamphlets, published without his name, and a comedy, entitled 'The Mistakes; or, the Happy Resentment,' printed in 1756 at Strawberry-Hill, with a preface by lord Orford. He likewise wrote a 'Letter to David Mallet, on the intended Publication of Bolingbroke's MSS.' which was printed in Dr. Hawkesworth's edition of Swift's works; also the paper dated Feb. 12, 1737, in the periodical work entitled 'Common Sense;' and 'A Letter to the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford,' 1751, on his being called up to the House of Peers, and consequently resigning his seat for the University, which he had represented in the House.

Hyde, Thomas, an orientalist, was born at Billingsley, near Bridgenorth, in Shropshire, in 1636; entered at Queen's College, Oxford, in 1658; and died a canon of Christ Church in 1703; leaving, 1. A Latin Translation of Ulug Beigh's Persian Work on the Longitudes and Latitudes of the Fixed Stars,' 1666. 2. 'A Catalogue of the Books in the Bodleian Library,' 1674, of which he was keeper until two years before his death. 3. 'Quatuor Evangelia et Acta Apostolorum Linguâ Malaicâ,' &c. 4to. Oxon. 1677. 4. 'Epistola de Mensuris et Ponderibus Serum vel Sinensium,' &c. printed at the end of Edward Bernard's book 'De Mensuris,' &c. 8vo. Oxon. 1688. 5. 'Annotatiunculæ in Tractatum Alberti Bobovii Turcarum Imp. Mohammedis IV,' &c. 1690. 6. 'Itinera Mundi,' of Abraham Peritsol a jew, 1691. 7. 'De Ludis Orientalibus Libri duo,' &c. 1694. 8. 'In Historiam Plantarum Oxoniensium Annotationes Nominum singularum Plantarum Linguâ Arabicâ Persicâ et Turcicâ,' 4to. Oxon. 1699. 9. 'Historia Religionis veter. Persarum,' &c. 4to. Oxon. 1700; but the edition of 1760 is reckoned the best, and is become very scarce; besides these he planned and partly prepared a number of works mentioned by Wood, from which Dr. Gregory Sharpe collected and published some pieces, under the title of 'Syntagma Dissertationum et Opuscula,' 2 vols. 4to. 1767, accompanied by a life of the author. [Vide Plate XXIV]

HYDER, Ali Khan (Hist.) prince of Mysore, who was born at Dinuvelli, in the Mysore, distinguished himself early as a brave commander against the Mahrattas and the English, to whom he proved a formidable enemy, until his death in 1782, when he was succeeded by Tippoo Saib, who inherited his valour and his rancor against the English. [Vide Plate II]

HYDRA (Myth.) Ὕδρη, a celebrated monster who infested the lake Lerna, in Peloponnesus, having, according to Diodorus, a hundred heads, and as soon as one of these heads was cut off two immediately sprung out from the wound. It was one of the labours of Hercules to kill him, which he effected, with the assistance of Iolaus, who applied a burning iron to the wounds, as soon as one head was cut off.

Horat. l. 4, od. 4.

Non Hydra secto corpore firmior
Vinci dolentem crevit in Herculem.

Ovid. Met. l. 9, v. 69.

Pars quota Lernææ serpens eris unus Echidnæ
Vulneribus fecunda suis erat illa; nec ullum
De centum numero caput est impune recisum.

Ibid. l. 9, v. 192.

—— nec profuit Hydræ
Crescere per damnum, geminasque resumere vires.

[Vide Hydra, Technological Dictionary.]

Hydra (Numis.) this monster is frequently represented on the medals of Hercules. [Vide Hercules]

HYDRUNTUM (Geog.) a city of Calabria, 50 m. S. Brundusium, now Otranto, where Pyrrhus, and afterwards Varro, Pompey's lieutenant, contemplated the building a bridge across the Adriatic, to carry them over into Greece, a distance of 60 miles.

Lucan. l. 5, v. 375.

Et cunctas revocare rates, quas avius Hydrus
Antiquusque Taras, secretaque litora Leucæ,
Quas recipit Salapina palus, &c.

Hydruntum (Numis.) this town is distinguished on some few medals, bearing the name of the people, ΥΔΡΩΝΤΙΝΩΝ.

HYDRUS (Geog.) now Capo di Otranto, a promontory of Italy, on the coast of the Adriatic, not far from Hydruntum.

HYEMPSAL (Hist.) a son of Micipsa, brother to Adherbal, was murdered by Jugurtha, after the death of his father. Sallust. de Bell. Jug.

HYGEIA (Myth.) or Hygiea, Ὑγίεια, or Ὑγεία, a daughter of Æsculapius, who was worshipped by the ancients as the goddess of health. Plin. l. 35; Paus. l. 1, &c.

HYGEIA (Numis.) this goddess is represented mostly on medals, under the figure of a female feeding a serpent, and on Roman coins, sometimes with the inscription SALUS. Vaillant. Præst. Num. &c.; T. Tristan. Spanheim, Reger, &c.

HYGINUS, St. (Ecc.) a pope, and a martyr, who was born at Athens, governed the church after Telesphorus from 153 to 156, when he is said to have been put to death. Historians are not agreed on any of the particulars respecting the pontificate and death of Hyginus. Euseb. in Chron.; Epiphan. in Hæres.; Du Pin. Bibl.

HYGINUS, C. Jul. (Biog.) a grammarian, and one of the freedmen of Augustus, was the author of a mythological history, which he called 'Fabulæ,' and 'Poeticon Astronomicon, both of which are extant;' besides some treatises on the cities of Italy; and on some Roman families descended from the Trojans, &c. which are now lost. The best edition of Hyginus is that of Munker, published with some other pieces, under the title of 'Mythographi Latini,' 2 vols. 8vo. Amst. 1681.

HYLA (Numis.) a town of the Locri, which is only known by some coins bearing the inscription ΥΛΑΙΟΥ, i. e. Hylæi; and the type of Hercules, Hylæus.

HYLAS (Myth.) Ὕλας, a son of Thiodamas, king of Mysia and Menodice, was stolen and carried away by Hercules, who, on his being missed, became disconsolate at his loss, and abandoned the Argonautic expedition to go in search of him.

HYLE (Geog.) Ὕλη, a town of Cyprus, where Apollo was worshipped, under the name of Hylates. Steph. Byz.; Cellar. Notit.

HYLE (Numis.) to this town are attributed the medals bearing the inscription, ΥΛΕΤΑΝ.

HYLLUS (Myth.) Ὕλλος, son of Hercules and Dejanira, who settled in Attica, after having conquered and killed Eurystheus. He was afterwards slain in attempting to recover Peloponnesus with the Heraclidæ. Herodot. l. 7; Thucyd. l. 1; Apollod. l. 2; Hygin. Fab. 36, &c.; Diod. l. 4; Ovid. Met. l. 9, &c.

HYLLUS (Geog.) a river of Lydia, which emptied itself into the Hermus, not far from Sardis.

HYLLUS (Numis.) this river is distinguished on medals, by the inscription, CΑΙΤΤΗΝΩΝ ΥΛΛΟC, i. e. Saittenorum Hyllus, which shows that the Saitteni inhabited this neighbourhood. The river itself is represented under the figure of a female pouring water out of an urn.

HYMENÆUS (Bibl.) Ὑμέναιος, a citizen of Ephesus, and a convert to the preaching of St. Paul, fell afterwards into heresy, and was given over to Satan by the apostle. 1 Tim. ii.

HYMENÆUS (Myth.) or Hymen, son of Bacchus and Venus, or, according to some, of Apollo and one of the Muses, was worshipped by the ancients as the god of marriage. According to some mythologists, he was a young Athenian of great beauty, but of ignoble origin, who, falling in love with one of the richest and noblest of his countrywomen, obtained her hand by an extraordinary act of valour. His marriage was attended with such felicity to the parties, that the Athenians instituted festivals to his honour, and invoked him at their nuptials. The Romans did the same in imitation of that custom.

HYPARINUS (Hist.) a son of Dion, who reigned at Syracuse for two years after his father.

HYPAS (Ecc.) a bishop of Gangres, in Paphlagonia, assisted at the council of Nice in 325. He is said to have been stoned to death by the Novatians, and his festival is observed by the Greek church on Nov. 14. Philostorg. l. 1; Menol. Græc.

HYPATIA (Biog.) a daughter of Theon, who governed the Platonic school at Alexandria, her native place. She was distinguished by her talents, her learning, and her virtues, and had among her disciples Synesius, afterwards bishop of Ptolemais. But being charged with preventing a reconciliation between Orestes the governor, and Cyril, the patriarch of that city, a number of enthusiasts, headed by one Peter, a lecturer, watched an opportunity of seizing her, and dragging her out of her chair, they hurried her to the church called Cæsars, stripped her naked, and killed her with tiles. After which they tore her body to pieces, and burnt them to ashes; which horrid event took place A. D. 415. Although St. Cyril is cleared by the testimony of his cotemporaries from having taken any part whatever in this outrage, yet he may not be altogether clear from blame, for not having more openly discountenanced proceedings which he must have condemned. Socrat. l. 7; Synes. Epist.; Damas. Vit. Philostorg; Voss. de Philol. c. 2, &c.; Fabric. Bibl. Græc. l. 5, c. 22; Montuc. Hist. Math. tom. i.

HYPSIPYLE (Myth.) a queen of Lemnos, and daughter of Thoas, who spared her father's life when the Lemnian women killed all the males in the island, for which she was driven away by her subjects. She was taken by pirates, and sold to Lycurgus, king of Nemea. Jason, who had landed at Lemnos during her reign, and by whom she was the mother of Euneus and Nebophronus, had made vows of eternal fidelity to her, which he afterwards violated. Apollon. Argon. l. 1; Apollod. l. 1; Hygin. Fab. 15, &c.; Ovid. Heroid. 6; Schol. in Hom.; Schol. in Pind.; Schol. Eurip. in Hecub. &c.

HYRCANIA (Geog.) a large country of Asia, at the north of Parthia, and west of Media, abounding in serpents, &c. Cic. Tusc. l. 1; Virg. Æn. l. 4; Strab. l. 2, &c.

HYRCANUM, mare (Geog.) another name for the Caspian Sea.

HYRCANUS (Hist.) the name of some high-priests among the Jews.

Hyrcanus, John, son of Simon Maccabeus, succeeded his father A. M. 3900, A. C. 104, and waged war successfully against the Syrians, the Parthians, and the Idumeans, which latter he compelled to be circumcised, and died after having governed the Jews for 31 years. Joseph. Antiq. l. 13; Usser. Annal.

HYRCANUS II, eldest son of Alexander I, succeeded his father A. C. 78, but was deprived of his regal dignity by his brother Aristobulus, and only retained the high priesthood. He afterwards attempted to recover his right, when he was defeated by Pompey, and falling into the hands of his nephew, he had his ears cut off, and, finally, was put to death by Herod at the age of 80, A. C. 30. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 1.

Hyrcanus, nephew of the high priest Onias II, was sent into Egypt to congratulate Ptolemy on the birth of a son, and, displaying great magnificence at the Egyptian court, he received many marks of favour from Ptolemy, which awakened the jealousy of his brothers. He afterwards fled from Jerusalem and killed himself, that he might not fall into the hands of his enemies. Joseph. Antiq. l. 12, &c.

HYRIEUS (Myth.) a prince of Tanagra, son of Neptune and Alcyone, who kindly entertained Jupiter, Neptune, and Mercury, when travelling over Bœotia, for which he was afterwards rewarded with a fine child named Orion, who had been conceived in a bull's hide.

HYSTASPES (Hist.) Ὑςάσπης, a noble Persian, of the family of the Achæmenides, whose son, Darius, was king of Persia, after the death of the impostor Smerdis. Herodot. l. 1, &c.

HYSTIEUS (Biog.) vide Histiæus.

HYWELL, Ap Owain (Hist.) a prince of North Wales, who, being defeated in his attempt to seize the throne from his elder brother, retired to Ireland, and died in 1171.

Hywell, Ap Morgan, a prince of Glamorgan, who died in 1043, aged 130. It is said that three of his family lived to nearly the same age.

History of Jamaica.

Jamaica was discovered by Columbus in 1494, was formed into a Spanish colony in 1509. In 1596 sir Anthony Shirley invaded and plundered the island; and about 40 years afterwards, it was again plundered by a party of English under colonel Jackson. In 1655 it was taken by the English under the command of Penn and Venables, since which time it has formed a part of the British dominions, with little interruption to its tranquillity, except what has been occasioned by the Maroons, or the slaves of the Spanish settlers, who, on the conquest of the island, fled to the mountains, and lived by predatory incursions into the settlements formed by the colony. In 1738 a treaty was made with them, by which their freedom was guaranteed, and a district was assigned to them, with which they remained quiet until 1795, when a new and formidable war was commenced between them and the white inhabitants, in which they were for a time successful, but were finally subdued by the help of blood-hounds, and compelled to surrender to their enemies at discretion, when 600 of them were transported to Nova Scotia, and had lands assigned to them.

IAMBE (Myth.) 'Ιάμβη, daughter of Panos and Euche, is said to have attended Ceres as she travelled over Attica in quest of Proserpine; and, from the jokes and stories which she invented to exhilarate the goddess, the name of Iambics has been given to free and satirical verses.

IAMBLICHUS (Hist.) the second king of Emesa, succeeded his father Sampsiceramus, and being exceedingly attached to the Romans, he acquainted Cicero with the movements of the Parthians. He was afterwards put to a cruel death by M. Anthony on account of his supposed attachment to Octavianus. Cic. ad Fam. l. 15, ep. 1; Strab. l. 16; Dio. l. 50.

IAMBLICHUS II, nephew of the preceding, succeeded his uncle Alexander, and was in favour with Augustus.

JEFFERY (Biog.) or Geoffrey, of Monmouth, Ap Arthur, a British historian, who flourished in the reign of Henry I, is known by his History of Britain, in which he traces the kings of this country as far back as Brutus, the grandson of Ascanius; but on what authority his account rests, we are not informed; it is, however, generally supposed to have been taken from a Welsh History of the British Kings, written, as is said, by Tyssilio, or St. Talian, bishop of St. Asaph, who flourished in the seventh century. The work was published in Latin at Paris, in 4to. 1517; and again in folio by Commeline et Heidelberg in 1587, among the 'Rerum Britannicarum Scriptores vetustiores et præcipui; a translation by Aaron Thompson, of Queen's College, was published in 8vo. London, 1718.

Jeffery, John, an English divine, was born at Ipswich in 1647, and died in 1720. He published in 1702, 'Christian Morals, by Sir Thomas Browne,' as also 'Moral and Religious Aphorisms, collected from Dr. Whichcote's Papers,' and three volumes by the same author. His own works, consisting of Sermons and Tracts, were collected and published in 2 vols. 8vo. in 1751.

JEFFERY, Thomas, a Dissenter, and native of Exeter, who died in the 18th century, at the age of 30, was the author of 'The true Grounds and Reasons of the Christian Religion against Collins the Deist;' 'The Divinity of Christianity proved from Scripture;' 'Christianity the Perfection of all Religion.'

JEFFREYS, George, Lord (Hist.) better known by the name of Judge Jeffreys, was born at Acton, in Derbyshire, educated at Westminster, studied law at the Inner Temple, and attaching himself to the interests of James II, he was successively raised, on his accession, to the place of Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and the dignity of Chancellor, but at the Revolution was stripped of all his offices, and died in prison in 1689, after having brought upon himself much odium by the rigour with which he supported the measures of government. [Vide Plate XX]

JEFFREYS, George (Biog.) an English poet, was born in 1678, educated at Westminster and Cambridge, and died in 1755, leaving a quarto volume of 'Miscellanies in Prose and Verse,' published by subscription in 1754.

JEHAN, Ghír (Hist.) surnamed Nuroddin Mohammed, son of Akbar, the Great Mogul, succeeded his father in 1605, and died in 1627, after a turbulent reign, in which he was once imprisoned by Mohabet Khan, and other omras, but afterwards procured his liberty.

JEHAN, Shah, son of the preceding, succeeded his father in 1627, but was deposed and imprisoned by his son Aurengzib.

JEHIAH (Bibl.) יחיה, a Levite, who assisted in carrying the ark when David removed it from the house of Obededom. 1 Chron. xv. 24.

drew themselves from their allegiance to Rehoboam of the house of David. This king died after a reign of 22 years, and was succeeded by Nadab. 1 Kings xi. &c.; Usser. Annal.

Jeroboam II, succeeded his father Jehoash on the throne of Israel, A. M. 3179, A. C. 825, and reigned 41 years (2 Kings xiv.), during which period the prophets Hosea, Amos, and Jonah prophesied. Amos ii. &c.

JEROME, St. (Ecc.) vide Hieronymus.

Jerome of Prague, so called from the place of his birth, began to publish the doctrine of the Hussites in 1408; and, after having provoked the resentment of the Romish church, to which he was a violent adversary, he at length fell into the hands of his enemies, and was compelled to make a partial recantation, which however he afterwards retracted, and was accordingly condemned to the flames as an heresiarch. This sentence was executed upon him in 1416. [Vide Plate XIX]

Jerome of Prague, distinct from the preceding, was an opponent to the doctrines of Huss; but leaving his native country on account of the religious dissensions which then began to threaten the peace of the church, he went into Poland, where he laboured with zeal in the conversion of the inhabitants to the Christian faith. Æn. Sylv. Europ. c. 26.

JERVAS, Charles (Biog.) a painter, who died in 1740, has acquired celebrity by the praises of Pope. He published a translation of Don Quixote.

JERUSALEM (Geog.) a celebrated city of Asia, capital of the ancient Judæa, and of the modern Palestine, has been described under the name of Hierosolyma, from its origin as a Jewish city, until the time of the Romans. It is now included in the Pachalic of Damascus. Lon. 35° 20′ E. lat. 31° 50′ N.

History of Jerusalem.

After the destruction of this city by Titus, it was rebuilt by Adrian, and received the name of Ælia Capitolina, which it retained until the time of the emperor Constantine, when it recovered its ancient name, and in some measure its ancient splendour by the resort of pilgrims, who visited the city from religious veneration; but this prosperity received an interruption by the invasion of the Saracens, by whom it was taken in 636, when all Syria and Palestine fell into the hands of the caliph Omar; it suffered, however, still more seriously from the Turks in the 11th century, who committed such acts of violence and barbarity towards the pilgrims as to rouse the spirit of the Christian princes of Europe, and give rise to the crusades. These were at first attended with great successes, and among others by the conquest of Jerusalem, and of the adjacent country, which were erected into a kingdom in favour of Godfrey of Boulogne in 1099. He had for his successors,

In the reign of Gui de Lusignan, the Saracens, commanded by the renowned Saladin, reconquered Jerusalem and many other places in the Holy Land, by which an end was put to this new kingdom after the lapse of 88 years from its commencement. Acre, or Ptolemais, the last place which remained in the hands of the Christians, was besieged and taken by the sultan Melec Arafe in 1291: and, after changing its Moslem masters several times, this country was finally annexed in 1517 to the Turkish empire, of which it has ever since remained a part.

Ecclesiastical History of Jerusalem.

The church of Jerusalem, which was established by the Apostles, is universally admitted to have been the first in point of antiquity, although not in dignity. It was sanctified by the death of our Saviour, by the descent of the Holy Ghost, by the preaching of the Apostles, and by the martyrdom of St. James the Minor, its first bishop; but in course of time it became suffragan to the see of Cæsaræa until the sixth century, when it was erected into a patriarchate. The following is a list of the bishops and patriarchs of Jerusalem, with the respective dates as far as they can be ascertained:

Jerusalem had not only the advantage of being the most ancient church, but of having had the first Christian council of the apostles and disciples, at which Matthias was elected an apostle to supply the place of Judas; the second assembly was held for the election of deacons; but the third assembly of the apostles, which was properly named the council of Jerusalem, was the most important. It was held A. D. 49, or 56, on the subject of the legal observances to which some wished to make the Gentiles subject. Acts i, vi, xv. S. Narcissus, bishop of Jerusalem, assembled a council, at which 14 other bishops were present, about 197; and about 335 the emperor Constantine caused the prelates, who were assembled at Tyre, to remove to Jerusalem, for the purpose of dedicating the temple which he had built. Juvenal, another prelate of Jerusalem, celebrated a provincial council in 453; and other councils were subsequently held in 518, 536, 553, 634, 1099, 1107, 1111, 1115, 1136, or 1142. Eusebius, Socrates, Sozomenes, Theodoretus, Orosius, Bede; William of Tyr.; Baronius; Bochart; Usher.; Torniel. &c.

Jerusalem, John Frederick William (Biog.) a German divine, was born at Osnaburgh in 1709, and died in 1789, leaving, 1. 'Briefe uber die Mosaische Religion und Philosophie,' 1773. 2. 'Betrachtungen uber die vornehmsten Grundwahrheiten der Religion,' 1785, &c. 3. 'Von der Kirchenvereinigung ein Bedenken,' &c.

JERUSHA (Bibl.) ירושה, mother of Jotham, son of Uzziah, king of Judah. 2 Kings xv, 33.

JESHARELAH (Bibl.) ישראלה, the seventh of the twenty-four families of the Levites. 1 Chron. xxv.

JESHEBCAB (Bibl.) ישבאב, chief of the fourteenth family of priests. 1 Chron. xxiv.

JESSE (Bibl.) ישי, son of Obed, and father of David, Eliab, Abinadab, and other sons, of whom David, though the youngest, was the most illustrious. 1 Chron. ii; Ruth iv; Matth. i.

JESUA, Levita (Biog.) a Spanish rabbi of the 15th century, was the author of a book entitled 'Halicoth Olam;' i. e. 'The Ways of Eternity;' which was translated into Latin by Constantin l'Empereur, and of which a good edition, in Hebrew and Latin, was printed in 4to. Hanover, 1714.

JESUS (Bibl.) ישוע, Ἰησοῦς, which signifies in the Hebrew "He shall save," was applied with peculiar propriety to Christ, the Messiah, the Saviour of the world.

Jesus, vide Joshua.

Jesus, or Jeshua, son of Jozadek, was the first high-priest of the Jews after their return from the Babylonish captivity, of whom the prophets Haggai and Zechariah make mention. Hag. i; Ezra iv; Zech. iii.

Jesus (Hist.) son of Sirach, author of the book of Ecclesiasticus, is supposed to have been descended from Jesus, son of Jozadek.

Jesus, vide Jason.

Jesus, son of Damnæus, high-priest of the Jews, was raised to this dignity by Agrippa A. D. 63, and deposed the same year. He succeeded Ananus, and was succeeded by Jesus, the son of Gamaliel, whose partisans disputed for the pontificate with the preceding Jesus, until Agrippa deposed them both, and elected Matthias, son of Theophilus, A. D. 64.

INDIA (Geog.) an extensive country of Asia, which derives its name from the river Indus, has been called by the moderns the East Indies, to distinguish it from America, which was called the West. By the natives it is called Indostan, or Hindostan.

Boundaries, Extent, and Division. India is bounded, according to both ancients and moderns, by the river Indus on the W., by the mountains Emodi on the N., by the river Ganges, with the mountains Damasius and Mæander, which separate it from China, and on the S. by the Indian Ocean and the Bay of Bengal, &c. When taken in its fullest extent, it includes all the countries which lie S. of Tartary, and extend from the eastern frontiers of Persia to the eastern coasts of China; but modern geographers have confined this name to what is properly called Indostan. The ancients divided it into India on this side the Ganges, and India beyond the Ganges; but the moderns distinguish it by the different countries of which it is composed; comprehending Hindostan, the Birman empire, the kingdoms of Siam, Cochin China, Tonquin, Tibet, Japan, Ceylon, &c.

Towns, Rivers, &c. Vide Hindostan.

History. Of the early history of this country very few circumstances are mentioned by ancient writers, excepting the expedition and conquests of Alexander the Great, from whose death, till the fifth century after our Saviour's birth, writers are almost entirely silent respecting India. [Vide Hindostan]

INDUS (Geog.) now Sinde, a large river of Asia, from which the adjacent country received the name of India. According to Plato it was larger than the Nile, and Pliny says that 19 rivers discharge themselves into it before it falls into the sea. According to modern accounts it has its source in a range of the mountains of Tartary, in the 38th or 39th degree of N. latitude. From the city of Attock to Moultan, or to the influx of the Chunaub, it is commonly named the river of Attock. Below the city of Moultan it proceeds in a S. direction through the province of that name, and that of Sindy, and enters the Arabian Sea by an extended delta of mouths N. W. of the Gulf of Cutch. Cic. de Nat. Deor. l. 2; Diod. l. 2; Strab. l. 15; Ov. F. l. 3; Plin. l. 6, c. 20.

'In Galeni Librum de Ossibus doctissima et expertissima Commentaria,' a posthumous publication printed at Messina in 1603.

INGUIMBERTI, Dominic Joseph Marie d' (Ecc.) a bishop of Carpentras, where he was born in 1683, was nominated by Clement XII to the archbishopric of Theodosia in partibus, and to the bishopric of Carpentras in 1733, and died in 1757, leaving among his works as an author, 1. 'Genuinus Character reverendi admodum in Christo Patris D. Armandi Johannis Butillierii Rancæi,' 4to. Rom. 1718. 2. An Italian translation of a book entitled 'Theologie Religieuse,' 3 vols. fol. 1731. 3. An Italian translation of a French treatise by Father Didier, on the Infallibility of the Pope, fol. Rome, 1732. 4. An edition of the works of Bartholomew, of the Martyrs, with his Life, 2 vols. fol. 5. 'La Vie Separée,' another treatise on Monastic Life, in 2 vols. 4to. 1727.

INGULPHUS (Biog.) abbot of Croyland, and author of the History of that abbey, was born in London about 1030, educated at Westminster School, and at Oxford, and died in 1109. His History of the Abbey, written in Latin, from its foundation in 664, to 1091, was printed by sir H. Saville, London, 1596, and inserted among Gale's 'Scriptores.' There is also an edition of Francfort in 1601, and one of Oxford in 1684, which last is considered the most complete.

INNES (Her.) the name of an ancient family of Scotland, now represented by the duke of Roxburgh, [vide Kerr] which still enjoy the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1818 on sir Hugh Innes. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth argent, three stars of six rays azure, for Innes; second and third or, on a chief sable, three escallops of the field for Graham.

Crest. A boar's head erased proper, langued gules.

Supporters. Two greyhounds proper; that in the dexter gorged with a collar argent, charged with three stars of six rays azure; and that on the sinister, gorged with a collar sable, charged with three escallops or, both with chains reflexed over the back of the last.

Motto. 'Be traist."—"Exempla suorum."

INNOCENT (Ecc.) the name of some popes.

INNOCENT I, a native of Albano, was elected pope after Anastasius I in 402, and died in 417, after having defended S. Chrysostom against the Novatians and Pelagians. He had Zosimus for a successor.

INNOCENT II, a native of Rome, was elevated to the papal chair after Honorius II, in 1130, but not without opposition from a part of the cardinals, who elected Peter, son of Leo, under the name of Anacletus II. Innocent, though supported by the princes of Europe, was driven from Rome by the partisans of his rival, and obliged to seek protection in France, where he held several councils at Clermont, Rheims, Puy, &c. After the death of Anacletus, and the abdication of Victor IV, he returned to Rome, where he held the second Lateran, or the 10th general council in 1139, which was attended by upwards of 1000 bishops, and at which the emperor Lotharius was crowned. He afterwards made war on Roger, king of Sicily, and died in 1143, having Celestin II for a successor.

INNOCENT III, a native of Anagni, of the family of the counts of Pegnie, attained to the pontificate after Celestin III, though only 37 years of age. He preached a crusade against the Albigenses, of Languedoc; put Philip Augustus, of France, under an interdict; excommunicated John, king of England, and Raymond, count of Toulouse; and raised the papal power to its greatest height, endeavouring at the same time to confirm it by the establishment of the religious orders of the Dominicans, the Franciscans, Trinitarians, and others, which were founded during his government of the church. In 1215 he held the general council of the Lateran, at which he presided, and died in 1216, when Honorius III succeeded. He left several works, as 'De Contemptu Mundi,' &c. which passed through several editions; and among others, one of Paris, 18mo. 1645. His Epistles were printed at Rome in 1543, and again at Cologne in 1545; besides other religious works which are attributed to him.

INNOCENT IV, a native of Genoa, whose name was Sinibaldo, of the House of Fieso, was elected pope in 1243, after Celestin IV, and following the steps of Innocent III, he presumed to excommunicate and depose the emperor Frederic, notwithstanding the remonstrances of Louis, king of France, who essayed in vain to terminate the difference, which ended only with the death of the emperor. That of Innocent followed in 1254, when Alexander IV succeeded. He was the first that invested the cardinals with a red hat, as a mark of their dignity. The works of this pope have been often printed at Venice, Lyons, Francfort, and elsewhere, under the title of 'Apparatus, Libris quinque distinctus, in totidem Libros Decretalium.'

INNOCENT V, a Dominican, and archbishop of Lyons, was elected pope in Feb. 1276, and died in the June following, leaving among his works as an author 'Notes on the Epistles of St. Paul, Commentaries,' &c. Adrian V, and in the same year John XX, succeeded to the pontificate.

INNOCENT VI, a native of Pompadour, in Limoges, and bishop of Ostia, whose name was Stephen Albert, was elected pope in 1352, died in 1362, and was succeeded by Urban V. He endeavoured to promote peace, particularly between the kings of England and France.

INNOCENT VII, a native of Salmone, named Come de Meliorati, was elected after Boniface IX, in 1389, and died in 1406, after having been driven from Rome by the partizans of the antipope Benedict XIII, assisted by Ladislaus, king of Naples. Gregory XII was elected at his death.

INNOCENT VIII, a noble Genoese of Greek extraction, whose name was John Baptist Cabo, was elected pope in 1484, and died in 1492, after having contributed much to establish peace among christian princes. [Vide Innocent, under Numismatics] Alexander VI succeeded him.

INNOCENT IX, a native of Bologna, who succeeded Gregory XIV in 1591, died two months after, when Clement VII was raised to the papal chair. He had contemplated many improvements at Rome.

Innocent X, a native of Rome, named John Baptist Pamphili, succeeded Urban VIII in 1644, at the age of 72, and died in 1655, after having published his bull against the five propositions of the Jansenists. Alexander VII was his successor.

Innocent XI, a native of Como, in the Milanese, named Benedict Odescalchi, was made a bishop and cardinal by Innocent X, elected pope in 1676, and died in 1689, at the age of 78, when he was succeeded by Alexander VIII. He opposed Louis XIV, by refusing to admit to bishoprics persons of his recommendation, so that at his death many dioceses were vacant; but he contributed very materially to the coalition which was formed by Germany, Poland, and Venice, against the Turks, and condemned the errors of the Molenists and Quietists.

Innocent XII, a noble Neapolitan named Anthony Pignatilli, was born in 1615, raised to the papal chair in 1691, after Alexander VIII, and died in 1706, after having founded many hospitals, laboured for the extinction of quietism, enlarged the ports of Anzio and Nettuno, and displayed himself the common father of his people without partiality. He was succeeded by Clement XI.

Innocent XIII, a native of Rome, and the eighth pope of his family, whose name was Michael Angelo Conti, was born in 1655, made governor of Viterbo in 1693, titular archbishop of Tarsus, and nuncio to the Catholic Swiss Cantons in 1695; raised to the dignity of a cardinal in 1707, to that of vice-protector of the affairs of the kingdom, and finally, after filling the highest offices in the ecclesiastical state, to that of governor of the church, when he assumed the name of Innocent XIII, in imitation of Innocent III, who was of the same family. His infirmities prevented him from executing several plans of improvement which he had projected, and shortened his life, which ended in 1724, when he was succeeded by Benedict XIII.

Innocent (Numis.) medals are extant of Innocent VIII, and his successors Innocent IX, X, XI, bearing their effigies as in the annexed figures; inscriptions on the reverse of some, as of Innocent VIII, ANNO DOMI. MCDLXXXIV. on the occasion of his election; of Innocent IX TU DOMINUS ET MAGISTER, on the occasion of this pope's washing the feet of the poor according to custom; S. PETRUS APOSTOLUS, S. PAULUS APOST. in honour of the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, of whom effigies are given, but on doubtful authority. Some medals of Innocent X are inscribed FIAT PAX IN VIRTUTE TUA, on the occasion of concluding of the peace of Munster; UT THESAURUS ANNI SANCTIORIS TECUM APERIAM INNOCENTIUS X, PONT. MAX. ANNO VII. ANNO JUBILEI 1650, both on the occasion of the jubilee. Some medals of Innocent XI are inscribed, INNOCENS MANIBUS, ET MUNDO CORDE, on the occasion of his assuming this name at his election; DE COELO PROSPEXIT, with the type of Justice looking down from heaven, in honour of this pope's government; so also NON QUÆRIT QUÆ SUA SUNT. — OPTIMO PRINCIPI ANNO VIII, &c. Some medals of Innocent XII are inscribed VIRTUS PROMOTA, ANNO V, struck in honour of this pope.—JUSTITIAE ET PIETATI, with the representation of the magnificent palace begun by Innocent X, and completed by Innocent XII; QUAESTUS MAGNUS CUM SUFFICIENTIA, and IMPETUS LAETIFICALIS, with the representation of two sick hospitals built by Innocent XII.

INO (Myth.) Ἰνὼ, a daughter of Cadmus and Harmonia, and wife of Athamas, king of Thebes, who being seized with a fury sent by Juno, dashed his son Learchus against a wall, and pursued his wife Ino, when she fled and threw herself from a rock into the sea, with her other son Melicerta, in her arms. The gods took pity on her and changed her into a sea deity, afterwards called Leucothoe. Hom. Odyss. l. 5; Apollod. l. 2; Cic. de Nat. Deor. l. 3; Hygin. Fab. 12; Paus. l. 1; Lactant. ad Theb. l. 1.

INOPUS (Geog.) a river of Delos, supposed by the inhabitants to be the Nile. Strab. 6; Plin. l. 2; Paus. l. 2.

INSTITOR, Henry (Biog.) a German and a Dominican, who was named by Innocent VIII, in 1484, inquisitor-general of Mayenne, Treves, and Cologne, was the author of, 1. 'Malleus Malificarum,' &c. which he wrote in conjunction with his colleague James Sprenger; published in 1484 at Lyons. 2. 'De Monarchia, sive de Potestate Imperatoris,' Venet. 1499; besides a treatise against Errors in the Sacrament.

INSUBRES (Geog.) the inhabitants of Insubria, a country of Gallia Cisalpina, at the north of the Po, between the rivers Ticinus and Addua. These people were conquered by the Romans, and their country became a province when Milan and Pavia were built.

INSULÆ (Geog.) or Insula, a town of Belgium, now Lisle, or Lille. [Vide Lisle]

INTAPHERNES (Hist.) Ἰνταφέρνης, one of the seven Persian noblemen, who conspired against Smerdis; and, being afterwards disappointed at not obtaining the crown, he fomented seditions against Darius, for which he was put to death. Herod. l. 3.

INTEMELIUM (Geog.) a town of Liguria on the Ligusticus Sinus. Cic. ad Fam. l. 8, c. 14.

INTERAMNA (Geog.) an ancient town of Umbria, now Teramo, the birth-place of the historian Tacitus, and also of the emperor of the same name. It derived its name from being situated inter amnes between two branches of the river Nar. Varro de Ling. Lat. l. 4; Tac. Hist. l. 2.

INTERIAN de Ayala, John (Biog.) a Spanish monk, who died in 1730, at the age of 74, published a work entitled 'Pictor Christianus Eruditus,' fol. 1720.

INVEGES, Augustino (Biog.) a Sicilian historian and antiquary, of the order of the Jesuits, was born at Siacca, a town of Sicily in 1593, and died in 1677, leaving, 1. A History of Palermo in three volumes, folio; the first of which was entitled 'Palermo Antiquo,' published in 1649; the second 'Palermo Sacro,' 1650; and the third 'Palermo Nobile,' 1651. 2. 'La Cartagine Siciliana,' 4to. Palermo, 1661. 3. 'Ad Annales Siculos Præliminaris Apparatus,' 4to. Panorm. 1709.

IO (Myth.) Ἰὼ, a daughter of Inachus, or, according to some, of Jasus, or Pirenes, and priestess of Juno at Argos, of whom Jupiter becoming enamoured changed her into a heifer; and in that disguise, notwithstanding the jealous vigilance of Juno and her keeper Argus, she escaped, and wandered over the earth. At length she came to Egypt, and being restored to her original form as a woman, she brought forth Epaphus. She afterwards married Telegonus, king of Egypt, or, according to some, Osiris; and at her death was worshipped by her subjects as a goddess under the name of Isis.
Flac. Argon. l. 7.

JOAB (Bibl.) יואב, son of Zeruiah, David's sister, and brother to Abishai and Asahel, was one of the most valiant and skilful generals in David's time. He slew Abner and Absalom, but afterwards joined in the conspiracy with Adonijah, David's eldest son, to get the throne from Solomon, for which he was put to death by order of the latter at the altar to which he had fled for protection.

JOACHIM (Hist.) the name of two electors of Brandenburgh, both of whom favoured the reformation at its commencement.

Joachim I, surnamed Nestor Germanicus, was born in 1484, named Elector in 1499, and died in 1535, after having displayed much talent in his government.

Joachim II, son of the preceding, was born in 1505, established Protestantism in his dominions in 1539, commanded the Imperial army against the Turks in 1542, and died in 1571 of poison, as is supposed, after having acted a politic part amidst the conflicts of the times.

Joachim (Ecc.) a Cestertian monk, abbot of Corazzo, and afterwards of Flora, in Calabria, was born at Celico, near Cozensa in 1130, travelled on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and, after founding several monastries, died in 1202. His works were published in folio at Venice in 1516, and his life was written by Gervaise, a Dominican, in 2 vols. 12mo. 1745. As he advanced many heterodox notions in his works, he wrote a Declaration of his faith two years before his death, in which he desired that they might undergo the revisal of the abbots of his order, and whatever was censurable might be submitted to the censure of the church. Agreeably to this declaration, his commentary on the Proverbs was condemned by Innocent III, and two other works were afterwards condemned by Alexander IV in 1256, and by the council of Arles in 1260, without, as is said, reflecting on the orthodoxy of the author.

Joachim, George (Biog.) a mathematician, surnamed Rheticus, because he was a native of a village named Feldkirk, in Rhætia, or the Grisons, was born in 1514, and died in 1576. He published the work of his master Copernicus, 'De Revolutionibus,' fol. Norimb. 1543; besides which he wrote 'Narratio de Libris Revolutionum Copernici,' 4to. Gedan. 1540, and afterwards inserted in the editions of Copernicus' works; to which he had lent his aid. He likewise composed and published 'Ephemerides.'

JOACHIN (Bibl.) vide Jehoiachin.

JOAH (Bibl.) יואח, son of Zimmah, and grandson of Gershom, the Levite. 1 Chron. vi.

Joah, secretary to king Josiah, was employed in repairing the temple. 2 Chron. xxxiv.

Joah, son of Asaph, was sent by Hezekiah, king of Judah, to answer Rabshekah. 2 Kings xviii.

JOAKIM (Bibl.) יוקים, vide Jehoiakim.

Joakim (Hist.) a high-priest of the Jews, succeeded his father Joshua, son of Jozedek, after the return from the captivity. Joseph. Antiq. l. 12, c. 5.

Joakim, otherwise Eliakim, a high-priest of the Jews in the reigns of Manasseh and Josiah.

Joakim, 'Ιωακείμ, husband of St. Anne, and father to the blessed Virgin, is not mentioned in Scripture by that name, but is so called in an apocryphal book quoted by Gregory of Nyssene, &c.

JOAN (Hist.) the name of several queens and princesses of France, Navarre, &c.

Joan of Navarre, queen of France and Navarre, the only daughter and heir of Henry I, king of Navarre, was married in 1284 to Philip of France, and died in 1304, after having founded the celebrated college of Navarre.

Joan of Burgundy, queen of France, and eldest daughter of Otho IV, count Palatine of Burgundy, was married in 1306 to Philip V, king of France, and died in 1325, after having founded at Paris the college of Burgundy.

Joan of Evreux, eldest daughter of Louis of France, count of Evreux, was the third wife of Charles IV, king of France, and died in 1370.

Joan of Burgundy, third daughter of Robert II, duke of Burgundy, was married in 1313 to Philip of Valois, afterwards Philip VI of France, crowned with her husband in 1328, and died in 1348.

Joan, daughter of William XII, count of Auvergne, and queen of France, was married in 1350 to king John, surnamed the Good, and died about 1360, at the age of 40.

Joan, queen of France, one of the most beautiful princesses in her time, daughter of Peter I, duke of Bourbon, was married in 1349 to king Charles V, and died in child-bed in 1377, at the age of 40. It is said that at the assembly of the states of Paris, she took her seat by the side of the king.

Joan of France, queen and Duchess of Berri, was born in 1464, and died in 1504, after having instituted the first order of the Annunciation, and that of the Ten Virtues of the Holy Virgin. She was interred in the church of the Annunciation of Bourges; but her body was burnt by the Huguenots in 1562, and the ashes scattered by the wind. Her canonization, which had been frequently solicited by the kings and prelates of France, was accomplished in 1743.

Joan of France, queen of Navarre, and only daughter of Louis X, was married in 1316 to Philip, count d'Evreux and died in 1349, leaving a high reputation for piety.

Joan of France, queen of Navarre, daughter of king John, was born in 1343, married in 1351 to Charles II, surnamed the Wicked King of Navarre, and died in 1373.

Joan, d'Albret, queen of Navarre, daughter and heir of Henry d'Albret II, king of Navarre, was married in 1548 to Anthony of Bourbon, by whom she had, among other children, Henry IV, king of France and Navarre. She died in 1572, not without suspicion of being poisoned, having taken an active part in the troubles of the times against the Romish church.

Joan I, queen of Jerusalem, Naples, and Sicily, daughter of Charles of Sicily, was born in 1326, succeeded her father at the age of nine; and, after the death of her first husband, Andrew of Hungary, who was strangled in 1345 through her instigation, as is suspected, she married Lewis of Tarentum, her cousin, who dying in 1632, she soon after married James of Arragon, Infanta of Majorca, whose death in 1375 left her at liberty to make a fourth choice, which she did in 1376, of Otho of Brunswick. Having no children she adopted her relation, Charles de Duras, who, instigated by the king of Hungary, revolted against her, in consequence of which she named for her successor Lewis of France, duke of Anjou. A civil war ensued, in which Charles, obtaining Naples, seized the queen, and put her to death in 1382, in the 58th year of her age, and the 39th of her reign.

JOAN II, likewise named Jeannette, grand-niece of Joan I, and daughter of Charles III, duke of Duras above-mentioned, was born in 1371, married to William of Austria in 1404, and after his death to James of Bourbon, and died in 1435, after having disgraced herself by her debaucheries.

JOAN of Spain, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, was married in 1496 to Philip, archduke of Austria, by whom she was the mother of the emperor Charles V. She died a lunatic in 1555, at the age of 73, after having been distinguished for her talent. The effigy of this princess is given, as in the annexed figure.

JOAN, Infanta and regent of Portugal, daughter of Alphonsus V, king of Portugal, was born in 1452, appointed by her father regent of the kingdom, while he was carrying on the war against the Moors in 1470; and, after filling this high post with great advantage to the nation, and honour to herself, she retired to the monastery of Odwellas, where she died in 1490.

JOAN of Austria, daughter of the emperor Charles V, was married in 1553 to John, prince of Portugal, son of John III, by whom she was the mother of Don Sebastian, and died in 1578. The effigy of this queen is given as in the annexed figure.

JOAN of Austria, grand duchess of Tuscany, and daughter of the emperor Ferdinand I, was born at Prague in 1547, married in 1565 Francis de Medicis, grand duke of Tuscany, and died in 1578. She was the mother of Maria de Medicis, the wife of Henry IV of France.

JOAN, Countess of Montfort, distinguished herself in the 14th century by her courage, having, after the death of her husband, John IV, duke of Brittany, maintained a successful war against the count of Blois, whom she compelled to raise the siege of Hennebon.

JOAN of Valois, daughter of Charles of France, count of Valois, married William I, count of Hainault, Holland, and Zealand, and died in 1342 in a monastery, after having brought about a treaty between the kings of France and England, who were on the point of engaging in battle. She left many monuments of her piety and virtue.

JOAN of Arragon, wife of Ascanius Colonna, prince of Tagliacozzi, died in 1577, after having distinguished herself by her talents and her courage, particularly during the contest carried on by the Colonnas against Paul IV.

JOAN of Arc, a celebrated heroine, known also by the name of the Maid of Orleans, was born at Dawremi, in Lorraine, in 1412, of obscure parents, and while a servant at an inn she gave it out that she saw in a vision St. Michael, the tutelary saint of France, who ordered her to raise the siege of Orleans, which the English were then besieging, and to assist at the coronation of the king at Rheims. This story reaching the ears of the king, he availed himself of her services; and Joan, at the head of the French armies, inspired such enthusiasm by her ardour and her courage, that the siege of Orleans was raised, the English were defeated, and the French monarch was enabled to proceed to Rheims, where this heroine assisted at his coronation. For these services she was ennobled by the king, and assumed the name of Lys, and received large grants of land; but while she was preparing to obtain fresh victories, she was wounded at the siege of Paris, and being taken prisoner at Compeigne she was accused of witchcraft, and condemned by the sentence of the University of Paris to be burnt; which shameful sentence was executed upon her at Rouen in 1431, where she suffered with as much heroism as she had fought and conquered. [Vide Plate XIII]

JOANNES, Damascenes, one of the Greek fathers, who wrote a hymn on the birth of our Saviour. His works were edited at Paris, in 2 vols. fol. 1712.

JOANNICIUS, S. (Ecc.) a hermit of Bithynia, who died in 845, at the age of 90, or, according to some, of 116, was at first engaged in the profession of arms, which he left to follow a religious life, and distinguished himself by his zeal in defence of the Catholic faith.

JOANNICIUS, Clement (Biog.) a poet, who was honoured with a crown of laurel by the emperor Maximilian I, wrote the lives of the kings of Poland in elegiac verse; besides some poems, which he entitled 'Tristia,' in imitation of those of Ovid.

JOASH (Bibl.) יואש, son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, was rescued by Jehoshabath from the destruction which awaited him at the hands of the impious Athaliah. Seven years after he was proclaimed king; but was killed by his own subjects, at a time that the Syrians were in possession of Jerusalem. 2 Kings xi. &c.

JOASH, king of Israel, son and successor of Jehoahaz, was declared king in his father's life, A. M. 3163, A. C. 841, and died after a reign of 18 years, in which he routed Amaziah, king of Judah, and entering Jerusalem, ordered the walls to be demolished. 2 Kings xiii. &c.

JOASH, father of Gideon. Jud. vi.

JOASH, son of Amalek, was ordered by king Ahab to imprison the prophet Micaiah. 1 Kings xxii.

JOASH, a descendant of Shelah, son of Judah, 1 Chron.; also a superintendant of the oil cellars. 1 Chron. xxvii.

JOAZAR (Hist.) or Azar, brother to Mariamne, the wife of Herod the Great, succeeded Matthias, son of Theophilus, as high-priest, A. M. 4000, in the year of our Saviour's birth, according to the vulgar computation. He was succeeded by his brother Eleazar, A. M. 4004; created high-priest a second time in 4010; and enjoyed this dignity till 4016, when he was deposed by Cyrenius, governor of Syria. Joseph. Antiq. l. 18, c. 3.

JOB (Bibl.) יוב, third son of Issachar. Gen. xlvi.

JOB, איוב, a patriarch of Uz, in East Edom, well known for his sufferings and his patience, was restored to honour and dignity after enduring the greatest afflictions, and died about A. M. 2660, although the exact period of his death is much disputed. The book which bears his name, and contains his history, is attributed by some to Isaiah, and by others to Moses; but these appear to be altogether unfounded conjectures.

JOBAB (Bibl.) יובב, son of Zerah, and grandson to Esau, Gen. xxxvi.; also the son of Joktan, Gen. x.; a king of Madn, Josh. xi; son of Gera, of Benjamin, 1 Chron.; and son of Elpaal, of the same tribe, 1 Chron. viii.

JOBATES (Myth.) Ἰοβάτης, a king of Lycia, who was succeeded by Bellerophon, his son-in-law, to whom he had given his daughter Philonoe in marriage. Apollod. l. 2.

JOBERT, Louis (Biog.) a Jesuit, and native of Paris, was born in 1647, and died in 1719, leaving, besides several religious works, a piece, entitled 'La Science de Medailles,' of which the best edition is that of Paris, in 2 vols. 12mo. 1739.

JOCASTA (Myth.) Ἰοκάστη, daughter of Menœcius, married Laius, king of Thebes, by whom she had Œdipus. On the death of her husband, who was unwittingly killed, according to an oracle, by his son, she married the latter without knowing who he was, and had by him Eteocles, and Polynices, &c. On discovering that she had married her own son she hanged herself in despair. She is called by Homer Epicaste. *Hom. JOCELYN (Her.) the family name of the earl of Roden. This family is descended from the Jocelyns of Brittany, of which was Giles Jocelyn, who came into England in the time of Edward the Confessor. Robert Jocelyn, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and 12 times Lord Justice of that kingdom, was created baron Newport in 1743, and advanced in 1755 to the dignity of viscount Jocelyn. His son Robert, the second viscount, was farther advanced in 1771 to that of earl of Roden. [Vide Roden]

JOCELYN, Viscount, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Roden.

JOCHEBED (Bibl.) יוכבד, wife of Amram, and mother of Miriam, Moses, and Aaron. Exod. ii.; Numb. xxvi.

JOCONDUS (Biog.) or Jucundus, John, an antiquary, architect, and critic, who died about 1530, at a very advanced age, built two bridges over the Seine at Paris, namely, that of Notre Dame, and the little bridge; besides the part which he took in the structure of St. Peter's. He also edited the Letters of Pliny the younger, and the work of Julius Obsequens on Prodigies, both of which were printed by Aldus, in 8vo. 1508; besides a fine edition of Vitruvius, printed by Aldus in 1511.

JODELLE, Stephen (Biog.) lord of Lymodin, was born at Paris in 1532, and died in 1573, exceedingly poor, although he might have been independent if he had cultivated his interest at court. A volume of his works was published at Paris in 4to. in 1574, and at Lyons, 12mo. 1597, containing some dramatic pieces, besides poems, sonnets, &c.

JOEL (Bibl.) יואל, the prophet Samuel's eldest son, who was made a judge over Israel. 1 Sam. viii.

JOEL, son of Josibiah, of Simeon; also a son of Izrahiah, of Issachar; a valiant man in David's army; son of Gershom, a Levite; and son of Pedaiah, of Manasseh. 1 Chron. iv. vii. xi. xv. xxvii.

JOEL, Ἰωὴλ, son of Pethuel, the second of the minor prophets, was, it is said, of the tribe of Reuben, and city of Bethoron; but at what time he prophesied is not certain. His prophecy contains three chapters, wherein he speaks of the captivity of Babylon; of the descent of the Holy Ghost, as proved by St. Peter in the Acts; and also of the day of judgment. Acts ii. 6.

JOELAH (Bibl.) יועאלה, son of Jeroboam, one of David's party. 1 Chron. xii. 7.

JOEZER (Bibl.) יועזר, a gallant officer of David's army. 1 Chron. xii.

JOHAH (Bibl.) יוחא, a brave man in David's army. 1 Chron. xi.

JOHANAN (Bibl.) יוחנן, son of Careah, who gave Gedaliah intelligence that Ishmael was coming to kill him; but the former not believing him was massacred. 2 Kings xxv. and Jer. xli.

JOHANAN, son of Josiah, 1 Chron. iii.; also a descendant of David by Jerubabel.

JOHANAN, high-priest, son of Azariah the high-priest, and father of another Azariah, is supposed by some to be Jehoiada, the father of Zechariah. 1 Chron. vi. 9, 10; 2 Chron. xxiv. 11, &c.

JOHN (Bibl.) יחוחנה, the name of several illustrious persons, otherwise called Joannes, or Johanan.

JOHN the Baptist, the forerunner of our Lord Jesus Christ, and son of Zechariah and Elizabeth, was born A. M. 4000, about six months before Jesus Christ, and after having performed his ministry by preaching repentance, publishing the approach of the Messiah, and performing the rite of baptism on Jesus Christ in the river Jordan, as he had done towards his followers, he was cast into prison by Herod Antipas, because he had reproved him for marrying Herodias, his brother Philip's wife, and at length, through the art and contrivance of this woman, he was beheaded by the king's order, about the end of the 31st year of the Christian æra. It is said that this woman ordered the body of St. John to be thrown into the highways; but that it was taken by his disciples, and carried to Sebasta, a town in the province of Samaria. Julian the Apostate, afterwards ordered it to be dug up and burnt, and the ashes thrown to the wind, which was in part executed; but the Christians of Sebasta collected as many of the bones as they could, and after the death of this emperor the tomb of the saint was restored and honoured as before. The Greeks and Latins celebrate John's decapitation August 29. Matth. iii. xiv.; Mark i. vi.; Luke iv. ix.; Joseph. Antiq. l. 18; S. Iren. l. 3; Origen. Hom. 7; *S. JOHN, St., the Evangelist and Apostle, was a native of Bethsaida, son of Zebedee and Salome, and by profession a fisherman. He was brother to St. James the Major, and is supposed to have been about five or six and twenty years old when he began to follow Christ, A. D. 30. He is described as "The disciple whom Jesus loved," and, attending our Saviour even to the cross, he was afterwards honoured with extraordinary communications from our Lord after his ascent, and during his exile in the island of Patmos; these now form a part of Holy Scripture, under the name of "Revelations." He died quietly at Ephesus, in the hundredth year of the Christian æra, being then, according to Epiphanius, 98 or 99, according to others 104, 106, or 120. Three of his epistles are extant, besides several Apocryphal writings which are attributed to him. There was another St. John, surnamed the Elder, to distinguish him from the Evangelist; but others have supposed him to be the John Mark spoken of in the next article. S. Matt. xx. xxvi.; S. Mark iii.; S. John xx.; S. Luke ix.; Acts iii.; Galat. ii.; Euseb. in Chron. et Hist. l. 1; Tertull. de Anima, &c. c. 50; Hieron. de Scrip. Eccles.; *S. Epiphanius, S. Johan. JOHN, S. surnamed Mark, cousin to Barnabas, and a disciple of the apostles, was the son of a Christian woman named Mary, who had a house in Jerusalem where the faithful and the apostles met. He accompanied Paul and Barnabas in their travels, and afterwards was with Timothy in Asia. The manner and time of his death are not known; but the Latin and Greek churches keep his festival on September 27. According to some he was bishop of Biblis; but, according to others, he was the same as Mark. Acts xii.; Epist. Phil. i.; Coloss. ii.; 2 Timoth. iv.; Hieron. de Vir. Illus.

JOHN (Hist.) the name of several emperors, kings, princes, and illustrious persons.

Emperors of this Name.

JOHN, first secretary to the emperor Honorius, got possession of the empire at the death of his master in 423, and reigned over Italy and Gaul for two years, notwithstanding the forces which were sent against him by Theodosius the Younger; but at length he was killed at Ravenna, by means of Aspar, a distinguished general.

John I, surnamed Zimisces, who was of an illustrious family, seized on the throne of Constantinople by the assassination of Nicephorus Phocas, at the instigation of the empress Theophania in 969, and was poisoned by his cupbearer, at the instigation of the eunuch Basil in 976. Curopalat. et Cedren. in Annal. Græc.

John II, Comnenus, succeeded his father Alexis Comnenus on the throne of Constantinople in 1118, and died in 1143, at the age of 55, in consequence of a wound received from a poisoned arrow in the chace. He married Irene, a princess of Hungary, and was successful in his wars against the Saracens and other barbarians. Nicet. Chron.; Gul. Tur. l. 15; Otho. Frising. l. 7.

John III, Ducas, succeeded Theodore Lascaris, his father-in-law, in 1222, reigned at Nice while the Latins were in possession of Constantinople, and died in 1255, at the age of 62, after having in vain attempted to regain his imperial seat. Pachymer. Hist.; Gregor. Hist.; Georg. Logothet. in Chron. Const.

John IV, Lascaris, son of Theodore the Younger, was crowned after the death of his father in 1259, at the age of seven or eight; but was soon after confined by the usurper Michael Paleologus, in a castle of Bithynia, where he was living in 1282, after having had his eyes put out. Georg. Pachym. Hist.; Gregor. Hist. &c.

John V, Cantacuzenus, vide Cantacuzenus.

John VI, Palæologus, succeeded his father Andronicus the Younger, on the throne of Constantinople in 1341, after the resignation of his father-in-law John Cantacuzenus, and died in 1390, at the age of 60, after having purchased peace with the Turks, by the payment of a large sum, and been involved in a civil war with his son Andronicus, by whom he was imprisoned.

John VII, Palæologus, succeeded to the throne of Constantinople on the abdication of his father in 1425, and died in 1448, after having been unfortunate in his opposition to the Turkish invaders. Chalcondyl. Hist.; Onuphr. in Chron. &c.

King of England.

John, surnamed Lackland, the fourth son of Henry II, paved his way to the English throne by the murder of his nephew Arthur, the rightful heir; but knew so little how to wield the sceptre, that he quarrelled with the pope, and his own subjects the barons, and died in 1216, after being compelled to sign Magna Charta, which has served as the basis for the present popular governmen . [Vide Plate III]

Kings of France.

John, son of Lewis X, who was born after his father's death, and died eight days after his birth, was nevertheless proclaimed king of France and Navarre, for which reason he has been reckoned by some authors among the kings of France.

John, surnamed the Good, succeeded his father, Philip of Valois, in 1350, at the age of 40, and died in 1364, a prisoner in England, where he had lived since his unfortunate defeat at the battle of Poictiers. The effigy of this prince, who was renowned for bravery and liberality, is given as in the annexed figure.

Kings of Arragon and Navarre.

John I, son of Peter IV, occupied the throne of Arragon alone in 1388, and died in 1395, after a troublesome reign, which was disturbed by the seditions of his subjects. Marian. Hist.; Imhoff. Hist. &c.

John II, succeeded to the throne of Navarre in 1420, and to that of Arragon in 1458, and died in 1479, in the 90th year of his age. Mariana, Imhoff, &c.

John III, son of Alain, lord of Albret, succeeded to the throne by his marriage with Catherine de Foix, sister and heir of Francis Phœbus, king of Navarre, in 1484, but was dispossessed of his kingdom by Ferdinand, king of Spain, and died in 1516 in a village of Bearn, whither he had fled from the usurper. Mariana, Mezeray, Imhoff, &c.

King of Bohemia.

John, son of the emperor Henry VII, of the house of Luxemburg, was elected to the throne of Bohemia in 1309, and was killed at the battle of Creci, where, notwithstanding he was totally blind, he fought with distinguished valour on the side of the French.

Kings of Castille.

John I, succeeded his father, Henry II, in 1379, when only 21 years of age, and died by a fall from his horse while in the chace in 1390, when his son, Henry III, succeeded. The effigy of this and the following prince are given as in the annexed figures. Rod. Tolet. de Reb. Hist.; Mariana; Imhoff.

John II, son of Henry III, was proclaimed king of Castille in 1406, when only 22 months old, and died in 1454, after having been particularly successful against the Moors.

Kings of Sweden and Denmark.

John I, king of Sweden, succeeded Eric X in 1218, and died in 1222, when he was succeeded by Eric XI. Ol. Mag. Hist.; Mart. Zeill. Nov. Descript. Suec.

John II, king of Denmark in 1482, was likewise crowned king of Sweden in 1483, and died in 1513, when he was succeeded by Christiern II. Olaus Magnus, Chrytræus, Imhoff, &c.

John III, duke of Finland, and son of Gustavus I, was crowned king of Sweden in 1568, and died in 1592, after having made a fruitless attempt to re-establish popery in that kingdom. He was succeeded by Sigismund Augustus.

Kings of Scotland.

John I, king of Scotland, vide Baliol.

John II, son of Robert II, took the name of Robert III.

Kings of Hungary.

John, Corvinus, or Huniades, vide Huniades.

John de Zapol, vaivode of Transylvania, was crowned king of Hungary by a part of the states of the kingdom in 1526, in opposition to Ferdinand of Austria, who was crowned by the other part; but, after carrying on a war for a long time, peace was concluded between the rival candidates, which was quickly followed by the death of John de Zapol in 1540.

Kings of Jerusalem and Cyprus.

John de Brienne, king of Jerusalem and emperor of Constantinople, entered on the crusades with the French, who took Constantinople in 1204, and so distinguished himself by his valour that he was offered the crown of Jerusalem after the death of Amauri. This he was obliged to cede in 1226 to the emperor Frederick II, after which he was chosen by the French barons governor of Constantinople during the minority of Baldwin II, and, taking the title of emperor, died in 1237.

John I, king of Cyprus, eldest son of Hughes II, king of Cyprus and Jerusalem, succeeded his father in 1281, and died in 1283.

John II, or Janus de Lusignan, son of Peter II, king of Cyprus and Jerusalem, succeeded about 1411, and died in 1431, after having been worsted in several wars.

JOHN III, succeeded his father as king of Cyprus and Jerusalem in 1431, and died in 1458. Steph. Lusig. Hist. Cyp.; Gui. Hist. de Savoy, &c.

Kings of Poland.

JOHN, Albert, second son of Casimir IV, was born in 1459, elected in 1492, and died in 1501, after having distinguished himself more as the patron of learning than as a warrior.

JOHN, Casimir, vide Casimir V.

JOHN III, grand duke of Lithuania and Russia, &c. was raised to the throne of Poland by his valour, and maintained it till his death in 1696, at the age of 72, by continued acts of heroism during his wars with the Cossacks and rebellious Russians, the Turks, and other enemies.

Kings of Portugal.

JOHN I, surnamed the Father of his Country, was born in 1350, and died in 1433, after having waged war successfully in Africa. He was succeeded by his son Edward. Vasconcellos de Reg. Lusit.; Mariana, Imhoff, P. Anselme, &c.

JOHN II, surnamed the Great, was born in 1455, succeeded his father, Alphonsus V, in 1481, and died in 1495, after having used his utmost endeavours to establish Portuguese colonies in India and Africa. He was succeeded by Emanuel. Vasconcellos, Mariana, &c.

JOHN III, was born in 1502, succeeded his father Emanuel in 1521, and died in 1557, after having received ambassadors from David, king of Abyssinia, and sent missionaries thither at his request, and also to India, where he extended the Portuguese settlements. He was succeeded by Sebastian. Vasconcellos, &c.

JOHN IV, surnamed the Fortunate, son of Theodore, duke of Braganza, was born in 1604, and died in 1636, but not until he had effected the object of his ardent wish, which was to shake off the yoke of the Spaniards, which had been imposed upon his country at the death of Sebastian. He was succeeded by Alphonso VI.

JOHN V, succeeded Peter II in 1707, and died in 1750, at the age of 61. He espoused the cause of the allies in the Spanish succession, but distinguished himself most by cultivating the arts of peace.

Princes of this Name.

JOHN, surnamed Tristan, fourth son of St. Louis, was born in 1250, in the Holy Land soon after the imprisonment of the latter, and received this name from the queen his mother in consequence of the affliction under which she then laboured.

JOHN of France, duke of Berry, and son of king John, distinguished himself by his valour and conduct at the battle of Poictiers, and died in 1416, highly respected for his many virtues.

JOHN of Gaunt, or Ghent, duke of Lancaster, the third son of Edward III, was born at Ghent in 1340, and early distinguished himself by his valour, particularly in the assistance which he rendered his brother, the Black Prince, during his wars in France. In consequence of his marriage with Constance, the natural daughter of Peter the Cruel, he laid claim to the throne of Castile, but, being successfully opposed by Henry of Transtamare, he resigned his claim to his only daughter Constance, who, in 1386, married the heir-apparent to that kingdom. He died in 1399, and his son Henry succeeded to the English throne, after the deposition of Richard II. His third wife was Catherine Swinford, the governess of his children, and the sister of Chaucer's wife; a circumstance which gave the poet a double claim to his patronage.

JOHN, duke of Burgundy, surnamed Fearless, was born in 1371, and, after displaying great valour against the Turks, he returned to France, where he promoted sedition and civil war against the Dauphin, afterwards Charles VII; murdered Louis, duke of Orleans, and gained the entire mastery at the court of the weak Charles VI. In 1419 he was drawn into a conference with the dauphin on the bridge de Montereau-Faut-Yonne, when he was assassinated by Tannegui du Chatel, one of the old domestics of the late duke of Orleans.

JOHN I, duke of Bourbon, was born in 1380, and entrusted with the command of the army against the English in 1415, but, being taken at the head of the advanced guard at the battle of Agincourt, he was brought to England, where he died.

JOHN II, duke of Bourbon, and constable of France, was at the taking of Caen, Bourdeaux, and other places from the English, and died in 1483, after having assisted at the consecration of Louis XI and Charles VIII.

JOHN of Bourbon, count de la Marche, and son of James I, duke of Bourbon, distinguished himself in the wars of those times, particularly against the English, and died in 1393.

JOHN I, duke d'Alençon, was born in 1385, served in the army of Charles VI in 1404, when he declared for the house of Orleans against that of Burgundy, and commanded the army at the battle of Agincourt, where he was killed.

JOHN II, duke d'Alençon, was born in 1409, began to signalize himself at the battle of Verneuil in 1424, where he was taken prisoner; but, after being set at liberty, he became one of the leaders of the sedition called La Praguerie, and was twice sentenced to lose his head on a charge of tampering with the enemies of his country, but was as often pardoned by the king, and finally died in his bed in 1474.

JOHN V, duke of Brittany, surnamed the Valiant, and the Conqueror, obtained these epithets from the series of successes which he obtained during a long war with the house of Blois, over which, although assisted by the whole force of France, he gained seven battles, and killed his rival, Charles de Blois, at the battle of Aurai in 1364.

JOHN VI, duke of Brittany, surnamed the Good, a prince of great valour and benevolence, distinguished himself in the service of Charles VII, particularly against the English, and died in 1446, much lamented by his subjects.

JOHN of Orleans, count of Dunois and Longueville, natural son of Louis of France, surnamed the Victorious and the Triumphant, was born in 1403, and, being early bred to the profession of arms, he had the opportunity of displaying his military talent, during the reign of Charles VII, against the English, over whom he obtained a series of successes that served to re-establish the French monarchy, and to rid France of its enemies. After taking the most important places in Normandy he died in 1468.

JOHN, Don, of Austria, natural son of Charles V, was set at the head of the armies of his brother, Philip II, when he defeated the Moors of Grenada in 1570, gained the celebrated battle of Lepanto against the Turks in 1571, was made governor of the Netherlands in 1576, when he terminated a series of successes against the prince of Orange by gaining the famous battle of Gemblours in 1578, and died in the same year, at the early age of 32, by poison, as is supposed, administered by his enemies.

JOHN I, king of Congo, was baptized in 1490 at the solicitation of John II, king of Portugal, as was also his eldest son and the principal nobility of the court; but the introduction of Christianity was, notwithstanding, retarded by the opposition which it met with from different quarters. Marmol. L'Afrique, l. 9.

JOHN, Gaston de Medicis, younger son of Cosmo III, was born in 1671, acknowledged as grand duke of Tuscany after the death of his father, and, dying without issue, the sovereignty of Tuscany, which had been in the family of the Medicis for 200 years, passed to the house of Lorraine.

JOHN, Basilowitz, vide Basilowitz.

JOHN O'Neal, vide O'Neal.

Other Distinguished Persons of this Name.

JOHN, the father of Matthias, the celebrated Maccabee, descended from the priests of Joiarib's family. 1 Macc. ii.

JOHN, surnamed Gaddis, son of Mattathias above-mentioned, and brother of Judas, Jonathan, and Simon Maccabæus, was treacherously killed by the sons of Jambri, as he was conducting the baggage belonging to his brethren the Maccabees to the Nebathites, their allies. 1 Macc. ix.

JOHN, Hircanus, son of Simon Maccabæus, was made governor of the sea-coast of Judæa, where he defeated Cendebeus, general of Antiochus Sidetes, and being acknowledged high-priest, and prince of his nation after his father's death, he contrived to make a peace with Antiochus, and died A. M. 3898, A. C. 106, after having governed 29 years. 2 Macc. iii.; Joseph Antiq. l. 13.

JOHN (Ecc.) the name of several popes, martyrs, prelates, &c.

Popes of this Name.

JOHN I, a Tuscan, succeeded Hormisdas in 523, and died in confinement at Ravenna in 526, having been imprisoned by Theodoric, an Arian prince. He was succeeded by Felix III or IV. Marcellin. in Chron.; Anastas. in Joan.; S. Greg. Dial. l. 3, c. 2.

JOHN II, surnamed Mercurius, son of Projectus, and a Roman by birth, arrived at the pontificate in 532, after Boniface II, and died in 535, after having opposed the Nestorians and Eutychians. He had S. Agapetus for a successor.

JOHN III, surnamed Catelin, son of Anastasius, governed the church after Pelagius I, and died in 573, after having contributed much to the decoration of churches and cemeteries. He was succeeded by Benedict I.

JOHN IV, surnamed the Scholastic, succeeded Severinus in 613, and died in the second year of his pontificate, leaving an epistle which he wrote to the prelates of Scotland, touching the celebration of the Easter. Theodore I was elected in his place. Bed. Hist. l. 2; Baron. Annal.

JOHN V, son of Syriacus, and a native of Antioch, after filling many important posts, was raised to the pontificate in 685, and died after governing the church a year and eleven days. He was succeeded by Conon. Anastas. in Vit.; Ciacon. in Joan. V.

JOHN VI, a Greek by nation, was made pope after Sergius I in 701, and governed the church upwards of two years, during which he repaired the churches of St. Andrew's, S. Peter, and S. Paul. He had John VII for a successor. Anastas. in Vit.; Baronius, &c.

JOHN VII, a Greek, and son of Plato, succeeded John VI in 705, and died in 707, when he was succeeded by Sisinnus.

JOHN VIII, a Roman, and son of Gundus, succeeded Adrian II in 872, crowned the emperor Charles the Bald in 875, held a council at Troyes in 878, but was recalled to oppose the invasion of the Saracens, who, however, were so successful as to oblige him to pay an annual tribute. He afterwards, at the request of Basil the emperor, sanctioned the usurpation of Photius in the patriarchate of Constantinople, but, repenting of this step, he excommunicated the usurper, and died in 882, when he was succeeded by Martin I. Baronius supposes that this weak conduct must have given rise to the idle tale of John VIII being a woman, well known by the name of Pope Joan, a tale which, though now thought perfectly ridiculous, was for a long time seriously believed by some, and denied by others.

JOHN IX, a native of Tivoli, and son of Rampoald, succeeded Theodore II in 901, and died in 905, having Benedict IV for a successor.

JOHN X, a Roman by birth, and archbishop of Ravenna, succeeded Laudon in 913, through the intrigues of Theodora, a powerful princess, and was strangled in prison by Marosia, her daughter, in 928, in order that she might place in the papal chair her natural son by Sergius III. This John succeeded in driving the Saracens out of Italy.

JOHN XI, natural son of Sergius III by the infamous Marosia above-mentioned, wife of Guy of Tuscany, was made pope at the age of 25, by the intrigues of his mother, in 931, and died in 936, in the castle of St. Angelo, where he was confined with her by his brother Alberic. He was succeeded by Leo VII. Luitprand. l. 3; Du Chesne, Vies de Papes.

JOHN XII, a noble Roman, named Octavianus, son of Alberic, was made prince of the city after his father, succeeded Agapetus in the papal chair in 955, was deposed for his vices by a council held in 963, and, after having violently got possession of the papal chair, he was killed in 964 by an insulted husband, whose bed he had defiled. Leo VIII was elected after his deposition. Luitprand. l. 6; Baronius, Platina, &c.

JOHN XIII, a Roman, and bishop of Narni, succeeded Benedict V in 965, against the wishes of the Roman people, by whom he was driven from the city, but re-established by the emperor Otho. He afterwards presided at a council of Ravenna in 967, and died in 972, when Domnus or Domnion II was elected.

JOHN XIV, named Peter, bishop of Pavia, succeeded Benedict VII in 984, and died in the same year, of poison or grief, in the castle of St. Angelo, where he was imprisoned by Boniface VIII. He was succeeded by JOHN XV, son of Leo IV, who died in 996, in the castle of St. Angelo, where he was besieged by Crescentius. There was an antipope of this name, the son of Robert, whom some have called John XVI, who did not hold the pontificate more than a month; and a second antipope, named Philagathus, who died in 998, after having had his ears and his hands cut off by Crescentius.

JOHN XVI, a Roman, was elected by a faction after Sylvester II in 1003, and died six months after.

JOHN XVII, succeeded the above-mentioned John XVI, and, resigning his dignity for the retirement of a monastery, died in 1009.

JOHN XVIII, son of Gregory, count of Tusculum, succeeded Benedict VIII in 1024, and died in 1033, after having crowned the emperor Conrad II. He was succeeded by Benedict IX.

JOHN XIX, named John Peter, a native of Lisbon, and bishop of Frescati, succeeded Adrian V in 1276, and died eight months after, leaving some works as an author; namely, 'Summulæ Logicales;' 'Parva Logicalia;' 'Dialectica;' 'Epistolæ;' 'Canones Medicinæ,' &c. He had Nicholas III for a successor.

JOHN XX, or, according to some, XXII, named James d'Euse, a native of Cahors, succeeded Clement V in 1316, and died in 1334, after having founded several abbies, and erected some bishoprics in central towns. He was succeeded by Benedict XII.

JOHN XXI, or XXIII, a Neapolitan, named Balthasar Cossa, succeeded Alexander V in 1410, but resigned his dignity on condition that Gregory XII and Benedict XII whould give up their claims. Nevertheless he afterwards attempted to reassume the office and insignia of the sovereign pontiff, but was deposed and imprisoned, until the election of Martin V, whom he acknowledged, and by whom he was treated with great kindness. He died soon after in 1417, leaving behind him the reputation of a worthless and immoral man.

Martyrs, Professors, Prelates, &c.

JOHN, St. a native of Nicomedia, was roasted on a gridiron in 303, during the persecution of Diocletian.

JOHN, Chrysostom, vide Chrysostom.

JOHN, St. a patriarch of Alexandria, and a native of Cyprus, was elevated to that see in 610, and died in 616, leaving a high reputation for charity. It is he who gave the name to the order of St. John of Jerusalem, because the church of their first hospital in that city had been so called after him, although, subsequently, they chose St. John the Baptist for their patron.

John Damascenus, vide Damascenus.

John, St. bishop of Naples, was raised to that see in 842, and governed it with distinguished zeal and piety until his death in 853.

John, de Matha, St. first patriarch of the order of the Holy Trinity, and the Redemption of Captives, was born in 1160, and died in 1213.

Patriarchs of Jerusalem.

John I, succeeded Benjamin about 120, at the time that this church was exceedingly troubled. Euseb. in Chron.

John II, a monk, and a follower of Macedonius, abjured his errors, obtained the patriarchal see after St. Cyril in 386, and died in 416. Hieron. Epist. 61; S. August. Ep. 252; Theodoret. Hist. l. 5; Idat. in Fast. et in Chron.; Gennadius; Baronius; Usser. Antiq. Brit.

'A Paraphrase with Notes on the Book of Psalms, according to the Translation retained in our Common Prayer Book,' 1706. 2. 'The Clergyman's Vade-Mecum,' 1708, which went through five editions, and was followed in 1709 by a second part. 3. 'Propitiatory Oblation in the Eucharist,' 1714. 4. 'The Unbloody Sacrifice,' Part I, in 1717; Part II, in 1720. 5. 'A Collection of Ecclesiastical Laws.'

JOHNSON, or Jansen, Cornelius, vide Jansen.

JOHNSON, Martin, a seal engraver and painter, who died at the beginning of James II's reign, excelled in landscapes, some of which are still preserved in the cabinets of the curious.

JOHNSON, Charles, a dramatic writer, originally bred to the law, who died in 1748, was the author of 19 pieces, enumerated in the 'Biographia Dramatica.'

JOHNSON, Maurice, an antiquary, of a respectable family of Spalding, who died in 1755, collected large memoirs for the History of Carausius, of which an account is given in the History of the Spalding Society; as also of his communications to the Antiquarian Society at London.

JOHNSON, Samuel, one of the most distinguished writers of this or any other nation, was born at Lichfield on the 7th of September, 1709, and educated at Lichfield School, where he had among his school-fellows Dr. James and Dr. Taylor. He was afterwards one year at Stourbridge School, and after passing two years in unsettled studies at home, he entered, in 1728, at Pembroke College, Oxford; but, from the limited circumstances of his parents, was unable to take his degree. He begun his literary career by a translation of father Lobo's Voyage to Abyssinia, which was published in 1735; this was followed by his 'Irene,' in 1738; contributions to the Gentleman's Magazine, particularly the Debates in Parliament, under the name of the Senate of Lilliput, which begun in this year, and continued for several subsequent years; besides his poem of 'London,' published in the same year by Dodsley; 'A complete Vindication of the Licensers of the Stage,' &c. in 1739; a political tract, entitled 'Marmor Norfolciense,' &c. and 'Life of Savage,' of which two editions were quickly published, 'Miscellaneous Observations on the Tragedy of Macbeth,' &c. in 1745; 'Vanity of Human Wishes,' an imitation of Juvenal, in 1749; 'The Rambler,' begun Tuesday, March 20, 1749-50, and closed Saturday, March 14, 1752, the first two editions of which, when collected into volumes, he corrected with unusual care; several papers in the 'Adventurer,' in 1752; his 'Dictionary,' begun in 1747 and completed in 1754, and published in 2 vols. fol. 1755; his 'Dictionary abridged,' in 1756, and also 'The Literary Magazine,' &c. which he superintended; and some Essays in the 'Universal Visitor; Essays, entitled 'The Idler,' published in 1758, first in Newberry's 'Universal Chronicle, or Weekly Gazette,' and afterwards collected into two volumes; 'Rasselas,' published in 1759, on the occasion of the death of his mother; his translation of a 'Dissertation on the Greek Comedy,' and some other smaller pieces about the same time; an edition of 'Shakspeare,' published in 1762, in 8 vols. 8vo.; several political pamphlets in defence of the government, between the years 1770 and 1775; his 'Tour into Scotland,' in 1773; and lastly, 'Lives of the Poets,' prefixed to a new edition of 'The English Poets,' in 1777, which closed the literary labours of this great man, who lived till the year 1784, when on the 13th of December, about seven in the evening, he breathed his last, so gently that some time elapsed before his death was perceived. A more copious list of his works may be found in 'Boswell's Life,' which exceeds in minuteness any piece of biography that ever was published; five large editions of this life, besides other lives written by different pens, sufficiently attest the high esteem in which the memory of Johnson is held by his countrymen. A monument was erected for him by public subscription, and placed in St. Paul's in 1796; but his works, which are the monuments of his masterly genius, will best preserve his memory to the end of time. [Vide Plate XXXIX]

JOHNSTON (Her.) the name of an ancient and brave family of Scotland, which divided itself into two branches; namely, the Johnstons of Annandale, and those of Caskieben; the former of whom once enjoyed the title of marquis of Annandale, which became dormant at the death of George, the third marquis. A branch of this family likewise now enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1795 on sir John Vanden Bemp de Johnston. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Joseph, the name of two emperors of Germany.

Joseph I, the fifteenth emperor of the House of Austria, was born at Vienna in 1678, crowned king of Hungary in 1687, elected king of the Romans in 1690, succeeded his father Leopold as emperor of Germany in 1705, and died in 1711, after having obtained signal successes over his enemies, in the war of the Spanish succession, of which he was the principal promoter.

Joseph II, son of Leopold and Maria Theresa, was born in 1741, elected king of the Romans in 1764, crowned emperor the following year at the decease of his father, and died in 1790, leaving his successors to suffer the evils of those innovations which he had so unguardedly promoted in his dominions.

Joseph, the name of two kings of Morocco.

Joseph I, son of Abu Techifien, second king of Morocco, of the race of the Almoravides, died in the year of the Hegira 503, A. D. 1113, after having made considerable conquests in Spain. He abandoned the city of Agmah, which was in the mountains, and built or completed Morocco, in the year of the Hegira 479, A. D. 1089, which was the commencement of his reign.

Joseph II, second king of Morocco, of the race of the Almohades, succeeded his father Abdulmumen in the year of the Hegira 551, A. D. 1161, and died from the wound of an arrow, with which he was shot at the siege of Santaren, in the year of the Hegira 569, A. D. 1179, after having shown great animosity to the Christians.

Joseph, king of Portugal, of the family of Braganza, ascended the throne in 1756, and died in 1777, at the age of 62, after an unfortunate and turbulent reign, in which Lisbon was swallowed up by an earthquake, and the Jesuits were expelled the kingdom on the charge of having formed a conspiracy to assassinate the king.

Joseph (Ecc.) the name of three patriarchs of Constantinople.

Joseph I, who was the first metropolitan of Ephesus, was elected to the patriarchate after Euthymus in 1416, and died suddenly in 1439. Onuph. in Chron.; Æn. Sylv. &c.

Joseph II, began to govern this see in 1460, but was driven from it because he had offended a Christian officer at the Turkish court. Crus. Turc. Græc. l. 1; Spond. Cont. Annal.

Joseph III, succeeded Dionysius in 1555, but was deposed in 1565, by an assembly of Greek prelates, on account of his haughtiness, and on a charge of simony.

Joseph of Palestine, commonly called Count Joseph, a Jew of a distinguished family of Tiberias, who was converted to Christianity in the time of the emperor Constantine, drew upon himself the hatred and ill-treatment of his countrymen, for the zeal which he displayed by the building of churches in many places. He was also a determined enemy to the Arians, who disturbed the peace of the church particularly at that period. He is supposed to have died about 355, at the age of 70, and is said to have been the first who found and published the original Hebrew of the Gospel according to St. Matthew. S. Epiphan. Hæres. c. 30.

JOSEPH, a bishop of Modon, who was at the council of Florence in 1438, wrote against Mark, of Ephesus, who had published a book on what had passed in that assembly. Bellarmin de Script. Eccles.; Spond. Ann. Christ. 1440.

JOSEPH of Exeter, or in Latin Josephus Iscanus, a native of Devonshire, accompanied Richard I to the Holy Land, according to Camden, and afterwards died bishop of Bourdeaux in the reign of Henry III. He is now known and honourably remembered as the author of several poetical works, particularly two epic poems in heroic verse, namely, one on the Trojan war, and the other entitled 'Antiochesis,' besides which he wrote Love Verses, Epigrams, &c. His poem 'De Bello Trojano Lib. V,' was published in 8vo. Basil. 1541, Lond. 1675; 4to. Francof. 1620 and 1623; and Amst. 1702. The remains of his 'Antiochesis,' are printed in Warton's 'History of English Poetry;' his Love Verses, &c. are lost.

JOSEPH, Father, an apostate monk, who, under the assumed name of Joshua, and at the head of 6000 banditti, attempted to extirpate the Catholic religion; but was cut off, with the greater part of his followers, in the execution of their projects.

JOSEPH of Paris, a capuchin, the friend and confident of Richelieu, rendered such essential service to Louis XIII by the employment of his emissaries, that he obtained at the solicitation of the king, a cardinal's hat at the moment of his death in 1638.

JOSEPH, Ben Gorion (Biog.) a Jewish author, who is supposed to have flourished in the 10th century, abridged the History of Josephus, with whom he is often confounded by the Rabbins. He has been taken by some for the Jew of this name mentioned under History. His History of the Jews was published with a Latin version by Gagnier, 4to. Oxon. 1706, and an edition in Hebrew and Latin appeared in 4to. 1707, at Gotha.

JOSEPH, Meir, a Rabbi, and native of Avignon, who died in 1554, wrote a book in Hebrew on the Annals of the Kings of France, and the Ottoman Sultans, &c.

JOSEPHUS, Flavius (Hist.) a warrior and historian of the Jews, who after bravely defending a small town of Judæa against Vespasian for seven weeks, was taken into the favour of the emperor, and was with him at the siege of Jerusalem, where he alleviated the miseries of his countrymen to the utmost of his power, and died A. D. 56. His works, consisting of Jewish Antiquities, a History of the Jewish War; two books against Apion, and in defence of the Jewish religion, have been frequently published with Latin versions, but the best editions are those of Hudson, 2 vols. fol. Oxon. 1720; and of Haverkamp, 2 vols. fol. Amst. 1727; they have also been translated into English by L'Estrange, and again by Whiston, in 2 vols. fol.

'Historiæ Societatis Jesu Pars quinta, Tomus posterior ab Anno 1591,' fol. Rom. 1710; this volume forms the last of the fifth part of this history, on which fathers Orlandin, Sacchini, and Poussines, had laboured before him; to the above list might be added others of less note, enumerated in Moreri.

JOUVENET, John (Biog.) an historical painter, was born at Rouen in 1644, and died in 1717, leaving several works which served to adorn the apartments of Versailles, and the Trianon, &c. Among his best pieces is the Annunciation, in the choir of the church of Paris.

JOVIUS, Paul (Biog.) or Paullo Giovio, an Italian historian, and a native of Como, was born in 1483, and died in 1552, leaving, among his historical works, 'Elogia Doctorum Virorum.' They were all printed in 2 vols. fol. Florent. 1550-52; and Argentorat, 1556. His other writings are a small tract entitled 'De Piscibus Romanis,' fol. 1524, and 8vo. 1527; 'The Lives of the Twelve Visconti, Lords and Dukes of Milan,' &c.

JOYE (Biog.) Joy, or Gee, a native of Bedford, and one of the first reformers, was educated at Cambridge, and died in 1553, leaving, besides his translation of some parts of the Bible, 1. 'On the Unity and Schism of the Ancient Church,' 8vo. Wesel, 1534. 2. 'The Subversion of More's False Foundation,' 12mo. Embden, 1534. 3. 'Epistle to the Prior of Newenham,' 8vo. Strasburgh, 1527. 4. 'Commentary on Daniel from Melancthon,' &c. 8vo. Geneva, 1545; London, 1550. 5. 'A Present Consolation for the Sufferance of Persecution for Righteousness,' 12mo. 1544; besides other works enumerated by Tanner.

JOYEUSE (Hist.) the name of one of the most noble and ancient families of France, which is derived from a town on the borders of Languedoc.

JOYEUSE, William II, de, a marshal of France of the family above-mentioned, was at first destined for the church, but having embraced the profession of arms he distinguished himself in the service of Charles IX and Henry III, during the religious wars which raged at that time.

JOYEUSE, Anne de, son of the preceding, a duke and admiral of France, obtained the confidence and favour of Henry III, by whom he was usefully employed against the Huguenots, but was killed in 1587, in a battle fought against Henry IV.

JOYEUSE, Henry de, duke and marshal of France, was born in 1567, and, after distinguishing himself in arms, became a Capuchin, and remained in this order until 1592, when he was recalled to a military life by the death of his brother, and, after having displayed no less talent and vigour in the field than before, he again retired to a monastic life, and died a Capuchin in 1608.

JOYEUSE, John Arnaud de, otherwise named Marquis of Joyeuse, commenced his military career in 1648, and died in 1710, at the age of 79, after having spent the greater part of his life in battles and sieges.

JOYEUSE, Francis de (Ecc.) a cardinal and brother to the preceding, was born in 1562, made archbishop of Narbonne in 1582, and in the following year cardinal by pope Gregory XIII, was sent to Rome on an important mission by Henry III, and died in 1615, after having been employed on the most important affairs, which he executed with singular fidelity and talent.

JOYNER, William (Biog.) otherwise called Lyde, a divine of the Romish church, to which he attached himself during the rebellion, was born in 1622, educated at Oxford, and died in 1706, leaving, 1. 'The Roman Empress,' a comedy, 4to. London, 1670. 2. 'Some Observations on the Life of Cardinal Pole,' 8vo. 1686. 3. 'Various Latin and English Poems,' scattered in several books, especially a large English copy in 'Horti Carolini Rosa altera,' 1640.

IPHINASSA (Myth.) daughter of Proetus, king of the Argives, who, having with her sisters offended the goddess Juno, was by her inspired with a fury, and ran about the country until she was cured of her madness by Melampus, who married her. Lucret. l. 1.

IPHICLUS (Myth.) a son of Amphitryon and Alcmena, who was born at the same time as Hercules, but of a different father. Apollodor. l. 1.

IPHICRATES (Hist.) Ἰφικράτης, a general of the Athenians, had the command of the army at the age of 20, when he gained many advantages over the Thracians and the Spartans, and assisted the king of Persia against Egypt. He married a daughter of Cotys, king of Thrace, and died A. C. 380. Xenoph. Hellen. l. 4, &c.; Corn. Nep. in Iphic.; Justin. l. 1; Plutarch in Apophth.

IPHIGENIA (Myth.) Ἰφιγένεια, called also Iphanassa, a daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra, was going to be sacrificed by her father in order to obtain favourable winds from the gods, that the Greeks might set sail from Aulis; but as Calchas, the priest, took the knife in his hand, and was on the point of striking the fatal blow, she suddenly disappeared, and a goat of uncommon size and beauty was found in her place. After this Iphigenia engaged with Pylades and Orestes to carry away the statue of the goddess, at whose altar many bloody sacrifices had been offered, and to murder Thoas, by whom they had been enforced.

Ovid. Met. l. 12.

Flentibus ante aram stetit Iphigenia ministris.

Idem. Trist. l. 4.

Hic pro supposità virgo Pelopëia cervâ.

Juven. Sat. 12.

> —— Et si qua est nubilis, illi
> Iphigenia domi, dabit hanc alturibus, etsi
> Non sperat tragicæ furtiva piacula cervæ.

Mart. l. 3, ep. 91.

> Suppositam, famu est, quondam pro virgine cervam.

Virgil and Propertius represent her as having been actually sacrificed.

Propert. l 3, el. 7.

> Hoc juvene amisso classem non solvit Atrides,
> Pro quâ mactata est Iphigenia morâ.

Virg. Æn. l. 2.

> Sanguine placastis ventos et virgine cæsâ.

According to some, this Iphigenia was the daughter of Helen by Theseus. Æschyl. in Agam.; Euripid. in Iphig. &c.; Cic. in Tusc. l. 1; Paus. l. 2; Macrob. Saturn.

IPHINOE (Myth.) Ἰφινόη, one of the daughters of Proetus, who was seized with a madness of which she died, while under the care of Melampus. Apollod.

IPHINOE, one of the principal women of Lemnos, who conspired to destroy all the males on the island. Flacc. l. 2, v. 163.

IPHIS (Myth.) Ἶφις, son of Alector, who succeeded his father on the throne of Argos, and advised Polynices to engage Amphiarus in the Theban war. He is reckoned in the number of the Argonauts. Apollod. l. 3; Val. Flacc. l. 1, &c.

IPHITUS (Myth.) Ἴφιτος, a son of Eurytus, king of Œchalia, who was killed by Hercules in revenge for an affront which the hero had received from his father. Hom. Odyss. l. 21; Apollod. l. 2; Diod. l. 4; Hygin. Fab. 35; Serv. in. Æn.

IPHITUS (Hist.) a king of Elis in the age of Lycurgus, who re-established the Olympic games 338 years after their institution by Hercules, or 884 years before the Christian æra, from which period the Olympiads are reckoned; but chronologists are not agreed as to the exact time when this æra should commence. Scal. Emend. Temp. l. 1; Petav. de Doct. Temp.; Usser. Annal.; Ricciol. Chronol. &c.

IPSUS (Geog.) a place of Phrygia, celebrated by a battle which was fought there A. C. 301, between Antigonus and his son on the one side, and Seleucus, Ptolemy, Lysimachus, and Cassander on the other, when Antigonus was defeated.

IRA (Geog.) Ἰρή, a town of Messenia, which, according to Homer, was one of the places promised by Agamemnon to Achilles, if he would return to fight the Trojans. It is famous in history for having supported a siege of 11 years against the Lacedæmonians. Its capture A. C. 671 put an end to the second Messenian war. Hom. Il. l. 9, et Eustath.; Strab. l. 7; Paus. l. 4.

IRAC (Geog.) or Irak, a province of Persia, bounded on the N. by Aderbizan, Ghilan, and Mazanderan, E. by Chorasan, S. by Farsistân and Kusistan, and W. by Kurdistan. It includes the greatest part of the ancient Media, and is a large mountainous country, which, before its conquest by the Mussulmen, had kings of its own. The capital of Irak is Ispahan.

IRAN (Geog.) another name for Persia.

IRELAND, Samuel (Biog.) a mechanic of Spitalfields, who died in 1800, is known very discreditably by his attempt to impose upon the world a folio volume of letters, which he pretended to have been taken from the MSS. of Shakspeare. His other works were a 'Picturesque Tour through Holland, France, and Brabant,' 1790; 'Picturesque Views of the Thames,' 1792; 'Picturesque Views of the Medway,' 1793; 'Graphic Illustrations of Hogarth,' 1794; 'Picturesque Views and Account of the Inns of Court,' &c.

IRELAND, John, author of 'Illustrations of Hogarth,' who disclaimed all relationship with the preceding writer, died in 1808. His 'Illustrations,' were published in 3 vols. 8vo. by the Messrs. Boydell.

IRELAND (Geog.) an island of Europe, lying W. of Great Britain.

Boundaries. Ireland is bounded on the E. by St. George's Channel and the Irish Sea, which separate it from England and Wales; on the N. E. by a channel called the North Channel, 34 m. broad, which separates it from Scotland; and on the other sides by the ocean.

Extent and Division. It is 280 m. long, and 160 broad, and is divided into four provinces, namely, Ulster to the N., Leinster to the E., Munster to the S., and Connaught to the W. These are subdivided into 32 counties. Ulster contains the counties of Down, Armagh, Monaghan, Cavan, Antrim, Londonderry, Tyrone, Fermanagh, and Donegal; Leinster those of Dublin, Louth, Wicklow, Wexford, Longford, East Meath, West Meath, King's County, Queen's County, Kilkenny, Kildare, and Carlow; Munster includes Clare, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary, and Waterford; and Connaught has Leitrim, Roscommon, Mayo, Sligo, and Galway. The ecclesiastical division of Ireland is into four archbishoprics, namely, Armagh, Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam; and eighteen bishoprics, namely, Meath, Kildare, Derry, Raphoe, Limerick, Ardfert and Aghadoe, Dromore, Elphin, Down and Connor, Waterford and Lismore, Leighlin and Ferns, Cloyne, Cork and Ross, Killaloe and Kilfenora, Kilmore and Ardagh, Clogher, Ossory, Killala and Achonry, Clonfert and Kilmacduagh.

Towns. The principal towns are Dublin, Cork, Cashel, Tuam, &c.

Rivers. The principal rivers are the Shannon, Foyle, Liffey, Boyne, Sure, Barron, Blackwater, and Lee.

History. Ireland, which by the Romans was called Hibernia, is considered by the inhabitants to have the highest claims to antiquity of any European country, as they profess to trace their origin to ages immediately subsequent to the deluge. According to their traditions the first inhabitants came from Spain; but the more probable accounts state that this country was peopled from Britain. Nothing certain, however, can be said on the history of Ireland anterior to the reign of Henry II, when it consisted of five principal sovereignties, besides many small tribes: these sovereignties were Munster, Leinster, Meath, Ulster, and Connaught; of which, as it had been usual for one or the other to take the lead in their wars, there was commonly some prince who acted at least for the time being as monarch of Ireland. Roderic O'Connor held this dignity at the time here spoken of, but was scarcely invested with authority to govern his own dominions, and still less to defend the kingdom against foreign invasion, which was now threatened by Henry, who, favoured by their intestine divisions, availed himself of an application made to him for assistance on the part of Dermot Macmorrow against Roderic O'Connor. He landed in Ireland at the head of 500 knights, besides other soldiers, and found the Irish so dispirited by their late misfortunes, that in a progress which he made through the island, he had no other occupation than to receive the homage of his new subjects. He left most of the Irish chieftains or princes in possession of their ancient territories; bestowed some lands on the English adventurers, who had either followed or preceded him; and gave earl Richard, surnamed Strongbow, the commission of seneschal of Ireland. In this manner was Ireland annexed to the crown of England; but not in a manner to ensure that peace and happiness to the natives which was so much wanted. Disputes arose between the English settlers and the natives, which broke out in a series of insurrections, that frequently threatened to overthrow the ascendancy of the English. To this was added the religious quarrel which sprung out of the reformation, when the Irish, taking a decided part in favour of the see of Rome, were stimulated into open and general rebellion, during the reigns of Elisabeth and Charles I. Conciliatory measures have since that period in some degree softened the animosity which subsisted in that ill-fated country; but there yet remain too many sources of discontent in the minds of the natives to allow the hope that Ireland can speedily enjoy the blessings which are extended to all the other parts of Great Britain. This kingdom formerly had a parliament, which was subordinate to that of Great Britain; but in 1800 it was deemed expedient that the two countries should be united, and accordingly from the commencement of 1801 they were styled the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; when it was enacted that 32 lords (four of them bishops) and 100 commoners should represent the kingdom of Ireland in the United Parliament.

IRENÆUS (Hist.) an eloquent man, whom Herod frequently employed in matters of state. He persuaded Antipas to go to Rome in order to oppose the pretensions of Archelaus to the kingdom of Judæa. Joseph. Antiq. l. 12, c. 11.

IRENÆUS, St. (Ecc.) a Greek by birth, bishop of Lyons, and a disciple of Polycarp, was sent by the confessors of Lyons, who were imprisoned for their faith, with letters to S. Eleutherus, at Rome, in 178, respecting the sect of the Montanists, which was then rising up, when Irenæus met with the heresiarch Valentine and his two disciples, who had been deprived of their priestly office. He disputed with them, and afterwards wrote against their errors. On his return from Rome he was elected to the see of Lyons, to succeed Photinus, and governed that church from the time of M. Aurelius to that of Severus, in whose reign he suffered martyrdom in 202. Of his numerous writings nothing remains but his five books against heresies, the original Greek of which is wanting in the far greater part. They have been many times published, particularly by J. Ernestus Grabe, fol. Oxon. 1702; to which some account of the author is prefixed. Tertullian, adv. Valent.; S. Basil. de Spir. c. 29; Euseb. Hist. Eccles. l. 5, et in Chron. S. Hieron. in Cat.; S. August. adv. Julian. l. 1; Theodoret. Dial. 1; S. Epiphan. in Hær. 31; Greg. Turon. Hist. l. 1; Phot. Cod.; S. Joan. Damesc. in Parall.; Sixtus de Sienne; Bellarmin; Baronius; Dodwel; Du Pin, &c.

IRENÆUS, St., a deacon and martyr in Tuscany, in the reign of Aurelian, in 275, was arrested by order of Turgius, or Turcius, a governor of Tuscany, and beaten to death with clubs, after having suffered a variety of other torments.

IRENÆUS, St., bishop of Sirmich in the fourth century, after suffering extreme tortures during the persecution of Diocletian, was beheaded in 304.

IRENÆUS, a count in the time of the emperor Theodosius the Younger, was at the Council General of Ephesus on the part of that prince, and was one of the protectors of Nestorius. He was afterwards ordained bishop of Tyre by Theodoret; but the emperor deprived him of his dignity because he suspected him of heresy, and found him guilty of bigamy.

IRENÆUS, bishop of Cæsarea, very distinct from the preceding, was at the council of Jesusalem in 454, and subscribed to the epistle written to the priests, abbots, and monks of Palestine. Baron. Annal. ann. 431, &c.

IRENE (Hist.) empress of Constantinople, and wife of Leo IV, a woman celebrated for her beauty and her ambition, was a native of Athens, married to Leo in 769, and left by him at his death in 780, with a son, Constantine VIII, for whom she administered the government until, on his attempting to deprive her of it, she had him arrested, and put out his eyes. After this she reigned alone five years and seventeen days, when Nicephorus caused himself to be proclaimed emperor, and banished her to the island of Lesbos, where she died in 803. Cedren. in Compend.; Zonoras; Theophan; et Baron. in Annal.

IRENE (Numis.) of this empress several medals are extant, bearing her effigy as in the annexed figure, inscription, ΕΙΡΗΝΗ ΒΑSILISSH, &c.—D. N. CONSTANTINUS AUG. ET HIRENA M.; on the reverse, GLORIA IMPERII. Strad. Impp.; Band. Imp. Rom. tom. ii.

IRETON, Henry (Hist.) a republican general during the rebellion, seconded the views of Oliver Cromwell with all his abilities, and, marrying his daughter Bridget, was sent to Ireland, where he died at the siege of Limerick in 1651. He was interred in Westminster Abbey; but his body was taken up at the restoration, and exposed on a gibbet, with those of Cromwell and Bradshaw. [Vide Plate XVIII]

IRIS (Myth.) Ἶρις, a daughter of Thaumas and Electra, one of the Oceanides, and messenger of the gods, particularly of Juno. Her office was to cut the thread which seemed to detain the soul in the body of those that were expiring. She is said to be the same as the rainbow. Hom. Il. passim; Hesiod. Theog. v. 266; Virg. Æn. l. 4; Ovid. Met.

IRIS (Geog.) a river of Asia, having its source in Cappadocia. Flacc. l. 5.

IRNERIUS (Hist.) Wernerus, or Guarnerus, a German lawyer of the 12th century, had sufficient influence with the emperor Lotharius to obtain from him an edict that Justinian's law should resume its ancient authority at the bar; which he was afterwards the first to explain and illustrate.

IRNHAM, Lord (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Carhampton.

IRVING (Her.) the name of a family of Woodhouse, co. Dumfries, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1809 on sir Paulus Æmilius Irving, for his services in the West Indies as a lieutenant-general; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, three holly leaves vert, a mullet for difference.

Crests. First, a chapeau gules, turned up ermine, wreathed round the crown with oak or. Second, a dexter arm armed and embowed proper, garnished or, holding in the hand two holly leaves, as in the arms, surmounted of a scroll.

IRWIN, Eyles (Biog.) a miscellaneous writer, was born of Irish parents at Calcutta in 1748, and died in 1817, leaving 'St. Thomas's Mount,' a poem; 'Badakah,' a pastoral; 'Adventures during a Voyage up the Red Sea,' &c.; 'Eastern Eclogues;' 'Triumph of Innocence;' 'An Ode on the Acquittal of Mr. Hastings,' &c.

ISAAC (Bibl.) יצחק, signifying laughter; son of Abraham and Sarah, who gave him this name, because, when the Angel promised her that she should become a mother, she laughed, and when the child was born she said, "God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear will laugh with me." Isaac married Rebekah, by whom he had two sons, Esau and Jacob; and, after having enjoyed much worldly prosperity, and the distinguished honour of communing with God, who renewed the promise of blessing made to his father Abraham, he died at the age of an hundred four score and eight, A. M. 2288, A. C. 1716. Gen. xxi.—xxxv.; Joseph. l. 1; Usser. Annal.

ISAAC (Hist.) the name of two emperors of Constantinople.

ISAAC I, of the family of the Comneni, revolted against Michael V, and, seizing the throne, was crowned in 1057; but being, as is said, struck by a thunderbolt, he was seized with such a terror that he resigned the empire to Constantine Ducas in 1059, and retiring to a monastery died two years after. Cedren. in Compend. Curopalat. &c.

Isaac II, surnamed Angelus, caused himself to be proclaimed emperor in the place of Andronicus Comnenus, and died after a reign of 10 years in 1203.

Isaac, St. (Ecc.) a hermit, who distinguished himself by his piety in the fourth century.

Isaac (Biog.) surnamed the Great, distinguished himself by his writings in the reigns of Theodosius the Younger and Marcianus. He died about 459, leaving many works in the Syriac, principally against the Nestorians and the Eutychians. He also composed a poem on the fall of Antioch.

Isaac, son of Huseïn, a learned Arabian, and a Christian of the sect of the Nestorians, translated many of the Greek authors, and died in the year of the Hegira 298, A. C. 908. Abulfarag. Dynast.

Isaac, surnamed Porphyrogenitus, because he was of the family of the Comneni, wrote Characters of the Greek and Trojan Heroes, which Janus Rutgersius de Dordrecht published with notes, and Leo Allatius reprinted at Rome in his Collection of Rhetoricians and Greek Sophists.

Isaac, Hazin, a Rabbi, who prepared the astronomical tables called Alphonsine, because they were executed under the inspection and the auspices of Alphonsus X.

Isaac, Karo, a Rabbi of Toledo, and one of those who was obliged to leave Spain in consequence of the edict issued by Ferdinand and Isabella commanding all Jews to depart the realm within four months unless they embraced Christianity. He retired to Portugal, and afterwards to Jerusalem, where he composed a work, entitled 'The Generations of Isaac,' which was a commentary on the Pentateuch.

ISAACSON, Henry (Biog.) a chronologer, who was born in London in 1581, and died in 1654, left a 'Body of Chronology,' published in folio.

ISABELLA (Hist.) the name of several princesses, many of whom are better known by the name of Elizabeth. [Vide Elizabeth]

Isabella of Castille, daughter of John II, king of Castille and Leon, was born in 1461, married to Ferdinand V, king of Arragon, in 1469; and, inheriting the states of Castille, the two kingdoms of Castille and Arragon became incorporated into one, wherefore Ferdinand and Isabella took the title of king and queen of Spain. She died in 1504 after having displayed great talents in government, and great piety as a Christian. Her zeal, and that of her husband, in favour of the Romish church procured for them the title of the Catholic King and Queen. [Vide Plate V] Marian. Hist. d'Esp. l. 24; Anton. Nebricens, Decad. Rer. à Ferdinand. et Elizab. gestarum.

Isabella, daughter of count Angoulême, was taken by her father from Hughes X, count de la March, to whom she was affianced in order to be married to John, king of England. At the death of the latter, she was married to her first spouse, the count de la Marche.

Isabella of France, daughter of Philip IV, was born in 1282, married in 1308 to Edward II, king of England, and died, as is said, in confinement, in which she had been placed by her son Edward III. She has the reputation of having been one of the handsomest women in her age, and was without doubt one of the most spirited, as she sufficiently testified by the part she took during the troubles of her weak husband. Froissart. Polydor. Vergel.; Walsingham, &c.

Isabella of France, daughter of Charles VI, was born in 1389, married in 1396 to Richard II, king of England, returned to France at the death of her husband, was married a second time to Charles, count and duke of Orleans, and died in child-bed in 1409.

Isabella of Arragon, daughter of Alphonsus, duke of Calabria, son of Ferdinand, king of Naples; was married to John Galeas, duke of Milan, in 1489; but her marriage was embittered by the intrigues of Louis Sforza, his guardian, who had conceived a passion for her, which she rejected. She died in 1524, after having lost her reputation by being too familiar with Prosper Colonna.

ISÆUS (Biog.) a Grecian orator of Chalcis, in Syria, the disciple of Lysias, and the master of Demosthenes, was born probably about 418 years before the Christian æra. Sixty-four orations are attributed to him, but he is supposed to have written only fifty, of which 10 are preserved among the 'Oratores Græci,' of Stephens, fol. 1575; of these sir William Jones made a translation in 4to. 1779. Quintil. l. 12; Plut. de Dec. Orat.

Isæus, another celebrated orator, who lived at Rome in the time of Pliny the Younger, left some orations that are extant, of which the best edition is that of Reiske in the 'Oratores Græci,' 8vo. Lips. 1770-75. Plin. l. 2, ep. 3.

ISAGORAS (Biog.) a tragic poet, and disciple of Chrestius, flourished in the reign of Antoninus the Philosopher.

ISAIAH (Bibl.) ישעיהו, son of Amos, was, as it is said, of the royal family, if it be true that his father Amos was son to king Joash, and brother to Amaziah, king of Judah. He is the first of the four great prophets, who begun to prophesy in the reign of Josiah, and continued until the reign of Manasseh, when, according to general tradition, he was sawn asunder by order of that wicked prince, which event is dated A. M. 3354, A. C. 681. 2 Kings xix.; 2 Chron. xxvi. &c.; Ecclesiast. xlviii.; S. Hieron. in Isai.; S. Epiphan. in Vit. Is.; S. Basil.; S. Augustin.; S. Cyril. &c.

Isaiah (Ecc.) a patriarch of Constantinople in the 14th century, succeeded Gerasim in 1323, and died in 1333.

ISAR (Geog.) or Isara, the Isere, a river of Gaul, where Fabius routed the Gauls. Plin. l. 3; Lucan. l. 1.

ISAURIA (Geog.) a country of Asia Minor, near Mount Taurus, which forms a part of Caramania, now subject to the Turks. The inhabitants were bold and warlike, but were conquered by the Roman emperors Probus and Gallus. Cic. ad Fam. l. 2, ep. 15; Mel. l. 1; Strab. l. 2; Ptol. l. 5; Flor. l. 3; Eutrop. l. 6.

ISCARIOT (Bibl.) Ἰσκαριώτης, a surname given to the traitor Judas.

ISDEGERDES I (Hist.) son of Sapor, a king of Persia, was appointed by the will of Arcadius, guardian to Theodosius, the second. He died in the 31st year of his age, A. D. 408.

Isdegerdes II, or Yezdegird, Ben Baharam, succeeded his father Varannes, or Baharam, in 440, and died in 458.

Isdegerdes III, or Yezdegird, Ben Scheheriat, was the last not only of the race of the Sassanides, but of all who reigned in Persia; having lost the battle of Cadesia, which he fought against the Arabians under the caliphate of Omar he became a fugitive, and was killed through the treachery of one of his subjects. It is from the defeat of this prince, which terminated the empire of Persia at that time, that chronologists have formed an æra that goes by his name.

ISELIN, James Christopher (Biog.) an antiquary, was born at Basle in 1681, and died in 1737, leaving, among other things, 1. 'De Gallis Rhenum transeuntibus Carmen Heroicum.' 2. 'De Historicis Latinis melioris Ævi Dissertatio.' 3. 'De Poetis Latinis melioris Ævi,' not printed. 4. 'Specimen Observationum atque Conjecturarum ad Orientalem Philologiam,' &c. 5. 'De Arctissimo Eloquentia et Historiarum in Studiis Vinculo,' 1705; besides many other dissertations and orations.

ISHAM (Her.) the name of a family which derives its descent from Azor, or Azo, who lived in the reign of William the Conqueror. Sir John Isham, his descendant, was knighted by James I, and advanced to the dignity of a baronet in 1627. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow: Arms. Gules, a fesse, and in chief three piles wavy argent.

Crest. Upon a torce of the colours, a swan's neck and breast with wings displayed proper.

Mottoes. Over the crest, "Ostendo non ostento." To the arms, "On things transitory resteth no glory."

ISHBAK (Bibl.) ישבק, fifth son of Abraham and Keturah. Gen. xxv.

ISHBI-BEN-OB (Bibl.) ישבי־בנ־ויב, a giant who, being on the point of killing David when fatigued in the battle, was killed by Abisbai, son of Zeruiah. 2 Sam. xxi. 16.

ISHBOSHETH (Bibl.) איש־בשת, or Ishbaal, son of Saul, and also his successor, was 44 years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years when he was assassinated by two captains of his troops, as he was sleeping in his palace during the heat of the day. They cut off his head and carried it to David, who ordered the murderers to be put to death, and, after their hands and feet were cut off, that their bodies should be hung near the pool in Hebron. The head of Ishbosheth he placed in Abner's sepulchre at Hebron. With him ended the royalty in Saul's family. 2 Sam. ii. &c.

ISHMAEL (Bibl.) ישמעאל, son of Abraham and Hagar, who was bred up by his mother in the wilderness. He married an Egyptian woman, from whom sprung the twelve tribes of the Arabians still subsisting, who in Scripture are called Ishmaelites. Gen. xix. xxv.; Abulfed. Al Firauzabad. et alii Script. Arab.; Pocock. Not. ad Spec. Hist. Arab.; Thevenot. p. 1, l. 11.

Ishmael (Hist.) high-priest of the Jews, succeeded Ananus, and was appointed governor of Judæa, A. M. 4027, A. D. 24. He was deposed the year following. Joseph. l. 18.

Ishmael, brother to the preceding, succeeded Ananias, son of Nebedæus, by the favour of king Agrippa; but, being engaged in a quarrel with the high priests that were deposed, he was deprived of his dignity.

Ishmael, vide Ismael.

ISIDAS (Hist.) a Lacedæmonian, who, after the battle of Leuctra, got possession of Gythium by a stratagem. Polyæn. Stratag. l. 2.

ISIDORE (Ecc.) in Latin Isidorus, the son of Basilides, the heresiarch, who propagated the errors of his father. Du Pin, Biblioth.

Isidore, St. a hermit and native of Egypt, was born in 318, and died about 403, after having suffered much in support of the true faith against the Arians. Socrat. l. 6; Sozom. l. 8; Theodoret. Hist. l. 4; Hieron. Epist. &c.

Isidore of Cordova, also a saint and bishop of Cordova, who flourished in the reigns of Honorius and Theodosius the Younger, was the author of some Commentaries, which he dedicated to Paul Orosius, the disciple of St. Augustine.

Isidore, St. surnamed Pelusiota, a hermit and disciple of St. Chrysostom in the fifth century, was the author of several works, which were printed in one volume, folio, in 1605; but the best edition is that of Paris, fol. 1638. Evag. Hist. l. 1; Niceph. l. 14; Phot. Bibl.; Suidas; Bellarmin. &c.

Isidore, archbishop of Thessalonica, was the author of some Greek homilies upon Luke which are preserved in the Vatican.

Isidore, St. of Seville, so named because he was archbishop of that city, was also called the Younger to distinguish him from St. Isidore of Cordova. He was born at Carthagena, in Spain, succeeded his brother in the see of Seville in 601, and died in 646, leaving a number of works, grammatical and historical; as 20 books of 'Origines,' or Etymologies, fol. Paris, 1601, or Colonn. 1617; a 'Chronicle' ending at the year 626; 'Commentaries on the Historical Books of the Old Testament,' &c. Of these works collectively there have been two editions, namely, one of Margarin de la Bigne, Paris, 1580; and another by James du Breul, Cologne, 1601, and 1618.

Isidore, a patriarch of Constantinople, who was put in the place of John in 1347, and died in 1349, was distinguished by his learning and his virtues. Joan. Cantacuzen. Hist.

Isidore, a cardinal and native of Thessalonica, or Constantinople, obtained the cardinal's cap from Eugene IV, after having been employed by this pope, and also by Nicholas V, on some important missions. He was at Constantinople at the time of its capture by the Turks in 1453, when he escaped by exchanging his cardinal's habit for that of a soldier who was dead. He wrote a Letter on this subject, which has been preserved by father d'Acheri in his Spicilegium.

Isidore (Biog.) surnamed Mercator, or Peccator, a writer of the eighth century, who was the author of a Collection of Canons. Baron. Annal.

ISIDORUS, Characenus (Biog.) a Greek author in the time of Ptolemy Lagus, about the 120th Olympiad, A. C. 300, wrote different Historical Treatises, mentioned by Athenæus and others. Athen. l. 3; Plin. l. 2; Voss. Hist. Græc. l. 3.

Isidorus, a mathematician mentioned by Suidas; also an architect of Miletus, who was employed with Anthemius about the church of Sophia at Constantinople.

ISIS (Myth.) Ἶσις, a celebrated goddess of the Egyptians, said to be the daughter of Saturn and Rhea, and supposed by some to be the same as Io, who was restored to a human form; and, governing Egypt with her husband Osiris, taught the inhabitants agriculture and other arts. She is also taken for Diana, or the Cybele of the Romans. Herod. l. 2; Diodor. l. 1; Cic. de Div. l. 1; Tac. Annal. l. 2; Dio. l. 40; Plut. de Is. et Osir.; Tertullian. in Apol. c. 6; Sueton. in Tib.; Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 1; Euseb. Præparat. Evang. l. 1.

Isis (Numis.) this goddess is mostly represented on medals with a sistrum, and also a crescent on her head. [Vide Diana]

ISMAEL (Hist.) the name of some sophis of Persia.

Ismael I, a descendent from Ali, the son-in-law of Mahomet, distinguished himself by his valour and prudence, and died in 1523 in the 24th year of his reign.

Ismael II, who arrived at the throne of Persia in 1575 after Thamasp, by the murder of his eight brothers, was at last poisoned in 1579 by his own sister, as is said, in consequence of his having embraced a different sect of Mahometanism.

Ismael III, second son of Mohammed Khodabandeh, procured the death of his eldest brother Hamzeh, and the throne of Persia in 1584; but had his throat cut by his barber after a reign of eight months, when Shah Abbas I, his younger brother, succeeded him.

ISMARUS (Geog.) a rugged mountain in Thrace covered with vines and olives. Hom. Odyss. l. 9; Virg. Geog. l. 2, v. 37.

ISMENE (Myth.) Ἰσμένη, a daughter of Œdipus and Jocasta, who, when her sister was condemned to be buried alive by Creon for giving burial to her brother Polynices, accused herself of being equally guilty. Sophocl. in Antig.; Apollod. l. 3; Stat. Theb. l. 8, v. 555.

ISMENIAS (Hist.) Ἰσμηνίας, a Theban bribed by Timocrates of Rhodes that he might use his influence to prevent the Athenians, and some other Græcian states, from assisting Lacedæmon against Xerxes. Paus. l. 3.

Ismenias, a Theban general, who was sent into Persia on an embassy by his countrymen, but evaded the ceremony of prostrating himself before the monarch by dropping his ring when he entered his presence, and picking it up again. Ælian. Var. Hist. l. 1.

ISMENIUS (Myth.) a surname of Apollo at Thebes, where he had a temple on the borders of the Ismenus. Paus. l. 9.

ISMID (Geog.) or Isnikmid, a town of Asia Minor, the ancient Nicomedia, situated on the side of a hill overlooking the gulf of Nicomedia. Lon. 29° 30′, lat. 40° 30′. [Vide Nicomedia]

ISNIK (Geog.) the Turkish name for the city of Nice. [Vide Nicæa and Nice]

ISOCRATES (Biog.) a Grecian orator, who died in the 99th year of his age, about 338 years before the Christian era, left several orations, of which 31 are still extant. The best editions of Isocrates are that of Battie, 2 vols. Cantab. 1729; and that of Auger, 3 vols. 8vo. Paris, 1782. Isocrates was honoured after his death with a brazen statue by Timotheus, one of his pupils, and Aphareus, his adopted son. [Vide Plate XXXII]

ISPAHAN (Geog.) Spaham, or Spaan, the capital of Persia, and long celebrated as one of the most splendid cities of the East, is situated in the centre of the empire. Lon. 52° 50′ E. lat. 32° 25′ N. It is supposed to have been the Aspadana of Ptolemy, or to have been built on the ruins of Hecatompylos. Shah Abbas first made it his royal residence but in 1722 it was taken by the Afghans, when many of the most superb edifices were entirely destroyed; in 1727 it was retaken by Nadir Shah, but no pains were taken to restore it to its former prosperity.

ISRAEL (Bibl.) ישראל, the name given by an Angel to Jacob after he had wrestled with him at Manahaim, whence his descendants are termed Israelites. Gen. xxxii. &c.; Hos. xii.

ISRAEL, this name is also applied to the whole people, or to the 10 tribes, who formed a kingdom distinct from that of Judah.

ISSA (Geog.) now Lissah, an island in the Adriatic Sea on the coast of Dalmatia.

ISSACHAR (Bibl.) יששכר, fifth son of Jacob and Leah. Gen. xxx. 14—18.

ISSUS (Geog.) now Aisse, a town of Cilicia, on the confines of Syria, is celebrated for the battle fought on its banks between Alexander the Great, and the Persians under Darius, their king, A. C. 333, when the latter lost both his life and his kingdom. This spot is likewise famous for the defeat of Niger by Severus, A. D. 194.

ISTER (Geog.) another name for the Danube.

ISTRIA (Geog.) a province at the west of Illyricum, near the Adriatic, the inhabitants of which lived chiefly on plunder. This province, which still bears the same name, is formed by the gulfs of Trieste and Fiume, and is situated between lat. 45° and 46°. It was formerly divided between Venice and Austria; but since 1814 it has formed a part of Austrian Illyria, comprising the districts of Capo d'Istria and Rovigno in the circle of Trieste. The chief town of Istria is Rovigno. Liv. l. 10; Strab. l. 1; Mel. l. 2; Plin. l. 3; Justin. l. 9; Ptol. l. 3.

ITALIA (Geog.) Italy, a celebrated country which in form has been said to bear some similitude to a man's leg, extending in that direction 600 miles, and about 400 miles in breadth.

Boundaries. It is bounded on the N. by the Alps, which separate it from Germany; on the E. by that part of the Mediterranean called the Adriatic; on the S. by the Tuscan or Tyrhenian Sea; and on the West by a part of the Alps and the river Var, which separate it from the coast of France and Savoy.

Division. The division of Italy has varied in different ages. After the Gauls had made themselves masters of that part of Italy which extends from the Alps and Apennines to the Adriatic, the Romans gave this country the name of Italia Citerior, and Gallia Cisalpina; to which they also added the names of Circumpadana et Togata, to denote that it surrounded the Po, and the inhabitants wore the Roman toga. This country was inhabited by the Ligures, Veneti, Carni, Istrii, and in the valley of the Alps the Taurini, Salassi, Lepontii, Rhetii, &c. Beyond this Gaul dwelt the Etrusci, or Tusci, Umbri, Sabini, and Latini, Æqui, Volsci, and Hernici; next to the Umbri on the coast were the Picentes, then the Marricini, Vestini, Frentani, Peligni, Marsi; beyond these the Samnites and Hirpini; lower down, towards the Mare Inferum, the Campani, and Picentini; next to the Frentani and Hirpini were the Apuli, Calabri, and Salentini; below the Apuli were the Lucani, on the coast of both seas; and at the extremity, in an angle, were the Bruttii. In the time of Augustus, Italy consisted of fifteen principal regions; namely, Latium, Campania, Apulia, Messapia, Lucania, Brutium, Samnium, Picenum, Umbria, Etruria, Gallia Cispadana, Liguria, Venetia, Istria, and Gallia Transpadana; but it was very frequently distinguished by its three grand divisions; namely, Gallia Cisalpina, which comprehended the Northern part; Italy, properly so called, which was the central part, and the seat of Roman and Etrurian power; and the Southern division of Magna Græcia. Leander Alberti and others have divided Italy into the following countries:

Ancient.	Modern.
Æmilia,	Lombardy on this side the Po.
Apulia Daunia,	Puglia Piana.
Brutium,	Inferior Calabria.
Apulia Peucetia,	Terra di Bari.

Venetorum Terra,	Trevisano.
Umbria,	Spoleto.

In the middle ages the kingdom of Lombardy and that of Naples held the N. and S. extremes, and the Ecclesiastical and Tuscan States occupied the centre. In more modern times the northern part became divided into a great number of states, and, previous to the alterations introduced by the French revolution, was divided as follows: between the confines of France and Switzerland on the W. and N. were the continental dominions of the king of Sardinia; namely, Savoy, Nice, Piedmont, part of Milanese, and Oneglia; to the N. E. were the territories of Venice; S. of these were the dominions of the emperor of Germany; namely, part of the Milanese and Mantua, and S. of the latter was the Modenese, which belonged to the duke of Modena; W. of the Modenese the duchy of Parma, whose sovereign is of the house of Bourbon; to the S. W. of which lies the republic of Genoa, and S. E. of this is that of Lucca; hence extends along the coast the grand duchy of Tuscany, between the Gulf of Venice and the Mediterranean, and all S. of this is the kingdom of Naples.

Mountains. The mountains of Italy are comprehended under the general names of Alps and Apennines. [Vide Alpes]

History, Ancient and Modern. Italy had at different periods the different names of Saturnia, Œnotria, Hesperia, Ausonia, and Tyrrhenia; that of Italia it received either from Italus, a king of the country, or from Ιταλὸς, a Greek word for an ox, that animal being most frequent in Europe at that time. The ancient inhabitants called themselves Aborigines, or offspring of the soil; but it was very early inhabited by colonies from Greece, who, under the name of Pelasgians and Arcadians, settled in the Southern parts of Italy, which on that account were called Magna Græcia. Italy was then divided into almost as many states as there were cities, which were gradually annexed to the empire of the Romans. [Vide Rome] On the decline of this empire in the fifth century the Goths, Lombards, French, Normans, Saracens, Germans, and others, began to establish themselves in different parts of Italy. The Goths, the Vandals, the Heruli, and the Huns, were the first who, after having made themselves masters of Rome, formed a settlement in the country, but they were, for the most part, afterwards driven away by Belisarius and Narses, the generals of the emperor Justinian. They were, however, succeeded by the Ostrogoths, who erected a kingdom in Italy under Theodoric in 493, until the reign of Totila in 553; and subsequently by the Lombards, who got possession of Ravenna, and established in Gallia Cisalpina the kingdom of Lombardy, which lasted for about 200 years, till 774, when it was destroyed by Charlemagne, who gave considerable lands to the see of Rome, from which the Ecclesiastical States took their rise. The Saracens made many inroads into Italy, and got possession of Sicily in 1058, but the successors of Charlemagne continued to govern this kingdom, without any material change, until Otho the Great gave municipal rights to several of the cities, and thus laid the foundation for the different republics which afterwards agitated the country with their intestine commotions and petty wars. After this the parties arose well known by the names of the Guelphs and the Gibelines, according to their professed adherence to the pope or the emperor; but, amidst the struggle for power, which incessantly continued for several centuries to deluge this country with blood, the cities of Florence, Venice, Genoa, Milan, Modena, and others, acted a distinguished part as independent states, of which more may be seen under their respective names.

JUBA (Hist.) a king of Numidia and Mauritania, who succeeded his father Hiempsal, and favoured the cause of Pompey against Julius Cæsar; but killed himself after the battle of Thapsus, when he was abandoned by his subjects. His kingdom became a Roman province, of which Sallust the historian was the first governor. Cæs. de Bell. Civ. l. 2; Vel. Paterc. l. 2; Mel. l. 1; Lucan. l. 3; Flor. l. 4; Suet. in Cæs. c. 35.

JUBA, the second of this name, and son of the preceding, was led among the captives to adorn the triumph of Cæsar; but having married Cleopatra, the daughter of Antony, and being afterwards reinstated in his father's dominions by the favour of Augustus, he died after a reign of 44 years, greatly regretted by his subjects. It is said that the Athenians raised a statue to him, and the Æthiopians worshipped him as a god. This king wrote a History of Rome in Greek, which is often quoted in terms of commendation by the ancients, but of which only a few fragments remain. He also wrote a History of Arabia, and other things, which are now lost. Strab. l. 17; Plin. l. 5; Suet. in Cal. c. 26; Paus. l. 1; Athen. l. 1; Dion. l. 51, &c.

JUBA (Numis.) coins are extant of both these princes.

JUBA I, coins of this prince bear his effigy, as in the annexed figure, of a bearded head, with a singular cap, &c. inscription, REX JUBA; those on the reverse are sometimes in Numidian or Punic characters.

JUBA II, the coins of this prince are not only distinguished by his effigy, as in the annexed figure, but also by the inscriptions on some of them REX JUBA JUBAE F. II. V. Q. i. e. Juba Rex Jubæ Filius Duumvir Quinquennalis; on the reverse, CN. ATELL. — CNEIUS ATELLIUS — ΚΛΕΟΠΑΤΡΑ ΒΑΣ, or ΒΑΣΙΛΙΣΣΑ.

JUBAL (Bibl.) יובל, son of Lamech and Adah, invented instruments of music.

JUCUNDUS (Hist.) a Roman captain of Cæsarea, who used his utmost endeavours to quell a sedition which the Greeks had excited among the Jews, by offering them an insult on the score of their religion. His endeavours were very long without success. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2.

JUDÆA (Geog.) a celebrated country of Syria.

Boundaries and Extent. It was bounded on the N. by Phœnicia, on the E. by Cœlesyria, on the S. by Arabia Petræa, and on the W. by part of Arabia and the Mediterranean. It extended in length, according to Josephus, from Mount Lebanon and the sources of the Jordan to the lake of Gennesaret, and in breadth from the village of Arphac to Julias.

Towns. The places most distinguished in Holy Writ are Jerusalem, the capital; Azotus, Joppa, Bethlehem, as the birth-place of our SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST. Jericho, Lydda, the village Emmaus, &c.

Rivers, &c. The Jordan is the only river of any note; but there are two lakes, namely, the Lake Gennesaret and the Lake Asphaltites, otherwise called the Dead Sea.

History. Judæa was anciently called the Land of Canaan, the Land of Promise, and the Land of Israel, also subsequently Palestine and the Holy Land. It did not receive the name of Judæa until after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, because then the tribe of Judah was the principal, and the territories belonging to the other tribes were possessed by the Samaritans, Idumæans, Arabians, and Philistines. The Jews on their return from the Captivity settled about Jerusalem and in Judah, whence they spread over the whole country. Before the arrival of the Hebrews, Judæa was governed by Canaanitish kings, each in his respective city, who were successively conquered by Joshua. The latter, who had succeeded Moses as the leader of the Israelites, continued to govern them until his death A. M. 2570, A. C. 1434, which was followed by seven years' anarchy and servitude, when the following judges and kings governed Judæa.

In the year A. M. 5004, A. D. 70, according to the computation which has been observed by historians, Jerusalem, the capital of Judæa, was taken by Titus and destroyed, and the nation of the Jews was dispersed, in fulfilment of the prophecy of our Saviour. They afterwards made several fruitless attempts to rebuild the temple, and form themselves into a nation; but were compelled to seek an asylum in any country which would receive them, and to submit to all the hardships of an outlawed people. In the mean time their country passed from the hands of the Romans into those of the Saracens, under the name of Palestine, or the Holy Land, when it became the theatre of the crusades.

Profane Writers on Judæa.

Mela, Strabo, Pliny, Tacitus, Josephus, Eusebius, Hieronymus, Sulpicius Severus, Gulielmus Turonius, Bochart, Baronius, &c.

Fig. 1.

JUDÆA (Numis.) the conquest of this country by Vespasian and Titus is commemorated on their coins, representing as in fig. 1 a male figure, to denote a Jew, standing with his hands bound behind him, by a palm tree, under which a female figure is sitting and weeping; in fig. 2 similar figures are represented, sitting under a trophy, inscription, JUD. CAPT. or JUDAEA CAPTA. Patin. Impp.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Med. Imp. Rom.; Pembroch. Mus. part. iii.

JUDAH (Bibl.) יהודה, or Jehudah, the fourth son of Jacob and Leah, to whose lot the southern part of Palestine fell, whence the country of Judæa received its name, and the whole Hebrew nation that of Judæi, or Jews. The crown passed from Benjamin, namely, from Saul and Ishbosheth into Judah, which was David's tribe, and so continued till the Babylonish captivity. After the return from that captivity, although this tribe did not actually reign, yet it gave the sceptre to those who did reign, until the coming of our Saviour, in fulfilment of the prophecy uttered by Jacob in his blessing of Judah. "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the people be." Gen. xxix. xxxvii; Josh. xv. &c. Judah, when named in opposition, is taken for the kingdom of Judah, and of David's descendants, in distinction from the kingdom of the ten tribes, or of Samaria.

JUDAH, Leo (Biog.) a German priest, and one of the reformers, was born in 1482 in Alsace, and died in 1542, while he was engaged in the translation of the Bible, which was finished by other hands, and printed at Zurich in 1543. He was likewise the author of 'Annotations upon Genesis and Exodus,' in which he was assisted by Zuinglius.

JUDAS (Bibl.) Ἰούδας, derived from the Hebrew Judah; the name of some persons mentioned in Scripture.

JUDAS, or Joiadah, high-priest of the Jews after the Babylonish captivity. Neh. xii. 10.

JUDAS, surnamed Iscariot, was chosen by our Saviour among the number of the apostles, and was appointed their treasurer; but afterwards betrayed his master into the hands of his enemies for thirty shekels. This he executed on the night of the last supper, and pointed out to them the person they should seize, by giving his master a kiss. When he found that our Saviour was condemned to be crucified, he went and hanged himself. Matth. xxvi. xxvii.; Acts i.

JUDAS, vide Jude.

JUDAS, or Jude, surnamed Thaddæus, Lebbæus, and the Zealot, is likewise called the Lord's brother, because he was, as is believed, the son of Mary, sister to the Blessed Virgin, and brother to James the Less, bishop of Jerusalem. He was the author of the Epistle which goes under the name of Jude. Matth. xiii.; Mark vi.; John vi.

JUDAS, surnamed Barsabas, was sent from Jerusalem with Paul and Barnabas, to the church at Antioch, to report the resolution concerning the non-observance of the law. Acts i.

JUDAS the Galilæan, otherwise called the Gaulanite, raised a sedition to oppose the enrolment of the people made by Cyrenius, the governor of Judæa. Acts v. 37; Joseph. Antiq. l. 18.

JUDAS, Paul's host at Damascus. Acts ix.

JUDAS (Hist.) surnamed Maccabæus, the son of Mattathias, succeeded his father as captain of the people during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes; and after having performed prodigies of valour against the violators of the law, he was overpowered by numbers, and fell fighting against the army of Bacchides and Alcimus, the generals of Demetrius. 1 Macc. iv.; Joseph. Antiq. l. 12; Usser. Annal.

JUDAS, a name given to the fourth of the seven Maccabees, who suffered martyrdom under Antiochus Epiphanes. 1 Macc. iv. &c.; Joseph.

JUDAS the Essenian, is noticed for his gift of prophecy by Josephus. Joseph. Antiq. l. 13, c. 19.

JUDAS, otherwise called Aristobulus, eldest son to John Hyrcanus. [Vide Aristobulus]

JUDAS, son of Sarifæus, joining with Mattathias, son of Margalothus, persuaded his scholars to pull down a golden eagle, which Herod the Great had ordered to be fixed on one of the temple gates. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17, c. 8.

JUDAS, son of one Hezekiah, a great robber, whom Herod the Great had caused to be hanged, assembled a number of his followers, after the death of this prince, and, seizing the arsenal and the arms, went about plundering throughout the country. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17.

JUDAS, the son of Jonathan, an eloquent man, and well versed in the law of the Jews, was sent with his brother Simon by Eleazar, at the commencement of the Jewish war, to offer Metilius, the general of the Romans, his life, if he would go from Jerusalem. This Judas was a great enemy to Flavius Josephus. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2.

JUDAS, son of Celsias, left the party of the zealots, of which he wished to be the chief, and attached himself to that of Eleazar, in whose cause he displayed much valour. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2.

JUDAS, son of another Judas, one of the generals in the party of Simon, who oppressed Jerusalem at the time of the siege, offered to surrender a tower to the Romans, which he was appointed to guard, but being detected by Simon in this act of treachery, the latter ordered Judas and his companions to be killed, and their bodies thrown to the Romans. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 5.

JUDAS, son of Jairus, of the faction of the same Simon abovementioned, distinguished himself as one of the commanders during the siege, and escaped at the capture of the city, with 3000 men, who were all surrounded by the Romans and cut to pieces. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 7.

JUDAS (Ecc.) bishop of Jerusalem in the second century, succeeded Ephraim, and was the la[st] of the Jewish converts who governed that church. Euseb. in Chron.

JUDAS (Biog.) a Greek historian and theologian, composed a treatise on the Seventy Weeks of Daniel, and Chronography, which he continued to the tenth year of the reign of the emperor Severus, A. D. 203. Euseb. Hist. l. 6; Niceph. l. 4; S. Hieron. in Cat.

JUDEX, Matthew (Biog.) one of the principal writers of the Centuries of Magdeburgh, was born in 1528, at Tipposwald, in Misnia, and died in 1564. He wrote, among other things, 'De Typographiæ Inventione.' The Centuries, which he had a share in compiling, in order to form an Ecclesiastical History, were carried down to 1298, and published under the title of 'Historia Ecclesiastica congesta per Magdeburgenses et alios,' 13 vols. fol. Basil. 1562.

JUDITH (Hist.) יהודית, of Reuben, daughter of Marari, and widow of Manasseh, is celebrated by her deliverance of Bethulia from the siege of Holofernes, whom she killed as he was sleeping, as narrated in the book which bears her name, and is supposed by some to have been written by her. It is not admitted among the canonical books in the English church, but it was admitted as such by many of the Fathers, and was confirmed by the council of Trent.

JUDICELLO (Geog.) the ancient Amenanus, a small river in the east of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, which rises in Mount Ætna, and falls into the Gulf of Catania.

JUENNIN, Gaspard (Biog.) a French divine, was born in 1650, at Varembon, in Bresse, in the diocese of Lyons, and died in 1713, leaving a number of theological works.

IVES (Ecc.) vide Yves.

IVES, John (Biog.) an antiquarian of Suffolk, who died in 1776, at the early age of 25, published 'Three Select Papers,' on coins, medals, and paintings, besides 'Remarks on the Gariorum of the Romans,' &c. 8vo. 1774.

IVETAUX, Nicholas Vauquelin, Seigneur des (Biog.) a French poet, was born of a respectable family at la Fresnay, a castle near Falaise, and died in 1649, in the 90th year of his age, leaving sonnets and poetical pieces, published in the 'Delices de la Poesie Françoise,' 8vo. Paris, 1620.

JUGLARIS, Aloysius (Biog.) an Italian Jesuit, who died in 1653, was the author of numerous panegyrics, which were printed at Lyons in 1644, and reprinted in 1653, at Genoa, under the title of 'Pars secunda Elogiorum Humana complectens.'

JUGURTHA (Hist.) the illegitimate son of Manastabal, the brother of Micipsa, king of Numidia, was educated by the latter, with his two sons Adherbal and Hiempsal, but on the death of his uncle, he cut off Hiempsal, and stripping Adherbal of his dominions, compelled him to fly to Rome for safety. His appeal to the Roman senate, though affecting, was not sufficient to prevail against the gold of Jugurtha, from whose hands he shared the fate of his brother. Jugurtha was, however, conquered by Marius, and being led to Rome in triumph, died six days after, A. C. 106. His name and history have been immortalized by Sallust.

IVICA (Geog.) the ancient Ebusus, an island in the Mediterranean, 56 m. S. W. Majorca, the capital of which of the same name, is situated lon. 1° 25′ E., lat. 38° 52′ N.

JULIA, gens (Hist.) a Roman family, which boasted its descent from Venus, the name being derived from Iulus, the son of Ascanius, and grandson of Æneas. It is known in three of its branches, the Cæsares, Libones, and Bursiones, but acquired its celebrity from the former. [Vide Julia, gens, under Numismatics, and Julius]

JULIA, daughter of Julius Cæsar, and wife of Pompey, who died in child-bed. As she was the bond of friendship between these two rivals, her death gave rise to those divisions which proved fatal to both. Lucan. Pharsal. l. 1; Plut. in Pomp.

JULIA, the only daughter of the emperor Augustus, notorious for her debaucheries, was successively married to Marcellus, Agrippa, and Tiberius. She was banished by the latter to the island of Pandatarius, near Reggio, and at the death of Augustus, was starved to death by his order, A. D. 41. Tacit. Annal. l. 1; Sueton. in Aug. et Tib.

JULIA, the daughter of the preceding, by Agrippa, and granddaughter of Augustus, was married to Æmilius Lepidus, and died after 20 years' exile, to which she had been ordered by Augustus, for her licentiousness. Tacit. Annal. l. 4.

JULIA, Agrippina Senior, vide Agrippina et Junior.

JULIA, one of the sisters of Caligula, with all of whom he is said to have had an incestuous commerce.

JULIA, a daughter of Titus, who prostituted herself to her brother Domitian, and died, as is said, in consequence of his obliging her to destroy the fruit of her womb.

JULIA, Sabina, the niece of Trajan, and daughter of his sister Marciana, was unhappily married to Adrian, who owed his elevation to this alliance. Nevertheless their marriage was attended with much unhappiness to both, but particularly to Sabina, who was compelled to seek release from her misery by a voluntary death, A. D. 138, when the emperor decreed her divine honours.

JULIA, Domna, a native of Emesa, in Syria, wife of Severus, and mother of Geta and Caracalla, was distinguished no less for her talents than her debaucheries. Her son Geta, was murdered in her arms by his brother Caracalla.

JULIA, Mæsa, sister of Julia Domna, was the grandmother of Heliogabalus, and Alexander Severus. Her daughter, Julia Sœmia, was the mother of Heliogabalus; and her other daughter, Julia Mamæa, was the mother of Alexander Severus. She was a female of great prudence, and dying at the age of 60, was honoured as a divinity by her grandson Alexander Severus.

JULIA, Sœmia, the mother of Heliogabalus, as above-mentioned, was a woman of depraved morals. Dio and Herodian call her Julia Sœmis; and Lampridius, Semiamira; but on coins she is named Sœmia. Dio. Cass. l. 77; Herod. l. 5; Lamprid. in Vit.

JULIA, Mamæa, sister of the preceding, and mother of Alexander Severus, a woman of great virtue and wisdom, had so much the confidence of her son, that he did nothing without her counsel. She was killed with him at Mentz by the soldiers, who revolted at the instigation of Maximinus. It is asserted by many authors that she was a Christian. Dio. l. 78; Lamprid. in Vit. Alex.; Herod. l. 5; Cedren. in Compend. Hist.

JULIA, Cornelia Paula, the first wife of Heliogabalus, was repudiated soon after her marriage.

JULIA, Aquilia Severa, vide Aquilia.

JULIA, gens (Numis.) coins are extant of the three branches of this family, namely, the Cæsares, Libones, and Bursiones, above-mentioned. Among those of the first branch are some of Sextus, Julius Cæsar, and Lucius Julius Cæsar, known by the inscriptions, SEX*tus* JUL*ius* CAESAR.—Lucius JUL*ius* Lucii Filius SEX*ti Nepos* CAESAR.—SEX*tus* JUL*ius* Cari Filius, SEX*ti Nepos* CAESAR, [vide Cæsar] but most of the coins of this family were struck to commemorate the circumstances of Cæsar's life. Many of his first medals are impressed with the figure of an elephant, for which various reasons have been assigned, but which most probably alluded to his conquest of Africa, the land of elephants, hence it is that he was sometimes represented as in fig. 1, drawn in a triumphal chariot by four elephants, commemorative of his triumph over Juba, king of Mauritania; for the same reason the figure of a crocodile is frequently given in reference to his conquest of Egypt. Many of his other victories are also commemorated in a similar manner, as in fig. 2, representing a trophy, a military lituus, and a Spanish javelin, &c. alluding to his successes in Spain; in fig. 3, representing a trophy, and also Gaul and Germany, one in the habit of a woman mourning, and another of a naked barbarian. His supposed divine origin from Venus is very frequently alluded to by the figure of Venus and Cupid in various forms, particularly as in fig. 4, where she is driving a chariot drawn by two Cupids, also by the figure of Æneas, bearing his father, and the like. His sacerdotal honours are also represented by the utensils used by the high priests and augurs, as the simpulum, the sacrificer's axe, the lituus, &c. The inscriptions also serve to show his honours and his titles, as IMP. V and IMP. X, showing how often he was saluted Imperator by the army who had gained victories under his auspices, so likewise CAESAR DICTATOR TERTIO PONTIFEX MAXIMUS.—CAESAR AUGUR PONTIFEX MAXIMUS.—CAESAR PARENS PATRIAE.—CAESAR DICTATOR QUARTO.—CAESAR AUGUR IMPERATOR QUINTO CONSUL QUARTO.—CAESAR AUGUR IMP. SEXT. COS. QUINT.—CAESAR DICTATOR PERPETUO.—CAESAR COS. QUINTO DICTATOR PERPETUO. After his death he was worshipped with divine honours, and is therefore styled on the medals that were struck in honour of him DIVO JULIO, whence for the same reason Augustus also styled himself DIVUS JULIUS DIVI FILIUS. The other branches of this family are also distinguished by the inscriptions L. JUL. LIBO, i. e. Lucius Julius Libo.—L. JULI. BURSIO.

JULIA, the princesses of this name above-mentioned, are all distinguished on their medals by their effigies, as in the annexed figures; and also by their several surnames, but it is doubtful whether they are all of the Julian family.

JULIA, the daughter of Augustus, is easily to be distinguished from Livia, on the medals of Augustus, although they are very rare.

JULIA, the daughter of Titus, was styled AUGUSTA, and in the Greek ΣΕΒΑΣΤΗ, even in the lifetime of her father, as JULIA AUGUSTA TITI AUGUSTI FILIA.—DIVA JULIA AUGUSTA.—ΙΟΥΛια CEBACTH.—ΙΟΥΛ. ΑΥτοκράτορος Τίτ*ῃ* Καίσαρος, i. e. Julia Imperatoris Titi Cæsaris Filia. Some medals bearing the name of Sabina, are also referred to her, but the greater part to Sabina, the wife of Adrian.

JULIA SABINA, the wife of Adrian. [Vide Sabina]

JULIA DOMNA, was honoured on her medals with the titles of Pia Felix, &c. as JULIA FELIX AUG.—JULIA PIA FELIX AUGUSTA.—JULIA DOMNA AUG.—DIVA JUL. DOMNA AUG.; in the Greek, ΔΟΜΝΑ ΙΟΥΛΙΑ CΕΟΥΗΡΑ ΑΥΓ.—ΙΟΥΛ. ΔΟΜ. CEBACTH.—ΑΥΓ. ΔΟΜΝΑ ΤΥΧΗ. On the reverse, AEQUITAS AUGG.—AETERNITAS IMPERI.—ANNONA AUG.—BONI EVENTUS.—CEREREM.—CAESARI FRUGIFERAE.—CONCORDIA.—CONSECRATIO.—DIANA LUCIFERA.—FECUNDITAS VICTRIX.—FELICITAS TEMPORUM.—FORTUNA REDUX.—HILARITAS.—INDULGENTIA AUGG.—JUNO REGINA.—LAETITIA.—MATER AUG.—MAT. SEN*atus* Mater PATR*iae*.—MATRI CASTRORUM.—MATRI DEUM SALUTARI.—PIETAS PUBLICA.—PROVIDENTIA DEORUM.—SALUS AUGUSTI.—S. P. Q. R. JULIAE AUGUSTAE VENERI GENETRICI.—VENUS COELESTIS.—VENUS FELIX.—VESTA MATER.—VESTAE SANCTAE.—VOTA PUBLICA, &c.

JULIA, Mammæa, or Mamæa, is known by the inscriptions JUL. MAMAEA AUG.—JULIA MAMAEA AUG MATER. AUG.—DIVA JULIA MAMMAEA; in the Greek, ΙΟΥΛΙΑ ΜΑΜ. CEB. ΜΗΤ. CE. Κ. CΤΡ. On the reverse of some, IMP. ALEXANDER PIUS AUG. IMP. CAES. M. AUREL. SEVER. AUG.—MATER AUGUSTI ET CASTRORUM.—PIETAS MAMAEAE, &c. &c.

Julia, Mæsa, is distinguished by the title of AUGUSTA on medals, as JULIA MAESA AUG.—DIVA MAES. AUGUSTA.—IOYA. MAHCA.—IOYΛIA MAICA CEB. MHT CTPA. On the reverse, CONSECRATIO; FELICITAS, &c. &c.

Julia, Sœmia, is distinguished by this name on her medals, as JULIA SOEMIA AUG.—JULIA SOEMIAS AUG.; on the reverse, AEQUITAS PUBLICA.—JUNO CONSERVATRIX.—JUNO REGINA.—MATER DEUM.—VENUS GENETRIX; in the Greek, IOYA COAIMIA. CEB. or IOYΛIA COAIMIC. CEB.

Julia, Cornelia Paula, is distinguished on her medals by the inscriptions in Latin, JULIA PAULA AUGUSTA vel AUG.; but in the Greek with the addition of the prænomen Cornelia, as KOPNII ΠAYΛA CEB.—IOY. KOPNII ΠAYΛA. CEB.—IOYA. KOPNIΛIA ΠAYΛA CE, &c. On the reverse, AEQUITAS PUBLICA CONCORDIA AETERNA.—FORTU. FELIX.—VENERI FELICI.—VENUS GENETRIX vel VICTRIX. Vaill. Præst. et Num. Gr. &c.; Patin. Impp.; Tristan. Comment. Hist.; Spanh. Dissert.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Mediobarb. Impp.; Pembroch. Mus. &c. &c.

JULIACUM (Geog.) a town of Germany, now Juliers.

JULIANUS, Flavius Claudius (Hist.) or Julian, an emperor, surnamed the Apostate, on account of his having apostatized from the Christian faith, in which he was bred, was the son of Julius Constantinus, and the nephew of Constantine the Great. He was born at Constantinople in 331, succeeded to the empire at the death of Constans in 361, and died in 363, of a wound which he received while animating his soldiers to the battle against Sapor, king of Persia, leaving among his writings 'Misopogon,' or the Beard-hater, and his account of the Cæsars, &c. The best edition of his works is that of Spanheim, fol. Lips. 1696; and of the Cæsars alone, that of Heusinger, 8vo. Goth. 1741, is the most esteemed. Socrat. Hist. Eccles.; Ammian. Marcellin.; Eutrop. &c.

Julianus, the maternal uncle of the preceding, and also an apostate, was a count of the east, who died at Antioch, at the moment that he was meditating mischief to the Christians.

Julianus, the name of two tyrants.

Julianus, Marcus, governor of Venice in 284, when Numerian was killed, having raised his standard against Carinus, marched against him, but his defeat at Verona blasted his projects, and he was killed fighting valiantly. Sozom. Hist. Eccles.; Theodoret. l. 3.

Julianus, the second tyrant of this name, raised the standard of revolt in Africa, but perished soon after. Aurel. Vict. in Vit. Imp.

Julianus, a usurper, who was set up as king by the Samaritans, in the reign of Justinian, but being taken with some of his followers, was burnt alive.

Julianus, a Roman captain, signalized himself at the siege of Jerusalem by a desperate act of valour, in opposing the whole force of the Jews, in a particular quarter, and fell fighting most valiantly, covered with wounds, and exhausted from the loss of blood. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. l. 6.

Julianus, second son of Constantine the tyrant, was created nobilissimus by his father, but was put to death with him in 411, by order of Honorius.

Julianus, a Spanish nobleman, count of Ceuta, a capital city in the government of the Spanish Goths, assisted the Arabians in their invasion of Spain, in revenge for the affront which Roderic, king of Spain, had put upon him, but being afterwards suspected of holding a secret intelligence with the Christians against the Arabians, he was beheaded by order of Muza, their general.

Julianus, St. (Ecc.) the first bishop of Mans, and the apostle of the Maine, was a Roman gentleman and a heathen; who being converted by the pope St. Clement, was sent to the province of La Maine, in France, where he preached the Gospel with extraordinary zeal, and died in 138, after having governed his church for 47 years.

Julianus, St. a martyr at Brionde, in the third or fourth century, who was a soldier by profession, was beheaded by order of Crispinus, governor of the province of Viennois, during the persecution of Diocletian. Gregor. Turon. de Geor. Martyr. l. 2.

Julianus, bishop of Alexandria, succeeded Agrippa, or Agrippinus, in 177, and governed this church until 187. There were likewise two bishops of Jerusalem of this name in the second century.

Julianus, an heretical bishop of Eclana, in Campania, was deposed from his dignity after having been condemned by the popes and emperors, and died miserably in 455. Prosper. in Chron.; Baron. Annal. ann. 419.

Julianus, a bishop of Puzzuolo, was sent by pope Leo I in 449, to the council of Ephesus, to oppose the Eutychians.

Julianus, a bishop of Cos, and a zealous defender of the orthodox faith, was at the council general of Chalcedon, in the employ of the pope Leo above-mentioned.

Julianus, archbishop of Toledo, and one of the most learned men in his day, died in 690, leaving among his works, 1. 'Prognosticorum futuri Sæculi, sive de Origine Mortis Humanæ Libri tres,' &c. inserted in the eleventh volume of the Bibliotheca Patrum. 2. 'De Demonstratione sextæ Ætatis,' &c. 3. 'Historia de Wambæ Regis Gothorum Expeditione,' &c. inserted in Duchesne's collection of French Historians. Bellarmin, Script. Eccles.; Cave, Hist. Lit.

Julianus (Numis.) many medals are extant of the emperor of this name before-mentioned, bearing his effigy, [vide Pl. II] and the inscriptions, JULIANUS NOB. CAESAR.—CL. JULIANUS NOB. C.—D. N. JULIEN, Peter (Biog.) a French sculptor, was born in 1731, and died in 1804. His statue of La Fontaine, is reckoned his master-piece.

Julien, Simon, another French artist, was born in 1736 at Carigliano, a village near Locarno, in Italy, and died in 1799. Among his best performances as a painter, may be reckoned his 'Jupiter and Juno,' 'Aurora and Titan.'

JULIO, Romano (Biog.) an Italian painter, the disciple and favourite of Raphael, who died at Mantua in 1546, distinguished himself not only in painting, but also in architecture, in which latter art he left specimens of his skill in the palace which he built for his patron Clement VII. He also adorned the churches and public buildings of Rome with his highly finished paintings.

Julius (Ecc.) the name of three popes.

Julius I, a saint as well as a pope, and a Roman by birth, was ordained bishop of Rome after Mark in 337, and died in 352, after having testified his zeal in behalf of the orthodox faith against all heretics, but particularly against the opponents of S. Athanasius, in whose defence he called a council at Rome, where this holy father was pronounced innocent. A letter on the Incarnation is attributed to this pope.

Julius II, formerly called Julian delle Rovere, was born at Albizala, near Savona, made successively bishop of Carpentras, Albano, Ostia, Bologna, and Avignon, after which he was raised to the purple in 1471, by his uncle Sixtus IV, made commander in chief of the papal troops against the revolted Umbrians, and at the death of Pius III, succeeded to the papal chair in 1503, when he directed all his efforts both by arts and arms to the aggrandizement of the see of Rome, and died in 1513, at the age of 70, leaving the character of a better statesman than a christian.

Julius III, otherwise named John Maria du Mont, a native of Arezzo, succeeded Paul III in the papal chair in 1550, and died in 1556, at the age of 68.

Julius (Numis.) medals are extant of the two last popes of this name, bearing their effigies, as in the annexed figures; inscriptions on the reverse of some of Julius II, ETSI ANNOSA GERMANIA, with the figure of an oak, in allusion to the family name delle Rovere, signifying an oak. JUSTITIAE PACIS FIDEIQUE RECUPERATORI, on the occasion of the peace between France and Spain, brought about by this pope. ANNONA PUBLICA, on the occasion of his procuring corn from Africa for the poor, in the time of scarcity. Some medals of Julius III are inscribed. PAX ITALIAE RESTITUTA, on the occasion of the peace brought bout by this pope. HILARITAS PONTIFICIA ROMA, on the celebration of the jubilee in the first year of his pontificate: ANGLIA RESURGES, UT NUNC NOVISSIMO DIE, to commemorate the accession of queen Mary to the English throne; IMMANE PONDUS, VIRES INFRACTAE, with the figure of Atlas, to denote the weight of care which overwhelmed this pope during the tumults of the times.

JULUS (Myth.) the name of Ascanius, the son of Æneas, and also of a son of Ascanius.

JUNCKER, Christian (Biog.) a medallist, was born at Dresden in 1668, and died in 1714, leaving a number of German translations, and several editions of classic authors, besides 'Schediasma de Diariis Eruditorum;' 'Theatrum Latinitatis Universæ Reghero-Junkerianum;' 'Lineæ Eruditionis Universæ et Historiæ Philosophicæ;' 'Vita Lutheri ex Nummis,' 'Vita Ludolphi,' &c.

Juncker, Gottlob John, a physician, was born in 1680, at Londorff, in Hesse, and died in 1759, leaving, 1. 'Conspectus Medicinæ Theoretico-practicæ, Tabulis 137 primarios Morbos,' &c. 4to. Hall. 1718. 2. 'Conspectus Chirurgiæ,' &c. 4to. 1721. 3. 'Conspectus Formularum Medicarum,' 4to. ibid. 1723. 4. 'Conspectus Therapiæ Generalis,' &c. 4to. ibid. 1725. 5. JUNCTIN, Francis (Biog.) in Italian Giuntino, a mathematician and astrologer, was born at Florence in 1523, and died in 1590, leaving, 1. Commentaries in Latin on the 'Sphæra' of Sacro-Bosco, 2 vols. 8vo. 1577, and 1578. 2. 'Speculum Astrologiæ,' 2 vols. fol. Lugd. 1581, &c.

JUNGERMANN, Godfrey (Biog.) a native of Leipsic, who died in 1610, was the first who published an ancient Greek translation of Cæsar's Commentaries, 2 vols. 4to. Franc. 1606.

Jungermann, Lewis, brother of the preceding, and a botanist, who died in 1653, was the author of 'Hortus Eystettensis;' 'Catalogus Plantarum quæ circa Altorfinum nascuntur,' 8vo. Altorf. 1646; 'Cornucopia Floræ Giessensis.'

JUNGIUS, Joachim (Biog.) a mathematician, physician, and botanist, was born in 1587, and died in 1657, leaving, 1. 'Logica Hamburgensis,' 8vo. Hamb. 1638. 2. 'Geometria Empirica,' 4to. Rostock. et Hamb. 3. 'Doxos copiæ Physicæ Minores, sive Isagoge Physica,' &c. 4to. Hamb. 1662. 4. 'Kurzer Bericht von der Didactica oder Lehrkunst Wolffangi Ratichii durch Christoph. JUNIA, gens (Hist.) a Roman family, which was both patrician and plebeian; of the former branch was Junius Brutus who expelled the Tarquins from Rome. [Vide Junius, &c.]

Junia, a niece of Cato of Utica, who married Cassius and died in the reign of Tiberius 64 years after her husband had killed himself at the battle of Philippi.

Junia, Calvina, descended from Augustus, who, being accused of incest with her brother Silanus, was banished by Claudius, and recalled by Nero. Tac. Annal. l. 2.

Junia, gens (Numis.) the medals of this family principally commemorate their descent from Junius Brutus mentioned under History [vide Brutus], whose effigy is given as in the annexed figure. They bear the inscriptions — LIBERTAS — BRUTUS—C. JUNI.—M. JUNI. M. F. L. N.—D. JUNI. M. F. Q. CÆPIO BRUTUS PROCOS, &c. The two plebeian branches, namely, the Peræ and the Silani, are also known by the inscriptions D. JUNI. PERA—D. JUNI. D. F. PERA.—M. JUN. PERA. D. SILANUS L. F.—C. JUNI. SILANUS, &c. Golz. Fast. Passim.; Vaillant. Fam. Jun.; Morell. Fam. Jun.; Spanh. Dissert.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Mediob. Impp.; Mus. Pembroch.

Junia Donata (Numis.) the wife of Postumus, is known by a medal bearing her effigy, as in the annexed figure, inscription JUNIA DONATA AUGUSTA; on the reverse SALUS PROVINCIARUM, with the heads of Postumus, father and son.

JUNIUS, Brutus (Hist.) vide Brutus.

Junius, Adrian (Biog.) a Dutch scholar, was born at Hoorn in 1511, or 1512, and died in 1575, leaving, among his works, 'Lexicon Græco-Latinum,' 1540; 'Adagiorum ab Erasmo Omissorum Centuriæ Octo et Dimidia, 1558.

Junius, or Du Jon, Francis, the descendant of a noble family, was born at Bourges in 1545, and died in 1602, leaving, among his works, a Hebrew Lexicon and Grammar, &c.

Junius, Francis, son of the preceding, was born at Heidelberg in 1589, and died in 1677, leaving, 1. 'Glossarium Gothicum in quatuor Evangelia Gothica,' 4to. Dordrac. 1665. 2. 'De Pictura Veterum,' 4to. 1637, and fol. Rotterdam. 1694; also an English translation, entitled 'The Painting of the Ancients,' in three books, Lond. 1638. To the folio edition was prefixed his life by Grævius. 3. 'Observationes in Willerami Francicam Paraphrasin Cantici Canticorum,' 8vo. Amst. 1655. 4. 'Several Letters in Ger. Joh. Vossii et clarorum Virorum ad eum Epistolæ,' fol. Lond. 1690.

JUNO (Myth.) Ἥρη, the daughter of Saturn and Ops, both sister and wife of Jupiter, was supposed to preside over riches and marriage; she is commonly styled by Homer Ἥρα βοῶπις, θεὰ λευκώλενος, θεὰ πρέσβα Ἥρα πότνια, &c. She also received the surnames of Matrona, Lucina, Moneta, Sospita, Argiva, Telchinia, Cithæronia, Ilithya, Pronuba,

JUNO (Numis.) this goddess is commonly represented on coins or medals with a peacock, as in fig. 1, when she was designated by the Romans JUNO REGINA; sometimes, however, as JUNO LUCINA, fig. 2, having a child in her arms, to denote that she presided over child-birth; and not unfrequently as JUNO SOSPITA, or SISPITA, having her head covered with a goat's skin, as in fig. 3. In the annexed figure, she is depicted as JUNO MATRONA, with the characteristics of a dignified matron. Some medals are also inscribed JUNO MARTIALIS — JUNO CONSERVATRIX, &c. Tristan. Comment. Hist.; Spanh. Dissert; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Mus. Pembr. &c.; Spence, Polimetes, &c.

JUNTA, Philip and Bernard (Biog.) two printers of celebrity, who had printing offices at Venice, Florence, and Geneva. Philip Junta began to print at Geneva in 1497, and died in 1597. Bernard was his partner and relative. The Greek classics by Philip Junta are held in great estimation.

JUNTA, Thomas, a physician of Venice, published in 1554 a Treatise on the Battles of the Ancients.

JUPITER (Myth.) among the Greeks Ζεὺς, the son of Saturn and Ops, and the most powerful of the gods, is said to have been saved from destruction by his mother, for Saturn, who had received the kingdom of the world on condition of his not raising male children, devoured all his sons as soon as born; but Ops contriving to give him a stone instead of this child secreted him in the island of Crete, where he was fed on the milk of the goat Amalthea, and was educated by the Corybantes on Mount Ida. As soon as he was a year old, Jupiter made war on the Titans, whom he conquered, and then expelled his father from his kingdom, who took refuge in Latium. He reserved the kingdom of heaven for himself, gave the empire of the seas to Neptune, and that of the infernal regions to Pluto. His surnames were numerous, and many of them derived from the place or function over which he presided. Those most known are Jupiter, Ammon, Feretrius, Ultor, Capitolinus, Maximus, Optimus, Olympius, Fluvialis, Victor, Anxurus, Inventor, Elicius, Latialis, &c. His Greek name of Ζεὺς, or Ζῆν, has been derived from ζάω, to live, because he was supposed to be the author of life; that of the Latins Jupiter, from juvo, to help, because he aided the operations of nature. The name of Jupiter is also taken for the air. Hom. Il. &c. Passim.; Hesiod. Theog.; Orph. Hymn.; Pind. Olymp.; Callim. Jov.; Apollon. Argon. l. 1; Virg. Æn. l. 1; Horat. l. 3, od. 1; Lycoph. in Cass.; Ovid. Met. l. 1, &c.

JUPITER (Numis.) being considered the most powerful of the gods, was the most honoured among men, and most frequently represented on medals. His common attributes are the eagle, or a figure of victory, the thunder and spear, as in fig. 1, or as in fig. 2, where he is depicted as Jupiter Capitolinus, according to the inscription Jupiter Optimus MAX*imus* CAPITOLINUS; in fig. 3 he is painted with a horn as Jupiter Ammon; and in fig. 4 he is to be seen in the act of hurling his thunder.

JURA (Geog.) a ridge of mountains, which, in ancient geography, separated the Helvetii from the Sequani, or, according to the moderns, Switzerland from Burgundy. They are mentioned by Cæsar, Pliny, and others.

JURIEN, Peter (Biog.) a French Protestant, was born in 1637, and died in 1713, leaving, 1. 'Traité de la Devotion.' 2. 'Apologie de la Morale des Protestans.' 3. 'Préservatif contre le Changement de Religion.' 4. 'Histoire du Calvanisme et du Papisme mise en Parallele,' 3 vols. 1683. 4. 'Traité de l'Unité de l'Eglise,' 1688. 5. 'Abrégé de l'Histoire du Concile de Trente.' 6. 'Apologie pour l'Accomplissement des Propheties,' &c.

JURIN, James (Biog.) a physician, who was born in 1684, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1750, is well known to the mathematical world by his Essays, which were first published in the Philosophical Transactions, and afterwards printed collectively in 1732 under the title of 'Physico-Mathematical Dissertations.' He likewise added to Smith's System of Optics, published in 1738, 'An Essay upon Distinct and Indistinct Vision;' and edited Varenius' Geography, in 2 vols. 8vo.

JUSSIEU, Anthony de (Biog.) a botanist, was born at Lyons in 1686, and died in 1758, leaving, among his works, 'Genera Plantarum secundum Ordines Naturales disposita,' 8vo. Paris. 1789. He published also an Appendix to Tournefort, and methodized and abridged the work of Barrelier on the Plants of France, Spain, and Italy. [Vide Plate XXXIII]

JUSSIEU, Bernard, brother of the preceding, who died in 1777, edited Tournefort's work on the Plants which grow near Paris, 2 vols. 12mo. Paris, 1725.

JUSTINA, Flavia (Hist.) wife of the usurper Magnentius, was afterwards married to the emperior Valentinian, sen. by whom she had Valentinian, jun. Galla, Grata, and Justa. She attached herself to the Arians, and persecuted those of the orthodox faith. Socrat. Hist. Eccles.; Sozomen. l. 7; Ammian. Marcellin.; Zosim. l. 4; Ruffinus Baronius, &c.

JUSTINIAN (Hist.) vide Justinianus.

JUSTINIANI (Hist.) an illustrious family of Italy, which distinguished itself in its different branches in the cities of Venice, Genoa, and Naples, &c.

JUSTINIANI, Francis, was elected doge of Genoa in 1392.

JUSTINIANI, Bernard, nephew of St. Laurence, mentioned under Ecclesiastical History, was employed on different embassies from the republic to Rome and France, and died in 1489, after having held the highest posts in the state next to that of doge. His Speeches, Letters, and History of Venice, were printed in folio, Venice, 1492; besides which he left a Life of his Uncle, St. Laurence. His own Life was written by Antonio Stella.

JUSTINIANI, Peter, a general in the armies of Genoa, had the privilege of coining money as lord of the island of Chios, which was taken from this family by the Turks in 1566.

Justiniani, James, a Genoese captain, defeated Alphonso V, king of Arragon, and took him prisoner in 1435.

Justiniani, Alexander, was elected doge of Genoa in 1611, and Luke, his son, in 1644, and John Anthony Justiniani in 1713, who was the seventh of his family that had enjoyed this dignity.

Justiniani, Raphael, was sent ambassador from the republic to Rome and Constantinople.

Justiniani, St. Laurence (Ecc.) the first patriarch of Venice, of the family above-mentioned, was born in 1381, and died in 1451, leaving many works of piety, which were printed together at Brescia, in 2 vols. fol. 1506, and again at Venice in 1755.

Justiniani, Augustin, bishop of Nebbio, or Nebo, was born at Genoa, in 1470, and perished in a voyage from Genoa to Nebo in 1536, together with the vessel in which he was embarked. Among his works is his 'Psalterium Hebræum, Græcum, et Chaldæum, &c. which was published at Genoa in 1516; also his 'Annales de Republica Genoensi,' Gen. 1537. A translation of the 'Morch Nevochim,' of Maimonides, is likewise ascribed to him.

Justiniani, Horatio, bishop of Nocera, was afterwards created cardinal, and appointed grand penitentiary.

Justiniani, Bernard, bishop of Angloni, died in 1616.

Justiniani, Jerome, was made bishop of Chios in 1597, and died in 1618, at the age of 65. Agathias, Nicephorus, Paul Diaconus, Baronius, &c.

JUSTINIANUS (Hist.) two emperors of this name.

Justinianus I, emperor of the East, succeeded his uncle, Justin the First, in 527, and died in the 83d year of his age, after a reign of 39 years, during which he had caused a code of laws to be drawn up by the ablest lawyers, well known by the name of Justinian's Pandects, or Digests. The church of St. Sophia at Constantinople was erected under his patronage. Procop. de Bell. Vand. Persic. &c.; Evagr. Hist. Eccles. l. 1.

Justinianus II, or the Younger, surnamed Rhinotmetus, succeeded his father, Constantine Pogonatus, in 685, and was killed in 711, after having been once driven into exile by his subjects. Paul Diacon. Hist.; Theophanes et Cedrenus in Annal.; Anast. in Constantin.

Justinianus (Numis.) coins or medals are extant of both the emperors of this name bearing their effigies; the first of which is given as in Plate II, and the second as in the annexed figure. The inscriptions on the obverse of the first are—D. N. JUSTINI.—D. N. JUSTINIANI.—D. JUSTINIANUS AUG.—D. N. JUSTINIANUS P. F. AUG.; P. P. AUG. &c.; on the reverse, BADUELA REX.—D. N. ATHALARICUS REX.—D. N. THEODAHATUS REX.—D. N. WITTIGES REX.—GLORIA ROMANORUM.—VICTORIA AUGG. &c. Those on the obverse of the second Justinian are—D. N. JUSTINIAN. P. P. A.—D. N. JUSTINIANUS SERVUS CHRISTI, &c.; on the reverse, D. N. IhS. ChS. REX REGNANTIUM.

JUSTINOPOLIS (Geog.) now Capo d'Istria, the capital of Istria, which was a bishop's see, suffragan of the patriarch of Aquileia.

JUSTINUS (Hist.) the name of two emperors of the East.

Justinus, Flavius Anicius, I, a native of Thrace, succeeded Anastasius in 518, and died at the age of 70, after a reign of more than eight years, in which he endeavoured to suppress the Arians and other heretics. Evagr. Hist. Eccles. l. 3; Marcellin. in Chron.; Zonar. Annal.

Justinus, Flavius Anicius, II, surnamed the Younger, succeeded Justinian I in 565, and died in 578, after having waged war with the Persians with various success. The Longobards made their settlement in Italy during his reign.

Justinus (Numis.) the medals of these two emperors are not always to be distinguished, as they both bear the inscription—D. N. JUSTINUS AUG.; or D. N. FL. ANIC. JUSTINUS; but their effigies are given as in the annexed figures. The inscriptions on the reverse are—GLORIA EXERCITUS.—D. N. ATHALARICUS.—INVICTA ROMA, THEODORICUS, &c. *Du Cange, Byzt. Fa.; Band. Justinus (Ecc.) or Justin, surnamed the Martyr, one of the earliest writers in the Christian church, was born at Neapolis, the ancient Sichem of Palestine, in the province of Samaria. His father Priscius was a Greek Gentile, and he himself was deeply versed in the Platonic philosophy, when he was led, by a conversation with a Christian convert, to inquire into the merits of that religion which he afterwards embraced in 132, and supported both by preaching and writing until he was called upon to seal its truth with his blood. He was beheaded, after having been scourged, according to the imperial edict, in the reign of M. Aurelius, A. D. 165. Among his works the best known are his 'Dialogue with Trypho,' and his first and second Apology for the Christians, the former of which he presented to Antoninus Pius, and the latter to his successor, Aurelius. There are several editions of his works, the first of which was that of Stephens, fol. Paris, 1551; but those of Maran, fol. Paris, 1742, and of Oberthur, 3 vols. 8vo. Wurtzburg, 1777, are esteemed the best. There is also an edition of his Apologies by Ashton, 8vo. Cantab. 1768; of his first Apology by Grabe, Oxon. 1700; of his second Apology by Hutchinson, Oxon. 1703; of his Dialogue with Trypho, by Jebb, 8vo. Lond. 1719; of his two Apologies and his Dialogue by Thirlby, fol. London, 1722. S. Iren. adv. Hæret. l. 4, c. 13; Euseb. in Hist. et in Chron.; S. Hieron. in Cat.; Phot. Bibl. Cod. 23; Bellarmin; Baronius; Cave; Du Pin, &c.

Justinus, M. Junianus (Biog.) a Latin historian, who flourished about the age of Antoninus Pius, is only known by his Epitome of the History of Trogus Pompeius, the original of which is now lost. The best editions of Justin are that of Ab. Gronovius, 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1719; that of Hearne, 8vo. Oxon. 1703; and that of Barbou. 12mo. Paris. 1770.

JUSTUS (Bibl.) the name given to Joseph, surnamed Barsabas, vide Joseph.

Justus, a Jew, otherwise called Jesus, who was at Rome with Paul when he wrote to the Colossians. Col. iv.

JUTLAND (Geog.) a peninsula, and one of the principal parts of Denmark, known to the ancients by the name of Chersoneus Cimbrica, is divided into two provinces, called North and South Jutland. North Jutland is subdivided into the dioceses of Alborg, Wiborg, Aarhusen, and Ripen, so named from the chief towns; South Jutland, which is much smaller than the Northern province, is otherwise called the Duchy of Sleswick. Wiborg is the capital of North Jutland, and Sleswick of the South.

JUTURNA (Myth.) a sister of Turnus, king of the Rutuli, of whom Jupiter became enamoured, and changed her into a fountain of the same name. Varro de Ling. Lat. l. 4; Cic. Cluent. c. 36; Virg. Æn. l. 12, v. 708; Ovid. Fast. l. 1, v. 708.

JUVENAL, Decius Junius (Biog.) the Roman satirist, was born in the reign of Claudius at Aquinum, or Aquino, a town in Campania, since celebrated as the birth-place of Thomas Aquinas, and died in the 80th year of his age. The best editions of Juvenal with Persius are those of Casaubon, 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1695; of Grævius, cum Notis Variorum, 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1684; and of Hawkey, 12mo. Dublin, 1746; an edition by Ruperti, without Persius, in 2 vols. 8vo. was printed at Leipzig in 1801.

JUVENCUS, Caius Vectius Aquilinus (Biog.) one of the first Christian poets, who flourished, according to St. Jerome, in the reign of Constantine, wrote the Life of Christ in Latin verse, entitled 'Historiæ Evangelicæ, Libri IV,' which may be found in the 'Bibliotheca Patrum;' the 'Poetæ Latini,' 4to. Venet. 1502; and the 'Corpus Poetarum Latinorum.' The separate edition of it in 4to. Rom. 1792, is reckoned the best.

JUVENTAS (Myth.) or Juventus, a goddess at Rome, presiding over youth and vigor, who answered to the Hebe of the Greeks. Cic. Tusc. l. 1; Liv. l. 5; Horat. l. 1, od. 30; Ovid. ex Pont. l. 1, ep. 9; August. de Civ. Dei. l. 4.

JUVERNA (Geog.) or Hibernia, now Ireland, an island at the West of Britain. Juv. Sat. 2.

JUXON, William (Ecc.) a loyal and worthy English prelate, the son of Richard Juxon, of Chichester, in Sussex, was born in 1582, educated at Merchant Taylor's School, whence he was elected a fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, in 1598. After various preferments he was made bishop of London in 1633, and raised to the office of Lord High Treasurer in 1635. He resigned this latter office in 1641, after the execution of the earl of Strafford, and, confining himself to his spiritual duties, he attended on his majesty to his last moments on the scaffold, where he afforded him much spiritual consolation. After the murder of the king he was deprived of his bishopric; but, surviving the restoration, he was nominated archbishop of Canterbury in 1660, placed the crown on the head of Charles II at his coronation, and died in 1663. He expended nearly 15000*l.* in rebuilding and repairing Lambeth and Croydon Palaces, and bequeathed 7000*l.* to St. John's College for the increase of fellowships. [Vide Plate XI] There is but one Sermon of his extant, entitled 'The Subject's Sorrow; or the Lamentations upon the Death of Britain's Josiah, King Charles,' 4to. 1649; and 'Some Considerations upon the Act of Uniformity; with an Expedient for the Satisfaction of the Clergy within the Province of Canterbury, by a Servant of the God of Peace,' 4to. Lond. 1662. To him was also ascribed 'A Catalogue of the most Vendible Books in England,' 4to. 1658, and signed London in the dedication; but others have supposed that this was not the work of archbishop Juxon.

IWAN (Hist.) vide Ivan.

IXION (Myth.) Ἰξίων, a king of Thessaly, son of Phlegas, or, according to Hyginus, of Leontes, or, according to Diodorus, of Action, is said to have been taken up to heaven by Jupiter to screen him from the resentment which his enormities had provoked among his fellow mortals; but, falling in love with Juno, he attempted to seduce her, for which he was, by Jupiter's order, tied to a wheel in hell which continually whirled round. *Pindar. KENT, William (Biog.) an artist and native of Yorkshire, was born in 1685, and died in 1748, after having displayed his abilities more successfully in architecture than in painting.

KENT (Geog.) a maritime county of England.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the N. by the Thames and the German Ocean; E. by the same Ocean; S. E. and S. by the English Channel and Sussex; and W. by Surrey. It is about 58 m. long, and 36 broad.

Towns. The principal towns, besides the two cities, Canterbury and Rochester, are Maidstone, Dover, Deal, Chatham, Woolwich, Gravesend, &c.

Rivers. The principal rivers, besides the Thames, are the Medway, Darent, Stour, Cray, and Rother.

History. Kent, at the time of Cæsar's invasion, was inhabited by the Cantii, a brave people, who stoutly resisted the Roman arms. At the invasion of Claudius it was entirely subjugated by the Roman forces, and was included by Constantine in the division of Britannia prima. When Britain yielded to the Saxon arms under Hengist, his son Escus obtained Kent as his possession, which he erected into a kingdom. In the reign of his son Ethelbert Christianity was introduced into England, and particularly into Kent, where Augustine, the apostle of Britain, found a patron and protector in this king. His successors were Eadbeld, Ercombert, Egbert, Lothaire, Edric, Widrid, Eadbert, Ethelbert, Alric, Egbert, Cuthred, and Baldred, whose reign was terminated by the conqueror Egbert, king of Wessex, in 827; when the kingdom of Kent shared the fate of the other Saxon kingdoms included under the Heptarchy.

KENYON, Lloyd, Lord (Hist.) Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, was born at Gredington, in Flintshire, in 1733, entered the Society of Lincoln Inn in 1754, was appointed in 1782 Attorney General, in 1788 was raised to the office of Chief Justice, and died in 1802. [Vide Plate XX]

KENYON, Lord (Her.) the title conferred on the Lord Chief Justice above-mentioned in 1788; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Sable, a chevron engrailed or, between three crosses fleure argent, a crescent for difference.

Crest. A lion sejant, holding between his paws a cross fleure.

Motto. "Magnanimiter crucem sustine."

KEPLER, John (Biog.) an astronomer of Wirtemberg, was born at Wiel, in that duchy, in 1571, and died in 1630, leaving, 1. 'Prodromus Dissertationum Cosmographicarum,' 1596. 2. 'Paralipomena ad Vitellionem, quibus Astronomiæ pars optica traditur,' &c. 1604. 3. 'De nova Stella in Pede Sagittarii,' 1605. 4. 'Commentaria de Stella Martis.' 5. 'Dissertationes,' 1610. 6. 'Ephemerides,' from 1617 to 1620. 7. 'Epitome Astronomiæ Copernicæ,' 1618; the three last books in 1622. 8. 'Harmonices Mundi quinque Libri,' &c. 1619. 9. 'Tabulæ Rudolphinæ,' 1627; besides several other pieces of less note.

KEPPEL, Augustus, Viscount (Hist.) second son of the earl of Albemarle, was born in 1725, entered the sea service when very young, and, after having accompanied lord Anson round the world, he rose to the highest honours in his profession; and was placed at the head of the Channel fleet, when, in 1778, he partially engaged the French fleet off Ushant, but, owing to the difference subsisting between him and the second in command, sir Hugh Paliser, it contrived to escape. Admiral Keppel was tried by a court-martial on this occasion, and honourably acquitted, while, on the other hand, sir Hugh Paliser, his accuser, was tried and censured. Admiral Keppel died in 1786, after having received distinguished honours.

KEPPEL, William, younger brother of the preceding, and fourth son of William Anne, second earl of Albemarle, was bred to the military service, wherein he acquitted himself with great honour as commander at the Havannah after his elder brother, and also as Commander-in-Chief of his majesty's forces in Ireland, and died in 1782.

KEPPEL, Frederick (Ecc.) a younger brother of the two preceding, being bred to the church, was, after different preferments, raised to the see of Exeter, and died in 1777.

KEPPEL (Her.) the name of an ancient and noble family of Guelderland, of which mention is made as early as 1179, when Walter van Keppel was lord of Keppel, a castle and lordship situated in the county of Zutphen. This family has acquired a great accession of honours since the time of William III, when Arnold Joost van Keppel was raised in 1696 to the dignity of baron Ashford, of Ashford, co. Kent; viscount Bury, co. Lancaster; and earl of Albemarle, a town and territory in the duchy of Normandy, heretofore belonging to Stephen, the son of Odo, descended from the earls of Champagne, whom William the Conqueror made earl of Albemarle; and, when his issue failed, the kings of England honoured others with the same title, though they had long since lost their estate in Normandy. A younger branch of this family was also honoured with the peerage in the person of Admiral Keppel above-mentioned, who was created in 1782 viscount Keppel, of Elbedon, co. Suffolk, which at his death became extinct.

KER (Hist.) or Kerr, Sir Andrew, of Firmihirst, of the first branch of the Kerrs mentioned under Heraldry, made a great figure in the reigns of James IV and V, particularly in resisting the power of England. He stoutly defended his castle of Fernihirst against the earl of Surry and lord Dacre, but was nevertheless compelled to surrender in 1523.

KER, sir John, second son of the preceding, was no less brave than his father, and, with the assistance of the French, retook the castle of Fernihirst from the English in 1549.

KER, Sir Thomas, succeeded his father, sir John, in 1562, and distinguished himself by an unshaken loyalty and attachment to queen Mary under all her reverses, for which he was a considerable sufferer, and obliged to live for some time in exile, until king James VI took the government into his own hands in 1581. He afterwards died in ward at Aberdeen, in consequence of his having killed sir Francis Russel, son of the earl of Bedford, in a border fray.

KER, Sir Robert, Earl of Ancrum, vide Ancrum.

KER, William, Earl of Lothian, vide Lothian.

KER, or Drummond, Hon. Sir William, vide Roxburgh.

KER (Her.) or Kerr, the name of a family of Norman lineage, divided into two branches, namely, the Kers of Fernihirst, and the Kers of Cessford, descended, as is said, from two brothers who settled in Scotland in the 13th century. Mark Ker, a descendant of sir Walter Ker, of Fernihirst, had the abbacy of Newbottle erected into a temporal barony in his favour in 1587, and was created in 1606 earl of Lothian, and Robert, the fourth earl, was advanced to the dignity of marquis of Lothian in 1700. Robert Ker, or Carre, a descendant of sir Andrew Ker, of Fernihirst, and the noted favourite of James I, was created viscount Rochester in 1612, earl of Somerset and baron of Brancepeth in 1613, which titles became extinct at his death in 1645. Sir Andrew Ker, his uncle, was created a peer in 1622 by the title of lord Jedburgh; sir Robert Ker, of Ancrum, was created earl of Ancrum, lord Ker, of Nisbet, Longnewton, and Dolphington, in 1633, which devolved to the earl, afterwards marquis of Lothian. [Vide Lothian] Sir Robert Ker, of Cessford, i. e. of the second branch, was created about 1600 lord Roxburgh; in 1616 advanced to the dignities of earl of Roxburgh, and lord Ker, of Cessford; and John, the fifth earl, was created duke of Roxburgh, marquis of Beaumont and Cessford, &c. [Vide Roxburgh]

KERCKHORE, Joseph Van der (Biog.) a painter of Bruges, who died in 1724, at the age of 55, left his Council of the Gods, in the town-hall of Ostend, as a specimen of his skill, which is much admired.

KERCKRING, Thomas (Biog.) a physician of Hamburgh, who died in 1693, was the author of 'Spicilegium Anatomicum,' 4to. and 'Anthropogenia Ichnographia.'

KERI, Francis Borgia (Biog.) a Jesuit of Hungary, who died in 1769, was the author of a History of the Emperors of the East from Constantine to the fall of Constantinople, and of the Ottoman Princes, their successors.

KERKHERDERE, John Gerard (Biog.) historiographer to the emperor Joseph, was born near Maestricht in 1678, and died in 1738, leaving, 'De Monarchia Romæ Paganæ secundum Concordiam inter S. S. Prophetas Danielem et Joannem,' and 'Prodromus Danielius,' &c. &c.

KERSEY, John (Biog.) a mathematician in the reign of Charles II, was the author of 'The Elements of Algebra;' an improved edition of Wingate's Arithmetic; and a 'Dictionarium Anglo-Britannicum.'

KESSEL, John Van (Biog.) an artist, was born at Antwerp in 1626, and died about 1690, after having successfully copied the manner of Vandyke in portrait-painting. His son Ferdinand, an artist, was patronized by John Sobieski.

KET (Hist.) vide Kett.

KETEL, Cornelius (Biog.) a Dutch painter, who died in 1602, was patronised by queen Elizabeth and the English nobility. On his return to Holland he pretended to paint with his feet and toes.

KETT, William (Hist.) a tanner of Norfolk, who headed an insurrection in the reign of Edward VI. His followers amounted to 20,000 men, with whom he succeeded in taking Norwich, and in defeating lord Northampton; but, being afterwards routed by lord Warwick, he was hanged in 1549, with some of his associates, on the tree which he had called the tree of reformation, where he administered justice and issued orders.

KETTLEWELL, John (Biog.) an English divine, was born at North Allerton, in Yorkshire, in 1653, educated at Oxford, and died in 1695, after having been deprived of his living as a nonjuror. He was the author of 'Measure of Christian Obedience;' 'New Oaths;' 'Duty of Allegiance,' &c.; which were collected and printed in 1718, in 2 vols. fol.

KETURAH (Bibl.) קטורה, Abraham's second wife. Gen. xxv.

KEYSLER, John George (Biog.) an antiquary of Germany, was born in 1689 at Thournau, and died in 1743, leaving, 1. 'De Dea Nehalennia Numine Veterum Walachiorum Topico,' and other tracts on subjects of antiquity, published under the title of 'Antiquitates Selectæ Septentrionales et Celticæ,' 12mo. Hanov. 1720. 2. 'Travels through Germany, Bohemia, Hungary, Switzerland, Italy and Lorrain, England, &c.' translated into English from the second edition of the German, and published in 4 vols. 4to. and 8vo. Lond. 1756.

KEZIA (Bibl.) קציעה, the second daughter of Job, born to him after his misfortunes. Job xlii.

KIDDER, Richard (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born, according to Wood, at Brighthelmstone, in Sussex, or, according to others, in Suffolk, admitted sizar in Emmanuel College, Cambridge in 1649, where he took his degrees, A. B. and A. M. in 1652 and 1656, nominated to the see of Bath and Wells on the deprivation of bishop Ken in 1691, and was killed in 1703 in his bed with his lady by the falling of a stack of chimneys, leaving, 1. 'Demonstration of the Messias,' in three parts, the first of which was published in 1694; the second in 1699, and the third in 1700. 2. 'Commentary on the Five Books of Moses; with a Dissertation concerning the Author or Writer of the said Books,' &c. 2 vols. 8vo. 1694; besides several tracts on the Popish Controversy.

KIDDERMINSTER (Biog.) vide Kydermynster.

KIDRON (Bibl.) קדרון, a brook in the valley east of Jerusalem, between that city and the Mount of Olives, which discharges itself into the Dead Sea.

KIERINGS, Alexander (Biog.) a landscape-painter, was born at Utrecht in 1590, and died in 1646, after having obtained a good reputation in his art.

KILCOURSIE, Viscount (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Cavan.

KILDARE, John Fitz-Thomas, first Earl of (Hist.) was engaged in a great dispute with William Vesey, Lord of Kildare, and Lord Justice of Ireland, whom he challenged to single combat; but the latter escaping to France, he was received into favour, and obtained the manors and lordship of Kildare, Rathargar, and divers others. He died in 1316, after having contributed to the defeat of the Scotch under Bruce in Ireland.

KILDARE, Thomas, second Earl of, and son of the preceding, led an army of 30,000 men against the Scotch under Bruce, who were defeated with the loss of their general, which put an end to the Scotch invasion in Ireland. In 1320 he was appointed Lord Justice, and again in 1326, in which office he died in 1328.

KILDARE, Maurice, fourth Earl of, and second son of the preceding, no sooner arrived at years of maturity than he signalized himself in the defence of his country against the O'Dempsies, who had raised a rebellion in Leinster. He defeated them with immense loss to the party in 1389, and died in 1390, after having been appointed Lord Justice of Ireland three several times.

KILDARE, Gerald, fifth Earl of, was taken prisoner in 1398 by Callogh Mac Murrough O'Conner; but being afterwards ransomed, he distinguished himself against the enemies of his country. He was appointed Lord Justice in 1405; but having fallen under the displeasure of Thomas, duke of Clarence, king Henry IV's second son, and Lord Lieutenant, he was arrested, and imprisoned in the castle of Dublin, from which he obtained his release by the payment of three hundred marks, and died in 1410.

KILDARE, Thomas, seventh Earl of, was appointed Lord-Deputy of Ireland in 1454, and continued, with little interruption in the same office until 1461. He was however afterwards attainted of high treason and imprisoned, but at length obtained his liberty and his pardon, and died in 1477.

KILDARE, Gerald, eighth Earl of, held the office of Lord-Deputy to Richard, duke of York, and at the accession of king Henry VII, he was continued deputy to Jasper, duke of Bedford, the Lord Lieutenant, in which capacity he, in conjunction with other noblemen, acknowledged and countenanced the impostor Simnel; but obtained the king's pardon on returning to their duty. He then fell under the suspicion of favouring the youth called Perkin Warbeck; but the zeal which he displayed against the king's enemies in Ireland procured him the monarch's indulgence. He died in 1513 from a shot received a little before while fighting against the O'Mores of Leix, after a life of great activity and military success.

KILDARE, Gerald, ninth Earl of, who followed his father's steps in subduing the rebellious Irish, held, for some time, the office of Lord Deputy until the appointment of Thomas Howard, earl of Surry. He was afterwards re-appointed to that office, but being removed at the instigation of cardinal Wolsey, at length died in the Tower, after having had occasion to clear himself from the charges brought against him.

KILDARE, Thomas, tenth Earl of, son of the preceding, engaged in rebellion with his uncles in behalf of his father, and being taken was beheaded in 1535.

KILDARE, Gerald, eleventh Earl of, and eldest son, by the second marriage, of the ninth earl, was protected by Thomas Levorous, foster-brother to his father; and, being carried out of Ireland, eluded the pursuit of the English government, who sought to get him into their hands. On the accession of Edward VI, he was restored to his country, and on that of Mary to all his honours and estates, for which favours he testified his gratitude by his zeal and activity in suppressing the rebellions in Ireland, and died in 1585, after having rendered essential service to Edward VI, and his successors Mary and Elizabeth, both as a statesman and a soldier.

KILDARE, George, sixteenth Earl of, displayed his loyalty on the first breaking out of the rebellion in 1641 until its termination, and died before the restoration in 1660.

KILDARE, John, nineteenth Earl of, was very active in bringing about the restoration, and died in 1699, after having rendered considerable assistance to king William on his invasion of Ireland.

KILDARE, Marquis (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the duke of Leinster.

KILKENNY, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Butler [vide Butler], which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

KILLEEN, Lord (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Fingal.

KILLIGREW (Hist.) the name of a family noted for loyalty as well as talent.

KILLIGREW, Sir Henry, Knt. a Cornish gentleman, and the first of this name mentioned, was knighted for his services in the quality of ambassador.

KILLIGREW, William, son of sir Robert Killigrew, knt. was born at Hanworth, in Middlesex, in 1605, educated at Oxford; and, after travelling, was engaged in the service of Charles I, whom he attended as one of the gentlemen Ushers of the Privy Chamber. On the breaking out of the rebellion, he received the command of one of the two great troops of horse that guarded the king's person, and bore his part in the sufferings of those who were oppressed by the usurpers; but at the restoration, he was re-instated in his post of Gentleman Usher, and on the marriage of king Charles II, he was created his first Vice-Chamberlain, and died in 1693, after having filled that post 22 years. He was the author of four plays, which were printed at Oxford in folio, 1666, and a little poem, which was set to music by the well known Henry Lawes. Wood ascribes to him two other works; namely, 1. 'The Artless Thoughts of a Gentleman at Court, who for many Years built on Sand, which every Blast of Fortune has defaced,' &c. 8vo. 1684. 2. 'Midnight and Daily Thoughts in Prose and Verse,' 8vo. 1694.

KILLIGREW, Thomas, brother of the former, was born in 1611, became page of honour to Charles I, in whose cause he fought, and then groom of the bed-chamber to Charles II, with whom he suffered many years' exile, and died in 1682, after having served his majesty as resident at the state of Venice. He was the author of nine plays, which were printed in one volume, folio, London, 1664; besides which he wrote 'A Letter concerning the Possessing and Dispossessing of several Nuns in the Nunnery at Tours, in France,' dated Orleans, Dec. the 7th, 1635, and printed in three sheets, folio.

KILLIGREW, Henry, brother of the two preceding, was born in 1612, educated at Oxford, and, going into orders, was made chaplain to the duke of York. He suffered as a loyalist, but at the restoration was made almoner to the Duke, and held other appointments under him. The time of his death is not known. He was the author of a tragedy at the age of 17, which was called 'The Conspiracy,' but was afterwards republished in 1652, with the new title of 'Pallantus and Eudora,'

KILLIGREW, Catherine (Biog.) the daughter of sir Anthony Cooke, and wife of sir Henry Killigrew above-mentioned, was born at Giddy-Hall, in Essex, in 1530; and, after having enjoyed a learned education, she obtained the reputation of combining great talent with great proficiency in the learned languages, and a taste for poetry, of which a small specimen is preserved by sir John Harrington in his notes to the translation of 'Ariosto,' and by Fuller in his 'Worthies.'

KILLIGREW, Anne, called by Wood 'A grace for beauty, and a muse for wit,' was the daughter of Henry Killigrew, the youngest of the three brothers above-mentioned. She had great skill in painting and poetry; the former of which she displayed in the picture of the duke of York, and also of the duchess, to whom she was maid of honour. Her poems appeared in 4to. in 1686, a year after her death, when her merits were celebrated by the muse of Dryden.

KILMAIN, Lord (Her.) the title enjoyed by the family of Browne in the county of Mayo, which was conferred in 1789 on sir John Browne, bart.

KILMARNOCK, William, third Earl of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was very active in support of the existing government in 1715 during the insurrection, when he headed 5000 men of his own appointment at the general rendezvous of the fencibles. He died in 1717.

KILMARNOCK, William, fourth Earl of, joined prince Charles, otherwise called the Chevalier de St. George, and by some The Pretender, in 1745; but on the defeat of the latter, he surrendered himself in 1746, and, being carried to London, was convicted of high treason, and executed on Tower-hill in the 42d year of his age. His estates and honours were forfeited to the crown.

KILMARNOCK, Earl of (Her.) a title which was formerly enjoyed by the family of Boyd, but was forfeited to the crown at the death and attainder of William Boyd, fourth earl of Kilmarnock above-mentioned.

KILMOREY, Earl (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Needham; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Needham, earl and viscount Kilmorey, viscount Newry and Morne.

Arms. Argent, a bend azure, between two bucks' heads caboshed and attired sable.

Crest. On a wreath, a phœnix in flames proper.

Supporters. The dexter, a horse bay-coloured, mane and tail sable; the sinister, a buck proper.

Motto. "Nunc aut nunquam."

KILWARDEN, Arthur Wolfe, Lord (Hist.) an Irish judge, who, after receiving a liberal education at Trinity College, Dublin, was called to the bar in 1766, and gradually preferred by his merits to the chief justiceship of the King's Bench, in which post, although his conduct was marked by wisdom and integrity, he provoked the Irish populace; and, during an insurrection in 1803, he and his nephew were dragged out of his coach, and piked to death in Thomas-street, Dublin. His daughter was in the coach at the same time, but was spared through the interference of one in the crowd. It was the dying advice of this nobleman, "That no man should suffer on any account, not even on account of his own murder, without a fair trial."

KILWARDEN, Viscount (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Wolfe, which was conferred in 1800 on Arthur Wolfe, the judge above-mentioned, who in 1795 was created baron Kilwarden, of Kilteel; in 1798 baron Kilwarden, of Newland, and in 1800 viscount Kilwarden.

KILWORTH, Lord (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Mountcashel.

KIMBER, Isaac (Biog.) a dissenting minister, was born at Wantage, in Berkshire, in 1692, and died in 1758, leaving, 1. 'The Life of Oliver Cromwell.' 8vo. 2. 'History of England,' 4 vols. 8vo., in conjunction with Messrs. Bailey, Hodges, and Ridpath; the third and fourth volume of which were solely of his composition. 3. 'The Life of Bishop Beveridge,' prefixed to the folio edition of his works, of which he was the editor; besides which he assisted in compiling the peerages of Scotland and England, and the baronetage of England in conjunction with R. Johnson.

KIMBOLTON, Lord (Hist.) vide Manchester.

KIMCHI, David (Biog.) a Spanish Rabbi, who died at an advanced age in 1240, leaving many Hebrew works which are highly esteemed by the Jews; among these are his 'Michlol,' i. e. Perfection, a Hebrew Grammar, 8vo. Venet. 1545, which has since served as a model for all Hebrew grammars; a Book of Hebrew Roots, fol. 1555; 'Dictionarium Thalmudicum,' fol. Venet. 1506; 'Commentaries on the Psalms,' which were translated into Latin by Father Janvier, and published in 4to. 1669; his Arguments against the Christians were translated by Genebrard and published in 8vo. 1566.

KINASTON, Francis (Biog.) vide Kynaston.

KING, Sir John (Hist.) of the first family mentioned under Heraldry, was very instrumental in the reign of queen Elizabeth in reducing the Irish to due obedience; and, after enjoying the special confidence and favour of this queen, and her successors, James and Charles, he died in 1636.

KING, Sir Robert, his son, did not hesitate to be in the service of the usurping powers, and died in 1657, after having been employed all his life in a public capacity.

KING, Sir John, his son, was created lord Kingston. [Vide Kingston]

KING, Peter, Lord, Lord Chancellor of England, was born at Exeter in 1669, and after studying at the Inner Temple, he was called to the bar, where he gradually rose by his merits to the Chief Justiceship of the Common Pleas, at the accession of George I; succeeded the earl of Macclesfield as Lord Chancellor in 1725, and died in 1734, leaving among his works as an author, 1. 'An Inquiry into the Constitution, Discipline, Unity, and Worship of the Primitive Church, that flourished within the first three Hundred years after Christ,' &c. 8vo. 1691, a second part to which was afterwards published. 2. 'The History of the Apostles' Creed, with critical Observations,' &c. 8vo. 1712.

KING, John (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born at Wornall, in Buckinghamshire, in 1559, educated at Westminster School, and Christ Church, Oxford; became chaplain to queen Elizabeth, and dean of his college in 1605; promoted to the see of London in 1611, and died in 1621. Besides his 'Lectures upon Jonah,' printed in 1594, he published several sermons.

KING, Henry, son of the preceding, and also a prelate, was born in 1591, educated at Westminster School, and Christ Church, Oxford, and after various preferments, was raised to the see of Chichester in 1641. He was deprived of his bishopric at the breaking out of the rebellion, but recovered it at the Restoration, and died in 1669, leaving besides Sermons, 1. KING, William, archbishop of Dublin, and the descendant of an ancient family, was born at Antrim in 1650, sent to the Grammar School at Dungannon, in the county of Tyrone whence he was removed at the age of 17, to Trinity College, Dublin. Having taken orders in 1674, he was, after various preferments, promoted to the see of Derry in 1690, translated to that of Dublin in 1702, was appointed three several times, one of the Lords Justices of Ireland, namely, in 1717, 1721, and 1723, and died in 1729, leaving among his works, 1. An answer to Manby's 'Considerations which obliged him to embrace the Catholic Religion,' 4to. 1687, which was followed by a 'Vindication of the Answer,' &c. and some other tracts on the subject of the Romish Church, which was the question most agitated at that period. 2. 'The State of the Protestants in Ireland, under the late King James' Government,' 4to. 1691, the third edition with additions, was printed at London the year after, in 8vo. 3. 'A Discourse concerning the Inventions of Men in the Worship of God,' 4to. Dublin, 1694, which was followed by another tract entitled 'An Admonition to the Dissenting Inhabitants of the Diocese of Derry,' &c. 4to. 1695, and 'A Second Admonition,' 4to. in the same year. 4. 'De Origine Mali,' concerning the 'Origin of Evil,' the work by which he is most known, was first published in 4to. Dublin, 1702, and translated by Mr. Edmund Law, afterwards bishop of Carlisle. Besides the above-mentioned works, he published several occasional sermons, as that 'Concerning Divine Presclence,' &c.

KING (Her.) a family of Ireland, which distinguished itself as early as the reign of Elizabeth. Of this family was sir John King, who in 1660 was created baron Kingston, of Kingston, which title became extinct in 1761. From sir Robert King, his third brother, descended sir Robert, who in 1748 was created lord Kingsborough, but dying unmarried, the title became extinct in 1755. His younger brother sir Edward, was also raised to the peerage in 1764, when he was created baron Kingston, of Rockingham; after which he was in 1766 created viscount Kingston, of Kingsborough; and in 1768, earl of Kingston. [Vide Kingston] Robert Edward King, second son of Robert, the second earl of Kingston, was created a peer in 1800, by the title of baron Erris, and further advanced in 1806, to the dignity of viscount Lorton.

KING, Lord, the title conferred on sir Peter King, the judge above-mentioned, who was created a peer in 1725, by the style and title of lord King, baron of Oakham, co. Surry. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Sable, three spears' heads argent, the points sanguine; on a chief or, as many battle-axes azure.

LACEDÆMON (Myth.) Λακεδαίμων, a son of Jupiter and Taygeta, the daughter of Atlas, who married Sparta, the daughter of Eurotas, by whom he had Amycla and Euridice. From Lacedæmon and his wife, the capital of Laconia was called Lacedæmon, or Sparta. Apollod. l. 3, c. 10; Schol. in Pind. Olymp. Od. 3; Schol. in Orest. Hygin. Fab. 155; Paus. l. 3.

Lacedæmon (Geog.) or Sparta, the capital of Laconia, now called by the inhabitants Misitra, received at different times the names of Lelegia, Oebalia, and Hecatompolis, but is best known by its first and most ancient names Lacedæmon and Sparta from Lacedæmon and his wife. [Vide Lacedæmon] The name of Sparta is most commonly applied to the city, and Lacedæmon to the country. It is generally said to have been built by Lacedæmon, although some have ascribed its origin to Spartus, son of Amyclas, the king, and some make Cecrops to have been its founder.

History of Lacedæmon.

The history of Lacedæmon is involved in much fable, from which nothing authentic can be collected. Mythologists reckon Lelex to have been the first king of the country, who is said to have been succeeded by his descendants Miles, Eurotas, Lacedæmon, Amyclas, Argalus, Cynortas, Oebalus, Tyndarus, Castor and Pollux, Menelaus, Orestes, and Tisamenes. In the reign of this latter, the Heraclidæ re-entered Peloponnesus, from which they had formerly been driven by Eurystheus. Proclus and Eurysthenes, the descendants of the Heraclidæ, enjoyed the crown of Lacedæmon together; and after them, it was decreed that the two families should always sit on the throne together: their descendants, who were severally called Euristhenidæ or Agidæ, and Proclidæ, succeeded in the following order.

Cleomenes engaged the Lacedæmonians in the Ætolian league, but the Ætolians and their allies were defeated near Sellasia by the Acheans, aided by Antigonus Doson, tutor to Philip, king of Macedon. Epiclidas having been killed in this battle, Sparta was taken by Aratus, and the kingdom destroyed, in the second year of the 139th Olympiad, A.M. 3812, A.C. 223. Cleomenes, who after this battle took refuge in Egypt, was killed there four years after, in a sedition which he had raised against Ptolemy. After the extinction of these two families, and the capture of Sparta, Machanidas, a tyrant, got possession of the supreme power A.C. 210, and Nabis reigned after him for fourteen years. In the year A.C. 191, Lacedæmon joined the Achæan league, and about three years after the walls were demolished by order of Philopœmon. The territory of Laconia shared the fate of the Achæan confederacy, which was dissolved by the power of the Roman arms, when the whole country was conquered by Mummius, A.C. 147, and converted into a Roman province, but the Romans granted liberty to the Lacedæmonians, and suffered them to live under their own laws. The place where Sparta stood is now called Paleo Chori, or the Old Town, the new one erected since, at some distance on the W. of its ruins, is called Misitra. [Vide Misitra] The Lacedæmonians rendered themselves illustrious by their courage, which they displayed on many occasions against the neighbouring states of Greece. They carried on a bloody war against the Messenians A. C. 722, and another A. C. 669; they rendered assistance to the Athenians in destroying the tyranny of the Pisistratidæ, and co-operated with them in expelling the Persians from Greece, which was followed by the celebrated war between them and the Athenians, well known by the name of the Peloponnesian war, which terminated in the destruction of Athens. The Lacedæmonians then turned their arms against the Persians, when Agesilaus, their king, performed many great exploits in Asia, but the rest of Greece having leagued against them, they fought a battle against the Bœotians, the issue of which was doubtful. This was followed by a naval engagement with Conon, the Athenian, in the service of the Persians, which terminated to their disadvantage, and, although they succeeded for a time in getting possession of Thebes, yet they were driven from it four years after by Pelopidas, and, in losing the battle of Leuctra against Epaminondas, they lost the ascendancy which they had hitherto maintained in the affairs of Greece, A. C. 371. They were then conquered by the Arcadians, and Sparta was besieged by Epaminondas, who sacked all Laconia. A second battle fought against Epaminondas at Mantinea, terminated no less to their disadvantage, although the Thebans lost on that occasion their great commander. They afterwards assisted, but with little success, the Phocians against the Thebans, in what was called the Sacred War, and lost a battle which they fought against Antipater, one of Alexander's generals, in which their king Agis was killed. The wars which they carried on against the successors of Alexander were not more successful, but when Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, attempted the conquest of Laconia, he found that the Lacedæmonians had sufficient of their old spirit remaining to defend their soil against a foreign invader. This, however, was the last effort of an expiring power, which was finally broken by intestine divisions, aided by the more successful attacks of their enemies. The glory of Sparta was lost at the battle of Sellasia, which put an end to the race of the Heraclidæ.

Writers on Lacedæmon.

Homer; Herodotus; Thucydides; Xenophon; Apollodorus; Maccabæi; Polybius; Diodorus; Dionysius; Livy; Strabo; Josephus; Justin; Plutarch; Pausanias, Athenæus; Sigonius; Meursius, &c.

LACEDÆMON (Numis.) coins or medals are extant of this city, bearing the inscription, ΛΑ.--ΛΑΚΕΔΑΙΜΟΝΙΩΝ; and sometimes with the name of their magistrates, who in the time of the emperors, were prætors. On some medals they also commemorated their alliance with other cities, as ΛΑΚΕΔΑΙΜΩΝ CΑΓΑΛΑCCΟC, i. e. Lacedæmon Sagalassus, subaudi Concordia.—ΛΑΚΕΔΑΙΜΟΝΙΩΝ CΕΛΓΕΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.—CΤΡ. ΑΙ. ΗΡΑΚΛΕΙΔΟΥ ΛΑΚΕΔΑΙ. ΟΜΟ. ΣΜΥ. i. e. Prætore Ælio Heraclide Lacedæmoniorum Concordia cum Smyrnæis, &c. They bore for their types the head or figure of Hercules, Diana, Lycurgus, Mercury, or his caduceus, Jupiter, &c.; Vaill. Gr.; Tristan. Comm. Hist. &c.

LACHISH (Bibl.) לכיש, a city S. of Judah, which was built by Rehoboam, and besieged by Sennacherib, but not taken. Josh. x; 2 Kings xviii; 2 Chron. xi. xxxii.

LA COLONIE (Hist.) a native of Perigord, who rose to the rank of a marshal in the Austrian service, died at Bourdeaux in 1759, aged 85, leaving, 'Memoires Militaires,' 2 vols. 12mo. Frankfort, 1730, and Brussels, 1739; and 'Histoire de Bourdeaux,' 3 vols. 12mo.

LACOMBE, James (Biog.) a French historian, who was born at Paris in 1724, was the author of 'Abrégé Chronologique de l'Histoire Ancienne,' 8vo. 1757; 'De l'Histoire du Nord;' De l'Histoire d'Espagne et de Portugal;' 'Revolutions de l'Empire de la Russie,' 12mo. 1760;' 'Histoire de Christine Reine de Suede,' 12mo. 1762, which last was translated into English in 1766.

LACOMBE, de Prezel Honore, brother of the preceding, was the author of many dictionaries, according to the taste of the times, as 'Dictionnaire de Portraits et d'Anecdotes des Hommes célebres,' 2 vols. 8vo. &c. He is not to be confounded with another author of the same name, time, and nation, who wrote a Dictionary of Old French, 8vo. 1765.

LACON (Her.) the name of a family of some antiquity, which is so denominated from the parish of Lacon, in the county of Salop. Sir Edmund Lacon, of this family, was created a baronet in 1818.

LACONIA (Geog.) or Laconica, Λακωνική, a country in the southern part of Peloponnesus, having Argos and Arcadia on the N, Messenia on the W, the Mediterranean on the S, and the bay of Argos on the E. Its extent from N. to S. was about 50 miles. The capital called Lacedæmon, or Sparta, has given its name to the rest of the country. [Vide Lacedæmon]

LACTANTIUS, Lucius Cœlius Firmianus (Ecc.) a father of the church, was, according to some, an African, and, according to others, a native of Fermo, a town of Ancona, whence he is supposed to have taken his surname. Arnobius was his preceptor, and after studying rhetoric in Africa, he was chosen by Constantine to be preceptor to his son Crispus, and died in 325. His principal work is his 'Institutiones Divinæ,' the best editions of which are those of Sparke, 8vo. Oxon. 1684; of Büneman, 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1739; and of Du Fresnoy, 2 vols. 4to. Paris. 1748. Some works have been erroneously attributed to Lactantius, as a poem entitled 'The Phœnix,' the production of a Pagan, and not a Christian; the poem upon 'Easter,' which appears to have been written by some one subsequent to his time; that of 'The Passion of Christ,' is considered not to be of his style. The Arguments upon the Metamorphoses of Ovid, and the Notes upon the Thebaid of Statius, were written by Lactantius Placidus.

LACTANTIUS PLACIDUS, a grammarian, and author of notes upon the Metamorphoses of Ovid, and the Thebaid of Statius, lived in the sixth century.

LACY, John (Biog.) an actor and writer of plays, in the reign of Charles II, who died in 1681, was the author of the 'Dumb Lady,' 4to. 1672; 'Sir Hercules Buffoon,' 4to. 1684; 'Old Troop,' 4to. 1698; 'Sawney the Scot,' 4to. 1698.

LACYDES (Biog.) a Greek philosopher of Cyrene, the disciple of Arcesilaus, and his successor in his academy, followed the sceptical doctrines of his master, and died, as is said, of excess of drinking, A. C. 212.

LADE (Her.) the name of a family of considerable antiquity in the county of Kent, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred first in 1730 on sir John Lade, which becoming extinct, was revived in favour of sir John Lade, of another branch, in 1758. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth argent, a fesse wavy between three escallops sable; second and third gules, a lion rampant or, ducally collared and chained sable.

Crest. In a coronet or, a leopard's head regardant sable bezantée.

LADIK (Geog.) or Ladikich, the ancient Laodicea, a town of Asia Minor, 30 m. W. Konich, which is now a mud-built village, with little more than 400 inhabitants, although the ruins which were to be seen in the time of Chandler, and some of which are still extant, bespeak it to have been a place of importance. It is said to have suffered much from earthquakes, but to have been restored by the munificence of the emperors. About the year 1097, it was in the possession of, and submitted to, Ducas, general of the emperor Alexis; in 1120 its walls were repaired by John Comnenus, but falling again into decay, it was exposed to the ravages of the Turks, into whose hands it came shortly after, and naturally sunk into decay. [Vide Laodicea] Constant. Manass.; Chandler's Trav. &c.

LADISLAUS (Hist.) the name of several princes.

Kings of Hungary.

LADISLAUS I, son of Bela I, was born in Poland in 1041, succeeded Geysa in 1080, and died after a reign of 17 or 18 years, during which period he defeated the Tartars, and distinguished himself by his piety.

LADISLAUS II, son of Emeric, reigned only six months in 1204, having Andrew II for his successor.

LADISLAUS III, surnamed Cunne, succeeded his father Stephen V, in 1272, was assassinated in 1285 in his tent, by the Tartars, in whom he placed too much confidence.

LADISLAUS IV, also called Uladislaus, grand duke of Lithuania, and king of Poland, was elected to the throne of Hungary in 1443, after the death of Albert of Austria, and was slain in 1444, in battle against Amurath, the sultan of the Turks, whom he had previously defeated by means of his general Hunniades.

LADISLAUS V, son of Albert of Austria, succeeded Ladislaus IV, under the protection of John Hunniades, and was poisoned in 1451 by the Hussites, whom he opposed with vigour, and earnestly wished to suppress.

LADISLAUS, or Uladislaus VI, son of Casimir, king of Poland, after having obtained the kingdom of Bohemia, succeeded in 1490 by his valour and address to the throne of Hungary, after the death of Matthew Corvinus, son of John Hunniades. Bonfin. de Reb. Hung.; Dubrav. Rer. Hung. l. 32, &c.

King of Naples.

LADISLAUS, or Launcelot, surnamed the Magnanimous and Victorious, succeeded his father Charles de Duras in 1386, on the throne of Naples, but not without violent opposition on the part of Lewis II, of Anjou, his competitor. Nevertheless Ladislaus was finally successful, and was also called by the Hungarians to take the throne which was rendered vacant by the murder of Sigismund. Whilst pursuing his successes against the pope, and the Florentines, he died in 1414, at the age of 38, of poison, administered by the hand of his mistress, whom his enemies are said to have bribed to this action. Bonfinius, Bzovius, Spondanus, &c.

Kings of Poland.

LADISLAUS, or Uladislaus I, son of Cassimir I, was elected in 1081 to succeed Boleslaus, surnamed the Cruel, and died in 1102, after having defeated the inhabitants of Prussia and Pomerania, in three battles.

LADISLAUS II, succeeded his father Boleslaus III, in 1139, and died in 1159, after having been banished from his throne by his brothers, with whom he waged war with various success.

LADISLAUS III, succeeded Primislaus in 1295, and died in 1333, after having been expelled by his subjects, and again restored to the throne.

LADISLAUS IV, surnamed Jagellon, grand duke of Lithuania, obtained the crown of Poland in 1386, by his marriage with Hedwige, daughter of Lewis, king of Hungary, and died in 1434, at the age of 80, after having added Lithuania to his Polish dominions.

LADISLAUS V, king of Hungary, as well as of Poland. [Vide Ladislaus IV of Hungary]

LADISLAUS, Sigismond VI, son of Sigismond III, king of Sweden, and afterwards of Poland, was born in 1595, succeeded his father in 1632, and died in 1648, after having slain not less than 150,000 Turks in different battles.

King of Bohemia.

LADISLAUS, vide Uladislaus.

King of Servia.

LADISLAUS, eldest son of Stephen Dragutin, succeeded his uncle Melutin, as king of Servia in 1321, but being expelled the throne on account of his cruelties, he died in prison.

LADVOCAT, John Baptist (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Vauxcouleurs, in Champagne, in 1709, and died in 1765, leaving a Hebrew Grammar, an Historical Dictionary, and other works.

LÆLIA, gens (Hist.) a plebeian family of Rome, which nevertheless attained to the consulship. It was distinguished by the surnames of Balbus and Sapiens. [Vide Lælius]

LÆLIA, gens (Numis.) some consular coins commemorate the name of the Lælia gens, bearing the inscription, C. LAELIUS, and the ordinary type, of the head of the goddess Roma, on the obverse; and the figures of Castor and Pollux on the reverse.

LÆLIANUS (Hist.) vide Ælianus.

LÆLIUS, C. (Hist.) a distinguished Roman, who commanded the Roman fleet in the second Punic war, and was rewarded for his valour with a golden crown, and 30 oxen. Liv. l. 26.

LÆLIUS, C. son of the preceding, a Roman consul, and a great orator, surnamed the Wise, was the particular friend of Scipio, whom he attended during his wars in Africa, distinguished himself at the battle fought against Asdrubal, and Syphax, when he took the latter prisoner, and conducted him to Rome U. C. 551, A. C. 203. Cic. de Offic. l. 2; Horat. l. 2; Sat. 1.

LÆNA (Hist.) or Leæna, Λεαίνα, the mistress of Harmodius and Aristogiton, who, when put to the torture, bit off her tongue, that she might not be able to discover what she knew of the conspiracy. Plin. l. 7, c. 23; Paus. in Attic.; Plut. de Garrul.

LAER (Biog.) vide Bamboccio.

LAIRESSE, Gerard (Biog.) a Flemish painter, was born at Liege in 1640, and died in 1711, leaving the reputation of being the best history painter in Holland. Two out of his three sons were painters, as were also his three brothers Ernest, James, and John. A book upon the art of painting, which was published under his name, has been translated into English, and printed in London, both in 4to. and 8vo.

LAIS (Biog.) a courtezan of Corinth, whose personal charms procured her a celebrity which she little deserved, passed over into Thessaly, in order to be near a youth named Hippobrutus, with whom she was enamoured, and was assassinated there in the temple of Venus, by the women, who feared her influence in corrupting the fidelity of their husbands. Cic. ad Fam. l. 9, ep. 2; Ovid. Amor. l. 1, el. 5; Plut. in Alcib.; Paus. l. 2; Aul. Gell. l. 1; Clem. Alex. l. 2.

LAIUS (Myth.) Λάϊος, a son of Labdacus, who succeeded to the throne of Thebes, and was driven from his kingdom by Amphion and Zethus; but was afterwards restored, and married Jocasta, the daughter of Creon, by whom he had Œdipus. An oracle having informed him that he should be killed by his son, he endeavoured to avert the calamity by exposing him on mount Cithæron. Œdipus, however, being preserved by a shepherd, he was brought up at the court of Polybus, and when grown to man's estate he accidentally met Laius in a narrow road, and without knowing who he was slew him, because he would not let him pass. Sophocl. in Œdip.; Apollod. l. 3; Diodor. l. 4; Hygin. Fab. 9; Plut. de Curios.; Paus. l. 9; Stat. Theb.

LAKE, Sir Thomas (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was employed by queen Elizabeth and king James I on different state concerns, and died Principal Secretary in 1630.

LAKE, Gerard, first Viscount, was born in 1744, and embracing a military life, he rose by his merits to the rank of a general, and was employed as Commander-in-Chief in India, where he signalized himself by his skill and valour, and obtained the most decisive victories over Scindiah and the rajah of Berar. His honourable career was terminated by a sudden death in 1808.

LAKE, Arthur (Ecc.) a prelate, and brother of sir Thomas Lake above-mentioned, was born at Southampton, elected probationer fellow of New College, Oxford, and two years after made perpetual fellow in 1589. Having entered into orders, he was appointed master of the Hospital of St. Cross in 1603; installed archdeacon of Surrey in 1605; made dean of Bristol in 1608; promoted to the see of Bath and Wells in 1616; and died in 1626; leaving several volumes of 'Sermons;' an 'Exposition of the First Psalm;' and 'Meditations;' all of which were collected in one volume, fol. Lond. 1629. Bishop Lake was a considerable benefactor to the Library of New College, where he also endowed two lectureships, one for the Hebrew and another for the Mathematics.

LAKE (Her.) or Du Lake, a family of Southampton, which enjoys a peerage, conferred on general Lake above-mentioned, who, for his military services in India, was created in 1804 lord Lake of Delhi and Laswaree, and in 1807 was advanced to the dignity of viscount Lake. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Sable, a bend between six cross crosslets fitchy argent; besides the quarterings.

'Traité de Controverse pour les nouveaux Réunis, sur la Presence réelle, sur la Communion sous une Espèce, et sur les Traduct. Fr. de l'Ecriture,' 12mo. 1692. 2. 'Extraits des S. S. Peres de l'Eglise,' &c.

LALLY, Thomas Arthur, Count (Hist.) an Irishman, who, having followed the fortunes of king James II, entered into the French service, and, after distinguishing himself at the battle of Fontenoy, he was sent as governor-general to the French possessions in the East Indies. He here obtained some partial advantages; but was defeated before Madras, and obliged to retreat to Pondicherry, which he surrendered to the English after an obstinate resistance in 1761. On his return to Europe he was accused of selling Pondicherry to the English; for which he was condemned by the Parliament to lose his head. This sentence was executed in 1766; but his son Lally de Tollendal, obtained in 1783 a reversal of the sentence, so far as to restore him to his honours and estates.

LAMACHUS (Hist.) Λάμαχος, a son of Xenophanes, who accompanied Nicias into Sicily, and was killed before Syracuse, while fighting bravely. Thucyd. l. 4, &c.; Plut. in Alcib.

LAMANON, Robert Paul (Biog.) a naturalist, was born at Salon, in Provence, in 1752, and, accompanying La Perouse in the voyage of discovery, was murdered in 1785, in one of the islands of the Southern Archipelago. He wrote 'La Theorie de la Terre,' besides several papers in the Memoirs of the Academy.

LAMBALLE, Maria Theresa Louisa, of Savoy Carignan (Hist.) was born at Turin in 1749, and married the duke of Bourbon Ponthierre, by whom she was left a widow in the prime of her youth and beauty. She was afterwards appointed intendant of the royal household of Maria Antoinette, the unfortunate queen of France, to whom she became a most faithful friend and comforter in the midst of the severest trials. Although she might have remained secure in England, whither she had fled by another rout, on the flight of the king and queen to Varennes, she preferred to return, and to share in all the miseries to which her royal mistress was exposed. She continued with her in prison until her ferocious murderers dragged her to the prison of La Force, and on the memorable 3d of Sept. 1792, after having interrogated her respecting the queen, they fell on her with their sabres, cut off her head and breasts, and tore out her heart while still palpitating. Not content with these atrocities, they carried the head and heart on a pike, and dragged the mangled remains through the streets, in order to expose them to the view of the royal family. [Vide Plate VI]

LAMBE (Her.) the name of a family of Brocket Hall, in the county of Hertford, which enjoys a peerage, conferred on sir Penniston Lambe, the second baronet of the family who in 1701 was created viscount Melbourne.

LAMBARDE, William (Biog.) a lawyer, and an antiquary, was born in London in 1536, and died in 1601, leaving, 1. 'Αρχαιονομία, sive de priscis Anglorum Legibus Libri,' 4to. 1568; and republished afterwards with Bede's 'Ecclesiastical History,' in 1644. 2. 'Perambulation of Kent,' 1576; which was the commencement of a large work that he had contemplated, to embrace a general account of Great Britain; but he gave up the design when he understood that Camden was engaged in a similar work. The materials which he had collected were however published from the original MS. in 4to. 1730, under the title of 'Dictionarium Angliæ Topographicum et Historicum.' 3. 'Eirenarchia; or, the Office of the Justices of Peace, in four Books,' 1581; the 11th edition of which was printed in 1619. 4. 'The Duties of Constables,' &c. 8vo. 1582; and reprinted six times. 5. 'Pandecta Rotulorum,' 1601. 6. 'Archeion,' &c. 1635; besides many MSS. of which Mr. Nichols has given an account in Bibliog. Topog. Brit.

LAMBART, Rodulph de (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, accompanied William the Conqueror in 1066, and contributed to the victory of Hastings, which gave the crown to William.

LAMBART (Her.) the name of an ancient family, which derives its immediate descent from Lambart, count of Mons and Louvain, who died in 1004. Sir Oliver Lambert, a descendant of this family, mentioned under History [vide Cavan], was created in 1717 baron of Cavan, co. Cavan; and his eldest son Charles was in 1646 advanced to the dignities of viscount Kilcoursie and earl of Cavan.

LAMBECIUS, Peter (Biog.) a German scholar, was born at Hamburgh in 1628, and died in 1680, leaving, 1. 'Prodromus Lucubrationum Criticarum in Auli Gellii Noctes Atticas,' &c. 8vo. Paris. 1647. 2. 'Syntagma Originum et Antiquitatum Constantinopolitanum,' &c. fol. Gr. and Lat. Paris. 1655. 3. 'Prodromus Historiæ Literariæ,' 1659. 4. 'Origines Hamburgenses,' &c.; the first book of which appeared in 4to. in 1652, and the second in 1661, which were reprinted by John Albert Fabricius, in 2 vols. 4to. or in 1 vol. fol. in 1706. 5. 'Commentariorum de Augusta Bibliothecâ Cæsari Vindobonensi Libri octo,' 8 vols. fol. 1665-79; to which must be added as a supplement 'Dan. de Nessel Breviarium et Supplementum Commentariorum,' &c. 2 vols. fol. Vindob. 1690. A second edition of this work was published at Vienna, 8 vols. fol. 1766-82; an abridgement of this catalogue was published in 1 vol. 8vo. under the title of 'Bibliotheca Acromatica.'

LAMBERT, John (Hist.) one of Cromwell's partisans, who, after having assisted him to the supreme power by the murder of his sovereign, was deprived of his commission and cashiered, for his intrigues against the Parliament. He afterwards marched against Monk; but being taken prisoner, was tried and condemned of high treason. Sentence was however not executed upon him, and he died in confinement in Guernsey.

LAMBERT (Ecc.) a school-master, who undertook to dispute with Henry VIII on the subject of the real presence, when he was silenced, and sentenced to be burnt as a heretic; which sentence was executed upon him in 1538.

LAMBERT (Her.) the name of a family of some antiquity, originally in the county of Devon, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1710 on sir John Lambert; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Argent, on a mount an oak-tree vert, and a greyhound passant gules.

Crest. Three white plumes issuing from a ducal coronet.

LAMBERT, George, a landscape-painter, who died in 1765, successfully imitated the manner of Wooton.

LAMBERT, John Henry, a mathematician and astronomer, was born at Muhlhausen, in Switzerland, in 1728, and died in 1777, leaving, 1. A Treatise on Perspective, Zurich, 1759. 2. 'Photometrie,' 1760. 3. Letters on the Construction of the Universe, which were afterwards republished under the title of the 'System of the World,' &c.; all which were collected and printed in three volumes.

LAMBIN, Denys (Biog.) a French critic, was born at Montrevil, in Picardy, in 1516, and died in 1572, leaving an edition of Horace, 2 vols. 4to. Venet. 1566; of Cicero, 2 vols. fol. Paris. 1566; of Plautus, Paris. 1577; of Lucretius, 4to. Paris. 1563, which editions are still held in estimation. He wrote likewise 'De Utilitate Linguæ Græcæ,' &c.

LAMBETH (Topog.) a large village in the vicinity of London, the parish of which is 16 miles in extent, reaching to Norwood, Streatham, and Croydon. The kings of England had formerly a palace here at Kennington, where the Danish king, Hardi Canute, is supposed to have died; and where the English kings resided as late as Henry VII. But the chief building now is the archiepiscopal palace, which was rebuilt by archbishop Juxon at the expense of 11,500. The guard-room is supposed to have been erected before 1424. The library, which occupies the four galleries over the cloisters forming a quadrangle, was founded by archbishop Bancroft, who bequeathed all his books to the institution, which, by the subsequent bequests of his successors, contains about 25,000 volumes. The great tower at the west end of the chapel called the Lollard's Tower, from its having been used as a prison for the followers of Wickliffe, was built by archbishop Chichele in 1435. The gate-way of the palace, and the adjoining tower, which are of brick, were built by archbishop Morton in 1490. In Watt Tyler's insurrection in 1381, this palace suffered much from popular fury; and at the termination of the grand rebellion in 1648 it was sold for 7073*l.*; but at the restoration it reverted to the see of Canterbury. In 1769 it underwent considerable repairs and embellishments.

LAMBRUN, Margaret (Hist.) a Scotch woman, who resolving to revenge the death of Mary, queen of Scots, her mistress, and that of her own husband, who died of grief at this event, passed over into England in the disguise of a man, and obtained an opportunity of getting into the presence of Elizabeth; but her eagerness to reach the queen caused her to drop one of her pistols, by which her purpose was detected. When arrested and brought before the queen she made no secret of her intention; but the firmness of her manner, and the force of her replies, inspired the queen with sentiments of respect; and, having granted her a pardon, caused her to be landed in France at her own request.

LAMECH (Bibl.) למך, of the race of Cain, was son of Methusael, and father of Jabal, Jubal, Tubal Cain, and Naamah. Gen. iv. &c.

Lakes. Winander-mere and Coniston-mere.

History. Lancashire was inhabited by the Brigantes at the time of the Roman invasion, or, according to Ptolemy, by the Setantii. The Romans under Julius Agricola made a conquest of it, A. D. 79, when they formed various stations and roads, and included the whole of Lancashire with Yorkshire in the name of Britannia Superior. It was joined by the Saxons to the kingdom of Northumbria, and on the abolition of the Saxon heptarchy was formed into a county.

LANCASTER, Edmund, Earl of (Hist.) brother to Edward I, was dispatched by him to settle differences with Philip of France, and died in 1296, at the time that he was invading the province of Guienne.

Lancaster, Thomas, Earl of, cousin-german to king Edward II, and one of the most powerful princes in his time, headed the barons against Piers Gavaston, the favourite of the king, whom he caused to be put to death. He afterwards combined with the barons to ruin the Despensers, and raised an army to oppose the king; but, being defeated by sir Andrew Harcla, and taken prisoner, he was, by order of Edward, clothed in a mean attire, placed on a lean jade without a bridle, a hood was put on his head, and in this posture, attended by the acclamations of the people, he was conducted to an eminence near Pomfret, one of his own castles, and there beheaded.

Lancaster, Earl of, brother and heir to the preceding, joined the conspiracy of Isabella and Mortimer against Edward II, who was afterwards committed to his custody; but, being suspected of favouring the fallen monarch, the latter was removed from his charge; but he was appointed guardian to the young king, Edward III.

Lancaster, Henry, Earl of, who was first earl of Leicester, and afterwards made Duke of Lancaster, was employed by Edward III to negociate between him and king John, and died about 1336.

Lancaster, John of Gaunt, Duke of, youngest son to Edward III, accompanied his brother Edward, the Black Prince, into Spain, where he married the daughter of Peter the Cruel, and in consequence laid claim to the crown of Castille at the death of the latter, but gave up his pretensions upon the payment of a large sum of money, having previously married his daughter Philippa to the king of Portugal. He died in 1399, after having had great authority during the early part of Richard's reign.

Lancaster, Henry, Duke of, son of the preceding, procured the deposition of Richard II, which paved the way to his succeeding to the throne, as he afterwards did, by the title of Henry IV. [Vide Henry]

Lancaster, James, one of the fortunate adventurers in the reign of Elizabeth, who, being supplied with three ships and a pinnace by the merchants of London, took thirty-nine ships of the enemy, and, making a desperate attack on Pernambuco, in Brazil, he captured the place, and returned loaded with the treasures which he had so bravely acquired. He died about 1620.

Lancaster, Nathaniel (Biog.) an English divine, who died in 1775, is known and remembered only as the author of an 'Essay on Delicacy.'

Lancaster (Geog.) the capital of Lancashire, situated on the river Lune, or Loyne, 54 m. N. W. Manchester, 53 N. by E. Liverpool, and 240 N. W. London. Lon. 2° 47′ W. lat. 54° 3′ N. This town, called in the Latin of the middle ages Lancastria, is of considerable antiquity, having been one of the principal Roman stations, and answering to the Longevicum of Antoninus, or the ad Alaunum in the itinerary of Richard. Its castle, which now serves as a jail, is supposed to be of Saxon origin.

LANCELOT, Andrew (Ecc.) an English prelate, who was educated at Cambridge, and became a fellow of Jesus College, Oxford, was, after various preferments, successively promoted to the sees of Chichester, Ely, and Winchester, and died in 1626, leaving some theological and controversial works.

Lancelot, Claude (Biog.) a French writer, was born at Paris in 1619, and died in 1695, leaving, 1. 'Nouvelle Methode pour apprendre la Langue Latine,' 8vo. 1644. 2. 'Nouvelle Methode pour apprendre le Grec,' 8vo. 1656; these two grammars are now well known under the title of 'Port-Royal Grammars.' 3. 'Le Jardin des Racines Grecques,' 1657, which was attacked by Father Labbe in 'Les Etymologies de la Langue Françoise,' &c. 8vo. 1661. 4. 'Chronologie Sacrée,' fol. 1662. 5. LANGALERIE, Philip de Gentils, Marquis de (Hist.) a French officer and nobleman, who, after distinguishing himself in 32 campaigns in the French service, and attaining to the rank of a general, left his native country, and successively entered the service of Austria, Poland, Prussia, and Holland, but, being suspected of holding a secret correspondence with the Turks, he was arrested and carried to Vienna, where he died in 1717. His Memoirs were published in 1753.

LANGANICO (Geog.) the ancient Olympia, a town of European Turkey, in the Morea, situate on the small river Carbon, the ancient Alpheus. 32 m. S. E. Chiarenza, and 60 S. W. Corinth.

LANGBAINE, Gerard (Biog.) an English writer, was born at Barton-Kirk[illegible] in Westmoreland, about 1608, educated at Oxford, and died in 1657, leaving, 1. An edition of Longinus, 8vo. Oxon. 1636, and 1638. 2. 'Brief Discourse relating to the times of Edward VI, by way of preface to a book entituled, The True Subject to the Rebel,' &c. 4to. Oxford, 1641. 3. 'Episcopal Inheritance; or, a Reply to the Humble Examination of the printed Abstract,' 4to. Oxford, 1641; these two pieces were reprinted in 1680. 4. 'A Review of the Covenant,' &c. 1644; and reprinted in 4to. 1661. 5. 'Answer of the Chancellor, Master, and Scholars, of the University of Oxford, to the Petition, Articles of Grievance, and Reasons of the City of Oxford, presented to the Committee for regulating the University of Oxford, July 24, 1649,' 4to. Oxford, 1649; reprinted in 1678, with a book entitled, 'A Defence of the Rights and Privileges of the University of Oxford,' published by James Harrington, 4to. Oxford, 1690. 6. 'Quæstiones pro More Solenni in Vesperiis propositæ Ann. 1651,' 4to. Oxon. 1658, published by Mr. Thomas Barlow, afterwards bishop of Lincoln. 7. 'Platonicorum aliquot qui etiamnum supersunt,' &c. 8vo. Oxon. 1667, which was found among his papers, and placed at the end of 'Alcini in Platonicam Philosophiam Introductio,' published by Dr. Fell, dean of Christ Church. 8. 'The Foundation of the University of Oxford, with a Catalogue of the Principal Founders and Special Benefactors of all the Colleges, and total number of Students,' &c. 4to. London, 1651, mostly taken from the tables of John Scott, of Cambridge, printed in 1622. 9. 'The Foundation of the University of Cambridge, with a Catalogue,' &c. also taken from Scott's tables. He likewise laboured very much in finishing archbishop Usher's 'Chronologia Sacra,' but died when he had almost completed it, the finishing hand being put to it by Barlow. He translated into Latin 'Reasons of the present Judgment of the University concerning the Solemn League and Covenant;' in the drawing up of which he assisted Dr. Robert Sanderson and Dr. Robert Zouch; and he translated into English 'A Review of the Council of Trent, written in French by a learned Roman Catholic,' fol. Oxford, 1638; besides which he left thirteen 4tos. and eight 8vos. in MS., with innumerable collections in loose papers, collected from ancient MSS. in the Bodleian, &c. To him is also ascribed, 'A View of the New Directory, and a Vindication of the Ancient Liturgy of the Church of England,' &c. 4to. Oxford, 1645.

LANGBAINE, Gerard, son of the preceding, was born in 1656 at Oxford, where he was educated, and died in 1692, leaving, 1. An Appendix to a Catalogue of all the Graduates in Divinity, Law, and Physic, &c.' written by R. Peers, &c. 2. 'An Account of the English Dramatic Poets,' 8vo. Oxford, 1691; reprinted by Gildon in 1699; besides his 'Momus Triumphans.'

LANGDALE, Marmaduke, Lord (Hist.) a loyalist, who, after having signalized himself in the cause of Charles I, was taken at the battle of Preston, but, making his escape, retired to king Charles II, by whom he was honoured with the peerage, and died in 1681.

LANGDALE, Lord (Her.) a title conferred in 1650 on sir Marmaduke Langdale above-mentioned, which became extinct in 1777.

LANGE, Joseph (Biog.) a Greek professor of Friburg in the 17th century, was the author of 'Elementale Mathematicum,' reprinted in 1625.

LANGHAM, Simon de (Ecc.) a cardinal, and an English prelate, was born at Langham, in Rutlandshire, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, became a monk of St. Peter's, Westminster, in 1335; was elected prior in 1349; promoted in 1360, by Edward III, to the place of Lord Treasurer; in 1361 chosen bishop of London, and afterwards of Ely in the same year; raised to the post of Chancellor in 1366, and, at the express desire of the king, promoted to the see of Canterbury. In 1368 he was created a cardinal by Urban V, and died in 1376, after having spent the greater part of his life in the service of his sovereign, and the popes Urban V and Gregory XI. By his will he bequeathed a large donation to the support of the fabric of the Abbey at Westminster.

Langham, Sir John, Bart. of the same family, was one of the principal citizens deputed by the city of London to wait on his majesty Charles II in Holland. He had largely contributed towards the support of the royal family during their exile, and was one of the aldermen sent to the Tower in 1648 for refusing to publish an act, entitled, 'An Act for the Exheredation of the Royal Line, the Abolishment of Monarchy in the Kingdom, and the setting up a Commonwealth.' He died in 1671, after having received the reward of his loyalty.

Langham (Her.) the name of a family descended from William, son of Henry de Langham, who held land in Langham, in Rutlandshire, in 10 Ed. I. The 14th in lineal descent from him was sir John Langham, the loyalist abovementioned, who was created a baronet in 1660. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, three bears' heads erased sable, muzzled or, two and one.

Crest. A bear's head erased, as in the arms.

Langius, Rudolph, an ecclesiastic, and a poet, who died in 1519, at the age of 80, published some poems at Munster, 4to. 1486.

Langius, or Lange, John, a physician of Loewenbury, in Silesia, was born in 1485, and died in 1565, leaving, 1. 'Medicinalium Epistolarum Miscellanea,' first published at Basle, in 4to. 1554; and reprinted with additional Epistles. 2. 'De Syrmaismo et Ratione Purgandi per Vomitum,' &c. 8vo. 1572. 3. 'De Scorbuto Epistolæ Duæ,' 1624; together with the treatise of Sennertus on the same subject. 4. 'Consilia quædam et Experimenta,' 4to. 1676.

LANGLAND (Ecc.) vide Longland.

LANGLES, Louis Mathieu (Biog.) an orientalist, was born near Montdidier in 1764, and died in 1824, leaving 'Alphabet Mantchou,' 1787; 'Dictionnaire Mantchou-François;' besides several translations from the Mantchou, Persian, &c.

LANGLEY, Battey (Biog.) an English architect, who died in 1751, was the author of several works on building, as the 'Builder's Jewel;' the 'Builder's Price Book,' &c.

LANGOBARDI (Geog.) vide Longobardi.

LANGRES (Geog.) a considerable town of France, in the ancient province of Champagne, and the modern department of the Upper Marne, situated on more elevated ground than any in that country, near the source of the Marne, 40 m. N. E. Dijon. Lon. 5° 19′ E., lat. 47° 50′ N.

History of Langres.

This ancient town, called by the Latins Lingones, Andematunum, or Andomidunum Lingonum [vide Lingones], was ruined by the Vandals in the fourth century, who put to death S. Didier, their bishop. The city was afterwards rebuilt, and obtained the epithets of Nobilis, Magna, Famosa. Its earliest prelates, of whom mention is made, were S. Senator, S. Just, and S. Didier. Besides being the birthplace of many distinguished persons, as St. Urban, St. Gregory, William de Joinville, Hugh de Cluni, &c. it was the seat of some councils, namely, in 859, 1080, 1116, 1404, 1451, and 1461. Aimon. Hist. l. 5; San Marth. Gall. Christ.; Du Chesne Antiq. des Villes.

LANGRIST, Browne (Biog.) a physician, who died in 1759, was the author of 'A new Essay on Muscular Motion, founded on Experiments,' &c. 8vo. 1733; 'Modern Theory of Physic,' 8vo. 1738; 'Physical Experiments upon Brutes,' 8vo. 1745; 'Croonian Lectures on Muscular Motion,' 1747; and 'A Treatise on the Small Pox,' 1758.

LANGTOFT, Peter (Biog.) an English chronicler, so called from Langtoft, in Yorkshire, who flourished in the 13th and 14th centuries, translated out of the Latin into French verse Bosenham or Boscani's Life of Thomas à Becket; also a Chronicle of England, in the same verse; several copies of which are extant still in libraries. An English metrical version of his Chronicle was edited by Hearne, in 2 vols. 8vo. 1725.

LANGTON, Stephen (Ecc.) an English prelate, and a cardinal, was chosen to the see of Canterbury by command of the pope, and in defiance of king John, who vainly remonstrated against such an infringement of his regal power. Langton died in 1228, after having joined the faction by which the king was humbled. He wrote some 'Commentaries;' besides a Theological Drama, in which Truth, Justice, and Mercy, debate among themselves what ought to be the Fate of Adam after his Fall;' and a canticle on the 'Passion of Jesus Christ,' are ascribed to him. His 'History of the Translation of the Body of Thomas à Becket,' was printed at the end of that archbishop's Letters, at Brussels, in 1682. The first division of the Bible into chapters is supposed to have been first made by him.

LANGUEDOC (Geog.) an extensive province in the south of France.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the E. by Dauphiny and Provence, S. E. by the Mediterranean, S. by Rousillon, W. by Gascony, and N. by Querci, Rourgue, Auvergne, and Lyonnois, being 225 miles in length, and 100 in breadth.

Division. It was divided into Upper or Western, and Lower or Eastern Languedoc, and now forms the departments of Upper Garonne, Aude, Herault, Gard, Lozere, and Ardeche, &c.

Principal Towns. Toulouse, the capital, Montpelier, Nismes, Beziers, Viviers, Narbonne, Limoux, Foix, Agde, Carcassone, &c.

Principal Rivers, &c. The Rhone, the Vistre, the Vidouile, the Berange, &c.; besides which it has a celebrated canal, known by the name of the Canal of Languedoc, which was begun in 1666, and finished in 1681, extending from Cette to Toulouse, where it falls into the Garonne, and thus communicates with the Mediterranean.

History. Languedoc was known to the Romans by the name of the Provincia Narbonensis Prima, which nearly corresponded to the present province. The Goths began to form a settlement here in the fifth century, from whom it is supposed to have received the name of Languedoc, Langue de Goth, or Land Goth. They extended their territory to the Loire, and made Toulouse their capital. In the reign of Erric or Euric, the father of Alaric,

Clovis defeated the latter in 507, after which he and his successors obtained possession of this province, to which Charlemagne gave governors, under the name of counts, of whom Corson was the first in 778. Subsequently it underwent many changes until 1361, when it was united to the French crown by king John.

Writers on Languedoc.

De Morea, Hist. de Bearn; Catel. Hist. des Comtes de Toulouse, &c.; Bernard Gui de Com. Tolos; Isaac Pontan. Itiner. Gall. Narbon.; Papyr. Masson; Orderic Vitalis; Matthew of Paris; Cluverius, &c.

LANGUET, Hubert (Hist.) a native of France, and minister of state to Augustus, elector of Saxony, was born at Viteaux in 1518, and died in 1581, after having been employed by the elector as envoy into France, and afterwards by John Casimer, count Palatine, and the prince of Orange. He wrote, 1. A History of the Siege of Gotha, in Latin, which Schardius has inserted in his History of Germany during the Reign of Ferdinand I; but without mentioning Languet's name. 2. 'Epistolæ ad Principem suum Augustum Saxoniæ Ducem,' 4to. Hall. 1699. 3. 'Epistolæ Politicæ et Historicæ ad Philippum Sydnæum,' 12mo. of which an edition was published by lord Hailes, 8vo. 1775. 4. 'Epistolæ ad Joachim Camerarium,' &c. 12mo.; a new edition of which was published by Carpzovius. 5. 'Hist. Descriptio Susceptæ à Cæsarea Majestate Executionis Augusto Saxoniæ Duce contra S. Romani Imperii Rebelles,' &c. 4to. 1568. 6. 'Vindiciæ contra Tyrannos,' &c. 12mo. 1579, under the name of Stephanus Junius Brutus.

LANGUET, John Baptist Joseph, great grand-nephew of the preceding, was born at Dijon in 1675, and died in 1750. He is principally known as the founder of the establishment de l'Enfant Jesus, for poor ladies, as also for poor women and children.

LANGUET, John Joseph (Ecc.) brother of the preceding, was promoted to the see of Soisson in 1715, afterwards to the archiepiscopal see of Sens, and died in 1753, leaving several polemical works, which were printed at Sens, in 2 vols. fol. 1753.

LANIERE, Nicholas (Biog.) an Italian artist, who died in 1646, at the age of 78, drew a picture of Mary, Christ, and Joseph, for Charles I; but he was most skilled as a musician, and composed 'The Vision of Delight,' a masque; 'Musica Narrativa,' several examples of which are preserved by Playford, in his collection, particularly 'The Ayres and Dialogues,' in 1653; and the second part of the 'Musical Companion,' 1667.

LANINI, Bernardino (Biog.) an historical painter of Vercelli, who died in 1578, imitated the style of his master Gaudenzio Ferrari, to the utmost perfection. Among his numerous works at Milan are distinguished the Dome of Novara, the Sybils, and the semblance of the Eternal Father, &c. He had two brothers, namely, Gaudenzio and Girolamo, who were artists, but of merit greatly inferior to his own.

LANNOY, Charles de (Hist.) an able general, in the service of the emperor Charles V. He took Francis I prisoner at the battle of Pavia; and when this monarch was set at liberty, he was appointed by the emperor to conduct him back in safety to his dominions. He died at Gazette in 1527.

LANSBERG, Philip (Biog.) a mathematician, was born in Zealand in 1561, and died in 1632, leaving, 1. 'Chronologiæ Sacræ Libri tres,' 1626. 2. 'Progymnasmata Astronomiæ Restitutæ,' 1629. 3. 'Triangulorum Geometricorum Lib. quatuor,' 1631. 4. 'Uranometriæ Lib. tres,' ibid. 5. 'Commentationes in Motum Diurnum et Annuum,' which was answered by Libert Fromond, in his 'Anti-Aristarchus, sive Orbis Terræ Immobilis.' His works were collected and printed in fol. Middelburg. 1663.

LANSBERG, James, son of the preceding, and also a mathematician, defended his father's opinions, on the motion of the earth, against the attacks of Fromond, and died in 1657.

LANSDOWNE, George, Viscount (Hist.) of the family of Granville, or Grenville, mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1667, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1735; after having, among other offices, filled that of Treasurer to queen Anne, and been one of her Privy Council. He is, however, now better known as a poet, whose works have procured him a place in the collections of British Poets. His prose works, consisting of 'Observations on Burnet;' 'Defence of his Relation, Sir Richard Grenville;' 'Translation of some Parts of Demosthenes;' 'Letter to a Young Man on taking Orders;' 'A Vindication of General Monk,' &c. were published with his Poems, in 4to. 1732; and in 3 vols. 12mo. 1736. [Vide Plate XXIX]

LANSDOWNE, Marquis of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Petty [vide Petty]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Petty, marquis of Lansdowne, earl of Wycombe, viscount Calne, lord Wycombe, baron of Chipping Wycombe, in Great Britain; also earl of Shelburne, viscount Fitzmaurice, and baron of Dunkerron, in Ireland.

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth ermine, on a bend azure, a magnetic needle pointing at a polar star or, for Petty; second and third argent, a saltire gules, and chief ermine, with a crescent for difference.

Crest. On a wreath a bee-hive beset with bees, diversely volant proper; also on a wreath a centaur, party per fess proper and argent, with his bow and arrow proper.

Supporters. On the dexter side a Pegasus ermine, with bridle, mane, tail, wings, and hoofs or; on the sinister a gryphon or.

Motto. "Virtute non verbis."

LANSDOWNE, Viscount, a title conferred in 1711 on George Granville, the poet above-mentioned, brother to John, first earl of Bath, which became extinct at his death in 1734.

LANSDOWNE (Topog.) a hill near Bath, memorable as the scene of an action during the grand rebellion, which, though obstinately contested, was not decisive on either side. The royalists had to deplore the loss of sir Bevil Granville, who fell on that day.

LANUVIUM (Geog.) or Lavinium, Λανίνιον, according to Strabo, a town of Latium, about 16 miles from Rome, on the Via Appia, where Juno had a celebrated temple, and thence received the surname of Lanuvina.

Ovid. Fast. l. 6.

LANZANO, Andrew (Biog.) a painter of Milan, who died in 1712, was the pupil of Carlo Maratti, and excelled in the correctness and elegance of his figure.

LANZI, Lewis (Biog.) an Italian antiquary and Jesuit, was born in 1732, at Monte-del-Celmo, and died in 1810, leaving, A Guide to the Gallery of Florence; Essay on the Tuscan Language, 3 vols. 8vo.; and History of Painting in Italy; the best edition of which is said to be that in 6 vols. 8vo. Bassano, 1809.

LANZONI, Joseph (Biog.) a physician of Ferrara, was born in 1663, and died in 1730, leaving several works, a collection of which was printed in 3 vols. 4to. 1738, under the title of 'Josephi Lanzoni, Philosophiæ et Medicinæ Doctoris, &c. Opera Omnia Medico-physica, &c.

LAOBOTAS (Hist.) or Labotas, a Spartan king, of the family of the Agidæ, who succeeded his father A. C. 1023.

LAOCOON (Myth.) son of Priam and Hecuba, or, according to others, of Antenor, or of Capys, the priest of Apollo, who was going to sacrifice a bullock to Neptune, when two huge serpents issuing from the sea killed him and his two sons, by wreathing themselves around their bodies. This dreadful fate of Laocoon, so familiar to the readers of Virgil and Petronius, is become more generally known by the celebrated marble statue, the work of Polydorus, Athenodorus, and Agesander. This monument, which was found in the ruins of the palace of Titus, in the 16th century, has been preserved till lately in the Farnese palace. Hygin. Fab. 135; Virg. Æn.; Petron. Arb. Sat.; Plin. l. 36; Tzetz. in Lycoph.

LAODAMAS (Myth.) Λαοδάμας, a son of Alcinous, king of the Phæacians, who offered to wrestle with Ulysses while at his father's court, which the hero declined from motives of delicacy. Hom. Odyss. l. 7.

LAODAMIA (Myth.) Λαοδαμείη, a daughter of Acastus and Astydamia, who married Protesilaus, the son of Iphiclus. Her husband being killed at the Trojan war by Hector, she threw herself into the flames which was consuming his wooden image, and was burnt to death. Virg. Æn.

Laodamia, a daughter of Bellerophon, by Achemene, daughter of Iobates, and mother of Sarpedon, by Jupiter. She dedicated herself to Diana; but her haughtiness offending the goddess, she was slain with arrows. Hom. Il. l. 6.

Laodamia (Hist.) a daughter of Alexander, king of Epirus, by Olympias, the daughter of Pyrrhus, was slain in a sedition in the temple of Diana, whither she had fled for safety. Justin. l. 28.

LAODICE (Myth.) Λαοδίκη, a daughter of Priam and Hecuba, is said to have thrown herself down from the top of a tower when Troy was taken; but, according to Pausanias, the famous painting of the Fall of Troy, by Polygnotus, represented her near an altar, at some distance from the captive princesses of Troy. Hom. Il. l. 3, et Eustath.; Paus. l. 3; Dictys. Cret. l. 1; Parthen. Amat. 16; Tzetz. Lycoph.

Laodice (Hist.) a sister of Mithridates, who married Ariarathes, king of Cappadocia, and afterwards her brother Mithridates, whom she attempted to poison; but was frustrated in her purpose, and put to death. Parthen. c. 16.

Laodice, wife of Antiochus, the Macedonian, was the mother of Seleucus Nicator, who became king of Syria, after the death of Alexander.

Laodice, wife of Antiochus, surnamed Theos, was repudiated by him in favour of Berenice, but afterwards recalled, when she put Berenice to death, and was herself murdered by order of Ptolemy Evergetes, A. C. 246. Justin. Appian. in Syr. &c.

LAODICEA (Bibl.) Λαοδικεία, the town of Phrygia, mentioned under Geography, is spoken of more than once in the Epistles of St. Paul, who, as he himself says, was never at Laodicea, but desires the Colossians to send to the Laodiceans the epistle which he had addressed to themselves, and also that they should read the epistle from Laodicea. This last expression of the apostle has been interpreted by some to signify, that he had addressed a letter to Laodicea, but the epistle which is extant under the name of St. Paul to the Laodiceans is universally admitted to be spurious. Col. iv. 16; Rev. ii; Tertull. cont. Mart.; S. Hieron. de Script. Eccles.; S. Epiphan. Hær. 42; Theodoret. in Coloss.; Philast. de Hæres; Greg. Mag. Moral. in Job. l. 34, c. 5; Sext. Sen. &c.

Laodicea (Geog.) a city of Asia Minor, now Ladik, on the borders of Caria, Phrygia, and Lydia, celebrated for its commerce and its fine wool. It received its name in honour of Laodice, the wife of Antiochus, and was also called Diospolis and Rhoas. Cic. ad Att. l. 5, ep. 15; Strab. l. 12; Mel. l. 1; Plin. l. 5.

Laodicea, was also the name of several other towns, as one of Pontus, in Galatia, and two in Syria, &c. of which a further account is given under Numismatics.

Laodicea (Numis.) the town of Asia Minor is distinguished on coins by the inscription, ΠΡΟΣ ΛΥΚΩΙ, i. e. ad Lycum; denoting its situation near the river Lycus, and on one medal are represented the figures of two rivers, namely, ΛΥΚΟC, which flowed through the town; and ΚΑΠΡΟC, Caprus, which flowed near the town. This Laodicea struck coins as an independent state, and also in honour of Augustus, Caligula, Claudius, Agrippina, Nero, Titus, Domitian, Domitia, Adrian, Sabina, L. Ælius, M. Aurelius, Faustina, Jun., L. Verus, Commodus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, Heliogabalus, Julia Mœsa, Alexander Severus, Philip, Sen., Otacilia, Philip, Jun., and Salonina, bearing the inscriptions, ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ, with the addition of ΙΕΡΑ CΥΝΚΛΗΤΟC, i. e. sacer senatus.—ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ.—ΔΗΜΟΣ ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠ. i. e. Populus Laodicensium Metropolis. — ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ CΑΡΔι*ανῶν.* — ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΝΙΚΟΜΗΔΕΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.—ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ ΕΥΤΥΧΕΙC ΚΑΙΡοι, i. e. Laodicensium Neocororum felicia Tempora.—ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΕΦΕCΙΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ: sometimes they added the name of their magistrates, as ΕΠΙ ΑΙΛ. ΠΙΓΡΗΤΟC ΑCΙΑΡ. ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ, i. e. sub Ælio Pigrete Asiarcha Laodicenorum Neocorum.—ΕΠΙ CΤΡ. Μ. ΑΥΡ. ΓΑΡΟΥ ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ Κ. ΕΦΕΣΙΩΝ Γ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ, i. e. Sub Prætore Marco Aurelio Caro Laodicensium et Ephesiorum ter Neocororum, &c.

Laodicea, in Cœlosyria, is known by some medals bearing the inscriptions, ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΕΝ ΛΙΒΑΝΩ, ΠΡΟΣ ΛΙΒΑΝΟΝ ΛΙΒΑΝΟΥ, Laodicensium in Libano, ad Libanum, vel Libani, to denote its situation near Mount Libanus. This Laodicea struck medals as an independant state, and also in honour of Antoninus Pius, Commodus, Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, and Trajanus Decius, bearing also the varied inscriptions, ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΤΩΝ ΕΝ ΛΙΒΑΝΩ ΑΞ, i. e. Laodicensium qui sunt in Libano, an. 461; marking the æra of the Seleucidæ, which commenced U. C. 442. ΤΥΧΗ ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΛΙΒΑΝ. i. e. Fortuna vel Genius Laodicensium Libani.—ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΠΡΟC ΛΙΒΑΝ. ΜΗΝ. i. e. Laodicensium ad Libanum Mensis vel Lunus.

Laodicea, in Syria, the situation of this town as a maritime place is sufficiently defined by the inscription, ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΠΡΟΣ ΘΑΛΛΑΣΣΑΝ, Laodicensium ad mare. This Laodicea also struck medals as an independant state, and in honour of Augustus, Tiberius, Germanicus, Domitian, Trajan, Antoninus Pius, M. Aurelius, L. Verus, Commodus, Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, Geta, Macrinus, Heliogabalus, Sabina Tranquillina, Philip, Sen., Trebonianus Gallus, Valerian, Sen., bearing the varied inscriptions, ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΤΗΣ ΙΕΡΑΣ ΚΑΙ ΑΥΤΟΝΟΜΟΥ, i. e. Laodicensium urbis sacræ et suis legibus utentis.—ΙΟΥΛΙΕΩΝ ΤΩΝ ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ, Juliensium qui et Laodicenorum ann. 24; so called from Livia, the wife of Augustus. The æra here marked is the Augustan, which the Laodiceans substituted for that of the Seleucidæ. On the medals of Septimius Severus, they marked the title of Metropolis, adding the epithet Severina, because they received this dignity from him, as ΙΟΥΛ. ΛΑΟΔΙ. CΕΟΥ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΛΕΩΣ, i. e. Juliæ Laodiceæ Severinæ Metropoleos. The medals of Caracalla are inscribed, COL. SEP. AUR. LAOD. M., i. e. Septimia Aurelia Laodicea Metropolis; also, ΙΟΥΛΙΕΩΝ

ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ ΠΡ. ΣΥΡΙΑΣ, i. e. Juliensium Laodicensium Neocorum Primorum Syriæ. Vaillant. Gr.; Patin. Imp.; Tristan. Comment. Hist.; Spanh. Dissert.; Hardain. Oper.; Froel. Not. &c.

LAODOCUS (Myth.) Λαόδοκος, a son of Antenor, whose form Minerva borrowed to advise Pandarus to break the treaty which had been formed between the Greeks and Trojans.

LAOMEDON (Myth.) Λαομέδων, son of Ilus, king of Troy, married Strymo, by whom he had Podarces, otherwise well known by the name of Priam. He is said to have built the walls of Troy, with the assistance of the gods Apollo and Neptune, but his ingratitude afterwards brought down their vengeance, from which he was released by Hercules, but failing afterwards in his promises to the hero, his city was taken, and himself put to death, when he was succeeded by his son Priam. Hom. Il. l. 6; Apollod. l. 2; Horat. l. 3, od. 3; Hygin. Fab. 89; Ovid. Met. l. 11; Tzetz. in Lyc.; Paus. l. 7.

LAON (Geog.) an ancient city of France, called in the Latin of the middle ages Laudunum, or Lugdunum Clevatum, in an elevated situation near the river Ardon, 20 miles N. E. Soissons, and 77 N. E. Paris. Lon. 3° 30′ E. lat. 49° 30′ N. It was at first only a castle, but was erected by Clovis into an episcopal city, of which S. Rheims became the first bishop. King Lewis IV, surnamed Outre-Mer, besieged this city twice, where he was taken prisoner; and Hugh Capet also besieged it in 988. It had also its share of suffering during the religious wars of the 16th century. Two councils were held here, namely, in 948, and in 1232.

LAPARELLI, Francis (Biog.) an architect and engineer of Cortona, who died in 1570, at the age of 49, was employed successively by Cosmo I, duke of Tuscany, and by Pius IV, in the fortifications and defence of Civita Vecchia, as also in the fortification of Malta, against the Turks; after which he was in the service of the Venetians, in the siege of Candia. He assisted Michael Angelo in completing his designs for the erection of St. Peter's church at Rome.

LAPIDE, Cornelius (Biog.) vide Pierre.

LAPHYSTIUM (Geog.) Λαφύστιον, a mountain of Bœotia, where Jupiter and Bacchus had a temple, whence they both received the surname of Laphystius. Paus. l. 9; Tzetz. in Lycoph.

LAPIDEUS (Myth.) a surname of Jupiter among the Romans, in allusion probably to the stone which Saturn devoured for Jupiter. Hygin. Fab. 139; Tzetz. ad Lyc. 399; Fest. de Verb. Signif.

LAPITHÆ (Myth.) a people of Thessaly. [Vide Lapithes]

LAPITHES (Myth.) Λαπίθης, the father of Phorbas and Periphas, whose children received the name of the Lapithæ; among these were Theseus, Dryas, Hopleus, Mopsus, &c. They were engaged in a quarrel with the Centaurs, in consequence of the latter having offered an insult to their wives. The issue of the battle in which Theseus distinguished himself was in favour of the Lapithæ, the Centaurs being worsted, and many of them slain. The invention of bits and bridles is ascribed to the Lapithæ. Hesiod. in Scut.; Pind. Pyth. od. 2; Apollon. Argon. l. 3, et Schol. Apollon.; Diod. l. 4; Virg. G. l. 3; Serv. ad Virg.; Hygin. Fab. 33; Stat. Theb. l. 7.

LAPO, Arnolph di (Biog.) an architect of Florence, who died in 1300, at the age of 68, left the cathedral of Florence, and other public buildings, as monuments of his genius.

LARA (Myth.) one of the Naiads, daughter of the river Almon, in Latium, whose tongue was cut out by order of Jupiter, because she betrayed his amours to Juno. She had two sons by Mercury, who were worshipped under the name of Lares, by the Romans. Varr. de Ling. Lat. l. 4; Ovid. Fast. l. 2; Lactant. l. 1.

LARCHER, Peter Henry (Biog.) a French scholar and translator, was born at Dijon in 1726, and died in 1812, leaving, 1. A translation of the 'Electra' of Euripides in 1750. 2. A translation of Sir John Pringle's work 'On the Diseases of the Army.' 3. A new edition of Hudibras, with Notes. 4. 'A translation of 'Chereas and Callirrhoe,' 1758, and reprinted in the Bibliotheque des Romans Grecs, for which also Larcher wrote Critical Remarks on the Æthiopics of Heliodorus.' 4. 'Supplement à la Philosophie de l'Histoire,' which was directed against Voltaire, and was answered with ridicule by the latter, in a work entitled 'Defense de Mon Oncle,' to which Larcher rejoined in his 'Reponse à la Defense de Mon Oncle. 5. 'Memoire sur Venus,' 1774. 6. A translation of Xenophon, 1777. 7. A translation of Herodotus, which did not appear until 1786. His translation was honoured with a Latin version by Borheck, and one in German by Degan, and his Notes have appeared in all the principal languages in Europe. A new and corrected edition of his Herodotus was published by himself in 9 vols. 8vo, 1802.

LARDNER, Nathaniel (Biog.) a dissenting minister, was born at Hawkhurst, in Kent, and died in 1768, leaving a number of works, the most known of which, is his 'Credibility of the Gospel History.' A complete edition of them was published in 1788, in 11 large volumes, and another edition in 4to. has, it is said, been printed since.

LARGUS (Biog.) a Latin poet, who composed a poem on the arrival of Antenor in Italy, where he built the town of Padua. Ovid. ex Pont. l. 4, ep. 16; Gyrald. de Poet. Hist. l. 4.

LARINO (Geog.) the Larinum of the ancients, an episcopal town of Naples, suffragan of Benevento. [Vide Larinum]

LARINUM (Geog.) now Larino, a town of the Frentani, on the river Tifernus, before it falls into the Adriatic. Cic. pro Cluent. c. 63; Cæs. de Bell. Gall. l. 1; Liv. l. 22.

LARISSA (Myth.) a daughter of Pelasgus, who gave her name to some cities, according to Pausanias.

LARISSA (Geog.) the name of several cities, the principal of which is that in Thessaly, on the borders of the Peneus, where Acrisius is said to have been accidentally killed by his grandson Perseus, and that between Palestine and Egypt; where, according to some accounts, Pompey was murdered and buried. Jupiter had a temple in the first Larissa, whence he was surnamed Larissæus. Virg. Æn. l. 2; Liv. l. 31; Lucan. l. 6; Ovid. Met. l. 2; Plin. l. 4, &c.

LARISSA (Numis.) the first town of this name above-mentioned is known by the type of a horse feeding or running, which is an ordinary type on the medals of Thessaly; some have also the figure of Hercules contending with Achelous, inscription, ΛΑΡΙΣΑΙΩΝ, or ΛΑΡΙΣΣΑΙΩΝ, with the addition sometimes of ΛΑΡΙΣΑΙΩΝ ΤΗΣ ΙΕΡΑΣ, i. e. Larissæorum sacræ urbis. Goltz. Græc.; Spanh. Dis.; Beg. Thes.; Pembroch. Mus. Pt. II; Hunt. Mus. &c.

LAROCHE (Her.) the name of a family originally from Bourdeaux, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet: the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth or, a raven proper; second and third argent, on a mount vert, an eagle close looking at the sun in his glory, in the canton.

Crest. A raven, as in the arms.

LARREY, Isaac de (Biog.) a French historian, was born at Montivilliers in 1638, and died in 1719, leaving, 1. 'L'Histoire d'Auguste,' Berlin, 1690. 2. 'L'Histoire d'Eleonore Héritière de Guienne, Reine de France et ensuite d'Angleterre,' 1691. 3. 'Histoire d'Angleterre,' &c. the first two volumes of which appeared in 1697 and 1698, the third and fourth in 1707 and 1713. 4. 'Censure du Commentaire de Pierre Jean Olive sur l'Apocalypse, traduite en François avec des Remarques,' Amsterdam, 1700. 5. An Answer to the 'Avis aux Refugiés,' Rouen, 1714 and 1716.

6. 'Histoire des Sept. Sages,' a sort of romance, the best edition of which was printed at the Hague, in 8vo. 1721. 7. 'Histoire de France sous la Regne de Louis XIV,' 3 vols. 4to. and 9 vols. 12mo. Amsterdam.

LARROQUE, Matthew de (Biog.) a Protestant minister of France, was born at Leirac, in Guienne, in 1619, and died in 1684, leaving 'Histoire de l'Eucharistie,' 4to. 1669, and 8vo. 1671; an answer to M. Bossuet's treatise 'De la Communion sous les deux Espèces;' 'De Photino et Liberio;' 'Conformité des Eglises Reformées de France avec les Anciens;' 'Considerations sur la Nature de l'Eglise, et sur quelquesunes de ses Propriétés,' 12mo.

LARROQUE, Daniel de, son of the preceding, was born at Vitre, and died in 1731, leaving 'La Vie de l'Imposteur Mahomet,' 12mo. and some other works.

LARTIUS, Spurius (Hist.) one of the three Romans with Cocles and Herminius, who withstood the fury of Porsenna's army at the head of a bridge, while their countrymen were cutting off the communication. Liv. l. 2.

LARTIUS, Florus, T. a consul, who appeased a sedition, and was the first Roman dictator, chosen A. C. 498. He made Spurius Cassius his master of the horse. Liv. l. 2, c. 18; Dionys. Hal. l. 5; Val. Max. l. 3; Plut. in Par. c. 8; Serv. in Æn. l. 11.

LASCA (Biog.) vide Grazzini.

LASCARIS (Hist.) the name of a noble Greek family, two of which were emperors of Constantinople.

LASCARIS, Theodore, begun to reign at Nice in 1206, and died in 1222.

LASCARIS, Theodore, surnamed the Younger, succeeded John Vatatzes in 1255, and died in 1259.

LASCARIS, John, surnamed Ducas, succeeded his father, but was despoiled of his throne by Michael Palæologus.

LASCARIS, the name of some other distinguished persons in the same family.

LASCARIS, Philip de, was taken prisoner when young by the Turks, but preserving his attachment to his religion and country, found means to escape at the siege of Malta, by swimming over to the besieged, to whom he rendered great service by the advice and information which he communicated.

LASCARIS, John Paul, grand master of Malta, was elected after Anthony de Paule in 1636, and died in 1657. Du Cange. Hist. Constant.; Thuan. Hist. l. 48; Joh. And. Albert. Elog. Lasc. &c.

LASCARIS, Constantine (Biog.) a Greek, the descendant from the royal family of that name at Constantinople, was born in that city, but became a refugee in Italy, when it was taken by the Turks in 1454, and died, as is supposed, at a very advanced age, at the end of the 15th century. His Greek Grammar was printed at Milan in 1476, reprinted in 1480, and was, according to Zeno, the first Greek and Latin book that issued from the Italian press. A better edition of it was given by Aldus in 1495, from a copy corrected by the author. Lascaris was likewise the author of two tracts on the Sicilian and Calabrian Greek writers, and of some other pieces which remain in MS.

LASCARIS, John, or John Andrew, surnamed Rhyndacenus, in distinction from the preceding, who was of the same family, but surnamed Byzantinus, came to Italy on the ruin of his country, and died in 1535, at an advanced age, after having been employed on some public concerns, but still more in matters of literature. He edited the Greek 'Anthologia,' which was printed in capital letters at Florence in 1494; and also 'Callimachus,' which was printed in the same form; the 'Scholia' on Homer, in 1517; and the 'Scholia' on Sophocles in 1518. He translated into Latin, a work extracted from Polybius, on the military constitutions of the Romans; and composed epigrams in Greek and Latin, which were printed under the title of 'Lascaris Rhyndaceni Epigrammata Græco-Latina, edente Jac. Tusano,' 8vo. Paris. 1527, and 4to. 1544.

LASCELLES (Her.) a family of Yorkshire, which enjoys the peerage, first conferred on Edwin Harewood, who in 1790 was created baron Harewood, which title became extinct at his death, but was revived in 1796, in the person of his cousin Edward Lascelles, who was further advanced in 1812 to the dignities of viscount Lascelles, and earl of Harewood.

LASCELLES, Viscount, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Harewood.

LASENA (Biog.) or Lascena, Peter, an Italian scholar, was born at Naples in 1590, and died in 1636, leaving, 1. 'Nepenthes Homeri, seu de Abolendo Luctu,' 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1624. 2. 'Cleombrotus, sive de iis qui in Aquis pereunt,' 8vo. Rom. 1637. 3. 'De Linguâ Hellenistica.' 4. 'Dell' antico Ginnasio Napolitano,' 4to. 1688.

LASCO (Biog.) vide Alasco.

LASSALA, Manuel (Biog.) a Spanish Ex-Jesuit, was born at Valentia in 1729, and died in 1798, leaving an Essay on General History, ancient and modern, 3 vols. 4to. Valentia, 1755; an Account of the Castilian Poets, 4to. 1757; besides some Tragedies, &c.

LATCH, John (Biog.) a lawyer, and native of Somersetshire, who was educated at Oxford, and died in 1655, was the reporter of certain 'Cases in the three first years of Car. I,' which were published in French by Edward Walpole, fol. 1662.

LATERANUS, Plautius (Hist.) a consul elect in the reign of Nero, who was put to death as an accomplice in the conspiracy of Piso. The palace at Rome, called the Lateran, derives its name from this Plautius Lateranus. Tac. Annal. l. 15; Arrian. Epist. l. 1; S. Hieron. Epist. 30.

LATERENSIS, M. (Hist.) a friend of Cicero, and a zealot for the republic, killed himself rather than join the party of Anthony and Lepidus. Cic. ad Fam. l. 8, ep. 8.

LATIMER, Hugh (Ecc.) an English prelate, and one of the first reformers of the Church of England, was born at Thurcaston, in Leicestershire, about 1470, educated at Cambridge, and, being afterwards very zealous in the cause of the reformation, he was nominated to the see of Worcester by Henry VIII, but deprived of it soon after, and imprisoned in the Tower for the last six years of Henry's reign. On the accession of Edward VI he was restored to his liberty, and continued his exertions against the Romish Church, although only a private clergyman, until the reign of queen Mary, when he and Ridley were called upon to dispute with some Popish divines, and finally condemned to be burnt as heretics, which sentence was executed upon them at Oxford in 1554. His 'Sermons' have been often printed. [Vide Plate XIX]

LATIMER, Lord (Her.) vide Neville.

LATIMER, William (Biog.) an English scholar, was educated at All Souls' College, Oxford, of which he became a fellow in 1489, and died in 1545. He was reckoned one of the greatest men of his age, and with Colet, Lily, and Grocyn, contributed much to establish a taste for the Greek language. Of his writings nothing is extant but a few letters to Erasmus.

LATINI, Brunetto (Biog.) a grammarian of Florence in the 13th century, who, being of the party of the Guelphs that were defeated, fled to France, where he lived for many years, but died after his return to his country in 1294, leaving his 'Tresor,' a sort of encyclopedia, and his 'Tesoretto,' or a collection of moral precepts; besides a translation into the Italian of part of Cicero's work 'De Inventione.'

LATINIUS, Latiaris (Hist.) a celebrated informer at the court of Tiberius, first procured the death of Sabinus in order to please Sejanus, and then shared the fate of the latter when he fell into disgrace. Tacit. Annal. l. 4, &c.

LATINUS (Hist.) the name of two kings of Latium, according to the early accounts of Rome. Dionys. Hal. l. 1; Liv. l. 1; Aurel. Vict. de Orig. Gen. Rom.

Latinus I, a son of Faunus by Marica, was a king of the Aborigines, in Italy, who gave the name of Latins to his people. He begun his reign, according to Dionysius Halicarnassensis, Livy, and others, A. M. 2819, A. C. 1216, and reigned 46 years, leaving by his wife Amata a daughter, Lavinia, who became the wife of Æneas. Virg. Æn. l. 9; Ovid. Met. l. 13.

Latinus II, surnamed Sylvius, the eighth king of Latium, began to reign A. M. 2968, A. C. 1067.

Latinus, Latinius (Biog.) a critic of Viterbo in the 16th century, who died in 1593, left notes on Tertullian, besides a work entitled 'Bibliotheca Sacra et Profana, sive Observationes, Correctiones,' &c. fol. 1677.

LATIUM (Geog.) a country of Italy, now called Campagna di Roma, which at first extended only from the Tiber to Circeii, but afterwards comprehended the territories of the Volsci, Æqui, Hernici, Ausones, Umbri, and Rutuli. The first inhabitants were called Aborigines, and afterwards Latini, or Latins, from Latinus, their king. Laurentum was the capital of the country in the reign of Latinus, Lavinium under that of his son-in-law, Æneas, and Alba under Ascanius.

History of Latium.

This country, if we may credit the early accounts given of it by historians, was governed by princes of its own for 500 years, comprizing the reigns of 17 kings, from Picus, the son of Saturn, to Numitor, the grandfather of Romulus. Their names and chronological succession are given as in the following table:

Chronological Succession of the Kings of Latium.

Kings.	Began to reign. A. M.	A. C.	Reigned
Picus	2738	1297	37 years.
Faunus	2775	1260	44
Latinus I.	2819	1216	46
Æneas	2855	1180	4
Ascanius	2869	1166	38
Sylvius	2907	1128	30
Æneas Sylvius	2937	1098	31
Latinus II	2968	1067	51
Alba Sylvius	3019	1016	39
Capetus I.	3058	977	26
Capys	3084	951	28
Capetus II.	3112	923	13
Tyberinus	3125	910	8
Agrippa Sylvius	3133	902	41
Alladius	3174	861	19
Aventinus Sylvius	3193	842	37
Procas	3230	805	23
Amulius	3253	782	28
Numitor	3287	754

Numitor having been dispossessed of his throne by Amulius was re-established A. M. 3282, A. C. 753, by his grandson Romulus. [Vide Rome]

LATOME (Biog.) or Latomus, James, a divine, and native of Gambron, in Hainault, died in 1544, leaving a number of controversial works, which were collected and published in folio in 1550.

LATONA (Myth.) Λήτω, a daughter of Cæus, the Titan, and Phœbe, or, according to Homer, of Saturn, was the mother of Apollo and Diana by Jupiter. Juno, who was jealous of Latona, sent the serpent Python to persecute her; wherefore being driven from heaven she sought refuge in the island of Delos. Hom. Il. l. 21; et. Hym. in Apoll. &c.; Hesiod. Theog. v. 405; Herodot. l. 2; Apollod. l. 3; Diod. l. 5; Hygin. Fab. 140; Horat. l. 4, od. 6; Juv. Sat. 6; Ovid. Met. l. 6; Athen. l. 10; Lucian. Dial. &c.

Latona (Numis.) this goddess is represented on some medals in the act of walking with a child in each arm, and looking about her; the inscription on some ΛΗΤΩΙΑ, to denote the festival which was celebrated in honour of her. Vaill. Græc.; Pellerin. Rec. tom. ii; Haym. Thes. Brit.

L'ATTAIGNANT (Biog.) vide Attaignant.

LAVATER, John Caspar (Biog.) the celebrated physiognomist, was born at Zurich in 1741, and died in 1801, from the effects of a wound which he received in 1797 from a Swiss soldier at the storming of Zurich. His works are very numerous, but he is best known by the one on physiognomy, which first appeared in 1766 under the title of 'Fragments,' in 3 vols. 4to., and was soon translated into English and French.

LAUD, William (Hist.) an illustrious English prelate, the son of William Laud, a clothier of Reading, in Berkshire, by Lucy his wife, widow of John Robinson of the same place, and sister of sir William Webbe, afterwards lord mayor of London, was born in 1573, educated at the Free School, Reading, removed in 1589 to St. John's College, Oxford, of which he became fellow in 1593. He took orders in 1601, and, after different preferments, he was raised in 1621 to the see of St. David's, having previously distinguished himself by his opposition to the growing tenets of the Puritans, and assisted the king in introducing the Liturgy into Scotland. He officiated as dean of Westminster at the coronation of Charles I in 1626, and the same year was translated to Bath and Wells, and two years after to London. At the death of Buckingham he was raised to the post of Prime Minister, and in 1633 he succeeded Abbot in the archiepiscopal see of Canterbury. By the faithful discharge of his duty in these posts, in opposing the fanatical and rebellious spirit of the times, he drew upon himself the obloquy of the faction which was then rising into power, and at length fell a victim to their virulence. In 1640 he was seized, on the accusation of sir Henry Vane, and conveyed to the Tower, where, deprived of his property, his papers, and every thing which could afford him comfort, he remained three years, when he was brought to trial, and, though convicted of no crime, a bill of attainder was brought against him in the House of Commons, which terminated in his condemnation and execution in Jan. 1645, in the 71st year of his age. He will be remembered with gratitude by all lovers of learning for his noble benefactions to the University of Oxford, of which he was chancellor for many years. He not only built the inner quadrangle of his College, and improved the foundation by various donations, but he erected the Convocation-House and the library above, and enriched the public collection by the munificent present of 1300 valuable MSS. in Hebrew, Syriac, Chaldee, Egyptian, and other ancient and modern languages, procured at great expense and infinite labour. His writings, which are but few, are, 1. 'Seven Sermons, preached and printed on several occasions,' 8vo.; reprinted in 1651. 2. 'Short Annotations upon the Life and Death of the Most August King James,' &c. 3. 'Answer to the Remonstrance made by the House of Commons in 1628. 4. His Diary by Wharton, in 1694; with six other pieces and several letters, especially one to sir Kenelm Digby on his embracing Popery. 5. 'The Second Volume of the Remains of Archbishop Laud, written by Himself,' &c. fol. 1700. 6. 'Officium Quotidianum; or, a Manual of Private Devotions,' 8vo. 1650. 7. 'A Summary of Devotions,' 12mo. 1667; besides eighteen Letters of his to Gerard John Vossius, printed by Colomesius in his edition of 'Vossii Epistolæ,' fol. Lond. 1690; and some other Letters published at the end of Usher's Life by Dr. Parr, fol. 1686; and a few more by Dr. Twells in his 'Life of Dr. Pocock,' prefixed to that author's theological works, 2 vols. fol. 1645. [Vide Plate X]

LAUDER, William (Biog.) a native of Scotland, who studied at the University of Edinburgh, and died in 1771, is only known as the author of a forgery which he published under the title of 'An Essay on Milton's Use and Imitation of the Moderns in his Paradise Lost;' the falsehood of which was so clearly pointed out by Dr. Douglas, bishop of Salisbury, that the author was induced to confess the fraud, and subscribed a confession to that effect dictated by Dr. Johnson, on whom he had imposed.

LAUDERDALE, John, Duke of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was, at the beginning of the grand rebellion, among the most forward for the covenant; and, being much trusted by his party in affairs of church and state, he was appointed one of the commissioners to treat with his majesty; but on the unsuccessful termination of the several conferences, he joined the royal standard, and, after the death of Charles I, marched into England with the king, Charles II, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester. After nine years' rigorous imprisonment, he was set at liberty at the restoration, and advanced to the post of Prime Minister, which he held for the space of 20 years. He was obliged, however, at the close of Charles' reign to resign all his offices, except those that were to continue during his life, and died in 1682.

LAUDERDALE, Richard, fourth Earl of, was very early admitted into the Privy Council, and made Lord Justice Clerk in 1681; but falling under the suspicion of being in correspondence with his father-in-law, the earl of Argyle, who had made his escape out of the castle of Edinburgh, he was deprived of his place, nevertheless he continued faithful to king James, and retired at the revolution to France, where he died some years after.

LAUDERDALE, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Maitland [vide Maitland], which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Maitland, earl of Lauderdale, viscount and baron Maitland, of Thirlestane, in Scotland, and lord Lauderdale of Great Britain.

Arms. Or, a lion rampant couped in all its joints gules, within a double tressure counter-flowered azure.

Crest. A lion sejant full-faced gules, holding in his dexter paw a sword proper, hilted and pommelled or; in the sinister a fleur-de-luce azure, crowned or.

Supporters. Two eagles proper.

Motto. "Concilio et animis."

LAUDOHN (Hist.) vide Loudon.

LAUDUNUM (Geog.) the Latin name for the town of Laon.

LAVINGTON, George (Ecc.) an English prelate, descended from a family long settled in Wiltshire, was born at Mildenhall in that county in 1683, and educated at Winchester School, whence he was elected a fellow early in the reign of queen Anne. After various preferments, he was promoted to the see of Worcester in 1746, and died in 1762, leaving 'Enthusiasm of the Methodists and Papists compared;' besides some sermons.

LAVINIA (Hist.) the daughter of Latinus and Amata, who, according to Virgil, was secretly betrothed to Turnus; but, because the oracle ordered her father to marry her to a foreign prince, she was given to Æneas after the death of Turnus. She was the mother of Æneas Sylvius, whom she brought forth in a wood, whither she had fled from the tyranny of Ascanius, her son-in-law. Dionys. Hal. l. 1; Liv. l. 1; Virg. Æn. l. 6; Ovid. Met. l. 14.

LAVINIUM (Geog.) or Lavinum, the capital of Latium, built by Æneas, and called after his wife Lavinia. Dionys. Hal. l. 1; Liv. l. 1, &c.

History of Lausanne.

Lausanne is a place of great antiquity, in the neighbourhood of which was a Roman station named Lausonium, in which many vestiges of antiquity have been discovered at different times. The remains of a Roman road are still to be seen, which is called by the inhabitants Chemin d'Estras, i. e. Via strata; and in 1807 several urns and medals, besides a statue of Diana, and fragments of columns, &c. were dug out of a cave near the town. Lausanne was long an appendage to the canton of Berne until the changes introduced by the French revolution.

LAUSUS (Myth.) a son of Mezentius, king of the Tyrrhenians, remarkable for the gentleness of his character, opposed to the violence of his father. Virg. Æn. l. 7.

LAW, John (Hist.) commonly known by the name of the Projector, was born at Edinburgh in 1671; but being compelled to leave his country in consequence of his killing a man in a duel, he repaired to France, where he had interest enough to establish a bank under the auspices of the duke of Orleans, the regent; to which were united the interests of the Missisipi company. This scheme succeeded for a time, and its paper rose to full 20 per cent. above its value; but being at length found incapable of answering the demand made upon it, the bubble burst, and the people of France were left to deplore their credulity which had cost them so dear. The projector, in the mean time, fled in disgrace from the country; and, after wandering over Germany, Denmark, Holland, and England, he settled at Venice, where he died in 1729.

LAW, Edmund (Ecc.) an English prelate, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, and a native of Lancashire, was born in 1703, educated at Cambridge; and, after various preferments, was raised to the see of Carlisle in 1769, which he held until his death in 1787, leaving, 1. A translation of King 'On the Origin of Evil.' 2. An edition of 'Stephen's Thesaurus.' 3. An edition of Mr. Locke's Works in 3 vols. 4to. &c.

LAW (Her.) the name of a family originally situated in Askham, in Westmoreland, from which Edmund Law, the bishop of Carlisle above-mentioned, was descended. His third son, Edward Law, was raised to the peerage by the title of lord Ellenborough, of Ellenborough, co. Cumberland. [Vide Ellenborough] He died in 1818 Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench.

LAW, William (Biog.) a non-juror, and native of Northamptonshire, was born in 1686, and died in 1761. Mr. Law's works consist of 9 vols. 8vo.; among which are 'A Serious Call to a Devout and Holy Life;' 'A Practical Treatise on Christian Perfection,' &c.

LAWES, Henry (Biog.) an English musician, was born at Salisbury in 1600, and died in 1662. He was in the service of Charles I, and published in 1653 his 'Ayres and Dialogues.' with commendatory verses by the poets Milton, Philips, Waller, &c. He also set to music the Comus of Milton.

LAWES, William, brother of the preceding, and also an excellent musician, was killed at the siege of Chester. Two large volumes of his works are preserved in MS. at Oxford.

LAWLESS (Her.) the name of a family which settled in Ireland in the time of Henry II, when sir Hugh de Lawless, obtaining a grant from the crown of the manor of Shangenagh, co. Dublin, built a castle there, the ruins of which are still to be seen. His descendant, sir Nicholas Lawless, baronet, was raised to the peerage in 1789 by the title of baron Cloncurry, co. Kildare.

LAWLEY (Her.) the name of a family of Shropshire, descended from Thomas Lawley, esq. cousin and heir of John, lord Wenlock, Privy Counsellor to king Edward IV. Sir Thomas Lawley, his descendant, was created a baronet in 1641. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, a cross formé extending to the extremes of the shield, checky or and sable.

Crest. A wolf passant sable.

LAWRENCE, Stringer (Hist.) an English general in the East India Company's service, died in 1775, at the age of 78, when a monument was erected in honour of him by the Company, whom he had served so faithfully and usefully.

LAWRENCE, Thomas (Biog.) a physician, and son of captain Thomas Lawrence of the royal navy, was born in the parish of Westminster in 1711, and died in 1782, leaving 'De Natura Musculorum Prelectiones tres,' 1759; besides a Life of Dr. Harvey, which was added to the edition of Harvey's works published by the College of Physicians in 1766.

LAWSON, Henry (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was slain in the service of Charles I during the rebellion.

LAWSON, Sir John, a native of Hull, who rose to the rank of admiral, died in 1665 in consequence of a wound which he received while fighting against the Dutch. He had assisted Monk in bringing about the restoration.

LAWSON (Her.) the name of a family long seated in the county of Northumberland, where they intermarried with the first families, and enjoy the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1665 on sir John Lawson, a captain in the army of Charles I, and brother of the Henry Lawson above-mentioned. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

LECHUS (Hist.) the name of several princes of Poland.

Lechus I, the first duke of Poland, is said to have established this kingdom in 550.

Lechus II, the fratricide, succeeded his brother Cracus II, whom he murdered. He was afterwards deposed, and perished in obscurity and want.

Lechus III, a peasant by birth, was raised to the throne of Poland, and fell in battle, as is said, after a warlike and prudent reign.

Lechus IV, succeeded his father Lechus III, and died after a glorious reign.

Lechus V, succeeded his father Ziemovitus, and died after a reign of 21 years.

Lechus VI, succeeded his father Casimir II, and after having been deposed by Miecslaus the Old, in 1206, he was restored to his throne; but was murdered by his factious subjects as he was bathing.

Lechus VII, surnamed the Black, succeeded Boleslaus V in 1279, and died in 1290, after a reign which was one tissue of foreign and domestic troubles.

LEDA (Myth.) Λήδη, a daughter of Thespius, and wife of Tyndarus, who is said to have had an amour with Jupiter, under the shape of a swan, and to have brought forth two eggs, from one of which sprang Pollux and Helena, and from the other Castor and Clytemnestra. LE DESPENCER, Hugh (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was one of the greatest barons in the time of Henry III, and was chosen one of the twelve who were appointed by the king to amend and reform whatever they should think amiss in the kingdom. In 44 Hen. III he was advanced to the office of Justiciary of England; but in 1264 he appeared in arms against the king at Northampton, and was subsequently chosen as one of the commissioners to treat about the reformation of the kingdom, and one of the three whom the rebellious barons confided in to be about the king. He afterwards fell at the battle of Evesham in 1265.

Le Despencer, Hugh, son of the preceding, who, with his son the unhappy favourite of Edward II, are the principal subjects of our historians at that period, are distinguished as Hugh le Despencer, Senior, and Hugh le Despencer, Junior, the one styled earl of Winchester, and the other earl of Gloucester.

Le Despencer, Hugh, Sen. after having honourably distinguished himself under Edward I, by whom he had been employed on various embassies, enjoyed the confidence of Edward II; but adhering to this oppressed monarch in the midst of his misfortunes, he was, after the landing of queen Isabel with her son Edward in 1326, beheaded by the factious barons, without being brought to a trial.

Le Despencer, Hugh, Junior, his son, frequently called Earl of Gloucester, was godfather to Edward III, and filled several high posts under Edward II; but these favours provoking the resentment of the rebellious barons, he was executed at Hereford in 1326, notwithstanding when, after a stout defence of Kaerfili Castle, he had by capitulation been promised safety as to life and limbs.

Le Despencer, Hugh, son of the preceding, frequently styled Lord Glamorgan, was released from prison by Edward III, whom he served with great distinction, and died in 1348.

Le Despencer, Thomas, Lord, commonly called Despencer of Glamorgan, made a considerable figure in the reign of Richard II, by whom he was created earl of Gloucester, and his grandfather's sentence of exile was reversed in Parliament in 1398; but, on the accession of Henry IV to the throne, he was divested of his title of earl, and suffered decapitation at Bristol in 1400, for endeavouring to restore the deposed monarch Richard.

Le Despencer (Her.) the name of a family derived from the office of despenser or steward, which office was held by their progenitor Thomas Despencer, under William the Conqueror. This family, of which particular notice is taken under History, was first ennobled in the reign of Henry III, when Hugh le Despencer, eldest son of Geoffrey de Spencer, was summoned to Parliament in 1264 as a baron; his son Hugh le Despencer, sen. above-mentioned, obtained the title of earl of Winchester, and his grandson Hugh that of earl of Gloucester, in right of his wife Eleanor, eldest daughter of Gilbert, earl of Clare, Gloucester, and Hertford. Thomas, lord le Despencer, his descendant, also enjoyed the title of earl of Gloucester by creation as above-mentioned; and Francis Fane, lord le Despencer, descended in the female line from the above-mentioned Thomas, was created in 1629 earl of Westmoreland, which title became extinct at the death of Thomas lord le Despencer, eighth earl of Westmoreland, in 1736; but the barony of Despencer at length devolved, after some changes, to sir Thomas Stapleton, bart. From sir Geoffrey le Despencer, younger brother of Hugh le Despencer, descended the Spencers of Althorpe, the ancestors of the duke of Marlborough. [Vide Spencer, &c.] The arms, &c. of the existing branch of the family of De Spencer are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth argent, a lion rampant sable, for Stapleton; second and third azure, three right-hand gauntlets with their backs affrontée or.

Lee, Nathaniel, an English dramatic poet, and a native of Hertfordshire, who was educated at Westminster School and Cambridge, died in 1691 or 1692, in a state bordering on frenzy, to which he had been subject at different periods of his life. He is the author of eleven plays, which were acted with applause, and printed as soon as acted; among these were his 'Rival Queens;' and 'Theodosius,' which still keep the stage; his 'Princess of Cleves;' 'The Massacre of Paris,' &c. [Vide Plate XXXI]

Lee, Sophia, a novelist, who died in 1824, was the authoress of 'The Recess,' 'The Hermit's Tale,' 'The Life of a Lover,' &c.; also, in conjunction with her sister Hariet, 'The Canterbury Tales;' besides 'Almeyda,' a tragedy; and 'Assignation,' a comedy, &c.

LEECHMAN, William (Biog.) a Scotch divine, was born at Dolphinston, in Lanarkshire, in 1706, and died in 1785, leaving nine Sermons, which went through several editions during his life-time.

LEEDS, Thomas, first Duke of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, faithfully adhered to the royal interests in a period of general delinquency, and earnestly co-operating with many others to bring about the restoration, was made by Charles II Treasurer of the Navy in 1671, appointed one of the Privy Council in 1672, constituted Lord High Treasurer of England in 1673, and died in 1712, after having been exposed to popular resentment, and confined in the Tower for five years. He left the character, however, of a just man and an able statesman.

Leeds, Peregrine, second Duke of, distinguished himself as a naval commander, and died in 1729.

Leeds, Duke of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Osborne [vide Osborne]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Osborne, duke of Leeds, marquis of Caermarthen, earl of Danby, viscount Latimer, and Dumblaine, baron Osborne of Kivelyn, baron Conyers, and a baronet.

LEGER (Her.) vide St. Leger.

Leger, Anthony (Biog.) a Protestant divine, and native of Piedmont, who was born in 1594, and died in 1661, left an edition of the New Testament in the original Greek, in 2 vols. 4to.

Leger, John, nephew of the preceding, was the author of 'Hist. des Eglises Evangeliques des Vallées de Piemont.'

LEGGE, John (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, sergeant at arms, was in the Tower with Simon Sudbury, archbishop of Canterbury, and others, where he was surprised by Wat Tyler and his followers, by whom he was taken and beheaded on Tower Hill.

Legge, William, eldest son of Edward Legge, of the same family, and vice-president of Munster, &c. was one of the most distinguished loyalists during the rebellion, who after being sent to serve as a volunteer in the army of Gustavus Adolphus, returned to England, and took a most active part in the service of king Charles I, whom he faithfully attended to the last. On the murder of the king, he managed to get his release from prison, and following the interests of his royal master Charles II, he accompanied him into Scotland in 1650, was wounded and taken prisoner in 1651, and would have certainly suffered death if his wife had not contrived his escape. He after this continued his exertions in the royal cause amidst the greatest perils, and had the gratification of seeing his wishes crowned by the restoration of his majesty king Charles II; who told him the message he had received from his royal father in his behalf, and offered immediately to raise him to the dignity of an earl, which he modestly declined, having a numerous family and a small fortune, but he expressed the hope that his sons might live to enjoy his majesty's favour. He died in 1672, in the 63d year of his age.

Legge, Richard, younger brother of the preceding, was ensign in the regiment of Montjoy Blount, earl of Newport, in the first expedition against the Scots in 1639, and afterwards lieutenant-colonel of that regiment, and taken prisoner when the earl of Derby was defeated at Wigan in 1651. After the restoration he was sent with forces under the earl of Peterborough, to take possession of Tangier.

Legge, John, a younger brother of the two preceding, who was also early engaged in the service of Charles I, was afterwards taken prisoner in a vessel sent by prince Rupert to hasten the arrival of his majesty Charles II, in Ireland, and being tried by a court-martial, was condemned to die. He was, however, afterwards released, and died in 1702, at the age of 109 years.

Legge, Robert, the fifth brother of William abovementioned, was in most of the battles fought during the rebellion, when he received many wounds. He enjoyed the confidence of the king and queen in an especial degree, and was employed by them on all hazardous occasions. Previous to the restoration he had Portsmouth delivered to him by colonel Norton, his wife's brother, the government of which he possessed to his death, which happened soon after.

Legge, George, eldest son of William aforesaid. [Vide Dartmouth]

Legge, William, second son of William aforesaid, was groom of the bed-chamber to Charles II, and captain of a troop of horse in the regiment of horse guards commanded by Aubrey de Vere, earl of Oxford. In 1680 he was sent by the king to Hesse Cassel, to stand god-father, as his proxy, to prince Charles, the Landgrave's son, and died governor of Kinsale, in Ireland, in the 48th year of his age.

Legge, the Right Honourable Henry Bilson, fourth son of William, first earl of Dartmouth, was appointed Envoy Extraordinary to the court of Berlin in 1748, and was afterwards appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer two several times, and resigning his office the second time in favour of William Murray, earl of Mansfield, he died in 1764.

Legge (Her.) the name of the family of which such honourable mention has been made under History. This family is said to have come into England out of Italy, where there still remain several of that name. Those of Venice removed from Ravenna about the end of the 10th century, and such was their noble descent, and so great their wealth, that they held a place among the patricians, and had a magnificent palace near the church of the Misericordia, in that city; besides which they bore several offices in the empire. When they came over into England is not ascertained, but Hugh de la Lega, (as the name is written in ancient records,) and Richard, son of Osbert, were sheriffs of Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire from the 10th to the 16th of Henry II, and William de la Lega was sheriff of Herefordshire in 17 Hen. II. Those of Herefordshire have always been esteemed the elder branch, but those of Legg's Place, near Tunbridge, in Kent, were resident there for many generations before Thomas Legge, the ancestor of the earl of Dartmouth. The first of this family who enjoyed the peerage was admiral George Legge, eldest son of William, the illustrious loyalist above-mentioned, who was in 1682 advanced to the degree of a baron of this realm, by the title of baron of Dartmouth, co. Devon; and his son William was in 1711 advanced to the dignities of viscount Lewisham, co. Kent, and earl of Dartmouth. [Vide Dartmouth] The grandson of this earl, whose father was the right hon. Henry Bilson Legge, above-mentioned, succeeded as baron of Stawell in right of his mother, who had been created baroness Stawell in 1760. [Vide Stawell]

LEGHORN (Geog.) a large town and sea-port on the west coast of Italy, in the grand duchy of Tuscany, 15 m. S. W. Pisa, 47 W. S. W. Florence, and 140 N. N. W. Rome.

History of Leghorn.

This town was known to the ancients by the name of Liburnum, or Liburni Portus, and is now called by the Italians, Livorno; by the French, Ligourne, or Livourne; but it attained to no consideration until the 15th century, when after having been successively in the hands of the Pisans, the Genoese, and the Florentines, it was finally united to Tuscany by the count de Medicis, after which the grand dukes Francis and Ferdinand surrounded it with walls, and formed it into a fine city.

LEGIO (Geog.) a town of Palestine, frequently mentioned by Eusebius, and St. Jerome.

Legio, now Leo, a town and province of Spain.

Legio, Victrix, now Vitry, a town of Gallia Belgica.

LEGLEUS, Gilbertus (Biog.) vide Gilbertus Anglicus.

LEGUANO, Stefano Maria (Biog.) an historical painter of Bologna, who died in 1715, at the age of 55, executed many masterly pieces, which were admired for their correctness.

LEIBNITZ, Godfrey William de (Biog.) a mathematician and experimental philosopher, was born at Leipzig in 1646, and died in 1716, leaving numerous works, among which are his 'Scriptores Rerum Brunsw.' 3 vols. fol. Han. 1707; 'Dissertatio de Arte Combinatoria,' 4to. Lips. 1666; 'Essais de Theodocée,' &c. 8vo. Amst. 1701; 'Collectanea Etymologica,' &c. 8vo. 1717; 'Commercium Philosophicum et Mathematicum,' &c. 2 vols. 4to. Lausan. 1745, &c.; of his collected works, the best edition, distributed into classes by M. Dutens, was published at Geneva in six large volumes 4to. in 1784, entitled 'Gothofredi Gulielmi Leibnitzii Opera omnia,' &c. Hanschius collected whatever he had written upon the principles of philosophy, and published them under the title of 'G. G. Leibnitzii Principia Philosophiæ,' &c. 4to. 1728. His Letters were published in 1734 and 1735, under the title of 'Epistolæ ad diversos Theologici, Juridici,' &c. 'Argumenti e MSS. Auctores,' &c. and another collection was published in 1805 at Hanover, by M. Feder, under the title of 'Commercii Epistolici Leibnitziani,' &c. Some pieces of his were published with his Life, at Leipzig in 1718, under the title of 'Miscellanea Leibnitiana, cum J. F. Felleri Supplemento ejus Vitæ.'

LEICESTER, Earl of (Hist.) an English baron in the train of Henry II, when he met Lewis VII, conducted himself with so much insolence during the negotiation that was then pending, as to occasion it to be abruptly terminated. He afterwards invaded England with a body of Flemings, but his army being defeated, were for the most part cut to pieces, and he himself taken prisoner.

Leicester, Robert, Earl of, a gallant soldier, who had distinguished himself during the crusade under Richard I, afterwards protected Normandy by his valour against the attacks of Philip of France.

Leicester, Simon de Montfort, Earl of, who married the sister of Henry III, joined the barons against Henry, whom he defeated and took prisoner, after which he called a parliament, and taking upon himself the government of the kingdom, kept prince Edward in custody, but the latter making his escape, defeated and killed the earl in battle in 1265.

Leicester, Robert Dudley, Earl of, younger son of John, duke of Northumberland, being much favoured by queen Elisabeth, aspired to become her husband, and refused the offer which was made to him of queen Mary's hand. He died in 1588, after having spent his whole life in the service of his sovereign, whose favour he enjoyed, notwithstanding all the attempts of his enemies to ruin his interest.

Leicester, Robert, Earl of, vide Dudley.

Leicester, Earl of (Her.) a title conferred on Simon Montford above-mentioned, in 1258; and revived in the person of Robert Dudley above-mentioned, which became extinct at his death. It was afterwards revived again in 1725, in the person of Thomas Coke, a descendant from sir Edward Coke, the lawyer, but became extinct at his death in 1759.

Leicester, Earl of, the title commonly enjoyed by the eldest son of the marquis of Townshend.

Leicester (Geog.) the capital of Leicestershire, 98 m. N.W. London. Lon. 1° W. lat. 52° N. [Vide Leicestershire]

LEICESTERSHIRE (Geog.) a county of England.

Boundaries and Extent.—It is bounded on the N. by Nottinghamshire, E. by the counties of Lincoln and Rutland, S. by Northamptonshire, S. W. by Warwickshire, and N. W. by Derbyshire. It is 38 miles long, and 30 broad.

Towns.—Leicester, the capital, Dunington, Lutterworth, Ashby-de-la-Zouch, &c.

Rivers, &c.—The Avon, Soare, Wreke, Anker, and Welland, &c. besides several canals.

History.—At the time of the Roman invasion Leicestershire was inhabited by the Ceritani, of which Leicestria, Legacestria, or Logara, now Leicester, was the capital, and became a Roman station. During the Saxon heptarchy this town was a place of some importance, being then called a city, and at the Norman conquest it was a place of considerable note, which was particularly described in the Doomsday Book. It suffered greatly during the rebellion, when it was stormed by the royal army, and many of the inhabitants put to the sword.

LEIGH (Her.) the name of two families in the county of Chester, each of which claims superior antiquity. They are situated at High Leigh, where their two mansions are named East Hall, and West Hall. Of the family of West Hall was sir Egerton Leigh, who in 1772 was created a baronet. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Or, a lion rampant gules.

Crest. A cubit arm erect, sleeved and cuffed, holding a tilting spear.

Leigh, the name of another family in the county of Lancaster, which enjoys the title and dignity of a baronet, conferred in 1815 on sir Robert Holt Leigh; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Oxford, 1635, to which additions were made by himself and his son Henry, who published it again in 1657, under the title of 'Analecta Cæsarum Romanorum;' two other editions appeared in 1664 and 1670. 2. 'Critica Sacra, or the Hebrew Words of the Old, and the Greek of the New Testament,' 4to. Lond. 1639 and 1646, afterwards enlarged to 2 vols. fol. 3. 'A Treatise of Divinity,' 8vo. 1648, 1651. 4. 'A Philological Commentary, or an Illustration of the most obvious and useful Words in the Law,' ibid. 1652, &c.

Leigh, Charles, a naturalist and physician, who was born at Grange, in Lancashire, in the 17th century, was the author of, 1. 'Physiologia Lancastriensis,' &c. 8vo. 1694. 2. 'Exercitationes quinque de Aquis Mineralibus, Thermis calidis,' &c. ibid. 1697. 3. 'The Natural History of the Counties of Lancashire, Cheshire, and Derbyshire,' &c. fol. Lond. 1700. 4. 'History of Virginia,' &c. 12mo. London, 1705.

LEIGHTON, Alexander (Hist.) one of those libellers in the reign of Charles I, who after traducing the king, queen, bishops, and the whole administration, obtained a triumph over all law and right, through the interference of the parliament, which not only liberated them from the confinement to which they had been legally sentenced, but decreed them damages, to be paid by their judges. He was a Scotch divine, born at Edinburgh in 1568, and after his liberation, he was in 1640 made keeper of Lambeth Palace, which was then a state prison, and died in 1644.

Leighton, Robert (Ecc.) an English prelate, and son to the preceding, was born at London in 1613, and educated at the University of Edinburgh, but not following the disgraceful course of his father, he was promoted after the Restoration to the see of Dunblane; was translated in 1670 to the archbishopric of Glasgow, and died in 1684. His library and MSS. he left to the see of Dunblane, and founded an exhibition in the college of Edinburgh, and three more in the college of Glasgow. The rest of his property he disposed of to charitable purposes.

LEINSTER, Duke of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Fitzgerald, [vide Fitzgerald] which with the arms, &c. are as follow:

LEIPZIG (Geog.) or Leipsic, a city in the interior of Germany, situated in a plain on the river Pleisse, and in the vicinity of the Barde, the Elster, and the Lippe, 64 miles W. by N. Dresden, 90 S. by W. Berlin, and 180 E. N. E. Francfort on the Maine. Lon. 12° 20′ E., lat. 51° 20′ N.

History of Leipzic.

Leipzic, in the Latin of the middle ages Lipsia, was called in the fifth century Lepzk, signifying a linden tree, probably from the abundance of those trees in that part. Its University, which has given it some importance, was founded by Frederic the Warrior, duke of Saxony, in 1408, and this, combined with its book fairs, has rendered it the resort of literary men for many ages. It has, however, been frequently the scene of military conflicts. During the 30 years war the Swedes gained two battles near it, in 1631, and 1642; it was taken in 1745, and 1756, by Frederic II; and in 1813 it fell into the hands of the French, from whose exactions it suffered severely, but it was relieved from these burdens by the memorable battle fought in the same year in its neighbourhood, between Bonaparte and the allies, which terminated in his total defeat.

LEISMAN, John Anthony (Biog.) a German painter, who died in 1698, at the age of 94, was esteemed very successful in painting landscapes with mountains and other striking objects.

Motto. "Patriis virtutibus."

LELAND (Biog.) or Laylonde, John, styled the Father of Antiquaries, was born in London, educated at St. Paul's under Lilly, and at Christ Church, Cambridge, from which he was removed to All Soul's, Oxford, and died April 10, 1552, after having received from Henry the title of his antiquary. He left numerous collections, four folio volumes of which were given by Edward VI into the custody of sir John Cheke, from whom they passed into those of Burton, the author of the History of Leicestershire, who obtained possession also of eight other volumes of Leland's MSS., called his 'Itinerary,' all which he deposited in 1632 in the Bodleian library. From these Hearne presented the public with the two works well known by the title of his 'Itinerary,' and 'Collectanea,' to which may be added a third, entitled, 'Commentarii de Scriptoribus Britannicis,' 2 vols. 8vo. Oxon. 1709. Some unpublished MSS. are still remaining, and it appears that Leland had prepared a large work entitled 'De Antiquitate Britannica, sive Historia Civilis.'

Leland, John, an English writer in defence of Christianity, was born at Wigan in 1691, and died in 1766, leaving, 1. 'An Answer to a late Book entitled Christianity as Old as the Creation,' &c. 2 vols. 1733. 2. 'The Divine Authority of the Old and New Testament asserted against the Unjust Aspersions, &c. of a Book entitled the Moral Philosopher.' 3. An answer to a book entitled 'Christianity not founded on Argument,' &c. 4. 'A View of the Principal Deistical Writers that have appeared in England,' &c.

Leland, Thomas, a divine and translator, was born in Dublin in 1722, and died in 1785, leaving among his works, 1. 'Translation of Demosthenes,' 3 vols. 4to. the first of which appeared in 1756, the second in 1761, and the third in 1770. 2. 'History of the Life and Reign of Philip, King of Macedon,' &c. 2 vols. 4to. 3. 'A Dissertation on the Principles of Human Eloquence.' 4. 'History of Ireland from the Invasion of Henry II,' &c. 3 vols. 4to.

LENNARD (Her.) the name of a family which long held a considerable rank in Kent, and which now enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1801 on sir Thomas Barrett Lennard; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth or, on a fess gules, three fleurs-de-lis; second and third, party per pale barry of four counterchanged argent and gules for Barrett; all within a bordure wavy sable.

Crest. An Arabian dog's head per fesse argent and ermine, charged with an escallop per fess nebule gules and sable.

Supporters. On the dexter side a wolf argent, langued gules, with a spiked collar chain and clog or; on the sinister side a bull gules, horned and collared with a ducal coronet and chain or.

LENNARD, Sampson (Biog.) an English writer, who died in 1633, was the author of various translations from the Latin and the French, particularly Perrin's ‘History of the Waldenses;’ Du Plessis Mornay's ‘History of Papacie;’ and of Charron ‘On Wisdom.’

LENNOX (Hist.) Sir John Stewart, first Earl of, was one of the confederated lords who seized king James III at Lauder in 1482, and afterwards acted in concert with the party which supported James IV; but he joined in a conspiracy against this same king, for which sentence of forfeiture was passed against him. This sentence was, however, afterwards rescinded.

LENNOX, John, third Earl of, was one of the lords of the regency in 1524, during the minority of James V, but, being defeated and taken prisoner by the earl of Angus and his party, who were in rebellion against the government, he was murdered in cold blood by sir James Hamilton, of Finnart, natural son of the earl of Arran.

LENNOX, Matthew, fourth Earl of, passed the early part of his life in the service of the crown of France, and in the wars of Italy, where he displayed his valour in a signal manner. On his return home, after the death of James V, he was the rival of Bothwell for the favour of the queen dowager, but, being very zealous to forward the match between queen Mary and Edward, prince of Wales, he was obliged to leave the kingdom, and remained in England till 1564, when he was recalled by Mary. He was elected regent of Scotland in 1570, and, having called a parliament to meet at Stirling in 1571, a party of the friends of the queen marched there to surprize him and the other royalists, when he was taken prisoner, and, being mortally wounded, died the same year.

LENNOX, Charles, fifth Earl of, eldest son of the preceding, who died in 1576, in the 21st year of his age, is known as the father of the unfortunate lady Arabella Stuart.

LENNOX, Esme, first Duke of, was high in the favour of James VI, from whom he received many honours and appointments. When the Ruthven conspirators got the king into their hands in 1582, his majesty was constrained to sign an order for the departure of the duke of Lennox from Scotland, who obeyed the order and set out for France, but died a few months after in 1583.

LENNOX, Ludovick, second Duke of, who was born in 1574, succeeded his father in the favour and confidence of James VI, which he retained very deservedly until his death in 1624.

LENNOX, James, fourth Duke of, and third Duke of Richmond, one of the most consistent and steady loyalists in the time of the rebellion, sacrificed all he had to serve his majesty, Charles I, and, as soon as the war began, engaged his three brothers, all gallant gentlemen, in the service, in which they all lost their lives. He himself lived with unspotted fidelity some years after the murder of his royal master, and was suffered to put him into his grave. He is said to have had the sincerest affection for the king, and to have been one of the noblemen who offered to suffer in his stead. He died from the effects of his grief in 1655, in the 43d year of his age. [Vide Plate VIII]

LENNOX, Charles, sixth Duke of, was appointed ambassador extraordinary to the court of Denmark, and died in 1672.

LENNOX (Her.) the family name of the duke of Richmond, &c. [Vide Richmond]

LENNOX, Charlotte (Biog.) a literary lady, who was born in 1720, and died in 1704, published ‘Shakespear Illustrated;’ ‘The Female Quixote;’ ‘Memoirs of Harriott Stuart,’ &c.

LENTHAL, William (Hist.) a lawyer, who acted the part of Speaker in the Parliament, known by the name of the Long Parliament, was born in 1591 at Henley on the Thames, in Oxfordshire, educated at Alban Hall, Oxford, whence he removed to Lincoln's Inn, and was regularly called to the bar. In 1639 he was elected member for Woodstock, and the next year seated in the chair of the House of Commons, which he kept with very little interruption until the restoration, when he was exempted from the general bill of indemnity, but afterwards obtained pardon from the king, and is said to have expressed at his death in 1663 sincere contrition for his conduct. Some of his speeches and letters have been printed. [Vide Plate XVIII]

LENTULUS (Hist.) a branch of the family of the Cornelii, which produced many great men in the commonwealth.

LENTULUS, Corn. L., a consul, U. C. 427, A. C. 327, dispersed some robbers that infested Umbria.

LENTULUS, Corn. L. a consul, U. C. 479, with Marcus Curius Dentatus, defeated Pyrrhus at Tarentum, and also triumphed over the Samnites. Polyb. l. 1; Diod. Eclog.

LENTULUS, Corn. L. the successor of Scipio in Spain, obtained an ovation on account of his successes. Liv. l. 28.

Lentulus, Corn. Cneus, a tribune at the fatal battle of Cannæ, was afterwards successful as consul in Spain.

Lentulus, the name of several consuls from this period to U. C. 603

Lentulus Sura, P. one of the accomplices of Catiline, who being convicted in the full senate by Cicero, was put into prison, and afterwards executed.

Lentulus Spinther, P. the friend and correspondent of Cicero, whose recall he strongly promoted. He had the province of Cilicia, and wished very much to be appointed to restore Ptolemy to the throne. He was slain during the civil wars. Cic. ad Fam. l. 16.

Lentulus Spinther, P. son of the preceding, was first an augur, and afterwards proquæstor and proprætor of Asia; of which he gives an account in his epistles to Cicero that are extant. Cic. ad Fam. l. 12, ep. 14, 15.

Lentulus, the name of a supposed proconsul of Judæa, to whom a letter has been ascribed respecting the appearance of our Saviour, which carries with it all the marks of fiction. Fabric. Oper. N. T. tom. i. &c.

Lentulus Getulicus, Cn. a consul, A. D. 26, was put to death by Tiberius, who was jealous of his popularity. He wrote a history mentioned by Suetonius, and also some poetry. Tac. Annal. l. 4, &c.; Dio. l. 49; Sueton. in Tiber. c. 35, &c.

LEO (Hist.) the name of some emperors and kings, &c.

Emperors of Constantinople.

Leo I, surnamed the Elder, succeeded Marcian on the throne of Constantinople in 457, and died in 474, after having been engaged with various success against the Vandals, Goths, and other barbarians. Evagr. Hist. Ec. l. 2; Procop. de Bell. Vend. l. 1; Marcellin. et Cassiodor. in Chron.; Niceph. Hist. l. 29, &c.

Leo II, surnamed the Younger, son of Zeno the Isaurian and Ariadne, daughter of Leo, succeeded his grandfather in 474, and died soon after from his debaucheries at the age of 16. Marcellinus, Cassiodorus, &c.

Leo III, surnamed the Isaurian, the son of a cobler, rose from the condition of a private soldier to the rank of a general under Anastasius, and from that he mounted the throne in 717. He was very successful against the Saracens, whom he compelled to raise the siege of Constantinople, and destroyed their fleet by means of the Greek fire; but he quarrelled with the popes Gregory II and III, by whom he was excommunicated, and died in 741, as he was preparing to avenge himself on the Roman pontiff for his anathemas. Bed. Hist. Eccles.; Paul. Diacon. l. 6; Cedrenus; Theophanes, &c.

Leo IV, surnamed Chazar, succeeded his father Constantine Copronymus in 775, and died in 780, at the age of 30, after having been engaged in violent disputes with the Iconoclasts and their opponents, whose cause he capriciously espoused by turns. He was the husband of the famous Irene.

Leo V, surnamed the Armenian, became a general in the Roman armies by his valour; and, after having been disgraced and banished by the emperor Nicephorus, he was recalled by Michael Rhangabus, proclaimed emperor by the army in 813, and assassinated in 820. Zonar. Annal. &c.

Leo VI, surnamed the Philosopher, succeeded his father Basil, the Macedonian, in 886, and died in 911 in the 26th year of his reign, after having suffered much from the Hungarians, Bulgarians, and Saracens, but still more from the Turks, whom he called to his assistance. This emperor was a great encourager of learning, and wrote some books; among which are his Treatise on Tactics, printed in German by Bourscheid at Vienna, and French by M. de Maiseroi, in 2 vols. 8vo. 1770; 'Novellæ Constitutiones;' 'Opus Basilicon;' besides some other things to be found in the 'Bibliotheca Patrum.' In Constantine Manasses, printed at the Louvre, may be found 'Leonis Sapientis Oracula.' Cedrenus, Zonaras, Glycas, Manasses, &c.

Kings, &c. of this Name.

Leo I, king of Armenia, of the house of Lusignan, was the son of Hugh III. He was succeeded by his uncle, Leo II; and the latter by his son, Leo III, who, flying from the Turkish invaders of his kingdom, found a refuge in France, where he died in 1393.

Leo of Byzantium, a philosopher, who flourished 350 years before the Christian æra, was employed by his fellow citizens on several missions to Athens, and to the court of Macedonia; but Philip having found means to render his fidelity to his country suspected, he strangled himself in order to escape the fury of the populace. He wrote some treatises upon physic, as also upon the history of his country, and of the wars of Philip, which are all lost. Plut. de Flum.; Athen. l. 12; Philost. in Vit. Sophist. &c.

Leo (Ecc.) the names of some popes, prelates, and distinguished persons.

Popes of this Name.

Leo, St. surnamed the Great, a native of Tuscany, was elevated to the papal chair in 440 after Sixtus III, whom, as well his predecessor Celestinus I, he had served in the most important concerns. He exerted himself vigorously to put down all heresies, particularly those of the Manicheans, Pelagians, Priscillianists, and Eutychians; and, after a useful but troublesome pontificate, during which Rome was taken by Genseric, and pillaged for 14 days, he died in 461, when he was succeeded by S. Hilary. This pope left 96 sermons on the principal festivals throughout the year, and 141 letters, which may be found in the 'Bibliotheca Patrum.' The best edition of his works is that by Pere Quesnel, fol. Lugd. 1700. They have also been printed at Rome and at Venice in 3 vols. fol. A History of the Pontificate of this Leo has been written by P. Maimbourg in 4to. or 2 vols. 12mo. Phot. Cod. 52; Anastas. in Vit. Pont.; Trithem. et Bellarm. de Script. Eccles. &c.

Leo II, a Sicilian, succeeded Agatho in 682, and died in 683, after a pontificate of only 10 months, in which he exerted himself for the good of the church. He had Benedict II for a successor. Anastasius, &c.

Leo III, a Roman, succeeded Adrian I in 795, and died in 816, after having escaped the murderous attempts of two different bands of conspirators, by the former of whom he was beaten, and severely treated; but having fled to the emperor Charlemagne, he was by his assistance re-instated in the pontifical chair. On the second occasion the pope treated the conspirators with more severity by causing several of them to be executed. Thirteen of the epistles of this pope are preserved in the Collection of the Councils. He was succeeded by Stephen V. Anastas. et Platin. in Vit.; Onuph. in Chron.; Baron. Annal.

Leo IV, a Roman, succeeded Sergius II in 847; and, after having valiantly defeated the Saracens on their approach to Rome, he died in 855, when he was succeeded by Benedict III. The prisoners which he took from the Saracens were employed in fortifying and adorning the city. Anastasius, Platina, &c.

Leo V, a native of Andria, succeeded Benedict IV in 903; but being soon after exiled, and imprisoned by Christopher, he died of grief. Geneb. in Chron.

Leo VI, a Roman, succeeded John X in 928, and died six months after, when Stephen VII or VIII succeeded him. Baron. Annal.

Leo VII, a Roman, was elected after John XI in 936, and died in 939.

Leo VIII, an anti-pope, according to some, was placed in the Holy See by the emperor Otho, who assembled a synod of bishops at Rome for that purpose in 963, when John XII was deposed. The clergy and people afterwards elected Benedict V; but Otho having taken Rome, caused him to be deprived of his pontifical robes, and sent him into exile. Leo died in 965. Baron. Annal.

Leo IX, before named Brunon, a bishop of Toul, in Lorraine, of the illustrious house of Aspurg, in Alsace, was born in 1002, made bishop of Toul in 1026, raised to the papal chair in 1048, and died in 1054, having Victor for his successor. He exerted all his authority in the councils of Italy, France, and Germany to repress the irregularities both of the clergy and the laity; and also courageously opposed the inroads of the Normans, by whom he was defeated, taken prisoner, and carried in triumph to Rome in 1053. His piety and zeal procured him a place in the Roman Calendar of Saints. His sermons and decretal epistles have been often published. Sigebert. de Vir. Illust.; Brun. Astens. in Vit.; Trithem. et Bellarm. de Script. Eccles.; Du Chene et Ciacconius in Vit. Pontif.; Baron. Annal. &c.

Leo X, whose family name was John de Medici, the son of Lorenzo de Medici, was born in 1475 at Florence, made an archbishop at the age of 11 by Lewis XI of France, a cardinal by pope Innocent VIII at the age of 14, was employed as a legate by Julius II, and was at the battle of Ravenna where the French obtained the victory in 1512; and, although taken prisoner, he was treated with great respect. He succeeded Julius in 1513, and died in 1521, when he was succeeded by Adrian. He conferred on king Henry VIII of England the title of "Defender of the Faith;" but he had the mortification to see the triumph of Luther over the power of Rome. Leo was a great patron of learning, and enriched the public libraries with collections of curiosities, and valuable MSS.

Leo XI of Florence, of the family of Medicis, succeeded Clement VIII in 1605 at the age of 70, and died within a month after his election, when he was succeeded by Paul V.

Prelates and Illustrious Persons.

Leo, St. a martyr in the fourth century, having refused to offer any worship to the god Serapis, was dragged by the populace into the presence of the governor, by whose order he was scourged, and afterwards thrown down into a torrent.

Leo, bishop of Nantes, in Brittany, assisted at the council of Angers in 453.

Leo, bishop of Sens in the sixth century, opposed king Childebert when he wished to erect Melun into a bishopric, and wrote to him in so urgent a manner as to prevent the execution of his design.

Leo, St. the apostle of the Basques, and bishop of Bayonne, was born at Charentan, in Lower Normandy, about 856; and, after having been very successful in his mission to the Basques, he is supposed by some to have suffered martyrdom.

Leo, Masicanus, more commonly known by the name of Leo Ostiensis, was made a cardinal and bishop of Ostia, in the pontificate of Paschal II, and subscribed to the council of Guastalla in 1106, but the time of his death is not known. He was the author of a Chronicle of the Abbey of Mount Cassin, divided into three books, which was printed at Venice in 1513; at Paris, with that of Aimonius, in 1603; at Naples in 1616; and at Paris in 1668. Paul. Diacon. de Vir. Illust.; Baronius; Bellarmin.; Dupin. &c.

Leo of Ostia, a cardinal and bishop of Ostia, is distinguished from the preceding by Paul Diaconus, who has given a list of his works.

Leo, surnamed Stypiota, a patriarch of Constantinople, succeeded John IX in 1134, and died in 1143. Nicetas. in Chron.; Baron. Annal. &c.

Leo, surnamed Urbevetanus, because he was a native of Orvieto, in Tuscany, was the author of a Chronicle of the Popes to the Death of Clement V in 1314, and that of the Emperors to Henry of Luxemburg.

Leo the Grammarian, was the author of a continuation of the Chronicle of Theophanes from 813 to 1013, printed at the end of Theophanes in 1655.

Leo, John, surnamed Africanus, because when his native city Granada was taken in 1492 by Ferdinand and Isabella, he retired to Africa. He was afterwards taken by pirates, and, coming into the hands of the pope Leo X, he was by him induced to renounce Mahometanism, and received the name of John Leo at his baptism. He died about 1526, leaving, 1. 'Descriptio Africæ,' 8vo. Ant. 1556, which was translated into French by John Temporal, fol. Lyons, 1556. 2. 'De Vitis Philosophorum Arabum,' printed by Hottinger at Zurich in 1664; and inserted in the 'Bibliotheca' of Fabricius, tom. xiii.; besides other things which are all lost.

Leo, Peter Cicea de, a native of Seville, who travelled in South America, and died about 1560, was the author of 'Primera Parte de la Chronica de Piru,' &c. fol. Seville, 1553, Antwerp, 1554, and the Italian translation, 8vo. Rome, 1555; of the four parts into which the author had divided his work, the first only was published.

Leo of Modena, a rabbi, whose proper name was R. Jehudah Arie, was born at Modena about 1574, and died in 1654, leaving 'Istoria de Riti Hebraici, Vita et Osservanze de gli Hebræi di questi Tempi;' the best edition of which is that of Venice, 1638. It was translated into the French in 1674, by Richard Simon, with supplements relating to the sects of the Kairites and Samaritans. His Hebrew and Italian Dictionary, entitled The Mouth of the Lion, was published at Venice in 1612, and afterwards in an enlarged form at Padua in 1640.

Leo, de St. John, a French monk, was born at Rennes in 1600, and died in 1671, leaving 'Studium Sapientiæ Universalis,' 3 vols. fol.; a History of the Carmelites, &c.

Leo (Numis.) medals are ascribed by antiquaries to all the emperors of this name, those of the first three bear their effigies, as in the subjoined figures, inscriptions for the first, D. N. NO

LEODESIUM (Geog.) the Latin name for Liege.

LEON (Geog.) one of the largest provinces in Spain, situated in the north-west.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the N. by the Asturias, W. by Galicia and Portugal, S. by Estremadura, and E. by Old Castille, being nearly 200 miles in length from north to south, and 168 in breadth from east to west.

Division. It is divided naturally into two parts by the river Douro; and politically into six districts, namely, Leon, Salamanca, Valencia, Zamora, Toro, and Valladolid.

Chief Towns. Leon, the capital, Salamanca, Ciudad Rodrigo, and Astorga, &c.

History. This ancient kingdom, called in the Latin of the middle ages Legionense Regnum, was founded by Pelagius, king of Oviedo, who took Leon from the Moors in 722. His successors were named kings of Oviedo, until the time of Ordogno II, who took the title of king of Leon, and died about 923. The following is the succession of the kings of Leon and the Asturias.

Kings of Leon and the Asturias in Chronological Order.

On the death of Vermund III, who was killed in battle with Ferdinand I of Castille, the kingdom of Leon and Asturias became united to that of Castille in 1037. Ambros. Moral. Hist.; Gesner, &c.; Merul. Descript. Hispan.; Mariana et Turquet. Hist. Hispan.

Leon, capital of the kingdom of Leon, seated in a fertile district between two sources of the river Esra, 174 miles N. N. W. Madrid, 74 N. N. W. Valladolid. Lon. 5° 27′ W. lat. 42° 45′ N.

History of Leon. Leon, called by the Romans Legio Germanica, because it became the station of the seventh Roman legion, was one of the first towns recovered from the Moors, and continued for three centuries the residence of their kings. It is one of the oldest episcopal sees in Spain, suffragan of Compostella, and the cathedral is the finest in the country. It incloses the tomb of one emperor and thirty-seven kings, besides the shrines of several saints. [Vide Leon]

Leon, an insulated track on the south-west coast of Spain, remarkable for containing the city of Cadiz.

LEONARD (Biog.) a mathematician of Pisa, is said to have been the first person who introduced the knowledge of Arabic cyphers and Algebra into Europe.

LEONARDO, Leo (Biog.) an organist and musical composer, was born in 1689, and died in 1742, leaving 'Sofonisba,' supposed to be his first opera, performed at Naples in 1718; and 'Siface,' the last at Bologna in 1737. He likewise set to music the 'Olympiade,' of Metastasio, and the celebrated 'Miserere,' and many other things, which procured him a high name.

LEONATUS (Hist.) one of Alexander's generals, who at his death obtained that portion of his dominions which bordered on the Hellespont. C. Nep. in Eumen.; Diod. l. 18; Curt. l. 3; Justin. l. 13; Plut. in Alexand.

LEONI, Giacomi (Biog.) a Venetian architect, who died in England in 1746, published a fine edition of Palladio in 1742.

LEONICENUS, Nicholas, (Biog.) a physician, was born in one of the Venetian states in 1428, and died in 1524, leaving, among other works, 'Plinii et aliorum plurimum Auctorum qui de simplicibus Medicaminibus, &c. scripserunt, Errores notati,' fol. Bud. 1532; and 'Liber de Epidemia quam Itali Morbum Gallicum vocant,' 4to. Venet. 1497. An edition of all his works was printed in fol. Basil. 1533.

LEONIDAS (Hist.) Λεωνίδης, the name of two kings of Lacedæmon, of the family of the Agidæ or Euristhenidæ.

Leonidas I, was sent by his countrymen to oppose the Persians at the straits of Thermopylæ, where he and his 300 companions all fell except one, who returned home only to meet the scorn and reproaches of his countrymen. This celebrated battle was fought 480 years before the Christian æra. Herodot. l. 5, 7.; C. Nep. in Them.; Val. Max. l. 1; Plut. in Lyc. et Cleom.; Justin. l. 3; Paus. l. 3.

Leonidas II, son of Cleonymus, and grandson of Cleomenes II, was the colleague of Agis, and succeeded Arcus II. He was driven from his throne by his son-in-law Cleombrotus; but afterwards recalled about the 135th Olympiad, A. C. 238. Sigon. de Temp. Reg. Laced.; Meurs. de Reg. Lacon. c. 14.

Leonidas, the friend of Parmenio, was appointed by Alexander commander of those who bewailed the death of that officer. Curt. l. 7.

LEONIDES (Ecc.) the father of Origen, and a Christian philosopher of Alexandria, was beheaded in 203, at the commencement of the persecution under Severus. Euseb. l. 1.

Leonides (Biog.) an Athenian, intimate with Cicero, to whom he wrote favourably concerning his son. Cic. ad Att. l. 14, &c.

LEONTIUM (Biog.) a courtezan of Athens, who is said by Cicero to have written a book in an elegant style in favour of Epicurism, against Theophrastus. Cic. de Nat. Deor. l. 1.

Leontium (Geog.) now Lentini, or Leontini, an ancient town of Sicily, a colony from Chalcis, between Catona and Syracuse, once said to have been inhabited by the Læstrigones. The Leontini implored the assistance of the Athenians against the Syracusans. Thucyd. l. 6; Polyb. l. 7; Cic. in Verr. 5; Plin. l. 18, &c.

Leontium (Numis.) the medals of this town are known by the inscriptions, ΛΕΟΝΤΙΝΟΝ, ΛΕΟΝΤΙΝ, &c. They bear for their types the head or figure of Apollo, and sometimes, as is supposed, of Isis and Osiris, &c. Haverkamp. Parut. Sicil. Descrit. &c.; Hunt. Mus. &c.

LEONTIUS (Hist.) a patrician of Constantinople, caused himself to be crowned king in 482, during the reign of Zeno; but being defeated in the field, and compelled after a four years' siege in the city of Tarsus to surrender, he was beheaded in 488. Evag. Hist. Eccles. l. 3; Niceph. l. 16; Cedrenus; Theophan, &c.

Leontius the Isaurian, another patrician of Constantinople, dispossessed Justinian II of the empire, and placed himself upon the throne in 695, which he occupied until 698, when Tiberius Absimarus cut off his ears and his nose, and shut him up in a monastery; and on the re-establishment of Justinian in the empire, he was beheaded in 705.

Leontius (Numis.) the last of the two usurpers above-mentioned, struck some medals, bearing his effigy as in the annexed figure, inscription D. N. LEONTIUS P. F. AUG.—D. N. LEONTIUS PERP. AUG; on the reverse VICTORIA AUG. or AUGUSTORUM.

Leontius (Ecc.) an Arian, and afterwards bishop of Antioch, was a disciple of S. Lucian. He sacrificed to idols in order to screen himself from the persecution of Diocletian, and being guilty of other excesses, he was degraded by Eustathius; but was afterwards elevated to that see by the Arians in 349, and died in 358. S. Athanas. Apol. de Fug.; Socrat. Hist. l. 2; Theodoret. l. 2; Nicephor. l. 8; Baron. Annal.

Leontius, a bishop of Cæsarea, who supported by his zeal the faith of the Christians during the persecution, and assisted at the Council of Ancyra in 314, and at that of Nice, in 325.

Leontius, St. a bishop of Frejus in the fourth and fifth centuries, is mentioned by many ecclesiastical writers.

Leontius, the name of two bishops of Bourdeaux, the first of whom lived about 480, and is mentioned by Sidonius Apollinaris; the second Leontius, who was of an illustrious family of Aquitania, assembled a synod at Saintes in 562, when Emerius was deposed from that see for having obtained it by means of king Clotaire I, against the voice of the clergy. He was also at the fourth Council of Orleans in 541, and those of Paris in 555 and 557. Gregor. Tur. Hist. l. 4; Fortunat. l. 4, &c.

Leontius, Pilatus (Biog.) vide Pilatus.

LEOPOLD (Hist.) the name of two emperors of Germany, and other princes.

Leopold I, second son of the emperor Ferdinand III and Mary Anne of Spain, was born in 1640, made king of Hungary in 1655, and of Bohemia in 1656, elected emperor in 1658, and died in 1705, after having been engaged in a war with the Turks, who besieged Vienna, and afterwards with Lewis XIV, when Eugene his general successfully displayed his valour.

Leopold II, Peter Joseph, son of Francis I and Maria Theresia, was born in 1747; governed Tuscany, as its archduke, for 25 years; was elected emperor after Joseph II in 1790; and died in 1792; just as he was on the point of declaring war against the French republic.

Leopold, marquis of Austria, distinguished himself among the Christian princes at the taking of Acre in 1191, which he carried by storm at the head of his men. Cuspin. Hist.

Leopold, duke of Lorraine, and son of Charles, the fifth duke of that name, was celebrated for his military valour, which he displayed in the wars of those times, and died in 1729, at the age of 50, after having founded the Univerversity of Luneville. His son Francis was afterwards emperor of Germany.

Leopold, William, archduke of Austria, was at the head of the Imperial armies in the 30 years' war against the Swedes and French, when he distinguished himself both in the field and the cabinet, and died at Vienna in 1662.

LEOSTHENES (Hist.) Λεωσθένης, an Athenian general, who, after Alexander's death, besieged Antipater at Lamia, was killed by a stone thrown from a wall, and the Athenians, in consequence of his death, were totally defeated. Diodor. l. 17, &c.

LEOTYCHIDES (Hist.) Λεοτυχίδης, a king of Sparta, son of Menares, of the family of the Proclidæ, defeated the Persians at the battle of Mycale; but being afterwards accused of a capital crime by the Ephori, he fled to the temple of Minerva, at Tegea, where he perished A. C. 469, after a reign of 22 years, and was succeeded by his grandson Archidamus. Diod. l. 11; Paus. l. 3.

Leotychides, a son of Agis, whose legitimacy being disputed, prevented him from succeeding his father Agis. C. Nep. in Ages.; Paus. l. 3; Plut. in Agid.

LEOVIGILDUS (Hist.) son of Athanagildus, king of the Goths, succeeded his brother Lewa, or Lubia, in 568, and died in 586. He was an Arian, and exercised great violence towards orthodox believers. His effigy is given as in the annexed figure. Isidor. in Chron.; Greg. Tur. Hist. l. 5.

LEOWITZ, Cyprian (Biog.) an astronomer of Bohemia, who died in 1574, left 'Ephemerides ab Anno 1556 ad Ann. 1606;' 'Expedita Ratio construendi Thematis Cœlestis;' 'Loca Stellarum Fixarum ab Anno Dom. 1549, usque ad Ann. 2029; and 'De Eclipsibus Liber.'

LEPANTO (Geog.) a town of Livadia, in the south-west of European Turkey, situated at the entrance of a gulf of the same name, 360 m. W. S. W. Constantinople. Lon. 22° E. lat. 38° 30′ N.

History of Lepanto.

Lepanto, the ancient Naupactus, was subject to the emperor of Constantinople in 1408; but was ceded by Emanuel, the reigning emperor, to the republic of Venice, by whom a fortress was built on the mountain on which the town stands, and other fortifications were erected, that are now fallen into decay. It was besieged in 1475 by 30,000 Turks, who were compelled to raise the siege; but in 1498 Bagazet II attacked it at the head of 150,000 men, and took it. It was retaken by the Venetians in 1687; but evacuated again in 1699, in consequence of the treaty of Carlowitz. This place is rendered memorable by the battle fought in 1571 between the Turks and the Christians, in which the former lost 30,000 men in killed, and 5000 prisoners. Gratian. Hist. Cypr.; Spon. Voyage d'Italie, &c.

Lepanto, Gulf of (Geog.) a gulf of European Turkey, called by the ancients Corinthiacus Sinus, or Gulf of Corinth. It separates the south coast of Romania from the Morea, and extends from Patras in the west to the isthmus of Corinth in the east. Its entrance is not wide, and is defended by two castles, one of which is erected on the Capo Antirio, in the Morea, and the other on the Capo Rione, in Romelia. These have been named the Dardanelles of Lepanto.

LEPIDA (Hist.) the name of several Roman ladies, of the family of the Lepidi.

Lepida, the grand-daughter of L. Sulla and Cn. Pompey, was condemned to death by Tiberius, on a charge of attempting to poison her husband Quirinus, from whom she was separated. Tac. Annal. l. 3.

Lepida, the wife of Caius Cassius, and aunt of Silanus, was accused of an incestuous commerce with her own son. Tac. Annal. l. 16.

Lepida, sister of Germanicus, daughter of Drusus the Younger, and aunt to Nero, was put to death at the instigation of her rival Agrippina, Nero's mother. Tac. Annal. l. 13.

LEPIDUS (Hist.) a branch of the family of the Æmilii, rendered illustrious by the great men which it produced.

Lepidus, M. Æmilius, the name of several consuls. [Vide Æmilius]

Lepidus, M. Æmilius, the triumvir, was three times consul, namely, U. C. 708, 709, and 713, and afterwards joining the party of Anthony and Octavius, he became a sharer in the government, under the name of the triumvirate, and received Africa as his portion, but was soon obliged to resign his power into the hands of Augustus, when he retired to Cereeii, a town on the coast of Latium, where he ended his days in peace, A. C. 13. Lepidus married a sister of Brutus, and his son married one of Anthony's daughters. Cic. Phil. 5, c. 14, &c.; Dio. l. 44; Plut. in Aug.; Flor. l. 4, &c.

Lepidus (Numis.) many medals are extant bearing the effigy of Lepidus, the triumvir above-mentioned, as in the annexed figure, inscriptions—CAESAR LEPIDUS ANTONius III VIRI Rei Publicæ Constituendæ.—LEPIDUS IMP. LERIDA (Geog.) an ancient town of Catalonia, in Spain, on the right bank of the Segra, 69 m. E. by S. Saragossa, 90 W. by N. Barcelona. Lon. 0° 25′ E. lat. 41° 20′ N.

History of Lerida.

This town, which was known to the Romans by the name of Ilerda, was taken by the Goths and Moors, and was for a time the capital of a kingdom under the latter people. In subsequent ages it sustained several sieges during the wars between France and Spain; and in the years 1644, 1646, and 1647, it was the scene of battles fought between these two powers. Louis of Bourbon, prince of Conde, was obliged to raise the siege of Lerida in the year 1647, as Henry of Lorraine had done the year preceding. In 1707 Philip, duke of Orleans, took it from the archduke Charles of Austria; and in 1810 it came again into the power of the French. It is a bishop's see, suffragan of Tarragona, and was the seat of a council in 514, where eight bishops assembled and framed some canons.

LERMONT, Thomas (Biog.) a poet of Scotland in the 13th century, whose 'Sir Tristram,' &c. was published in 1804 by Sir Walter Scott.

LERNA (Geog.) a country of Argolis, where Hercules is said to have killed the famous hydra. It is also celebrated by the poets for its grove and lake. Apollod. l. 2; Diod. l. 4; Strab. l. 8; Mela 2; Ovid. Met. l. 1; Stat. Theb. l. 4; Schol. Pind. Olym. Od. 7; *Schol. Eurip. LESBONAX (Biog.) a native of Mitylene, in the first century, who was the author of several orations, of which two are extant, that were first published by Aldus in his 'Rhetores Græci,' 2 vols. fol. 1508; afterwards by Henry Stephens, with the Orations of Æschines, &c.; and in 1619 by Gruter. Lesbonax is also said to have been the author of a treatise, 'De Figuris Grammaticis,' published in 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1739.

LESBOS (Geog.) Λέσβος, a large island in the Ægean Sea, now known by the name of Metelin, was otherwise called Ægira, Sasia, Æthiope, and Pelasgia. The chief towns of Lesbos were Methymna and Mitylene. It was originally governed by kings, but afterwards subjected to the neighbouring powers. The island was celebrated by the poets for the excellence of its wine, and the inhabitants for their skill in music, whence the Lesbia Vina, and the Lesboum Barbiton. The best verse is also sometimes distinguished by the name of the Lesboum carmen, from its two native poets, Alcæus and Sappho. Herod. l. 1, c. 160, &c.; Diodor. l. 5; Virg. Georg. l. 2; Horat. l. 1, ep. 2; Ptol. l. 5; Aul. Gell. l. 13; Athen. l. 1.

Lesbos (Numis.) coins or medals of this island are known by the inscriptions—ΛΕCΒΙΩΝ; i. e. Lesbiorum.—ΚΟΙνὸν ΛΕCΒΙΩΝ; Commune Lesbiorum; sometimes with the name of their magistrates, as, ΕΠΙ CΤΡ. CΕΠΤιμίω ΑΡΙΑΝΟΥ ΚΟΙνὸν ΛΕCΒΙΩΝ; i. e. Sub Prætore Septimio Ariano Commune Lesbiorum, bearing for their types the figures of the Centaur, or of the gods Terminus, Bacchus, Pallas, &c.; one has the figure of Sappho, with the inscription ΛΕΣΒΟΥ; i. e. *Lesbi. LESCAILLE, James (Biog.) a Dutch printer and poet of an illustrious family of Geneva, was born in 1610, and died in 1677, after having acquired great reputation, not only for the number and excellence of the editions which issued from his press, but also from his poetic talent, which obtained for him the poetic crown from the emperor Leopold in 1663.

Lescaille, Catherine, daughter of the preceding, who died in 1711, acquired the appellation of the Dutch Sappho, and the tenth muse, from the sweetness of her poems, of which a collection was printed in 1728.

LESCHASSIER, James (Biog.) an advocate of the parliament of Paris, was born in that city in 1550, and died in 1625, leaving many works, of which the most complete edition is said to be that of Paris, 4to. 1652.

LESCHES (Biog.) a Greek poet of Lesbos, who is said to have flourished A. C. 600. Euseb. in Chron.; Gyrald. de Poet. Hist. l. 3.

LESDIGUIERES, Francis de Bonne, Duke de (Hist.) peer, marshal, and constable of France, and one of the greatest generals of the age, was born of an ancient and noble family of Dauphiny in 1543, and died in 1625, after having conquered Savoy by his military prowess, and taken many places for the Protestants, on whose side he fought during the war of the league. He was richly rewarded for his services by Henry IV when he came to the throne.

LESINA (Geog.) or Lezina, an island in the Adriatic, on the South coast of Austrian Dalmatia, 20 m. S. Spalatro. Lon. 16° E. lat. 43° N. about 60 miles long and 14 broad. It is the ancient Pharos or Pharia.

LESLEY, Norman de (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was, in 1358, sent with sir Robert Erskine on an embassy to solicit the pope for the grant of the tenth part of the ecclesiastical revenues of Scotland towards payment of the ransom of David II, which they obtained for three years. He continued afterwards in the service of the king on all important occasions until his death in 1366.

Lesley, David de, grandson of the preceding, and one of the hostages for the ransom of James I, was not liberated until 1432, and died in 1438.

Lesley, George, Earl of Rothes, vide Rothes.

Lesley, John (Ecc.) the celebrated bishop of Ross, of the family above-mentioned, was born in 1527, educated at Aberdeen, made in 1547 canon of the cathedral church of Aberdeen and Murray, and official and vicar-general of the diocese of Aberdeen. In 1560 he was sent into France to invite queen Mary to return, and embarked with her for Scotland in 1561. He was then appointed one of the Senators of Justice, and sworn into the Privy Council, and in 1564 he was promoted to the see of Ross. In this situation he rendered essential service to his country by having a collection made of the Laws of Scotland, which was published at Edinburgh in 1566, and called the Black Acts of Parliament, because printed in black letter. Upon queen Mary's flight to England, he appeared at York in 1568 as one of the commissioners in her behalf, where he ably defended her cause; but his endeavours to form an alliance between Mary and the duke of Norfolk offended Elizabeth, who sent him a prisoner to the island of Ely, and then to the Tower, from which he afterwards obtained his release, and then retired to the Netherlands, anxiously soliciting the interference of the kings of Spain and France, the princes of Germany, and the pope, in behalf of his injured and captive mistress, to whom he remained inviolably attached until her death. Although promoted to the see of Constance he resigned all worldly dignity, and died in the monastery of Guirtenberg, near Brussels, in 1596. His writings are, 1. 'Afflicti Animi Consolationes et Tranquillo Animi Conservatio,' 8vo. Paris. 1574. 2. 'De Origine

Moribus et Rebus gestis Scotorum,' 4to. Rom. 1578. 3. 'Paraenesis ad Nobilitatem Populumque Scotorum,' and 'Regionum et Insularum Scotiæ Descriptio;' both which were published with the second article. 4. 'Defence of the Honour of Mary, queen of Scotland; with a Declaration of her Right, Title, and Interest, to the Crown of England,' 8vo. Liege, 1571, which was immediately suppressed. 5. 'A Treatise, showing that the Regimen of Women is conformable to the Law of God and Nature.' These two last are ascribed by Parsons the Jesuit to Morgan Philips, but Camden maintains that they were written by Lesley. 6. 'De Titulo et Jure Mariæ Scotorum Reginæ, quo Angliæ Successionem Jure sibi vindicat,' 4to. Rem. 1580. There is a MS. upon the same subject in French, entitled, 'Remonstrance au Pape,' &c. Cotton Library. 7. 'An Account of his Embassage in England from 1568 to 1572,' MS. in the advocate's library in Scotland. 8. 'An Apology for the Bishop of Ross as to what is laid to his charge concerning the Duke of Norfolk,' MS. in the library of the lord Longueville. 9. Several Letters in the hands of Dr. George Mackenzie, who wrote his life.

Lesley (Her.) or Leslie, a Scottish surname, which has been rendered more conspicuous in Europe than any other of the same nation. There were at one time three general officers of that name in the service of three sovereigns in Europe; namely, Walter, count Leslie, in the service of the emperor of Germany, David Leslie, afterwards lord Newark, in that of Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, and Alexander, earl of Leven, in that of the king of Great Britain. The first of this family which enjoyed the peerage was George de Lesley, who was created earl of Rothes in 1457. The hon. sir Patrick Leslie, second son of Andrew, fourth earl of Rothes, was created lord Lindores in 1600; and David Leslie, the fifth son of Patrick, lord Lindores, was created lord Newark in 1661. From George Melville, earl of Melville, who married Catherine Leslie, the daughter of Alexander Leslie, earl of Leven, descended David Leslie, who became earl of Leven and Melville.

Leslie, David, Lord Newark, most commonly mentioned in history by the name of General Leslie, went first into the service of Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, where he distinguished himself, but returning to Scotland when the rebellion broke out, he took up arms against his sovereign Charles I, and contributed to the defeat of the royalists at Marston Moor in 1644. He afterwards had the chief conduct of the Scottish army on the invasion of Scotland by Cromwell, but being totally routed by the latter in 1650, he joined the forces of Charles II, was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester, and committed to the Tower, where he remained till 1660, and was fined 4000*l*. by Cromwell's act of grace and indemnity in 1654. He died in 1682, after having obtained a greater recompence from king Charles than his enemies thought he deserved.

Leslie, John (Ecc.) of the family of the Leslies of Balquhaine, was educated at Aberdeen and at Oxford, and after remaining abroad for 20 years, he was made bishop of the Orkneys, in Scotland, and in 1633 translated to Raphoe, in Ireland, where he built a palace so strongly fortified, that he was the last who surrendered to the arms of Cromwell. At the restoration he returned to England, and in 1661 he was translated to Clogher, where he died in 1671, at the age of 100, and after having been a bishop 50 years, which made him the oldest bishop in the world.

Leslie, Lord, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Rothes.

Leslie, Charles (Biog.) second son of John Leslie, bishop of Clogher, above-mentioned, was born in Ireland, educated at Dublin, whence he removed to the Temple, but relinquishing the study of law for divinity, he took orders in 1680, was made chancellor of the cathedral of Connor in 1687, lost all his preferments as a nonjuror at the revolution, and died in 1722, leaving many works both political and theological. Among the former are, 1. 'Answer to the State of the Protestants of Ireland,' &c. 2. 'Cassandra, concerning the new Associations,' &c. 4to. 1703. 3. 'Rehearsals,' at first a weekly paper, published afterwards twice a week, in a half-sheet, by way of dialogue on the affairs of the times; begun in 1704, and continued for six or seven years. 4. 'A Short and easy Method with the Deists,' &c. 8vo. 1694. A similar work with a similar title in French, was placed among the works of the Abbe de St. Real, but whether this coincidence was accidental, or the consequence of plagiarism on either side, is doubtful, but the credit of Leslie in this matter appears to be free from imputation in the opinion of most persons. 3. 'A Vindication of the Short and Easy Method.' 4. 'The Snake in the Grass,' &c. 8vo. 1697. 5. 'A Discourse proving the Divine Institution of Water Baptism,' &c. ibid. 4to. 6. LEWIS (Hist.) the name of several emperors and kings.

Emperors of the Name.

LEWIS I, vide Louis.

Lewis II, surnamed the Younger, emperor of the West, and son of the emperor Lothaire I, was crowned king of the Lombards in 844, and emperor in 849, and died in 875, after having defeated the Saracens in Italy. The effigy of this emperor is given as in the annexed figure.

Lewis the Stammerer, sometimes reckoned among the emperors. [Vide Louis II]

Lewis the Blind, son of Boson, king of Provence, by Ermengarde, daughter of Louis the Younger, succeeded to the throne of his father in 890, at the age of 10, and was crowned emperor at Rome by Benedict IV; but was deprived of the empire very shortly after by his rival Berenger, who put out his eyes, and sent him to Provence, where he died in 934.

Lewis III (without reckoning the two preceding), son of the emperor Arnold, succeeded his father in the empire in 899, although only six or seven years old, and died in 911 or 912. He was the last emperor of Germany of the Carlovingian race, or of the descendants of Charlemagne, after which the empire became elective.

Lewis IV, son of Lewis II, duke of Bavaria, was elected in 1314 by a part of the electors, but opposed by others, who declared for Frederic the Fair, son of the emperor Albert I. This division caused a civil war, which terminated in favour of Lewis, who died by a fall from his horse in hunting at the moment that a new rival to the empire was raised at the instigation of the pope, Clement VI, who chose Charles of Luxemburg, marquis of Moravia, to fill the throne. The effigy of this emperor is given as in the annexed figure.

Kings of France and Spain.

Lewis, vide Louis.

Kings of Germany.

Lewis I, surnamed the Elder, or the Pious, third son of Louis I, emperor and king of France, was proclaimed king of Bavaria in 817, and died in 876, just as he was on the point of enforcing his claim to the empire, against his brother Charles the Bald.

Lewis II, surnamed the Younger, succeeded his father Lewis I, and died in 882, after having defeated the emperor Charles the Bald, who wished to dispossess him of his dominions.

Lewis III, vide Lewis III, Emperor.

Kings of Hungary and Poland.

Lewis I of Anjou, son of Charles Martel, was born in 1326, succeeded his father in 1342, and his uncle Casimir III on the throne of Poland in 1370, and died in 1382, after having successfully carried on war against Charles de Duras, the usurper of the crown of Naples, whom he put to death.

Lewis II, surnamed the Younger, son of Ladislaus VI, succeeded his father in 1516, and died in 1521, after having been defeated by Soliman II, sultan of the Turks, at the battle of Mohatz, in 1526.

Kings and Princes of Jerusalem, Naples, and Sicily.

Lewis I of France, duke of Anjou, was born in 1339, succeeded his brother Charles V on the throne of Jerusalem in 1380, and being adopted by Joan I, queen of Sicily, was crowned at Avignon in 1382; but was successfully opposed by the usurper Charles de Duras, who had put Joan to death, and died in 1384, of poison, as is suspected.

Lewis II, duke of Anjou, succeeded Lewis I on the throne of Jerusalem, was crowned king of Naples in 1389, and died in 1417, after having been disturbed in the possession of Naples by his rival Ladislaus, the son of Charles de Duras.

Lewis III, son of Lewis II, was born in 1403, succeeded his father on the throne of Jesusalem; and afterwards, by the adoption of Joan II, he arrived at that of Naples and Sicily, and died in 1434, after having been a successful warrior.

Lewis, king of that part of Sicily which was named Trinacria, succeeded his father Peter in 1342, when he was only five years of age, and was succeeded by his brother Frederic.

Lewis of Tarentum, fourth son of Charles II, married Joan I, queen of Naples, after having contributed to the death of king Andrew in 1341. He followed Joan into Provence when she fled from Lewis, king of Hungary, and died in 1352, after the accommodation which took place between him and Lewis of Hungary.

Other Princes of this Name.

Lond. 1584; besides which, he translated 'The Treasure of Health,' and 'The Causes and Signs of every Disease,' with the 'Aphorisms of Hippocrates,' &c. London, 1585; and 'The Judgement of Urines,' 8vo. Lond. 1551.

Lhuyd, Edward, a native of Carmarthenshire, was born about 1670, and died in 1709, leaving, 1. 'Lithophylacii Britannici Iconographia,' 8vo. 1699. 2. 'Archæologia Britannica,' &c. fol. Oxon. 1707; besides a Scottish, or Irish-English Dictionary, and other MSS. amounting to 40 vols. fol.

LIBANIUS (Biog.) a sophist, descended from an ancient and noble family at Antioch, on the Orontes, was born in 314, but the time of his death is not known, although it is drawn from his Oration on Lucian, that he lived to the reign of Arcadius. His writings were numerous, consisting of orations, declamations, and letters; of these, Frederic Morell published as many as he could collect in 2 vols. fol. Gr. and Latin; a new edition of which was published by Reiske, in 4 vols. 8vo. Besides which, ten other works of this sophist have been published separately, most of them orations, and in the 'Excerpta Rhetorum,' of Leo Allatius, 8vo. Rom. 1641.

LIBANUS (Bibl.) לבנון, Λίβανος, Lebanon, a lofty mountain, which separates Syria from Palestine, about a hundred leagues in circumference. It forms a kind of horse-shoe in its length, beginning three or four leagues from the Mediterranean, above Smyrna, and going from north to south towards Sidon, thence bending from west to east towards Damascus. It has Mesopotamia on the E., Armenia on the N., the Holy Land on the S., and the Mediterranean on the W. Strab. l. 16; Plin. l. 5; Tac. Hist. l. 6; Ptol. l. 5; Ammian. Marcell. l. 14.

LIBAVIUS, Andrew (Biog.) a physician and chemist, who was born at Halle, in Saxony, and died in 1616, was the author of many works which were once in estimation; among these was 'Examen Philosophiæ Novæ, quæ veteri abrogandæ opponitur,' fol. Francof. 1615. His name was long familiar in the laboratories, by a particular preparation of tin with muriatic acid, called the "Fuming Liquor of Libavius."

LIBERALIS, Antoninus (Biog.) a Greek author and rhetorician, who flourished in the reign of Antoninus, was the author of a collection of fables, published under the title of 'Transformationum Congeries,' Gr. and Lat. 8vo. Paris. 1675. He is supposed to be distinct from Antonius Liberalis, a Latin writer mentioned by Suetonius. Sueton. de Rhet.; Hieron. in Chron.

LIBERATUS (Biog.) a deacon of Carthage, who flourished in the sixth century, was the author of a 'Breviarium,' 8vo. Paris. 1675.

LIBERI, Peter (Biog.) a painter of Padua, who died in 1677, at the age of 77, is known by many pieces which adorn the churches and palaces of Italy, particularly his Moses striking the Rock.

LIBERIUS (Ecc.) a Roman by birth, was raised to the papal chair after Julius I in 352. He was banished by the emperor Constantius, for refusing to subscribe to the condemnation of S. Athanasius, to which he afterwards reluctantly assented, and died in 366, little respected for his want of firmness. S. Athan. Ep. ad Solit. &c.; S. Hieron. et Marcellin. in Chron.; S. Ambros. de Virg. l. 2; Socrat. Hist. Eccles. l. 2; Sozom. l. 4; Theodoret. l. 2; Basil. Ep. 74; S. Epiphan. Hær. 75.

LIBERTAS (Myth.) a goddess worshipped at Rome, who had a temple on Mount Aventine, raised by Tiberius Gracchus. Cic. Dom. c. 35; Liv. l. 24; Ovid. Trist. l. 3; Sueton. in Aug.; Plut. in Grac.

LIBERTAS (Numis.) this deity is distinguished on medals or gems, as in the annexed figure, by her cap and wand, in allusion to the customs used among the Romans in setting their slaves free.

LIBITINA (Myth.) a goddess at Rome, who presided over funerals. Dionys. Hal. l. 4; Liv. l. 40; Val. Max. l. 5; Plut. Quæst. Rom.

LIBIUS, Severus (Hist.) vide Severus.

LIBON (Biog.) an architect of Elis in the 80th Olympiad, A. C. about 460, built the famous temple of Jupiter Olympius, near Pisa. Paus. l. 5.

LIBURNIA (Geog.) now Croatia, a country of Illyricum, between Istria and Dalmatia, whence a colony came to settle in Apulia. There were at Rome a number of men whom the magistrates employed as heralds, called Liburni, probably because they originally came from this country. Strab. l. 7; Mel. l. 2; Martial, l. 1; Plin. l. 6; Ptol. l. 2.

LIBURNUM Mare (Geog.) that part of the Adriatic which washed the shores of Liburnia.

LIBURNUM, Portus Herculis, or Liburni Portus, a port in Etruria, now Leghorn, which is supposed to derive its name from the Liburnian vessels which were used there. Appian. in Illyr.; Zosim. Hist. l. 5.

LIBYA (Myth.) Λιβύη, a daughter of Epaphus, and mother of Agenor and Belus, by Neptune. Apollod. l. 2; Paus. l. 1.

LIBYA (Geog.) another name for Africa; also for that part of it which is now called Tripoli. [Vide Africa] Virg. Æn. l. 4; Lucan. l. 4; Sallust, &c.

LIBYCUM Mare (Geog.) that part of the Mediterranean which lies on the coast of Cyrene. Strab. l. 2.

LIBYSSA (Geog.) Λίβυσσα, a river of Bithynia, now Polmen, where was the tomb of Hannibal still extant in the time of Pliny. Plin. l. 5; Ptol. l. 54; Appian. in Syriac.; Eutrop. l. 4.

LICETUS, Fortunius (Biog.) a physician and philosopher, was born at Rapallo, in the state of Genoa, in 1577, and died in 1657, leaving a number of treatises, among which was that 'De Monstrorum Causis, Natura et Differentiis,' the best edition of which is that of Gerard Blasius.

LICHAS (Myth.) Λίχας, a servant of Hercules, who brought him the poisoned tunic from Dejanira. He is said to have been cast into the sea by his master, and changed by the gods into a rock. Apollod. l. 2; Diod. l. 4; Ovid. Met. l. 9.

LICHFIELD (Geog.) an ancient town of Staffordshire, in England, 16 m. N. Birmingham, and 119 to 125 N. W. London. Lon. 1° 50′ W. lat. 52° 40′ N. The name of this town, which signifies the field of dead bodies, is supposed to be derived from the number of bodies of Christians which remained unburied during the persecution of Diocletian. It was built by Oswi, king of Northumberland, in 626, and erected into a bishop's see; but the old cathedral being taken down by Roger de Clinton, the 37th bishop, he rebuilt the one which now subsists. The see of Lichfield was transferred in 1088 to Coventry; but a dispute arising between the two places, it was at length agreed that they should be united into one see. Great part of the riches of the cathedral were seized by Henry VIII; and the building suffered greatly during the sieges which the Close sustained in the grand rebellion. Bishop Hacket, who was nominated to this see at the restoration, restored the building to its former magnificence. This city boasts of being the birth-place of Launcelot Addison, the father of the celebrated Joseph Addison, as also of Dr. Johnson, and David Garrick; besides other distinguished persons.

LICINIA, gens (Hist.) a Roman family, which, though plebeian, held the consulship, and other high offices in the state. This family was distinguished by the surnames of Calvus, Crassus, Lucullus, Geta, Macer, Murena, Stolo, Nerva, Varus, Mucianus, &c. [Vide Licinius]

LICINIA, gens (Numis.) coins are extant of this family, inscribed with several of the above-mentioned surnames, as that of Crassus, Lucullus, Geta, Macer, Murena, Nerva, Stolo, and Varus. Vaill. Fam.; Morell. Fam. &c.

LICINIUS, C. Valerius Licinianus (Hist.) or Publius Licinianus Licinius, son of a peasant of Dalmatia, rose from the rank of a common soldier to the highest military employments, which was succeeded by his advancement to the empire in 307, when he was made the colleague of Gallerius Maximianus. He afterwards shared the empire with Constantine; but a rupture succeeding between them, a battle was fought at Chalcedonia, which proving unsuccessful to Licinius, he soon after fell into the hands of his rival, and was strangled by his order in 324.

LICINIUS, Fl. Valerius Licinianus, son of the preceding, by Constantia, the sister of Constantine, was honoured with the title of Cæsar when scarce twenty months old; but was involved in his father's ruin, and put to death by Constantine. Eutrop. l. 10; Euseb. in Chron. et Vit. Constant.; Socrat. Hist. Eccles. l. 2; Zosim. l. 2.

LICINIUS, the name of several distinguished individuals of the Gens Licinia.

LICINIUS CALVUS, P. a tribune of the people, was the first who was created a military tribune, with consular power, U. C. 354, A. C. 400, in the interval when there were no consuls. He enjoyed this office a second time, and procured the same for his son Publius Licinius Calvus. Liv. l. 5.

LICINIUS CALVUS, C. who was surnamed Stolo, or Useless Sprout, on account of a sumptuary law which he caused to be enacted, was tribune for the space of ten years. He was afterwards chosen the first plebeian master of the horse, U. C. 389, A. C. 365, and the first plebeian consul, U. C. 390, A. C. 364; and rendered himself memorable by many laws which tended to diminish the power of the patricians, and increase that of the plebeians. Liv. l. 6, &c.

LICINIUS VARUS, P. C. was a consul U. C. 518, A. C. 236, with Cornelius Lentulus; as also were his two sons, one U. C. 583, with Cassius Longinus, and the second U. C. 586, with Paulus Æmilius; this latter was defeated by Perseus, king of Macedonia.

LICINIUS CRASSUS, P. successively high-priest, master of the horse, censor, and consul, was the colleague of P. Cornelius Scipio, U. C. 199, A. C. 205. [Vide Crassus]

LICINIUS CALVUS, C. vide Calvus.

LICINIUS, vide Lucullus, Macer and Murena.

LICINIUS (Numis.) several medals are extant of the emperor of this name, and also of his son.

LICINIUS, Sen. whose effigy is given as in the annexed figure, is styled on coins LICINIUS NOB. CAES.—D. N. LICINIANUS LICINIUS NOB. C.—D. N. VAL. LIC. LICINIUS NOB. C.—D. N. LICINI. Hist.; Du Cang. Fam. Byz.; Spanh. Dissert.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Mediob. Impp. Rom.; Pemb. Mus. &c.; Bandur. Imp. Rom. &c.*

Licinius, Tegula, P. (Biog.) a comic poet among the Latins, who flourished about U. C. 554, A. C. 400, is ranked by Gellius as the fourth best comic poet of the Romans. A few lines only of his compositions are extant.

Licinius, Mucianus, an historian and geographer in the reign of Vespasian, who wrote on the eastern countries, is often quoted by Pliny. Plin. l. 7, &c.

LIDDEL, Duncan (Biog.) a professor of mathematics and medicine in the university of Helmstadt, was born at Aberdeen in 1561, and died in 1613, leaving, 1. ‘Disputationum Medicinalium,’ &c. 4 vols. 4to. 1605, and a new edition published at Helmstadt in 1720, under the title of ‘Universæ Medicinæ compendium.’ 2. ‘Ars Medica succincte et perspicue explicata,’ 8vo. Hamb. 1607, Lugd. 1624, by Serranus, and again at Hamburgh in 1628, by Frobenius. 3. ‘De Febribus Libri Tres,’ 12mo. Hamb. 1610, republished by Serranus, with the ‘Ars Medica.’ 4. ‘Tractatus de Dente Aureo,’ 12mo. 1628. 5. ‘Artes conservandi Sanitatem Libri Duo,’ &c. 12mo. Aberdon, 1651.

LIDDELL, Sir Thomas, Bart. (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, exerted his interest, which was very considerable in Northumberland, in support of the royal cause during the rebellion, and defended Newcastle against the Scots. He had also the honour of being marked out by the usurping powers as a particularly obnoxious person.

Liddell (Her.) the name of a family in the north, which anciently possessed the lordship of Liddell Castle, and the barony of Buff. Sir Thomas Liddell above-mentioned, who was of this family, was created a baronet in 1682, and sir Henry Liddell, the fourth baronet, was raised to the peerage in 1747, by the title of baron of Ravensworth, which title became extinct at his death in 1784, but the dignity of baronet devolved on his uncle. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, fretted gules; on a chief of the second three leopards' faces or.

Crest. A lion rampant sable, crowned or.

Motto. “Fama semper vivit.”

LIEBERKUHN, John Nathaniel (Biog.) a Prussian anatomist, was born at Berlin in 1711, and died in 1756, leaving some works which were reprinted at London in 1782, by John Sheldon, under the title of ‘Dissertationes Quatuor.’

LIEGE (Geog.) capital of a bishopric of the same name in the Netherlands, which is intersected by several branches of the river Meuse, 60 m. W. S. W. Cologne. Lon. 5° 35′ E. lat. 50° 38′ N.

History of Liege.

This town, called in the Latin Leodesium, was before the French revolution subject, with the surrounding district, to the bishop of Liege, but on the fall of Bonaparte, it was annexed by the congress of Vienna to the kingdom of the Netherlands. The town was exposed to capture and sieges at different times, at the commencement of the 18th century.

LIEVENS, John (Biog.) a painter of Leyden, who was born in 1607, was patronized by Charles I, and took the portraits of many persons at court. He was also skilled in historical painting, of which his ‘Resurrection of Lazarus,’ is a good specimen.

LIEUTAUD, Joseph (Biog.) physician to Lewis XVI, was born at Aix, in Provence, in 1703, and died in 1780; leaving, 1. ‘Essais Anatomiques contenant l'Histoire exacte de toutes les Parties qui composent le Corps Humaine,’ 1742, and several times reprinted; in 1777 it was edited by M. Portal, in 2 volumes. 2. ‘Elementa Physiologiæ,’ Paris. 1749. 3. ‘Precis de la Medicine pratique,’ 1759, and also several times reprinted; the best edition is that of Paris, in 2 vols. 4to. 1770. 4. ‘Precis de la Matière Medicale,’ 8vo. 1766, afterwards reprinted in 2 vols. 5. ‘Historia Anatomico-medica sistens numerosissima cadaverum Humanorum Extispicia,’ 2 vols. 4to. Motto. "Parta tueri."

LILLO, George (Biog.) a dramatic writer, was born in London in 1693, and died in 1739, after having obtained for himself a name as the author of 'George Barnwell;' 'Fatal Curiosity;' and 'Arden of Feversham,' &c.

LILLY (Biog.) or Lylly, John, a dramatic writer, was born in the Wilds of Kent about 1553, and died after 1597, leaving nine dramatic pieces, none of which have preserved their reputation to our times. He was also the author of a famous pamphlet against Martin Mar-prelate, and his party, well known to book collectors under the title 'Pap with a Hatchet, alias a Fig for my God-son,' &c. published about 1589. Two other prose works of his entitled 'Euphius and his England,' and 'Euphius, or the Anatomy of Wit,' were published about 1580 and 1581.

LILLY, or Lylly, William, a well known English astronomer, was born at Diceworth, in Leicestershire, in 1602, and died in 1681, after having drawn largely on the credulity of the public, and profited by the confusion of the times, which he turned solely to his own account. His chief works are 'Merlinus Anglicus Junior;' 'Christian Astrology;' 'A Collection of Nativities;' Observations on the Life, &c. of Charles I; 'Annus Tenebrosus,' &c.

LILY (Biog.) or Lilye, William, a grammarian, was born at Odiham, in Hampshire, about 1468, and died in 1523, leaving, 1. 'Brevissima Institutio, seu Ratio Grammatices cognoscendi,' London, 1513, reprinted often, and well known in this day by the name of 'Lily's Grammar.' The English rudiments were written by Dr. Colet, and the preface to the first edition by Cardinal Wolsey; the English Syntax, by Lily; also the 'Propriæ quæ Maribus,' and As in Præsenti; the Latin Syntax was chiefly the work of Erasmus, of which Ward gives an account in his Preface to his edition of Lily's Grammar in 1732. 2. 'In Ænigmatica Bossi, Antibossicon primum, secundum, tertium ad G. Hormannum,' 4to. Lond. 1521. 3. 'Poemata Varia,' printed with the former. 4. 'Apologia ad R. Whyttingtonum.' 5. 'Apologia ad Joan. Skeltonum,' in answer to some invectives of that poet. 6. 'De Laudibus Deipari Virginis.' 7. 'Super Philippi Archducis Appulsu.' 8. 'De Caroli quinti Cæsaris Adventu Panegyricum,' besides some Latin translations of Greek epigrams, which he executed in conjunction with sir Thomas More, which were printed with this title 'Progymnasmata Thomæ Mori et Gulielmi Lilii Sodalium,' Basil. 1518, by Frobenius.

LILY, George, eldest son of the preceding, was born in London, educated at Oxford, and died in 1559 prebendary of Canterbury, leaving, 1. 'Anglorum Regum Chronices Epitome,' Venet. 1548; Francof. 1565; Basil. 1577. 2. 'Lancastriæ et Eboracensis Famil. de Regno Contentiones, et Regum Angliæ Genealogia.' 3. 'Elogia Virorum Illustrium 1559,' 8vo. 4. 'Catalogus, sive Series Pontificum Romanorum,' besides the Life of Bishop Fisher, a MS. in the library of the Royal Society.

LILYBÆUM (Geog.) Λιλύβαιον, now Capo Boco, a promontory at the S.W. corner of Sicily, near the Ægates, with a town of the same name, now Marsala, where the Carthaginians suffered a severe defeat in a naval engagement with the Romans under Attilius Regulus, U. C. 534, A. C. 220. The town is said to have been built by the Romans. Polyb. l. 1; Cæs. de Bell. Afric.; Cic. in Verr. v; Diod. l. 22; Strab. l. 6; Mel. l. 2.

LILYBÆUM (Numis.) this town is known by some medals bearing the inscriptions, ΛΙΛΥΒΑΙ; ΛΙΛΥΒΑΙΤΑΝ; ΛΙΛΥΒΑΙΤΩΝ; and for their types the figures of Apollo, or his lyre, of a griffin, and the veiled head of a female, supposed by some to be that of the Sibyl of Cuma, &c. Goltz. Sicil.; Haverkamp. Parut. &c.

LIMA (Geog.) a city of South America and capital of the kingdom of Peru, is situated about two leagues from the sea coast, and thirty from the Cordilleras. Lon. 77° 7' W. lat. 12° 2' S.

History of Lima.

This city was founded in 1535 by Pizarro, who gave it the name of Ciudad de los Reyes, because he laid the foundations on the feast of Epiphany, or of the Kings. A few years after its foundation it experienced the shock of an earthquake, to which at different periods it has been since subject with greater or less violence; on the 27th of November, 1630, it suffered therefrom so severely that a festival is annually kept to commemorate the event; on the 17th of June, 1678 another earthquake caused the destruction of several houses and churches; but one of the most dreadful concussions of which we have any account was that which happened on the 20th of October, 1687, when the sea retired from its bounds, and, returning in mountainous waves, totally overwhelmed Callao and the neighbouring parts, together with the miserable inhabitants. Among many others which succeeded this the most dreadful was that on the 28th of October, 1746, when, in little more than three minutes, the greater part of the buildings in the city were thrown down, burying in their ruins all the inhabitants who had not time to escape. Lima has been the seat of three councils, the second of which was held in 1567, and the third in 1583.

LIMA, in Latin Limius, Limia, Limæa, and anciently Lethes, or Belion, a river of Portugal which rises in Gallicia, between the towns of Orense and Monterei.

LIMBORCH, Philip (Biog.) a Protestant divine of Holland, was born of a good family at Amsterdam in 1633, and died in 1712. His History of the Inquisition, published in folio in 1692, was translated into English by Sam. Chandler, in 2 vols. 4to. 1731; besides which he wrote several theological works.

LIMERICK, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Pery [Vide Pery]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Pery, earl of Limerick, viscount Limerick and baron Glentworth; baron Foxford, of Stackpole Court, co. Clare, in the peerage of the United Kingdom.

Supporters. Two fawns proper.

Motto. "Virtute non astutia."

LIMERICK (Geog.) a county of Ireland in the province of Munster.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the N. by Tipperary and Clare, from which last it is separated by the Shannon, W. by Kerry, S. by Cork, and E. by Tipperary, being 48 m. long and 23 broad.

Towns. Limerick, the capital, Kilmallock, Adair, and Castle Connel.

Rivers. The Maig, Feale, Gale, and Black-Water.

LIMERICK, the capital of the country above-mentioned, is situated on the river Shannon, about 60 miles from its mouth, 94 m. S. W. Dublin. Lon. 8° 30′ W. lat. 52° 30′ N. This town was taken by the English in 1174; by Ireton in 1651; and unsuccessfully besieged by king William in 1690, but surrendered in 1691 to general Gynkel, afterwards earl of Athlone, on terms of capitulation very advantageous to the besieged.

LIMOGES (Geog.) or Limosin, a province of France, the capital of which is also called Limoges, situated on the right bank of the Vienne, 110 m. N. E. Bourdeaux, and 250 S. Paris. Lon. 1° 15′ E. lat. 45° N.

History of Limoges.

The town of Limoges is called by Ptolemy Rastiatum, but by Ammianus Marcellinus Lemovix, and by others Lemovica, Lemovicum, and Lemovicina. It is said that it was built by the Gauls, and was, in the time of Cæsar, a populous and considerable place, but it suffered very much on the decline of the Roman empire. The Goths were the first who pillaged it, after which it experienced the same treatment from the French and English, by whom it was sacked in the reign of Charles V of France. Bertrand du Guesclin, constable of France, took it from the latter in 1371, and it was retaken by the prince of Wales sometime after by assault, who, being exceedingly irritated against the inhabitants, put them all to the sword. It is an episcopal city, of which S. Martial is supposed to have been the first bishop. The prelates of Aquitania assembled councils in this city in 1028, 1031, and, as is said, in 1182. Apollin. Sidon. l. 7, ep. 6; Gregor. Turon. Hist. l. 9, &c.; Du Chesne, Antiq. des Villes.

LINACRE (Biog.) or Lynacer, Thomas, a physician and scholar, descended from the Linacres, of Linacre-Hall, in Derbyshire, was born in 1460 at Canterbury, and died in 1524, leaving translations of most of Galen's works, as of Proclus 'De Sphærâ,' 1499, his grammatical treatise, 'De Emendata Structura Latini Sermonis Libri sex;' printed after his death, and translated by Buchanan.

LINCOLN, Edward, first Earl of (Hist.) vide Clinton.

LINCOLN, Henry, second Earl of, was one of the peers in commission for the trial of Mary, queen of Scots, and one of the commanders of the forces that besieged the earl of Essex, and obliged him to surrender in 1601. He afterwards sat on the trial of the latter, and died in 1616.

LINCOLN, Theophilus, fourth Earl of, took part at first in the grand rebellion, but in 1647 he was among the number of those who, wishing to bring about a treaty with the king, was imprisoned in the Tower. He lived to see the restoration, and served the office of carver at the coronation of Charles II.

LINCOLN, Henry, ninth Earl of, vide Newcastle.

LINCOLN, Earl of (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the duke of Newcastle.

LINCOLN (Geog.) a city of England and capital of Lincolnshire, is situated on the North bank of the river Witham, 21 m. W. Horncastle, 51 N. by W. Peterborough, and 129 N. by W. London.

History of Lincoln.

This city was a place of great consequence from the time of the Norman conquest, and affords greater remains of antiquity than any other place in England. Of the castle built by William the conqueror little is now to be seen; but vestiges of its churches and religious houses are still visible on all sides, notwithstanding the havoc which was made in this city during the rebellion, when it was occupied successively by the contending parties. In the reign of Henry I the Foss Dyke canal, probably the first in the kingdom, was cut for the benefit of its trade.

Ecclesiastical History of Lincoln.

Lincoln was elected into a bishop's see in the 11th century, when Remi de Fescani transferred the see of Dorchester to Lincoln, and founded the cathedral there, which is admired as a beautiful specimen of Gothic architecture. Henry VII separated the bishopric of Ely from that of Lincoln, and Henry VIII those of Peterborough and Oxford. Notwithstanding these diminutions, this diocese continues to be the most extensive in the kingdom. Among the successors of Remi de Fescani were Robert Blowet, Alexander, and Geoffry Plantagenet, &c., and among those since the reign of Edward V were John White, William Wickham, William Barlow, John Williams, afterwards archbishop of York, Thomas Tennison, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, William Wake, afterwards the metropolitan, and Edmund Gibson, &c.

LINCOLNSHIRE (Geog.) a maritime county of England.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the N. by Yorkshire, from which it is separated by the Humber, E. by the German Ocean, S. E. by the Wash and Norfolk, S. by Cambridgeshire and Northamptonshire, S. W. by Rutlandshire, and W. by the counties of Leicester and Nottingham. It is 77 m. long, and 45 broad.

Principal Towns. Lincoln, the capital, Boston, Gainsborough, Louth, Stamford, Spalding, Grantham, Grimsby, Barton, Horncastle, and Spilsby.

Principal Rivers. The Trent, Welland, Witham, Glens, and Anchtolme.

History. Previous to the Roman conquest Lincolnshire was possessed by the Coritani, and under the Romans formed a part of Britannia prima, when it appears to have been occupied by various military stations, and intersected by different roads, the principal of which were the British Ermin-Street, afterwards adopted by the Romans, and the Fossway. During the government of the Saxons it was included in the kingdom of Mercia. In the wars with the barons king John lost all his carriages and camp equipage, with many of his men, in the quicksands in passing the Wash.

LIND, James (Biog.) an English physician, who died in 1794, was the author of a Treatise on the Diseases of Seamen, besides other works.

LINDANUS, William (Ecc.) a native of Dordrecht, in Holland, and first bishop of Ruremonde, one of the most celebrated prelates of his time, was nominated to the see of Ruremonde by Philip II, king of Spain, in 1567, translated to that of Ghent in 1588, and died in 1591, at the age of 63, after having been employed in important concerns in the service of the king of Spain. He was the author of many controversial works.

LINDSAY, Sir David (Hist.) earl of Crawford, of the family mentioned under Heraldry. [Vide Crawford]

LINDSAY, Sir John, Lord, of the same family, one of the hostages for the ransom of king James I in 1424, died in 1479 Privy Councillor to James II.

LINDSAY, Sir Walter, fifth son of the preceding, a valiant knight, died in 1538, after having signalized himself in the wars with the Turks in defence of the Christians, and in company with the knights of Rhodes.

LINDSAY, David, second Lord, adhered to the party of king James III, and was a principal commander on his side at the battle of Bannockburn in 1488. He died in 1492.

LINDSAY, Patrick, fourth Lord, and brother to the preceding, accompanied king James IV in his fatal expedition to England in 1513, and gave his opinion against his majesty's entering into the engagement. He escaped the carnage of that day, and was afterwards one of the four lords appointed to remain with the queen dowager, and to give her counsel and assistance.

LINDSAY, John, fifth Lord, was constituted an Extraordinary Lord of Session in 1541, was present at the death of James V at Falkland in 1542, and was one of the four noblemen to whom the charge of the young queen Mary was committed. He was a principal commander at Ancrammuir in 1544, where Evers and Laton were defeated, and died in 1563.

LINDSAY, Patrick, sixth Lord, an extraordinary zealot for the Reformation, was one of the noblemen concerned in seizing the king's person at the raid of Ruthven in 1582, and died in 1589.

LINDSAY, John, tenth Lord and first Earl of Lindsay and Crawford, vide Crawford.

LINDSAY, Alexander, first Earl of Balcarras, vide Balcarras.

LINDSAY (Her.) the distinguished surname of an ancient family in Scotland, which has spread into numerous branches, and been fruitful in great men. Some of this family attached themselves to king David I; namely, William de Lindsay and Walter de Lindsay, brothers, who obtained from that monarch various lands in Clydesdale, and in the counties of Edinburgh and Haddington. From these two brothers all the Lindsays of Scotland are descended. Sir David Lindsay, mentioned under History [vide Crawford], was the first on whom the peerage was conferred, he being raised to the dignity of earl of Crawford in 1398. David, the fourth earl, was created duke of Montrose in 1488, which was annulled by act of parliament the same year. From a younger branch of the same family descended John Lindsay, of the Byres, who was created lord Lindsay, of the Byres. John, the tenth lord Lindsay, was created in 1633 earl of Lindsay and lord Parbroath; and on the forfeiture of Ludovick, earl of Crawford, received in 1644 the earldom of Crawford, which was confirmed after the restoration. John Crawford, of Kilburny, son of the honourable Patrick Lindsay, second son of the earl of Crawford, was created in 1703 viscount of Mount-Crawford, lord Kilburny, and Drumrig. At the death of the twentieth earl of Crawford, without issue, the titles became dormant, although the earl of Balcarras, who is also of the Lindsay family, considers himself as entitled to the earldom of Crawford as descended in the male line, from Walter Lindsay, third son of Alexander, second earl of Crawford. Sir David Lindsay, of Balcarras, ancestor of the earl of Balcarras, was advanced in 1633 to the title of lord Lindsay, of Balcarras; and Alexander, the second lord, was raised to the dignity of earl of Balcarras, lord Lindsay and Balneil, &c. [Vide Balcarras]

LINDSAY, Lord, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Balcarras.

LINDSAY (Biog.) or Lyndsay, Sir David, an ancient Scotch poet, probably of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1490 at Garmylton, in Haddingtonshire, and died about 1557, or, according to some, in 1567, after having filled the office of lion-herald. The best edition of his works was published in 1806 by George Chalmers, esq. in 3 vols. 8vo. containing an account of his life and writings, with a glossary.

LINDSAY, Robert, of Pitscottie, a cotemporary of sir David Lindsay, is the reputed author or editor of what has been published as a 'History of Scotland, from 1436 to 1565,' &c. of which a new edition was published by John Graham Dalzell, esq. in 2 vols. 8vo. with its proper title of 'Chronicles of Scotland.'

LINDSAY, John, a divine, and a non-juror, who was educated at St. Mary's Hall, Oxford, and died in 1768, at the age of 82; published 'The Short History of the Regal Succession, &c. with Remarks on Whiston's Scripture Politics,' &c. 8vo. 1720; and a translation of 'Mason's Vindication of the Church of England,' 1726, and reprinted in 1728.

LINDSEY, Robert, Earl of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was constituted Lord High Admiral of England in 1635, and was killed at the battle of Edge-Hill in his majesty's service in 1642.

LINDSEY, Montague, second Earl of, was with his valiant father when he was wounded, and voluntarily surrendered himself a prisoner that he might be near him, and attend upon him until his death. Being afterwards exchanged, he resolutely adhered to his duty and fidelity, and was present in all the engagements which were fought during the rebellion. When he understood that the rebels intended to put their sovereign to death, he, with the duke of Richmond, the marquis of Hertford, and the earl of Southampton, offered themselves as sacrifices for his majesty's safety, as having been, by their office of Privy Counsellors, the advisers of the measures imputed to him as criminal. He afterwards lived in privacy anxiously waiting for the moment when his endeavours might be useful towards restoring his majesty, and his loyal people, to their just rights and government. At the coronation of king Charles II, he put in his claim for the great hereditary office of Lord High Chamberlain, which he executed on that day, and died in 1666, at the age of 56.

LINDSEY, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles originally enjoyed by the duke of Ancaster; but at the death of Brownlow, fifth duke of Ancaster, and marquis of Lindsey, without issue, the dukedom and marquisate became extinct; but the earldom of Lindsey devolved on general Albemarle Bertie, heir male of Robert Bertie, the first earl of Lindsey. The arms, &c. of this family are the same as those of Abingdon, differenced. [Vide Abingdon]

LINDSEY, Theophilus (Biog.) an English divine, and native of Cheshire, was born in 1723, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1808, after having resigned his clerical office in order to attach himself to the Socinians, whose opinions he had imbibed, and endeavoured to recommend by his writings.

LINDUS (Geog.) Λινδος, a city at the south-east part of Rhodes, built, as is fabled, by Cercaphus, son of Sol and Cydippe, where Hercules and Minerva had a temple. The town of Gela, in Sicily, was founded by a colony from this city, which was the birth-place of Cleobolus, one of the seven wise men. Hom. l. 2; Herodot. l. 7; Strab. l. 14; Mela, l. 2; Plin. l. 34; Lactant. de Fals. Rel. c. 21.

LINDWOOD, William (Ecc.) a divinity professor of Oxford in the reign of Henry V, was sent by that monarch on an embassy into Spain in 1422, and raised to the see of St. David's in 1434, where he died in 1446, leaving 'The Constitutions of the Archbishops of Canterbury, from Layton to Chicheley,' printed at Paris in 1505, and at Oxford in 1606.

LINGELBACK, John (Biog.) a German painter of Frankfort in the 17th century, who died about 1687, was highly esteemed for his landscapes, which he adorned with ruins, antiquities, and a great diversity of objects.

LINGONES (Geog.) a people of Gallia Belgica, between the rivers Mosa, Arar, and Matrona, whose capital is now called Langres. This people was subdued by Julius Cæsar; and passing into Italy, they made some settlements near the Alps, at the head of the Adriatic.

LINGUET, Simon Nicholas Henry (Biog.) a French political writer, was born at Rheims in 1736, and was put to death during the revolution in 1793, leaving, 1. 'Voyage au Labyrinthe du Jardin du Roi,' 12mo. Hague, 1755. 2. 'Histoire du Siècle d'Alexandre,' 12mo. Paris, 1762. 3. 'Le Fanaticisme des Philosophes,' 8vo. Amsterdam, 1764. 4. 'Necessité d'une Reforme dans l'Administration de la Justice et des Lois Civiles de France,' 8vo. Amsterdam, 1764. 5. 'La Dime Royale,' 1764, reprinted in 1787. 6. 'Histoire des Revolutions. de l'Empire Romain,' 2 vols. 12mo. 1766. 7. 'Theorie des Lois,' 2 vols. 8vo. 1762. 8. 'Théatre Espagnole,' &c.

LINNÆUS, Charles (Geog.) afterwards styled Von Linné, the most eminent of modern naturalists, was born in 1707 at Rashult, in the province of Smaland, in Sweden, and died in 1778, leaving 'Systema Naturæ sistens tria Regna Naturæ,' fol. 1735, and 2 vols. 8vo. 1756; 'Bibliotheca Botanica,' 8vo.; 'Hortus Cliffortianus,' fol.; 'Critica Botanica,' 8vo.; 'Flora Laponica,' 8vo.; 'Flora Suecica;' 'Fauna Suecica;' 'Flora Zeylanica,' 4to.; 'Hortus Upsalensis;' 'Amœnitates Academicæ,' 5 vols. 8vo.; 'Materia Medica;' 'Animalium Specierum in Classes;' 'Oratio de Incrementis Telluris Habitabilis;' 'Nemesis Divina;' 'Plantæ Surinamenses.'

LINNÆUS, or Von Linné, Charles, the eldest son of the preceding, was born in 1741, and died in 1783, leaving 'Decas Plantarum Rariorum Horti Upsaliensis,' 1762, and another in 1763; and also in 1767, 'Plantarum Rariorum Horti Upsaliensis Fasciculus Primus;' also the 'Supplementum Plantarum,' printed at Brunswick, under the care of Ehrhart, in 1781; which was inserted in the 14th edition of Linnæus' 'Systema Vegetabilium,' &c.

LINT, Peter van (Biog.) a painter of Antwerp in the 16th century, obtained a reputation for his historical paintings, as well as his portraits.

LINT, Hendric van, his relation, and also a painter, left several landscapes that were much admired, two of which are said to be in lord Moira's collection.

LINTON, Lord (Her.) the title enjoyed by the eldest son of the earl of Traquair.

LINTRUSI, Severinus (Ecc.) bishop of Wiburg, in Jutland, who died in 1732, was the author of some theological works in Latin.

LINTURNUM (Geog.) a town of Campania, at the mouth of the river Clanius, where Scipio Africanus died and was buried.

LINUS (Myth.) Λῖνος, a son of Ismenias, and native of Thebes, who is said to have taught music to Hercules, by whom he was killed in a fit of anger. Diogenes makes him to be son of Mercury and Urania, and to have been killed by Apollo, for presuming to compare himself to him. Apollod. l. 2; Virg. Ecl. l. 4; Paus. l. 2.

LINUS, S. (Ecc.) a native of Volaterra, in Tuscany, was, according to some of the ancients, the successor of St. Peter in the see of Rome, and, according to some, suffered martyrdom; but of the circumstances of his life and death nothing certain is known. *S. LIPARA (Numis.) the island and town of this name is distinguished on medals by the inscription ΛΙΠΑΡΑΙΩΝ, ΛΙΠΑΡΑΙΟΝ, bearing for their types the head of Vulcan, and bulls of iron, &c. as in the annexed figure.

LIPARI Islands (Geog.) a group of islands in the Tuscan sea, belonging to Sicily, and extending from 13° to 15° E. longitude, and from 38° 20′ to 38° 50′ N. latitude, including Lipari, Stromboli, Salini, Volcano, Volcanella, &c. They were known to the ancients by the names of the Insulæ Æoliæ, vel Vulcaniæ, vel Insulæ Liparæorum. [Vide Lipara]

LIPENIUS, Martin (Biog.) a German divine, was born at Goritz, in Brandenburgh, in 1630, and died in 1692, leaving among his works 'Bibliotheca Juridica,' Francof. 1679; 'Bibliotheca Medica,' ibid. 1679; 'Biblioth. Philosophica,' ibid. 1682; 'Bibliotheca Realis Theologica,' 2 vols. Francof. 1685; making in all six folio volumes. The Bibl. Juridica was reprinted at Leipsic in 1757, with a supplement, &c.; another supplement was published by Senkenberg in 1789, making in all four volumes folio.

LIPPI, Fra. Filippo (Biog.) an historical painter of Florence, who died in 1488, at the age of 45, successfully imitated the style of his master Massacio.

LIPPI, Filippo, his son, who died in 1505, at the age of 45, excelled in imitating architectural ornaments.

LIPPI, Lorenzo, a Florentine painter and poet, who was born in 1606, and died in 1664, excelled in historical pieces and portraits. His poem, entitled 'Il Malmantile racquistato,' is considered a classical work in the Tuscan language.

LIPPOMANI, Jerome (Hist.) a noble Venetian, and one of the most distinguished men in his time, was employed on various missions to Storia, Savoy, Poland, and Naples; but being accused of holding a secret correspondence with the enemies of his country, he was put into prison, and would have suffered for his offence, if he had not died in confinement in 1591.

LIPPOMANI, Lewis, a native of Venice, and a bishop of Verona, was employed on various missions to Portugal and elsewhere, and died in 1559, after having distinguished himself both as a statesman and a scholar. He wrote the Lives of the Saints, &c.

LIPPINCOTT (Her.) the name of a family which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1778 on sir Henry Lippincott; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

LIS, John Vander (Biog.) a painter of Oldenburg, who died in 1629, at the age of 59, was particularly happy in representing scripture and moral subjects.

LIS, N. another painter of Breda, was eminent in historical representations.

LISBON (Geog.) the capital of Portugal, situated on the north bank of the Tagus, 10 m. from its mouth, and built on seven hills, not broad, but six miles in length, 178 m. W. by N. Seville, and 255 S. by W. Madrid. Lon. 9° 5′ W. lat. 38° 40′ N.

History of Lisbon.

Lisbon, which was known to the Romans by the name of Olisippo, is supposed to have had a Phœnician colony for its first settlers. It was taken with the rest of Portugal by the Moors, in the eighth century, but retaken by Alphonsus II, king of Spain, in 793, and again by Alphonsus I, king of Portugal, in 1147. It was first made the residence of the Portuguese kings, and the capital of the kingdom, by Emanuel, in the 16th century. It was partially shaken by an earthquake in 1531; but suffered nothing material, either from war or the elements, until 1755, when it was almost destroyed by an earthquake. In 1807 it became the scene of important operations between the British and French armies, until the latter were finally driven from the country. Lisbon is the see of a patriarch and an archbishop, with a university and a tribunal of the inquisition.

LISBURNE, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Vaughan [vide Vaughan], which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Vaughan, earl of Lisburne, viscount Lisburne, lord Vaughan, baron of Fethers.

Supporters. The dexter a dragon, with wings expanded, regardant vert, gorged with a plain collar sable, edged argent, charged with three fleurs-de-lis, as in the coat, having a golden chain thereto affixed; the sinister a unicorn regardant argent, his horn, mane, tufts, and hoofs or, gorged and chained as the dexter.

LISIEUX (Geog.) a considerable town of Upper Normandy, in the department Calvados, 12 m. from the sea, 30 E. Caen, 40 S. W. Rouen, 116 W. N. W. Paris. Lon. 0° 14′ E. lat. 49° N. It was formerly an episcopal see, and is supposed to be the Lexovium, or, according to some, the Neomagus of the ancients. The most ancient bishop of Lisieux of which mention is made, is Theobald, who assisted at the third Council of Orleans in 538. Two ecclesiastical assemblies are also said to have been held there, namely, in 1106, and in 1321. Aimon. Hist. l. 4; Du Chesne, Antiq. des Villes.

LISLE, Sir George (Hist.) a brave loyalist, who, after displaying his valour in a signal manner in defence of his sovereign during the grand rebellion, was shot by the rebels in 1648.

L'ISLE, Claude de, a descendant from an ancient family in France, and a native of Vaucouleurs, in Lorraine, was born in 1644, and died in 1720, leaving, 1. 'Relation Historique du Roïaume de Siam,' 12mo. 1684. 2. Different Letters on Geographical Subjects, in 1700. 3. 'Un Atlas Généalogique et Historique,' &c. 1718. 4. 'Abrégé de l'Histoire Universelle,' &c. 7 vols. 12mo. Paris, 1731. 5. 'Introduction à la Geographie,' &c. 2 vols. 12mo. Paris, 1746.

L'ISLE, William de, son of the preceding, and also a geographer, was born in 1675, and died in 1726, leaving several maps, which were highly esteemed; besides pieces inserted in the 'Memoires.'

L'ISLE, Lewis de, brother of the preceding, a traveller and astronomer, who died in 1741, is still remembered by some pieces inserted in the 'Memoires' of the French Academy; and also in those of the Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburgh.

L'ISLE, J. Nicholas de, younger brother of the preceding, was born at Paris in 1688, and died in 1768, leaving 'Memoirs illustrative of the History of Astronomy,' in 2 vols. 4to.; besides some papers in the 'Philosophical Transactions,' and in the 'Mercure.'

LISLE, Viscount (Her.) a title conferred on Edward Grey in 1483, which became extinct at the death of John, second viscount Lisle, in 1504. It was afterwards revived in the person of Arthur Plantagenet, natural son of king Edward IV, who, marrying Elizabeth, sister of John, second viscount Lisle, was advanced to that dignity and title in 1533, which became extinct at his death in 1541.

LISLE, Baron, a title enjoyed by the family of Lysaght. [Vide Lysaght] The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

Arms. Argent, three spears erect gules; on a chief azure a lion of England.

Crest. A dexter arm couped at the shoulder proper, clad gules, brandishing a sword, pomeled and hilted or.

Supporters. Two lions rampant, armed and langued gules.

Du Bartas' 'Ark, Babylon, Colonies, and Columns,' 4to. 1637, in French and English. 3. 'The Fair Ethiopian,' 4to. 1631.

LISLE, vide Rome de.

LISLE (Geog.) a large and well-fortified city of France, formerly the capital of French Flanders, seated in a rich and marshy soil, on the Deule, 14 m. W. Tournay, and 130 N. Paris. Lon. 3° 4′ E. lat. 50° 30′ N.

History of Lisle.

This town, which is said to have derived its origin from a castle, built by Julius Cæsar, on an island in the Deule, was on that account called in the Latin of the middle ages Insula, or Isla. It was fortified by Philip Augustus, king of France, in 1213; but in consequence of a revolt of the inhabitants, he reduced it to ashes; after which it was rebuilt, enlarged, and much improved. Louis XIV took it from the Spaniards in 1667, and in 1708 it surrendered to the allies, under the duke of Marlborough and prince Eugene, after a long and sanguinary siege. At the peace of Utrecht it was restored to France, but was again assailed, although without success, by the Austrians in 1792.

LISMORE, Viscount (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of O'Callaghan [vide O'Callaghan]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. O'Callaghan, viscount Lismore of Shanbally, co. Tipperary, and baron Lismore.

Arms. Argent, in an oak forest a wolf passant proper.

Crest. On a wreath, a dexter arm couped at the shoulder, embowed, brandishing a sword, and thereon a snake, all proper.

Supporters. Two stags proper.

Motto. "Fidus et audax."

LISSUS (Geog.) now Alesso, a town of Macedonia, on the confines of Illyricum. Liv. l. 44; Plin. l. 3.

Lissus, a small river of Thrace, which was dried up by the army of Xerxes. Herod. l. 7; Strab. l. 7.

LISTER (Her.) the name of a family of great antiquity in the county of Derby, of which mention is made as early as the reign of Edward when John Lister married Isabel, daughter and heir of John de Bolton, bowbearer of Holland. His descendant, Thomas Lister of Gisburn Park, was raised in 1797 to the dignity of the peerage, by the title of lord Ribbesdale of Gisburn Park, co. York. [Vide Ribbesdale]

Lister, Martin (Biog.) an English physician and naturalist, was born at Radcliffe, in Buckinghamshire, about 1638, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1711, leaving, 1. 'Historia Animalium Angliæ,' 1678. 2. The 'Metamorphoses Naturelles,' &c. of John Goedart, translated into English under the title 'Of Insects,' &c. 1682; and also into Latin. 3. 'De Fontibus Medicalibus Angliæ,' Ebor. 1682. 4. 'Historia, sive Sinopsis Conchyliorum,' 2 vols. fol. 1685, 1699; and Oxon. 1770. 5. An Account of his Journey to Paris. 6. 'Exercitatio Anatomica,' 2 vols. 1695. 7. 'Conchyliorum Bivalvium,' &c. 4to. 1696.

LITHGOW, William (Biog.) a Scotch traveller in the reign of king James, whose Account of his Sufferings and Travels over Europe, Asia, and Africa, was published in 4to. in 1614, and appeared again in Morgan's 'Phœnix Britannica.'

LITHUANIA (Geog.) a name formerly given to a tract of country lying between Poland and Prussia, now forming the three Russian governments of Wilna, Grodno, and Minsk. This country was originally governed by princes of its own, known by the name of grand dukes, the first of whom, mentioned in history, was Kynas, in 1170. Jagellon, one of his successors by his marriage with Hedwiga of Poland, was elected in 1386 king of that country; after which Lithuania became an appendage to the kingdom.

LITTLETON (Hist.) or Lyttleton, Sir Thomas, an English judge, was born at Frankley, about the beginning of the 15th century, and after receiving his education at one of the Universities, he removed to the Inner Temple, where being called to the bar, he was promoted by Henry VI to the office of Steward or Judge of the Court of the Palace or Marshalsea of the King's Household; in 1455 he was made King's Serjeant; and, notwithstanding the troubles of the times, he was advanced in the reign of Edward IV to be one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas; which post he filled with honour to himself and benefit to his country until his death in 1481. The memory of this judge is preserved by his 'Tenures,' which has passed through innumerable editions, no less than 24 being reckoned from 1539 to 1639 only. It is supposed by Dr. Middleton to have been first published in French, without date, by Lettou and Machlinea, near the church of All Saints, or All Hallows, in London; but lord Coke supposes the French edition also without date, and in folio, for R. Pinson, to have been the first. The 'Commentary' of lord Coke upon it has not only given it immense value, but secured to it a lasting reputation. Of this last work a republication was made in folio in 1788, which was enriched by the annotations of lord Haile and lord chancellor Nottingham, besides those of Messrs. Hargrave and Butler, the editors.

Littleton, John, a descendant of the Worcestershire Littletons, was implicated in the disgrace of Essex, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, by whose order he was confined on a charge of conspiracy, and would probably have lost his life on the scaffold, but for the interference of his friends. He died in prison in 1600.

Littleton, or Lyttleton, Edward, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England in the reign of Charles I, and a descendant by a collateral branch from the preceding, was born in 1589, educated at Oxford, whence he removed to the Inner Temple, and after passing through the usual gradations in the law, was constituted in 1639 Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and in 1640 Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, which he held until his death in 1645. His 'Reports' were published in folio in 1683; besides which he left several speeches in Parliament, as also several arguments and discourses published in Rushworth, Vol. I; also separately in 4to. 1642; and in a book, entitled 'The Sovereign's Prerogative and Subjects' Privileges discussed,' folio, 1657.

Littleton, vide Lyttelton.

Littleton, Lord (Her.) of Mounslow, in Shropshire, the title conferred in 1639 on lord keeper Littleton above-mentioned, which became extinct at his death in 1645.

Littleton, Adam (Biog.) a scholar and divine, was born in 1627 at Hales-Owen, in Shropshire, educated at Westminster, whence he was chosen student of Christ Church, Oxford; but was driven away by the usurping powers in 1648, and died in 1694, leaving, 1. 'Tragicomœdia Oxoniensis,' 4to. a Latin Poem on the Parliamentary Visitors, 1648. 2. 'Pastor Metricus, sive Voces omnes Nov. Test. Primogeniæ Hexametris Versibus comprehensæ, Gr. et Lat.' 4to. 1658. 3. 'Diatriba in octo Tractatus distributa,' &c. printed with the former. 4. 'Elementa Religionis,' &c. 8vo. 1658; to which is added 'Complicatio Radicum in primæva Hebræorum Linguâ.' 5. 'Solomon's Gate; or, an Entrance into the Church,' &c. 8vo. 1662. 6. 'Latin Dictionary,' 4to. 1678. 7. A translation of Selden's 'Jani Anglorum Facies altera,' fol. 1683; to which were added three other tracts by the same author. 8. 'The Life of Themistocles,' from the Greek in the first volume of Plutarch's Lives, by several hands, 8vo. 1687.

Littleton, Edward, an English divine and poet, was elected from Eton School to King's College, Cambridge, in 1716, and died in 1734, leaving, besides some sermons, also a Poem on the subject of his various studies at Eton; and also 'On a Spider,' &c.

LIVADIA (Geog.) a province of European Turkey.

Boundaries. It is bounded on the N. by Thessaly, E. by the Archipelago, S. by the Gulf of Engia and Lepanto, which latter separates it from the Morea, and W. by the Mediterranean.

Extent and Division. It comprises the most interesting portion of ancient Greece, being composed of the small states of Acarnania, Ætolia, Locris, Phocis, Doris, Bœotia, Megara, and Attica.

Principal Towns. Livadia, Dadi, Salona, and Athens. The formerly celebrated cities of Thebes, Delphi, Megara, and Orchomenos, are now in a very decayed state.

Mountains. Parnassus, Helicon, and Cithæron, so well known in antiquity.

Rivers. Lethe, Mnemosyne, which, united, form the Hercyna, the Lake of Livadia, anciently Copais Lacus, which is formed by the river Cephiso, and other smaller streams, the Lake of Stivo, or of Thebes, &c.

LIVADIA, the capital of the foregoing province, which stands to the East of Mount Helicon, 15 m. from the Gulf of Lepanto, 50 N. W. Athens, and 85 S. S. E. Larissa. Lon. 23° 20′ E. lat. 38° 30′ N. This town, which stands on the site of the ancient Lebadia, has in its neighbourhood the celebrated cave of Trephonius.

LIVERPOOL, Charles, Earl of (Hist.) a statesman, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, held successively the offices of Under Secretary of State, Secretary to the Treasury, one of the Lords of the Admiralty, a Lord of the Treasury, President of the Board, and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and died in 1808, leaving among his works as an author, 1. 'A Discourse on the Establishment of a National and Constitutional Force in England,' 1756. 2. 'A Discourse on the Conduct of Great Britain in respect to Neutral Nations during the present War,' 1758. 3. 'A Collection of Treatises from 1648 to 1783,' which he edited in 3 vols. 8vo. 1785. 4. 'A Treatise on the Coins of the Realm, in a Letter to the King,' 1805.

LIVERPOOL, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Jenkinson [vide Jenkinson]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Jenkinson, earl of Liverpool, and baron Hawksbury, of Hawksbury.

Arms. Azure, on a fesse wavy argent, a cross patee gules, in chief two etoiles or. To which were added, as an augmentation to the first earl in 1796, a chief wavy argent, charged with the arms of the borough of Liverpool.

Crest. A sea-horse assurgent or, maned azure, supporting a cross patee gules.

Supporters. Two eagles, each charged with a cross patee on the breast.

Motto. "Palma non sine pulvere."

LIVIA, gens (Hist.) the name of a family which, though plebeian, rose to distinction in the state. It was known by the surnames of Drusus, Libo, and Salinator.

LIVIA, Drusilla, also called Julia, daughter of Livius Drusus Calidianus, and wife of Tiberius Claudius Nero, was the mother of the emperor Tiberius and Drusus. On the death of her husband she was married to Augustus, who adopted her son Tiberius. She is said to have died at the age of 82, A. D. 29. Tac. Annal. l. 1; Sueton. in Aug.; Dio. l. 56.

LIVIA, Drusilla, vide Drusilla.

LIVIA, the daughter of Drusus, and grand-daughter of the first Livia above-mentioned, was married to another Drusus, the son of Tiberius, whom she poisoned in order to abandon herself to Sejanus. Soon after the death of the latter she was compelled to starve herself. Tacitus; Suetonius, &c.

LIVIA, Orestilla, a Roman lady, who was debauched by Caligula on the day she was going to be married to Piso. He repudiated her a few days after, and banished her at the end of two years. Sueton. in Calig. c. 25; Dio. l. 39.

LIVIA, gens (Numis.) some coins are extant of this family, bearing the surnames of Drusus, Libo, and Salinator, but they are all of doubtful authority. Others, which are acknowledged to be genuine, bear the effigy of the wife of Augustus as in the annexed figure, and the inscriptions—DIVA LIVIA DIVI AUGUST.—JULIA AUG. vel AUGUSTA GENETRIX ORBIS. —LIVIA AUGUSTA.—CERERI; and in the Greek, ΘΕΑ ΛΙΒΙΑ, vel ΛΙΟΥΙΑ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΗ. — ΙΟΥΛΙΑ ΛΑΒΑΝΔΕΩΝ. — ΙΟΥΛΙΑ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΟΥ. — ΣΕΒΑΣΤΗ ΕΔΕΣΣΑΙΩΝ; ΕΦΕσίων, &c.; on the reverse, CAESARI AUGUSTO.—TIBERIUS CAESAR DIVI AUGUSTI F. AUGUSTUS, &c.

LIVIUS SALINATOR, M. (Hist.) a Roman consul, who distinguished himself by the victory he obtained over Asdrubal as he was passing into Italy with a reinforcement for his brother Livius Drusus, a tribune. He joined the patricians in opposing the ambitious views of C. Gracchus. Plut. in Grac.

LIVIUS, vide Drusus.

LIVIUS, Andronicus (Biog.) a dramatic poet, who flourished at Rome about 240 A. C. was the first who turned personal satires and the fescennine verses into the form of the drama. Some few of his verses, about 105 in number, are preserved in the 'Corpus Poetarum Latinorum.' Cic. in Tusc. l. 1.

LIVIUS, Titus, the historian, and native of Padua, in the reign of Augustus, who died A. D. 17, is well known as the author of a Roman history which was comprehended in 140 books, but of which only 35 are extant. The editions of Livy most generally esteemed are those of Mattaire, 6 vols. 12mo. Lond. 1722; of Drakenborch, 7 vols. 4to. Amst. 1738; of Ruddiman, 4 vols. 12mo. Edinb. 1751; and of Oxford, 6 vols. 8vo. 1794. The last English translation of Livy was that of George Baker, A. M. published in 6 vols. 8vo. 1797. [Vide Plate XXV] Quintil. l. 2; Tacit. Annal. l. 3; Plin. Epist. l. 2, ep. 3 and 8; Suet. in Claud. c. 4; Euseb. Chron.

LIVONIA (Geog.) a maritime province in the north-west of European Russia, which was almost unknown until the end of the 12th century, when it was overrun by the Danes. During the 13th and 14th centuries it was governed by the Teutonic Knights, and in the 16th century the Poles became masters of it; but, Russia and Sweden afterwards contending for it, it was at length ceded in 1660 with Esthonia to the latter; but finally, in 1721, by the peace of Nystadt, to Russia.

LIZARD POINT (Geog.) a promontory in Cornwall, which was the most southern point in England, anciently known by the name of Ocrinum, or Damnonium Promontorium.

LLOYD, William (Ecc.) an English prelate, was born in 1627 at Tilehurst, in Berkshire, educated at Oxford, and, after various preferments, was raised to the see of St. Asaph in 1680. He was one of the seven bishops sent to the Tower in 1688 for refusing to permit the publication of the royal declaration for liberty of conscience; was translated in 1692 to Lichfield and Coventry, in 1699 to Worcester, and died in 1717, leaving, 1. 'The late Apology in Behalf of Papists, reprinted and Answered in Behalf of the Royalists,' 1667. 2. 'A Seasonable Discourse, showing the Necessity of maintaining the Established Religion in Opposition to Popery,' 4to. 1672, which passed through five editions in the following year. 3. 'A Seasonable Defence of the Seasonable Discourse,' &c. 4to. 1673. 4. 'The Difference between the Church of England and the Court of Rome considered,' 4to. 1673; all which were reprinted in 4to. 1689. 5. LOMBARD, Peter (Ecc.) known by the title of Master of the Sentences, was born at Novara, in Lombardy, whence he took his surname, was promoted to the see of Paris in 1160, and died in 1164. His work of the Sentences, divided into four books, contains an illustration of the doctrines of the church, in a collection of sentences or passages taken from the fathers; it was first printed at Venice in folio, 1477.

Lombard, Lambert (Biog.) a painter of Liege, was born in 1500, and died in 1560, after having obtained a considerable reputation in the exercise of his art.

Lombard, Peter, a native of Ireland, who studied for some time under Camden, at Westminster, and died about 1625 and 1626, was the author of, 1. 'Casus circa Decretum Clementis Papæ VIII de Sacramentali Confessione,' &c. 12mo. Antv. 1624. 2. 'De Regno Hiberniæ,' &c. 4to. Lovan. 1632.

Lombard, Peter, an engraver, who resided many years in London, and died after the restoration, executed a number of portraits after Vandyke.

LOMBARDY (Geog.) a country of Northern or Upper Italy, which lay between the Alps and the Apennines, or more strictly speaking, between the frontiers of Switzerland and Tuscany, being about 250 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. It was divided into Upper and Lower; the former, which was the western part, comprehended the Milanese, and a part of Sardinia; the latter comprehended Parma, Modena, Mantua, Ferrara, and a considerable part of the Venetian states, &c.

History of Lombardy.

Lombardy, called in the Latin of the middle ages Longobardia, or Lombardy, answers to the Gallia Cisalpina of the Romans, and derived its modern name from the Longobardi, a people, who, in process of time, over-run Italy. They are first mentioned by Prosper Aquitanus, bishop of Rhegium, who says in his Chronicle, that the Lombards leaving their native country Scandinavia, attacked and overcame the Vandals then in Germany about 379, although the name of Longobardi occurs in Strabo, Tacitus, and Ptolemy; but this latter people, situated between the Elbe and Oder, are supposed to have been distinct from the conquerors of Italy, who upon the death of their leaders Ibereus and Dion, chose Agilmond, the son of the latter, for their first king, in 389. He had for his successors Lamiscus, Lete, Ildesk, Gudesc, Claffus, Tatus, Wachus, Walterius, Audoinus, and Alboinus, the first that reigned in Italy, and begun his reign in 568. The following is a chronological list of the kings of Lombardy from this period:

LOMBART, Lambert (Biog.) a painter and architect of Liege, who died in 1565, at the age of 59, acquired a considerable reputation in both the arts. His life was published by Hubert Goltzius.

LOMBEG (Geog.) a town of Gascony, formerly a bishop's see, suffragan of Toulouse, is the ancient Lombaria, or Lumbaria, of the Latins.

LOMBROSO, Jacob (Biog.) a Jew, who published a Hebrew Bible at Venice in 1639.

LOMELLINI (Hist.) one of the most illustrious families of Genoa, many of whom held the highest posts in church and state. James Lomellini was doge in 1625. Benedict Lomellini, who was born in 1517, was created a cardinal by Pius IV in 1565, and died in 1579. John Jerome Lomellini, who was born in 1607, filled various posts under Urban VIII and Leo, was created a cardinal in 1652, and died in 1659.

LOMENIE, Anthony de (Hist.) son of Martial, lord of Versailles, who was killed at the massacre of St. Bartholomew in 1572, came early into the service of Henry IV, by whom he was employed on different missions, particularly into England as Ambassador Extraordinary in 1595, and died in 1638, at the age of 78.

Lomenie, Henry Augustus de, count of Brienne, &c. and son of the preceding, succeeded his father in his high posts under Louis XIII and XIV, and died in 1666, after having been sent on an embassy to England to negociate the marriage of Henrietta with Charles, prince of Wales, afterwards Charles I. He left 'Memoires' of the events of the reigns of Louis XIII and XIV, which were published in 3 vols. 12mo. Amsterdam, 1719.

Lomenie, Henry Lewis de, son of the preceding, and also his successor in the high offices of state, was employed on different embassies to Denmark, Sweden, and Holland; and, retiring afterwards from public life, he died in 1698, at the age of 56. He left among his works, 1. 'Itinerarium,' 8vo. 2. 'Remarques sur les Règles de la Poësie Françoise,' &c. 8vo. Paris, 1667; also at the end of the 'Nouvelle Methode pour apprendre facilement la Langue Latine.' 3. A translation of the 'Institution' of Thaulerus. 4. 'Re-

Celsi,' 12mo. Lovan. 1558. 2. 'Observationum Medicinalium Libri tres,' Antv. 1560, and frequently reprinted. 3. 'De curandis Febribus continuis Liber,' Antv. 1563. These three works were published together under the title of 'Opera Omnia,' 3 vols. 12mo. 1745.

LOMONOZOF (Biog.) a Russian poet, was born in 1711, and died in 1764, leaving a number of dramatic pieces, poems, and some prose works, which were all printed in 3 vols. 8vo. Among his prose pieces was an 'Essay on the Rules of Russian Poetry;' 'A Treatise on the Advantage of Chemistry;' 'On the Origin of Light,' &c.

LONDON (Geog.) the metropolis of Great Britain, in the popular acceptation of the word, comprises the ancient city of that name, the city of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and their respective suburbs. London and Westminster are in Middlesex, on the N. side of the river Thames; and Southwark is on the opposite side, in Surry. The extent of the whole, from Limehouse and Deptford to Milbank and Vauxhall, is above seven miles; but its greatest breadth does not exceed three miles. The cathedral church of St. Paul, which is nearly in the centre of the city of London, is ascertained to be situated in lat. 51° 31′ N. and lon. 0° 5′ 37″ W. Greenwich.

History of London.

London, which was known to the Romans by the name of Londinum, Lundinum, Londinium, &c. is supposed to have been founded between the age of Julius Cæsar and Nero, in whose time it is said to have been a considerable mercantile town of great opulence; but some authors have given it a much earlier date, making Brute, the descendant of Æneas, to be its founder. In 664 it was ravaged by the plague. William I granted the citizens a charter at the commencement of his reign, which is still preserved, and confirms the laws of Edward the Confessor. The perpetual sheriffwick of Middlesex was granted to the city by Henry I. On the coronation of Richard I, a dreadful massacre of the Jews was committed by the infuriated mob; and, at the commencement of his reign, the chief officer of the city was named mayor in lieu of the old title bailiff. In 1196 William Fitz Osbert excited a sedition, in which he was followed by 50,000 men; but the leader being taken and executed, the rest dispersed. A dreadful famine occurred in 1258, when 20,000 persons perished: which was followed by another massacre of the Jews in 1264. A pestilence ravaged the city in 1348, which recurred again four years after. Wat Tyler in 1381 made London the scene of his outrages, which were terminated by his death in Smithfield; this was followed by a more dreadful insurrection, headed by Jack Cade in 1450, who was, for some time, in possession of London. In 1485, the city was visited by an extraordinary sweating sickness; and in 1580 by the plague, which carried off 30,000 persons in one year; this was followed by a similar visitation at the commencement of the reign of Charles I, which swept off 35,000 persons; and in 1665 by what was called the great plague that nearly depopulated the city. The next year it suffered still more severely by the dreadful conflagration, by which the cathedral, and many other churches, with 13,200 houses, were consumed. London was the chief stay and support of the unnatural rebellion which the Parliament set on foot against their king, Charles I; and in these later times, it has witnessed a formidable riot, which was begun under pretence of petitioning the House of Commons against popery. London is a bishop's see suffragan of Canterbury. In this city also several councils have been held; namely, one in 713, when king Inas caused ordinances to be published for marriages between the British, Scotch, and Saxons; another in 833, in the presence of Egbert, king of the West Saxons; a third in 948, in the reign of Edred; a fourth in 970, for confirming the privileges of monasteries; a fifth in 1075, at which Lanfranc presided, for reforming the morals of ecclesiastics and seculars; a sixth in 1102, deposed all ecclesiastics of bad lives, and supplied the churches that were in want of pastors; and a seventh was held in the same year, at which S. Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury, presided; an eighth in 1125, at which John de Crema, cardinal legate, presided, and the archbishops of Canterbury and York were present; a ninth was held two years after by William of Canterbury, legate of the Holy See; a tenth was held by Alberic Ostiensis in 1138, at which several ordinances were made; an eleventh by Henry, bishop of Winchester, legate of the Holy See, and brother of Stephen; besides others in 1143, 1144, 1168, 1175, 1214, 1268, 1298, when sentence of banishment was passed on the Jews; in 1343; in 1382, when Wickliff was pronounced an heresiarch and condemned; in 1396, when the 18 propositions of this heresiarch were condemned; in 1423, when Henry Chichely, archbishop of Canterbury, condemned the heresies of Wickliff; and, lastly, in 1356, when Simon Islop, archbishop of Canterbury, opposed king Edward, who wanted to exact tithes from the clergy of England. *Tacit. LONDONDERRY, Robert, Marquis of (Hist.) a statesman of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1769; and, after going through the usual course of study at Cambridge, and travelling on the continent, he was in 1797 appointed Keeper of the Signet, of the Privy Seal of Ireland, sworn of the Privy Concil in 1798, made President of the Board of Controul in 1802, and Minister of War in 1805, which post he resigned on the death of Mr. Pitt; but resumed it in 1807, until the failure of the Walcheren expedition, when he again resigned it. On the death of Mr. Perceval, he acquired the highest influence in the cabinet; and, after exerting himself strenuously to promote the downfal of Bonaparte, he acted a conspicuous part as a negociator at the Congress of Vienna in 1815 in settling the affairs of Europe; but his intense application to business having brought on a derangement, he put an end to his existence in 1822.

LONDONDERRY, Marquis of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Stewart. [Vide Stewart]

LONDONDERRY (Geog.) a county of Ireland, in the province of Ulster, the capital of which is also called Londonderry, which was built in the reign of James I by some London adventurers, and surrounded by walls, 136 miles N. N. W. Dublin. Lon. 7° 25′ W. lat. 54° 50′ N. It acquired celebrity by the long siege which it sustained against James II in 1689.

LONG, Thomas (Biog.) an English divine, was born at Exeter in 1621, educated at Oxford, ejected as a non-juror at the revolution from his prebend of Exeter, and died in 1700, leaving, 1. LONGINUS, Cassius (Hist.) a tribune, driven out of the senate for favouring the interest of Julius Cæsar, by whom he was made governor of Spain. Cic. ad Att. l. 7.

LONGINUS, a lawyer, who was put to death by Nero's order for having the picture of Cassius, one of Cæsar's murderers. Juv. Sat. 10.

LONGINUS, a governor of Syria, from whom the emperor Claudius took away this charge. Joseph. Ant. l. 20.

LONGINUS, a Roman knight, who signalized himself by an extraordinary act of valour at the siege of Jerusalem. Joseph. de Bell. Jud.

LONGINUS, Dionysius Cassius, a Greek philosopher and critic of Athens, and the most distinguished person of that name, was secretary and the most confidential minister of Zenobia, queen of Palmyra. He animated her to make resistance to the arms of the Romans, and, when the victorious Aurelian approached the gates of that city, he returned to his summons a spirited letter, which proved his ruin. The fortune of Rome placed both the queen and her minister in the power of the emperor, who, knowing him to be the author of the offensive letter, caused him to be put to death, A. D. 273. He is said to have written many pieces, which are all lost except his work on the sublime, which has secured him a more lasting fame than his conduct and misfortunes as a statesman. The first edition of this treatise was that of Robertelli, 4to. Basil. 1554; and those reckoned the best editions are that of Tollius, 4to. Traject Rhen. 1694, and that of Toup, 8vo. Oxon. 1778. Euseb. Hist. l. 15; Vopisc. in Aurel.; Porphyr. in Vit. Plotin.; Zosim. Hist.; Phot. Biblioth.; Suidas, &c.

LONGLAND (Ecc.) or Langland, John, an English prelate, was born in 1473, at Henley, in Oxfordshire, educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, and, after various preferments, was advanced to the see of Lincoln in 1520, and died in 1547, leaving many valuable books to the libraries of Brazen-nose, Magdalen, and Oriel Colleges; besides which he recovered the salary of the Lady Margaret professorship, which had almost been lost, and bestowed many benefactions on poor students. He also built a curious chapel in Lincoln cathedral in the east part, and almshouses at Henley, his birth-place. His works as an author are, 1. 'Conciones tres,' printed by Pinson, fol. and dedicated to archbishop Warham. 2. 'Quinque Sermones,' &c. London. 1528. 3. 'Expositio Concionalis Psalmi Sexti,' &c. &c. Most of his sermons were preached in English, but translated into Latin by Thomas Key, of All Souls College, and printed by Robert Redman in folio, 1532.

LONGLAND (Biog.) or Langeland, Robert, the reputed author of 'The Visions of Pierce Plowman,' and one of the first English poets, was a secular priest, and a fellow of Oriel College in the 14th century. His work was completed in 1369, and first edited by Crowley, of whose editions three were published in 1550; an edition was also printed in 1561 by Owen Rogers, to which is sometimes annexed a poem, entitled 'Pierce the Plowman's Crede,' which first appeared in 1553.

LONGOBARDI (Geog.) a tribe of people from Scandinavia, who settled in Italy, and gave the name of Lombardy to the country which they chose for their residence.

Dissertation on Transubstantiation, &c.

LONGUS (Hist.) a Roman consul with P. Africanus Major, U. C. 560, when the seats of the people were separated from those of the senators. Cic. pro Com. 1.

Longus (Biog.) a Greek author, but of what age is not known, who wrote a novel, entitled ' Pastoralium de Daphnide et Chloe Libri quatuor,' the first edition of which, in the original, was published at Florence in 1598; but the best edition is that of Villoison's, Gr. and Lat. 2 vols. Paris, 1657. It was translated into English by George Thorney, and printed at London in 1657, and four times since. Among the French translations, that of Amyot has passed through many editions, but that in 12mo. 1718, is the most esteemed.

LONI, Alexander (Biog.) a painter of Florence, who died in 1702, at the age of 47, imitated with success the style of his master, Carlo Dolce.

LONICERUS, John (Biog.) a German scholar, and native of Orthern, who died in 1569, at the age of 70, compiled a Greek and Latin Lexicon, begun by Melancthon and Camerarius, and published an edition of Dioscorides and other Greek writers.

Lonicerus, Adam, a physician, and son of the preceding, who died at Frankfort in 1586, was the author of ' Methodus Rei Herbariæ,' 4to.; ' Historia Naturalis Plantarum, Animalium, et Metallorum,' 2 vols. fol.; ' Explicatio Corporis Humani Affectuum;' ' Hortus Sanitatis,' &c.

LONSDALE, John, first Viscount (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born in 1655 at Hackthorp-Hall, in the county of Westmoreland, took an active part in opposition to the measures of James II, and in favour of William III, by whom he was appointed a Privy Counsellor, Vice-Chamberlain of his Majesty's household, and Lord Lieutenant of Westmoreland and Cumberland, &c.; besides which offices he was, in 1700, appointed one of the Lords Justices to govern the kingdom during the king's absence in Holland, and died the same year.

Lonsdale, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles belonging to the family of Lowther [Vide Lowther]; which, with their arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Lowther, earl of Lonsdale, viscount and baron Lowther, of Whitehaven, and a baronet.

Arms. Or, six annulets sable.

Crest. On a wreath a dragon passant argent.

Supporters. Two horses argent, each gorged with a chaplet of laurel proper.

Motto. " Magistratus indicat virum."

LOON, Theodore Van (Biog.) a painter of Brussels in the 17th century, whose pieces adorn the churches and public buildings of Rome and Venice.

LOPES (Her.) the name of a family of Devonshire, which derives its immediate origin from Morat Lopes, of the island of Jamaica, esq. whose ancestors resided there for more than a century. Sir Manasseh-Masseh Lopes, their descendant, was created a baronet in 1805. Their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Azure, a chevron or, charged with five barrulets gules, between three eagles rising of the second; on a chief of the second five lozenges of the first.

Crest. A lion sejant ermine, doubly collared gules, supporting a lozenge azure.

LOPEZ, John (Ecc.) a cardinal and archbishop of Capua, was born at Valentia, promoted successively to the sees of Perusia and Capua, created a cardinal by Alexander VI in 1496, and died in 1501 of poison, as is suspected, administered by Cæsar Borgia, who was jealous of the ascendancy he had over the pope.

Lopez, de Castaneda Ferdinand (Biog.) a Portuguese of the 16th century, was the author of ' Historia do Descubrimento e Conquista da India par los Portuguesses,' Conembria, 1552. It was translated into the French by Nicholas de Grouchi, and published at Paris in 2 vols. fol. 1553, and at Antwerp in 1554. The English translation was printed at London in 1582, and the Italian translation at Venice in 1678.

Lopez, de Gomara, Francis, a Spanish priest and historian of Seville in the 16th century, was the author of ' Historia General de las Indias,' fol. Medina, 1553; the French translation was published in 8vo. in 1606; the Italian at Venice in 1560 and 1565. 2. ' Descripcion y Traza de todas las Indias,' 8vo. Antwerp, 1553.

Lopez de Vega, vide Vega.

LORENZETTI, Ambrose (Biog.) a painter of Rome and disciple of the famous Giotto, who died at the age of 83 in the 14th century, was the first who represented rain and tempests in his paintings.

LORENZINI (Biog.) or Laurentini, Francis Maria, an Italian poet, was born at Rome in 1680, and died in 1743, leaving some Italian poems, which have been printed at Milan, Venice, Florence, Naples, &c. His Latin and Sacred Dramas were published separately at Rome, and his other Latin poetry among those of the academicians of the Arcadi.

LORERIO, Dionysius (Biog.) a native of Benevento, and a cardinal, was placed in the sacred college by Paul III in 1539, after having been employed by him as nuncio in Scotland. He died in 1542.

LORIT, Henry (Biog.) a scholar, otherwise called Glareanus, from Glaris, a town of Switzerland, his native place, was born in 1488, and died in 1563, at the age of 75, leaving, 1. ' Isagoge in Arithmeticam.' 2. ' Descriptio de Situ Helvetiæ,' &c. 3. ' De quatuor Helvetiorum Fœdere Panegyricon.' 4. ' Isagoge in Musicam.' 5. ' De Geographia Liber.' 6. ' De Ponderibus ac Mensuris.' 7. ' Elegiarum Libri duo;' besides Annotations on Ovid, Horace, Livy, Valerius, Suetonius, Lucan, Eutropius, &c.

LORME, Philibert de (Biog.) master of the works to the French king, and a native of Lyons, who died in 1557, was the author of 'Nouvelles Inventions pour bien bastir et à petit Frais,' fol. Paris, 1561, and Ten Books of Architecture, fol. 1568.

LORN, Marquis of (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the duke of Argyle.

LORRAIN, Robert le (Biog.) a sculptor of Paris, was born in 1666, and died in 1743, leaving, as specimens of his skill, the famous tomb of cardinal Richelieu, in the Sorbonne, which he executed in conjunction with Noulisson; besides several pieces in the episcopal palace of Saverne. His Galatea is reckoned his chef d'œuvre.

LORRAINE (Hist.) vide Guise.

LORRAINE (Geog.) a province of France which now forms the departments of Meurte, Moselle, and Vosges.

Boundaries and Extent. It is bounded on the N. by Luxemburg and Treves, E. by Alsace and Deux Ponts, S. by Franche Comte, and W. by Champagne and Bar.

Principal Towns. Nanci, Metz, Toul, Verdun, Pont-a-Mousson, Mirecourt, Bar-le-Duc, &c.

Principal Rivers. The Moselle, Macse, Sarre, Meurte, Seille, &c.

History. Lorraine, formerly a sovereign duchy, called in the Latin of the middle ages Lotharingia, comprehended a part of the Gallia Belgica of the ancients, and derived its name from Lothaire, the third son of the emperor Lothaire, who obtained this province for his share, whence it was called Lothaire, or Lorraine. At the death of this Lothaire, king of Lorraine, in 869, this kingdom became a subject of contest, and fell into different hands. In 1089 Lower Lorraine was occupied as a duchy by Godfrey of Bouillon, and in 1048 Gerard of Alsace received from the emperor Upper Lorraine as a duchy, from whom the family of Lorraine took their immediate rise. In 1662 Charles III, duke of Lorraine, ceded to Louis XIV the propriety and sovereignty of his duchy of Lorraine and Bar.

LORRAINE (Her.) the name of a family which traces its origin from Robert, an officer in the army of William the Conqueror, who, for his military services, both in England and Scotland, against king Malcolm, was rewarded with lands in the county of Durham. Some of this family have been Knights Templars, as may be seen in the Temple Church, and sir Thomas Lorraine, his descendant, was created a baronet in 1664; their arms, &c. are as follow:

Arms. Quarterly, sable and argent, a plain cross, counter-quartered of the field.

Crest. A laurel tree couped, two branches sprouting out proper, and fixed to the lower part thereof with a belt gules, edged and buckled or, which, according to tradition in the family, was granted for some action in the field.

Motto. "Lauro scutoque resurgo."

LORRAINE, Claude of (Biog.) vide Claude.

LORRIS, William de (Biog.) a French poet of the 13th century, was the author of the 'Roman de la Rose,' a poem much in request in the middle ages, and known in this country by Chaucer's translation. Of the early editions of this poem, Brunet and other French bibliographers give an ample account.

LORRY, Anne Charles (Biog.) a French physician, was born at Crosny, near Paris, in 1725, and died in 1783, leaving, 1. 'Essai sur l'Usage des Alimens pour servir de Commentaire aux Livres diététique d'Hippocrate,' 12mo. Paris, 1753; the second part of which appeared in 1757. 2. An edition of the Aphorisms of Hippocrates, Gr. and Lat. 1759. 3. 'De Melancholia et Morbis Melancholicis,' 2 vols. 8vo. 1765. 4. An edition of Dr. Astruc's 'Memoires pour servir à l'Histoire de la Faculté de Medicine de Montpellier,' 4to. ibid. 1767. 5. 'Sanctorii de Medicina Statica,' &c. 12mo. 1770. 6. 'Tractatus de Morbis Cutaneis,' 4to. Paris. 1777; besides editing a Latin edition of Mead's works, and a French one of Barker's 'Dissertation on the Conformity of the Doctrines of Ancient and Modern Medicine.'

LORT, Michael (Biog.) an English divine, descended from an ancient family in Pembrokeshire, was born in 1725, educated at Cambridge, and died in 1790, leaving 'A short Commentary on the Lord's Prayer,' &c. 8vo. 1790; besides communications to the Gentleman's Magazine, &c.

LORTON, Viscount (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of King [vide King]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. King, viscount Lorton, baron Eris of Boyle.

Arms, &c. vide Kingston.

LOT (Bibl.) לוֹט, son of Haran, and nephew of Abraham, who followed his uncle from Ur, and afterwards from Haran, to settle in Canaan, A. M. 2082, A. C. 1922. He was afterwards saved by God himself from the destruction which awaited the Sodomites, among whom he dwelt. Gen. xi. &c.

LOTHAIRE (Hist.) the name of some emperors and kings.

Emperors of this Name.

LOTHAIRE I, son of Louis the Debonnaire, was partner on the throne of Germany with his father in 817, made king of Lombardy in 820, and after being defeated at the battle of Fontenai by his brothers Louis and Charles, who resisted his claims to the French dominions, he abdicated the crown, retired to a monastery in Ardennes, and died in 855. The effigy of this emperor is given as in the annexed figure.

LOTHAIRE II, duke of Saxony, son of Gebhard, count of Amsberg, was elected emperor of Germany in 1126, after an interregnum of three years and upwards, and died in 1137. He is said to have introduced the custom of the emperors kissing the feet of the popes at their coronation. Otho Frising. l. 4; Pet. Mont. Cassin. in Chron.

Kings of this Name.

LOTHAIRE, king of France, son of Louis IV, succeeded his father in 954, and died of poison in 986, administered, as was said, by Emma, daughter of Lothaire, king of Italy. The effigy of this king is given as in the annexed figure. Aimon. Hist. in Contin.; Flodoard. Hist.; Dupleix; Mezerai Hist.; P. Anselme, &c.

LOTHAIRE, king of Lorraine, son of the emperor Lothaire I, put away his wife Thietberga, in order to marry his mistress Valdrade; but was compelled, in consequence of the interference of Nicholas I, to take her back. He afterwards assisted his brother Louis I, and the pope Adrian II, against the Saracens, and died in 869.

LOTHAIRE, son of Hugh, king of Arles, was made king of Italy by his father in 932, reigned conjointly with him until 945, and alone until 953 or 950.

LOTHIAN, William, third Earl of (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, took part with the covenanters on the breaking out of the rebellion in Scotland; joined the army that invaded England; and took possession of Newcastle, of which his lordship was constituted governor. He was afterwards in the service of the king; but was imprisoned on suspicion of treachery. On his release he joined the marquis of Argyll, who was sent against the marquis of Montrose; but when the rebels in England threatened violence to their sovereign, he was one of the commissioners sent to remonstrate, and was in 1649 dispatched to Breda, with the earl of Cassilis, to invite king Charles II into Scotland. His lordship died in 1675.

LOTHIAN, Robert, fourth Earl, and son of the preceding, served with distinction as a volunteer in the Dutch war, and entering afterwards heartily into the revolution he became a Privy Councillor to king William, was constituted Justice General, and represented the king as High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in 1692, and died in 1703.

LOTHIAN, William, fourth Marquis of, entering early into a military life, acted as aide-de-camp to the duke of Cumberland at the battle of Fontenoy in 1745, where he was severely wounded with a musket-ball in the head; and after serving with distinction on the continent under Marlborough, and elsewhere, died in 1775, at the age of 65.

LOTHIAN, Marquis of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Kerr [vide Kerr]; which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Kerr, marquis of Lothian, earl of Lothian and Ancrum, viscount of Brien, lord Kerr of Newbottle, Jedburgh, &c.

Arms. Quarterly, first and fourth azure, the sun in its splendour proper, as a coat of augmentation; second and third gules, on a chevron argent, three mullets of the field for Kerr.

Crest. The sun in its splendour.

Supporters. Dexter, an angel with wings displayed proper; sinister, an unicorn argent, unguled, maned, and horned or, collared gules.

Motto. "Sero sed serio."

LOTICHIUS, Peter (Biog.) surnamed Secundus, a modern Latin poet, and native of Hanau, was born in 1528, and died in 1560, leaving a collection of Latin poems, published in 1561, and often reprinted: the completest edition is said to be that published at Amsterdam, in 2 vols. 4to. 1754.

LOTICHIUS, Christian, a younger brother of the preceding, and also a poet, left some pieces which were published in 1620, along with those of his kinsman John Peter Lotichius.

LOTICHIUS, John Peter, the kinsman of Christian above-mentioned, and a physician, who died in 1652, was the author of 'Conciliorum et Observationum Medicinalium, &c.;' 'Latin Poems;' and 'A Commentary on Petronius,' &c. A History of the Emperors Ferdinand II and III, in four volumes, is attributed to him.

LOTOPHAGI (Geog.) Λωτοφάγοι, a people of Ethiopia, near the Syrtes, so called from their subsisting on the lotus. Hom. Odyss. l. 9; Herod. l. 4; Strab. l. 17; Mel. l. 1; Ptol. l. 4.

LOVAT, Simon, twelfth Lord (Hist.) of the family of Fraser, mentioned under Heraldry [vide Fraser], signed the association in 1740, to support the claims of prince Charles to the throne of England, from whom he received the commission of Lieutenant-general and General of the Highlands; and on the invasion of the chevalier in 1745 he sent his eldest son and his followers to join his standard; for which he was in 1746 taken into custody, and being after a trial found guilty of high treason, was beheaded on Tower-Hill in 1747, in the 80th year of his age.

LOUBERE, Simon de la (Biog.) a French poet, was born in 1642, of a very respectable family at Toulouse, and died in 1729, leaving Songs, Vaudevilles, Madrigals, &c.; besides which he wrote a Voyage to Siam, in 2 vols. 12mo.; and Traité de la Resolution des Equations,' 4to. 1729, &c. His Voyage to Siam was translated into English, and published in folio in 1693.

LOUDOHN (Hist.) or Laudahn, Gideon Ernest, an Austrian general and field-marshal, descended from a Scotch family, was born at Tootzen in 1716, and died in 1790, after having attained by a series of successes and valiant exploits to the highest rank and distinction in the Austrian army.

LOUDON, John, first Earl of (Hist.) of the family of Campbell, mentioned under Heraldry, took an active part in the troubles of the times, he being one of the commissioners from the Scotch army who settled the pacification of Berwick with Charles I in 1639, and one of the commissioners sent to London in 1640, when he was committed to the Tower by the king's order, on account of a letter signed by him and other noblemen to the king of France, imploring his assistance; and a warrant was sent for his execution without a trial, which was prevented from being carried into effect by the marquis of Hamilton. He was afterwards sent with the earls of Lauderdale and Lanark to treat with the king in the Isle of Wight in 1647; entered into the engagement for his rescue in 1648; joined in the effort made in favour of Charles II in 1650; and died in 1668.

LOUDON, Hugh, third Earl of, held several offices in the reigns of Charles II, James II, Anne, and George I, and died in 1731.

LOUDON, John, fourth Earl of, choosing the military profession, distinguished himself at the battle of Preston on the side of the existing government, in whose service he had raised a regiment of Highlanders. He was, in addition to other appointments, constituted in 1756 general and Commander-in-Chief of all his majesty's forces in America, recalled in 1757, and died in 1782.

LOUDON, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Campbell [vide Campbell]; which, with their arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Campbell, earl of Loudon, baron Campbell of Loudoun, &c.

Arms. Gironny of eight, the paternal coat of Campbell gules and ermine, being the tinctures of Crawford of Loudon, who bore gules, a fess ermine.

Crest. An eagle displayed with two heads within a flame of fire.

Supporters. Dexter, a man armed at all points, holding a spear proper; sinister, a lady richly apparelled, holding in her hand a letter missive.

Motto. "I bide my time."

LOUDUN (Geog.) a town of France, in Poictou, which was called in Latin Juliodunum, or, according to some, Castrum Lausdunum.

LOVE, Christopher (Hist.) a presbyterian, and native of Cardiff, was born in 1618, educated at Oxford, and after having assisted the rebels by his preaching and discourse on their scheme to overturn the government in church and state, he turned royalist in opposition to the Usurper, and was beheaded in 1651, on a charge of holding a secret correspondence with the enemies of Cromwell's government.

LOVE, James (Biog.) an actor and dramatic writer, who assumed this name from his wife's, De l'Amour, was the son of Mr. Dance, the city surveyor, and builder of the Mansion-house. He died in 1774, leaving, among his dramatic pieces enumerated in the 'Biographica Dramatica,' a comedy, entitled 'Pamela.'

LOVEL and HOLLAND, Francis, Lord (Hist.) of the Perceval family [vide Perceval and Egmont], notwithstanding the attachment of his father to the House of Lancaster, grew up into great favour with that of York, and adventured his life for Richard III at the battle of Bosworth Field; from which, contriving to make his escape to Flanders, he was sent over by Margaret, duchess of Burgundy, with 2000 stout soldiers, to assist John de la Pole, and all the power of that party which was upholding Lambert Simnel, with the view to dethrone Henry; but being defeated at the battle of Stoke, near Newark upon Trent, 3 Henry VII, he perished in that fight, or soon after, whereupon he was attainted, and his whole estate confiscated.

LOVELACE, Richard (Hist.) a poet and a loyalist, who was born in 1618, and died in 1658, consumed all his substance in support of the royal cause, for which he also suffered a long imprisonment. His poems were published in 1659, under the title of 'Lucasta;' besides which he wrote two plays, entitled 'The Scholar,' a comedy; and 'The Soldier,' a tragedy.

LOUGHBOROUGH, William, Lord (Hist.) Lord Chancellor. [Vide Rosslyn]

LOUGHBOROUGH, Lord (Her.) the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Rosslyn.

LOVIBOND, Edward (Biog.) a modern poet, who died in 1775, left several pieces, which were collected into a volume after his death; besides the papers in the World, Nos. 82, 93, 94, 132, and 134.

LOUIS (Hist.) or Lewis, the name of some emperors and kings.

Emperors of this Name.

LOUIS I, surnamed the Debonnaire, or Pious, son of Charlemagne and Hildegarde, was born in 778, crowned king of Aquitania in 781, and emperor of the West in 816, and died in 840, after having been stripped of his crown by his unnatural children, who rebelled against him, and forced him into a monastery. The effigy of this and the following emperor are given as in the annexed figures. Aimon. Hist.; Ado. in Chron.; Mezerai; Le Pere Anselme, &c.

LOUIS II, surnamed the Stammerer, was born in 843; made king of Aquitania in 866; succeeded his father, Charles the Bald, in 877; and was said by some to have been crowned emperor, because the pope, John VIII, wished him to be raised to the empire; but it is most generally believed that he never went through any other ceremony of coronation except as king of France. He died in 879.

Kings of France.

LOUIS I, emperor and king, vide Louis I and II, Emperors.

LOUIS III, succeeded his father Louis II, on the throne of France, which he shared with his brother Carloman, and dying in 882 he left his brother, with whom he had lived in perfect amity, sole monarch. The effigies of this and the following kings are given as in the annexed figures.

LOUIS IV, surnamed Outremer, or Transmarine, because he resided 13 years in England, son of Charles the Simple, succeeded Raoul as king of France in 937, engaged in a war with the duke of Normandy, by whom he was taken prisoner, and died in 954, when he was succeeded by Lothaire.

LOUIS V, surnamed the Idle, succeeded his father Lothaire in 983 or 986, and was poisoned in 987, as he was preparing to engage in a war against the Saracens. He was the last of the second race of Carlovingian kings who sat on the French throne, and was succeeded by Hugh Capet.

LOUIS VI, surnamed the Fat, was born in 1081, succeeded his father Philip I in 1108, and died in 1137, after having been engaged in many wars, particularly with Henry I of England, respecting the possession of Normandy.

LOUIS VII, surnamed the Young, was born in 1120, succeeded his father Louis VI in 1137, and died in 1180, after having been engaged in an unsuccessful warfare with the Saracens, and been taken prisoner by the Greeks. In consequence of the marriage of Eleanor, his divorced wife, with Henry II of England, the territories of Poitou and Guienne, to which she was heiress, became the property of her new lord, and created many wars between the English and French.

LOUIS VIII, surnamed the Lion, on account of his valour, was born in 1187, succeeded his father Philip II in 1223, and died in 1226, after having successfully waged war with the English, from whom he took Limousin, Perigord, Aunis, &c. and also against the Albigenses. He was succeeded by LOUIS IX, surnamed the Saint, son of Louis VIII and the beautiful Blanche of Castille, who was born in 1215, succeeded his father when he was only eleven years and a half old, under the regency of his mother, by whom the kingdom was governed with great wisdom and vigour. He early engaged in the crusades, in consequence of a vow he had made during an illness; but, after some partial successes, his army was thinned by disease, and he himself was taken prisoner by the Saracens. Nevertheless, on obtaining his release, and settling the affairs of his kingdom, he embarked on a second crusade, which proved fatal both to his army and himself. He died of the contagious disorder in his camp in 1270, and was canonized by Boniface VIII in 1297.

LOUIS X, surnamed Hutin, king of France and Navarre, was crowned king of Navarre by right of his mother Joan in 1307, succeeded his father Philip IV on the throne of France in 1314, and died in 1316, at the age of 26, after having recalled the Jews to his kingdom.

LOUIS XI, son of Charles VII, was born at Bourges in 1423, succeeded his father, to whom he had been a rebellious son, in 1461, and died in 1483, after an odious reign, by which he acquired the title of the Tiberius of France.

LOUIS XII, surnamed the Just, son of Charles, duke of Orleans, was born in 1462, succeeded Charles VIII in the collateral line in 1497, and died in 1515, after having displayed more virtues as a king than as a warrior.

LOUIS XIII, king of France and Navarre, was born in 1601, succeeded his father Henry IV in 1610, and died in 1642; after a reign rendered memorable by the intrigues of cardinal Richelieu, and the wars occasioned by the Huguenots, under the pretence of religion.

LOUIS XIV, surnamed the Great, son of Louis XIII and Anne of Austria, was born in 1638, and succeeded his father when he was only four years old, and died in 1715, after a reign of 73 years, in which he had seen four kings in Sweden, four in Denmark, five in Portugal, five in Poland, three in Spain, four in England, three emperors, and nine popes. His reign has been rendered memorable by the martial exploits which were performed by his own generals Enghien, Turenne, and Luxemburgh; and also by those of his opponents Marlborough and Eugene; and no less so by that act of his domestic policy, the revocation of the edict of Nantes, which drove 50,000 families out of his dominions.

Louis XV, son of the duke of Burgundy, was born in 1710, succeeded his great-grandfather Louis XIV in 1715, and died in 1774, after a reign of 59 years, during which France was engaged in long wars, that added little to her prosperity.

Louis XVI, son of the dauphin, and of Mary Josephine of Saxony, was born in 1754, ascended the throne of France in 1774, and perished on the scaffold in 1793, by the hands of his rebellious subjects, who had already overturned the throne and the altar.

King of Spain.

Louis, the son of Philip V, was born in 1707, succeeded on the abdication of his father in 1724; but died the same year of the small-pox.

Dauphins and other French Princes of this Name.

Louis, the Dauphin, the eldest and only remaining son of Louis XIV, and Maria Theresa, of Austria, was born at Fontainbleau in 1661, and died in 1711, after having taken an active and distinguished part in the military wars that were carried on during that period.

Louis, the Dauphin, and son of the preceding, was born in 1682, and died in 1712, after having also distinguished himself in the field with his father.

Louis of France, Duke of Orleans, second son of Charles V, king of France, was born in 1371, and assassinated in 1407, by means of the duke of Burgundy, after having had a great share in the government of the kingdom during the reign of his brother Charles VI.

Louis I, Duke of Bourbon, signalized himself at the battle of Furnes against the Flemish, in 1297, and on other occasions, particularly against the English, from whom he took Agen, Monsegur, &c. and died in 1341.

Louis II, Duke of Bourbon, was one of the hostages sent into England for the delivery of John, king of France, and died in 1410, after having distinguished himself in different battles.

Louis of Bourbon, one of the French princes, was taken prisoner at the battle of Agincourt, but escaping from his captivity in 1422, was employed in many important negotiations, and died in 1446.

Louis, vide Bourbon, Conde, and Vendome.

Louis (Her.) the name of a family in Devonshire, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1806 on admiral sir Thomas Louis, for his distinguished services in sir John Duckworth's squadron off the island of St. Domingo. The arms, &c. of this family are as follow:

'A Commentary on the Prophet Isaiah,' 1714, followed by one 'On Jeremiah,' 1718; 'On Ezekiel,' 1723; 'On Daniel and the Minor Prophets,' 1726; all published in 4to. and republished together in folio. 4. 'The Characters of an Apostolical Church fulfilled in the Church of England, and our Obligations to continue in the Communion of it.'

LOWTHER (Her.) the name of a family of great antiquity in the county of Westmoreland, where it has flourished beyond the period of any record that is extant. The first of this family that was ennobled was sir John Lowther, bart. who, in 1696, was advanced to the dignities of viscount and baron, by the style and title of viscount Lonsdale, and baron Lowther, which titles became extinct at the death of Henry, the third viscount; but James Lowther, of a junior branch of the same family, was, in 1784, created a peer of Great Britain, by the titles of baron Lowther, of Lowther, co. Westmoreland, baron of the barony of Kendal, and baron of the barony of Burgh, co. Cumberland; viscount of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, and co. Palatine of Lancaster, and viscount of Lowther, and earl of Lonsdale; and in 1797, he was moreover created baron and viscount Lowther, of Whitehaven, &c.; all which titles became extinct at his death, except the two last, which devolved on sir William Lowther, bart. a descendant from another branch of the same family, who succeeded as second viscount Lowther; and in 1807, was advanced to the dignity of earl of Lonsdale. [Vide Lonsdale]

LOWTHER, Viscount, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Lonsdale.

LOYOLA, Ignatius de S. (Ecc.) the founder of the order of the Jesuits, was born of a respectable family at Loyola, in Spain, in 1491, and after having engaged in a military life, and had his leg fractured by a cannon-ball at the siege of Pampeluna in 1521, he made a vow to renounce the world, to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and devote himself to the service of God. He dedicated his arms to the Virgin at Montserrat, and after performing his pilgrimage, which was attended with many adventures, he repaired to Paris in 1528, where he associated seven others with himself, who made a vow to enter on a new and more rigorous course of life. This number was afterwards increased to ten, which gradually increased into a religious order, and assumed the name of the Society of Jesus, receiving confirmation by Paul III. Loyola was created their general, under whose directions they spread themselves over the world, to convert infidels and heretics, and professedly with a view to promote religion and good morals. The order was again confirmed in 1550; but lost their first general Loyola by death in 1556, 35 years after his conversion, and 16 after the foundation of the society, which at that period amounted to 10,581, and in 1679 to 17,655; but at length the Jesuits growing formidable, not only by their numbers but by their talents and intrigues, Clement XIV found it expedient in 1773 to yield to the pressing solicitations of the House of Bourbon, and to issue a bull for their suppression. [Vide Plate XX]

LUBBERT, Sibrand (Biog.) a German divine, was born at Langoworde, in Friesland, about 1556, and died in 1625, leaving several pieces against Bellarmin, Socinus, Arminius, Vorstius, and Grotius; among others, one entitled 'De Papa Romano,' 8vo. 1594.

LUBBOCK (Her.) the name of a family of Norfolk, which enjoys the dignity and title of a baronet, conferred in 1806 on sir John Lubbock; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. On a mount vert, a heron close ermine, chief gules; charged with etoiles argent.

Crest. A heron with wings endorsed ermine, supporting an antique shield azure, bordered or, charged with a lion rampant.

LUBECK (Geog.) a free city in the north of Germany, adjacent to the duchy of Holstein, and situated on the banks of the Trave, 33 miles N. Lauenburg, 36 N.E. Hamburgh, and 149 S. by W. Copenhagen. Lon. 10° 50′ E. lat. 53° 56′ N.

History of Lubeck.

Lubeck, called in the Latin of the middle ages Lubeca, or Lubecum, was built by Adolphus, count of Holstein, in the reign of Conrad III, and afterwards obtained various privileges. In 1161, the episcopal see was transferred from Oldenburg to this city, which at different times suffered much by fire, and the inroads of the neighbouring states. In 1209 it shook off the Danish yoke, to which it had been subject; in 1231 it was consumed by fire, but was rebuilt soon after, with additional strength and beauty; in 1220 it was declared a free imperial city; and in 1241 it entered into a treaty with Hamburgh, which laid the foundation of the Hanseatic League. This treaty has, under various modifications and changes, subsisted between the three cities Lubeck, Hamburgh, and Bremen, till the present age. In 1806 Lubeck suffered from the French, in common with the other parts of the North of Germany, particularly on the defeat of the Prussians at Jena, when Blucher, throwing himself into this city in his retreat, did not surrender until after a sanguinary conflict. It continued to be exposed to the exactions of the French until the overthrow of Bonaparte, after which it was declared free by the congress of Vienna, and along with the other free towns, sends a deputy to the diet. Lubeck was the birth-place of Mosheim, and of sir Godfrey Kneller.

LUBIN, S. (Ecc.) bishop of Chartres, in the sixth century, and a native of Poitiers, was raised to the see of Chartres in 1544, by king Childebert, assisted at the fifth council of Orleans in 549, and at the eleventh of Paris in 551, and died in 556.

LUBIN, Eilhard (Biog.) a Protestant, and native of Oldenburg, was born in 1556, and died in 1621, leaving, 1. 'Antiquarius, sive Priscorum et minus Usitatorum Vocabulorum brevis et dilucida Interpretatio,' &c. 12mo. and 8vo. 2. 'Clavis Græcæ Linguæ,' &c. 12mo. et 8vo. 3. An edition of Anacreon, Juvenal, and Persius, with notes; of Horace, and Juvenal, with a paraphrase; of the Anthologia, with a Latin version, 4to. 1604. 4. 'Epistolæ veterum Græcorum Gr. et Lat.' &c. 5. 'Monotessaron, sive Historia Evangelica,' &c. 6. 'Nonni Dionysiaca,' Gr. et Lat. 8vo. Francof. 1605. 7. 'Poemata,' inserted in the third volume of the 'Deliciæ Poetarum Germanorum.' 8. 'Phosphorus de Prima Causa et Natura Mali, Tractatus Hypermetaphysicus,' &c. 8vo. et 12mo.

LUBIN, Augustin, an Augustine friar, and geographer to the French king, was born at Paris in 1624, and died in 1695, leaving, 1. 'Martyrologium Romanum, cum Tabulis Geographicis,' &c. 4to. Paris. 1660. 2. 'Tabulæ Sacræ Geographicæ, sive Notitia Antiqua,' &c. 8vo. Paris. 1670. 3. 'Tables Geographiques,' 12mo. Paris, 1670. 4. 'Orbis Augustianus, sive Conventuum Ordinis Eremitarum S. Augustini Chorographica et Topographica Descriptio,' 12mo. Paris. 1672. 5. 'Index Geographicus, sive in Annales Usserianos Tabulæ,' &c. annexed to the edition of Usher's Annals, published at Paris in folio, 1673. 6. 'Mercure Geographique,' 12mo. Paris, 1678.

LUCA, John Baptist (Ecc.) a cardinal and native of Venozza, was created a cardinal by Innocent XI in 1681, and died in 1683, at the age of 66, leaving, among his works as an author, 'Annotationes ad Concilium Tridentinum;' 'Relatio Curiæ Romanæ,' also published, in Italian at Rome in 1680; 'Theatrum Justitiæ et Veritatis;' the best and last edition of which is said to be in 21 vols. fol. bound, in 12.

LUCA (Geog.) now Lucca, a city of Etruria, at the west of the river Arnus. Cic. ad Fam. l. 13; Liv. l. 21.

LUCAN (Hist.) vide Lucanus.

LUCAN, Patrick, Earl of, a general in the army of James II, whose military skill and address obliged king William to raise the siege of Limerick. He was afterwards killed at the battle of Laudan in Flanders.

LUCAN, Earl of (Her.) one of the titles enjoyed by the family of Bingham [vide Bingham], which, with the arms, &c. are as follow:

Titles. Bingham, earl of Lucan, and baron of Castlebar, and a baronet of Nova Scotia.

Arms. Azure, a bend cottised between six crosses pattee or.

Crest. A hawk with wings expanded proper, on a mount vert, beaked and legged or.

—— Amat insani
Bellua ponti, Lucæque boves.

It was also famous for its grapes. Liv. l. 8; Strab. l. 6; Mel. l. 2; Plin. l. 3.

LUCANUS, Marcus Annæus (Hist.) a Roman poet, who rose by the favour of the emperor Nero to the posts of augur and quæstor; but being imprudently lead to engage in a poetical contest with his imperial patron, his decided superiority provoked the jealousy and affronts of the latter, which the poet resented by entering into the conspiracy with Piso. On the discovery of the plot, Lucan was left to choose the manner of his death, and had his veins opened in a warm-bath, in the 26th year of his age, A. D. 65. Of all his compositions, nothing remains but his Pharsalia; the best editions of which are those of Oudendorp, 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1728; of Bentley, 4to. printed at Strawberry Hill, 1760; and of Barbou, 12mo. Paris. 1767. The first edition was published by Sweynheym and Pannartz in folio, 1469; and three English translations have been published by Gorges, May, and Rowe. In the British Museum are no less than five editions of this poet, enriched with the MS. notes of Bentley. Tacit. Ann. l. 15; Martial. l. 7, ep. 20; Quintil. l. 10.

LUCANUS, Ocellus (Biog.) a Pythagorean philosopher, but of what age is not known, who wrote a book in the Attic dialect on the nature of the universe, which he considered eternal. This work was first translated into Latin by Nogarola, and the original, with the commentary of C. Emman. Vizzanius, was published in 4to. Bonon. 1646.

LUCAS, Tudensis (Ecc.) bishop of Tude, or Tuy, in Gallicia, in the 13th century, was the author of a History of Spain, from Adam to the year 1236, also of a Life of Isidorus of Seville, and of a work against the Albigenses.

LUCAS, Lord (Her.) the title commonly enjoyed by the eldest son of the earl de Grey.

LUCAS, van Leyden (Biog.) vide Jacobs.

LUCAS, Francis, an orientalist, surnamed Brugensis, who died in 1619, was the author of 'Annot. in Bibl. Sac.;' 'Itiner. Jes. Chris. ex IV Evangel.;' 'Notæ ad Varias Lectiones in Evangel. Lib. II.

LUCAS, Richard, an English divine, and native of Radnorshire, was born in 1648, educated at Oxford, and died in 1715, leaving 'Practical Christianity;' 'An Enquiry after Happiness;' 'The Morality of the Gospel,' &c.

LUCAS, Paul, a French traveller, was born at Rouen in 1664, and died in 1737, leaving an Account of his Travels, which were edited by Baudelot de Dairval, &c. and published in 7 vols. 12mo. 1699—1714.

LUCCA (Geog.) a city of Italy, capital of duchy of the same name situated in a fertile plain watered by the Serchio, 19 miles N. N. E. Leghorn, and 28 W. Florence. Lon. 10° 30′ E. lat. 43° 50′ N.

History of Lucca.

Lucca, called by the Latins Luca, was besieged by Justinian in the sixth century; after which it fell into the hands of different masters until the 15th century, when it was formed into an independent state, and retained its independence until the usurpation of Bonaparte; since his downfal it has been erected by the congress of Vienna into a duchy, and given to the Infanta of Spain, Maria Louisa. The city is an archbishop's see suffragan, as is said, of the Holy See.

LUCCEIUS, L. (Biog.) an historian in the time of Julius Cæsar, and son of Quintus, was the author of a History of the Marsic War, and the Civil Wars of Marius and Sylla. Nothing remains of his composition but a consolatory Letter to Cicero on the Death of his Daughter Tullia. Cic. ad Fam. l. 5, ep. 12, &c.; Cæs. de Bell. Gall. l. 3.

LUCCHESINI, John Vincent (Biog.) an Italian ecclesiastic, of a noble family, was born at Lucca in 1660, and died in 1744, leaving a Latin version of Demosthenes, and a History of his own Times, in 3 vols. 4to.

LUCERNE (Geog.) a town and canton lying almost in the heart of Switzerland, and surrounded by those of Zurich, Schweitz, and Unterwalden. The canton is watered by the Reuss, Entlen, Weger, Wyna, Sur, and the Eschenbach; and contains several small lakes, as the Sempach, Mauen, Reichen, and the Red Lake; but the Lake of Lucerne, which is also called the Lake Waldstadt, lies between the cantons of Unterwalden, Lucerne, Schweitz, and Uri.

History of Lucerne.

Authors are not agreed respecting the origin of the town of Lucerne, but it is most generally supposed to have been built by the house of Austria. Pepin gave it to the abbot of Morbach, whose successors were lords of the city, and adjacent territory, until the time of Albert I, who, wishing to bring Switzerland under his dominion, exercised much oppression towards the people. Lucerne then formed a league in 1332 with the cantons of Uri, Schweitz, and Underwald, which terminated in their securing the independence of the whole country.

LUCIA, St. (Geog.) one of the windward Caribbee islands in the West Indies, 27 miles long, and 12 broad; the northern extremity of which is 21 miles S. Martinico. Lon. 60° 51′ W. lat. 14° 0′ N. The English first settled in this island in 1637, but were expelled during the rebellion by the natives, when the French attempted to form a settlement there, but were all murdered by the Caribbees. After this, different unsuccessful attempts were made by the rival powers to occupy this island, which was in a formal manner ceded to France in 1763. Since that period it has been more than once taken, and restored by the English.

LUCIAN (Biog.) vide Lucianus.

LUCIANUS, St. (Ecc.) a priest of Antioch, suffered martyrdom during the persecution of Diocletian, and was thrown into the sea with a stone round his neck, A. D. 311. S. Athanas. Synop.; Euseb. Hist. l. 8, &c.; Sozomenes; Theodoret, &c.

LUCIANUS (Biog.) a Greek writer of Samosata, the capital of Comagene, was born in the reign of Trajan, and died at the age of 90, A. D. 180, or, according to some, 214. The best editions of his works are those of Bourdelot, fol. Paris. 1615; of Grævius, 2 vols. 8vo. Amst. 1687; of Hemsterhuisius, 4 vols. 4to. ibid. 1743; to which the preference is given above the other two. The original Greek of Lucian was first printed in 1496 at Florence.

LUCIFER (Bibl.) הילל, the name of the devil, who from pride rebelled against God. Isai. xiv. 12.

LUCIFER (Myth.) the son of Jupiter and Aurora, who was taken for the morning star now called Venus. Virg. Æn. l. 2, v. 801.

LUCIFER (Ecc.) bishop of Cagliari, the metropolitan see of Sardinia, distinguished himself in the reign of Constantius by the zeal with which he defended Athanasius against the accusations and oppressions of his enemies. His warmth, however at the council of Milan offended the emperor, who sent him into exile. He afterwards died in Sardinia about 370, leaving some works remarkable for their violence, which were published by Sonnius at Paris in 1568. He is said to have been the author of a schism in the church; the followers of which were called after him Luciferians. S. August. de Hær.; S. Hieron. Catal.; Socrat. Hist. l. 3; Sozomen. l. 5; Ruffin. l. 1; Theodoret, Sulpicius, Severus, &c.

LUCIFERA (Myth.) an epithet of Diana, as the moon.

LUCILIUS, C. (Hist.) a Roman knight, native of Aurunca, and grand uncle of Pompey, lived in the greatest intimacy with Scipio, the first Africanus, whom he accompanied in his war against Numantia. He was no less distinguished as a poet than as a warrior, being considered as the first writer of satires among the Romans. Of the 30 satires which he wrote, about 937 scattered verses remain, which have been collected and published with notes by Fr. Dousa, 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1597, and again by the Vulpii, 8vo. Patav. 1735. Cic. ad Fam. l. 12, ep. 16; Varr. de Re. Rust. l. 3; Horat. l. 1, sat. 4; Juv. Sat. 1; Pers. Sat. 1; Plin. Præf. Hist.; Quintil. l. 1.

LUCILIUS, Lucinus, a Roman, who fled with Brutus after the battle of Philippi, and suffered himself to be wounded, saying he was Brutus. His life was afterwards spared by the clemency of the conqueror. Plut.

LUCILIUS, Bassus, the admiral of Vitellius' fleet, which he betrayed to Vespasian. Tacit. Hist. l. 2, c. 100.

LUCILLA, Domitia (Hist.) daughter of Nigrinus, and wife of L. Ælius, the emperor, was the mother of L. Verus, who was afterwards emperor.

LUCILLA, Annia, the daughter of M. Aurelius, and wife of Lucius Verus, celebrated for her beauty and her vices. She poisoned Verus, her first husband; and, notwithstanding her second marriage with Claudius Pompeianus, a senator, she indulged in an incestuous intercourse with her brother Commodus, by whom she was first banished, and afterwards put to death on a charge of conspiring against his life, A. D. 185, in the 38th year of her life.

LUCILLA (Numis.) medals are extant of both the empresses of this name.

LUCILLA, Annia, had many medals struck in honour of her, bearing her effigy as in the annexed figure; inscriptions LUCILLA AUG. ANTONI. AUG. F. vel LUCILLAE AUG. ANTONINI AUG. F.; also in the Greek ΛΟΥΚΙΛΛΑ CEBαστὴ ANTωνίνυ CEBαστȣ ΘΥγάτηρ, i. e. Lucilla Augusta Antonini Augusti Filia. On the reverse, CERES —CONCORDIA — DIANA LUCIFERA — DOMIN. AUG. MAX.—MATRO. MAGNAE PIETAS —PUDICITIAE — SALUS—SECURITAS—VENERI GENETRICI, &c. The medals of Lucilla Domitia are principally distinguished by the effigy as in the annexed figure. Vaillant. Num. Græc.; Tristan. Comm. Hist.; Patin. Impp.; Beg. Thes. Brand.; Med. Impp. &c.

LUCINA (Myth.) another name for both Juno and Diana.

LUCIUS (Bibl.) a name which occurs twice in the New Testament.

LUCIUS of Cyrene, one of the prophets of the Christian church at Antioch. Acts xiii. According to the Roman martyrology, he suffered martyrdom on the 22d April.

LUCIUS, mentioned as St. Paul's kinsman (Rom. xvi. 21), is supposed by some to be the same as the preceding.

LUCIUS (Hist.) a prænomen common to many Romans.

LUCIUS, a son of Agrippa, who, with his brother Caius, was adopted by his grandfather Augustus. He was sent into Spain with the army, but died afterwards at Marseilles. His effigy is given as in the annexed figure. [Vide Caius.]

LUCIUS, Annius a Roman captain, who was sent by Vespasian against Gerase, took the city, and put all to the sword who could not make their escape. He did the same in the surrounding country.

LUCIUS (Ecc.) the name of three popes.

LUCIUS I, succeeded S. Cornelius, who died in exile in 253, and is supposed to have suffered martyrdom under the emperors Gallus and Volusianus. He was the correspondent of S. Cyprian. S. Cyprian. Epist. 59; Euseb. in Chron. et Hist.; Baron. Annal.; Pearson. in Annal. Cyprian.

LUCIUS II, a native of Bologna, whose family name was Gerard de Caccianemici, was elected pope after Celestin II in 1144, and died next year in consequence of a blow from a stone thrown in a popular commotion.

LUCIUS III, a native of Lucca, named Humbaldo Allincigoli, succeeded Alexander III in 1181, and died at Verona in 1185, after having been twice driven from Rome in consequence of a popular commotion. Genebrard. in Chron.; Baron. Annal.; Onuphrius; Ciaconius, &c.

LUCIUS, the son of Coilus, king of Great Britain, being struck with the lives and faith of the Christians, desired to be baptized, and had this ceremony performed upon him by Fulgatius and Damianus, whom the pope had sent about 183 for that purpose. Bed. Hist. l. 1; Adon. in Chron.; Usser. et Stillingt. Antiq. Brit. Eccles.

LUCIUS, bishop of Adrianople, succeeded Eutropius, who died in exile for the catholic faith in 335, and died in the third banishment, which he suffered on account of his opposition to the Arians. S. Athanas. Ep. ad Monach.; S. Hilar.; Fragm.; Socrat. Hist. l. 2; Sozom. l. 3, &c.; Tillem. Mem. &c.

LUCIUS, an Arian, who was raised to the see of Samosata by means of his partisans, but died abhorred by all the orthodox.

LUCIUS, an Arian, was obtruded by his partisans, of which the emperor Valens was one, on the sea of Alexandria; but was finally driven from that post, after having been guilty of great enormities towards the orthodox Christians. Socrat. l. 3; Sozom. l. 5; Theodoret. l. 4; S. Greg. Nazian.; S. Hieron. in Catal.

LUCIUS, Annæus, a bishop of Mentz in the fourth century, was banished by an assembly of Arians held at Arles in 353, and was strangled by them in the following year

LUCIUS, Pomponius (Biog.) vide Pomponius.

LUCIUS of Patras, a Greek writer, composed metamorphoses in Greek, which were imitated by Lucian. Phot. Cod. 129; Voss. de Hist. Græc. l. 4.

LUCRETIA, gens (Hist.) a Roman family, which was partly patrician, and partly plebeian, comprehending the branches of the Tricipitini, Cinni, Triones, Vespillones, Ofellæ, &c. [Vide Lucretius]

LUCRETIA, a Roman lady, daughter of Lucretius, and wife of Tarquinius Collatinus, is celebrated for her virtue and her misfortunes. Being violated by Sextus, the son of Tarquin, she was unable to bear the reflection of the indignity, to which she had involuntarily been exposed, and stabbed herself in the presence of her husband and father after having informed them of the circumstance. Her death was the signal of revolt, which terminated in the expulsion of the Tarquins, and the abolition of the regal power at Rome, U. C. 244, A. C. 510. Polyb. l. 1; Cic. de Fin. l. 2, c. 20; Dionys. Hal. l. 4; Val. Max. l. 6; Ovid. Fast. l. 2; Martial. l. 1; Aug. de Civ. Dei. l. 1, &c.

LUCRETIA, Gens (Numis.) the coins of this family are marked only with the surnames Trio and Vespillo; as L. LUCRETIUS TRIO—Q. LUCRET. Q. F. VESPILLO, &c. Golz. Fast.; Vaillant. Famil.; Morell. Fam.

LUCRETIUS TRICIPITINUS, Sp. (Hist.) the father of Lucretia above-mentioned, was made consul after the death of Brutus, and died soon after himself. Liv. l. 1.

LUCRETIUS, T. was consul, U. C. 246, A. C. 508, when he defeated the Etrusci, and was after that consul a second time. Liv. l. 2, c. 11, 16.

LUCRETIUS TRICIPITINUS, L. a consul, was successful against the Volsci, whom he routed with great slaughter; and, returning to Rome with great booty, obtained a triumph over the Volsci and Æqui. He was afterwards a military tribune with consular power three several times. Liv. l. 3, &c.

LUCRETIUS FLAVIUS, L. a consul, conquered the Æqui, and afterwards, as a military tribune with consular power, he gained a victory over the Volsinians. Liv. l. 5.

LUCRETIUS, Sp. a plebeian ædile, and afterwards a pretor, was sent into Gaul, and afterwards to Genoa that he might rebuild the town which had been destroyed by Mago, the Carthaginian. He was also sent on an embassy into Africa.

LUCRETIUS, Ofella, a Roman, put to death by Sylla, because he had applied for the consulship without his permission. Plut. in Syll.

LUCRETIUS VESPILLO, Q. a Roman, who killed himself because the inhabitants of Sulmo, over whom he was appointed with a garrison, declared for Cæsar. Cæs. de Bell. Civ. l. 1

LUCRETIUS CARUS, T. (Biog.) a Roman poet, who is said to have destroyed himself in the 44th year of his age, A. C. 54, was the author of a poem entitled 'De Natura Rerum,' which was written whilst he was labouring under a phrenzy, occasioned by some deleterious drug that had been administered to him by his mistress Lucilia. The best editions of his works are that of Creech, 8vo. Oxon. 1695; of Havercamp, 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1725; and of Gilbert Wakefield, 3 vols. 4to. London. Dr. Good, who is said to be the author of the best translation of Lucretius, has reprinted Wakefield's text. Cic. ad Fr. l. 2, ep. 11, Paterc. l. 2; Ovid. Am. l. 1, el. 15; Quintil. l. 3.

LUCRINUS (Geog.) the name of a small lake of Campania, opposite Puteoli, which disappeared on the 30th of September, 1538, in a violent earthquake, which raised on the spot a mountain four miles high.

Horat. l. 2, od. 15.

—— Undique latius

LUCTATIUS CATULUS, C. (Hist.) vide Catulus.

LUCULLUS, Lucius Licinius (Hist.) a Roman general celebrated for his military talent, and his luxurious habits. He was a consul, U. C. 680, A. C. 74, and obtained the most splendid victories over Mithridates, both by sea and land; but rendering himself offensive to the soldiers by his severity and haughtiness, he was recalled, and died in the 67th or 68th year of his life. Cic. pro Arch. c. 4, &c.; Plin. l. 36; Tacit. Annal. l. 6; Appian. in Mithrid.

LUCUMO (Hist.) the name of Tarquinius Priscus, which was afterwards changed into Lucius. Liv. l. 1; Plut. in Rom.; Serv. in Æn. l. 2.

LUD (Bibl.) לוד, fourth son of Shem, Gen. x. 22, who, in the opinion of most writers, peopled Lydia, a province of Asia Minor.

LUDIM (Bibl.) לודים, son of Misraim. Gen. x. 13. According to Josephus the descendants of Ludim, whom he calls Lumæi, had, in his time, been long extinct, having been destroyed in the Æthiopian war. Joseph. Antiq. l. 1, c. 1.

LUDLOW, Edmund (Hist.) a republican chief during the rebellion, of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was born at Maiden-Bradley, in Wiltshire, about 1620, educated at Oxford, and studied at the Temple, with the view to practising at the bar, but was engaged by his father, a member of the Long Parliament, to take up arms against his sovereign, in which he so heartily joined, that he not only fought valiantly to destroy the government of his country, but joined in the vote for the death of his sovereign. He was afterwards engaged in all the intrigues and cabals of the contending parties which were striving for the mastery; and on the restoration sought his safety on the continent, where he died in 1693, notwithstanding that a reward of 300*l* had been offered for his apprehension. [Vide Plate XVIII] After his death came out the 'Memoirs of Edmund Ludlow, Esq.,' printed at Vevay, in the canton of Berne (where he died), in 2 vols. 8vo. 1698; to which a third volume was added in 1699. A French translation of the two first volumes was printed in the same size at Amsterdam. Another edition of the whole was printed in folio at London, 1751.

LUDLOW (Her.) the name of a family, originally of Shropshire, which, according to Camden, was taken from the ancient town of Ludlow. The branch of this family, which settled in Ireland, enjoys the peerage, first conferred on Peter Ludlow, who, in 1755, was created a baron, and in 1760 viscount and earl; the titles, arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Titles. Ludlow, earl Ludlow, viscount Preston, and baron of Ardsalla.

Arms. First and fourth argent, a chevron between three martins' heads erased sable, for Ludlow; second and third or, on a chief sable, three crescents or, for Preston.

Crest. A lion rampant sable, bezanty.

Supporters. Two stags proper, regardant.

Motto. "Spero infestis, metuo secundis."

LUDOLPH, Job (Biog.) a well-known orientalist, was born at Erfurt, in Thuringia, in 1624, of one of the best families in that city, but then in reduced circumstances, and died in 1704, leaving, 1. 'Schola Latinitatis,' &c. 8vo. Goth. 1672. 2. 'Historia Æthiopica,' &c. fol. Francof. 1681. 3. 'Epistola Æthiopice scripta,' fol. 1685; written to the Abyssinians to persuade them to an alliance with the princes of Europe. 4. 'De Bello Turcico feliciter conficiendo,' &c. 4to. Francof. 1686. 5. 'Remarques sur les Pensées Enjouez et Serieux,' &c. 8vo. Leipzig, 1687. 6. 'Epistolæ Samaritanæ Sichemitarum ad Jobum Ludolphum,' 4to. Lips. 1688. 7. 'Specimen Commentarii in Historiam Æthiopicam. 8. 'Confessio Fidei Claudii Regis Æthiopicæ,' &c. 4to.

LUDOLPH, Henry William, nephew of the preceding, was born in 1655, and died in 1710, leaving, 1. 'A Grammar of the Russian Language, which was printed at Oxford in 1696. 2. An edition of the New Testament, in modern Greek, with the ancient Greek in the opposite column, which he caused to be republished in two volumes, for the purpose of being distributed among the Greeks. 3. 'Meditations on Retirement from the World.' 4. 'Meditations upon divers Subjects tending to promote the inward Life of Faith,' &c. 5. 'Reflections on the Present State of the Christian Church,' &c.; all which, with other pieces, were printed together in London in 1712, under the title of his Remains.

LUDWIG, John Peter (Biog.) Chancellor of Magdeburg, and Privy Counsellor to the king of Prussia, who died in 1743, at the age of 73, published 'Scriptores Rerum Germanicarum,' 2 vols.; 'Manuscripta omnis Ævi,' &c. 12 vols. 8vo. &c. &c.

LUDWIG, Christian Theophilus, a botanical writer of Silesia, was born in 1709, and died in 1773, leaving, 1. 'Programma,' 1737. 2. 'Observationes in Methodum Plantarum Sexualem C. Linnæus,' 1737 and 1760. 3. 'Definitiones Plantarum.' 4. 'Aphorismi Botanici,' 1738. 5. 'Institutiones Historico-Physicæ Regni Vegetabilis,' 8vo. 1742 and 1757. 6. 'Ectypa Vegetabilium.'

LUGDUNENSIS Gallia (Geog.) a part of Gaul, which received its name from Lugdunum, the capital of the province, which was anciently called Celtica. [Vide Gallia and Lugdunum under Numismatics]

LUGDUNUM (Geog.) also sometimes spelt Logudunum, now Lyons, a town of Gallia Celtica, or Lugdunensis, built at the confluence of the Rhone and Arar by Minutius Plancus when he was governor of the province, as we learn from an inscription: L. MINUTIUS L. F. L. N. L. PRON. PLANCUS. COS. IMP. ITER. IN GALLIA COLONIAS DEDUXIT LUGD. Another inscription also marks its situation:—SACERDOS ROMAE ET AUG. AD ARAM AD CONFLUENTES ARARIS ET RHODANI FLAMEN. In this town Caligula is said to have instituted prizes to be contended for in Greek and Latin eloquence, to which Juvenal alludes.

Juven. sat. 1, v. 44.

Aut Lugdunensem Rhetor dicturus ad aram

It also received the name of Claudia Copia Colonia, because the emperor Claudius was born there. [Vide Lugdunum under Numismatics] Lyons was burnt to the ground by lightning in the reign of Nero, by whom it was rebuilt; was pillaged and partly burnt in 198 by Severus, because the inhabitants favoured his rival; the christians were persecuted there in 202; Magnentius killed himself in 353; and Gratian was killed there in 383. LUGDUNUM (Numis.) the town of Gaul, is known as a colony by its inscription, COL. ROM. LUGDUN.; i. e. Colonia Romana Lugdunum, vel C. C. COL. LUG.; i. e. Claudia Copia Colonia Lugdunensis; sometimes simply COPIA, vel LUGDUNI XL, &c. The province Lugdunensis, or the town, is also marked on some coins, as—FIDEI EXERCITUS GALLICANI LUGDUNENSIS.—GER. LUG. COS. II.—P. LUG.; i. e. Prima Lugdunensis.—LUG. S.; i. e. Lugdunensis Secunda.—M. S. L.; i. e. Mercatores Secundæ Lugdunenses, &c. Its common type is the figure of a lion corresponding with its name. Golz. Thes.; Ursin. Fam.; Morell. Num. Famil.

LUGO, John (Ecc.) a Spanish Jesuit and cardinal, was born at Madrid in 1583, created a cardinal by Urban VIII in 1643, and died in 1660, leaving his whole estate to the Jesuits' college at Rome. He was the author of seven large volumes in folio on religious subjects.

Lugo, Francis (Biog.) brother of the preceding, and also a Jesuit, was born at Madrid in 1580, and died in 1652, leaving 'De Sacramentis in Genere,' 4to. Venet. 1652, &c.

LUISINO (Biog.) or Luisini, Francis, a scholar of Udina, in the Venetian territory, was born in 1523, and died in 1568, leaving, 1. 'Parergon Libri tres,' inserted in the third volume of Gruter's 'Fax Critica.' 2. A Commentary on Horace's Art of Poetry, published in 4to. Venet. 1544. 3. A treatise, 'De componendis Animi Affectibus,' 8vo. Basil. 1562.

Luisino, Louis, a physician, and probably a relation of the preceding, was the author of, 1. 'Aphorismi Hippocratis Hexametro Carmine conscripti,' Venet. 1552. 2 'De compescendis Animi Affectibus per Moralem Philosophiam et medendi Artem Tractatus in tres Libros divisus,' Basil. 1562. 3. 'Aphrodisiacus, sive de Lue Venerea in duos Tomos bipartitus, continens omnia quæcumque hactenus de hac Re sunt ab omnibus Medicis conscripta,' fol. Venet. 1566.

LUITBERT (Hist.) king of the Lombards, succeeded his father Cunibert in 701, while only a child, and was dethroned eight months after. Paul. Diacon. Hist. Longob.

Luitbert (Ecc.) archbishop of Mentz in the ninth century, wrote a very earnest letter to king Louis III on the disorders of the church and state. Du Pin, Biblioth.

LUITPRANDUS (Hist.) or Luitprand, king of the Lombards, succeeded his father Ansprand, or Arisprand, in 713, and died in 742, after a successful reign, in which he reduced Thrasimond, duke of Spoleto, to subjection. Paul. Diac. Hist. Long.; Anastas. in Vit. Pontif.

Luitprandus, a statesman, bishop, and historian, of Pavia, in the tenth century, was secretary to Berengarius II, by whom he was sent in the year 948 as ambassador to Constantine Porphyrogenitus. In 963 he was advanced by Otho, emperor of Germany, to the bishopric of Cremona; and in 968 was sent on an embassy to the emperor Nicephorus Phocas, by whom he was imprisoned for a whole year, at the expiration of which he returned to Italy, but at what time he died is not known. He wrote the history of his own times in six books, the best edition of which is that of Antwerp, in folio, 1640, also inserted among the 'Scriptores Rerum Italicarum.' The Lives of the Popes, and the Chronicle of the Goths, have been ascribed to him, but, it is said, falsely.

LUKE, St. (Bibl.) an Evangelist, and native of Antioch, who was not an apostle or a disciple of our Saviour, but wrote, as he informs us, what he had heard from others, particularly from the Apostles, whose disciple he was. He was the author not only of the Gospel so called, but also of the Acts of the Apostles, from which we learn that he was the companion of St. Paul. Other works are ascribed to him, as the translation of the Epistle to the Hebrews; but on this, as also on the particulars of his life, the ancients are not agreed. Tertullian. cont. Marcion. l. 5; S. Hieron. de Vir. Illust.; Euseb. in Chron. et Hist.; Gregor. Nazianzen. Orat. 3; Epiphan. de Hæres. 42; Nicephor. Hist. l. 2; Bede Hist. Eccles.; Usuardius; Adon. &c.

Luke (Ecc.) surnamed Chrysobergus, patriarch of Constantinople, succeeded Constantine Chiarenus in 1155, held a council at Constantinople in 1166, and died in 1169.

LULLE (Biog.) vide Lully.

LULLI, John Baptist, superintendant of music to Louis XIV, was born at Florence in 1634, and died in 1687, leaving several Operas and pieces of music, which were long held in estimation.

LULLIER, Claude Emanuel (Biog.) vide Chapelle.

LULLY, Raimond (Ecc.) a native of Majorca, was born in 1236, and lost his life as a missionary in Africa in 1315. His 'Art of Memory,' is the best known of his works, which treat of logic, theology, morals, &c. and were published collectively at Mentz.

LUMLEY, Ralph, Lord (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was in the retinue of Henry de Percy, of Northumberland, in the expedition then made into Scotland, wherein he so signalized himself that he was made governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed. He was afterwards taken prisoner by the Scots, and, upon his release, was amongst the number of those who joined with Thomas de Holland, earl of Kent, in supporting the cause of Richard II against Henry IV, for which very many were executed, but he himself is said to have fallen in battle.

Lumley, John, Lord, eldest son of the preceding, signalized himself in the service of Henry IV and V, and lost his life with Thomas, duke of Clarence, at the battle of Baugy, in Anjou, in 1421.

Lumley, Marmaduke de, youngest brother of the preceding, having a learned education, was elected Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and Chancellor of the University in 1430, promoted to the see of Carlisle in the same year, constituted Treasurer of England in 25 Hen. VI, translated to the see of Lincoln in 1450, and died within a year after his translation.

Lumley, Thomas, Lord, was employed by Henry VI and Edward IV on various negotiations, particularly with Scotland.

Lumley, George, Lord, was a principal commander under Richard, duke of Gloucester, in the 8 Ed. IV, when the town of Berwick was retaken that had been surrendered to the Scots by queen Margaret to gain a sanctuary for her husband, Henry VI, when he was expelled from England. On the entering of the duke's forces into Edinburgh this lord Lumley was made a knight banneret in Hooten-Field. On the accession of Henry VII he waited on his majesty in his progress in the northern parts of the kingdom; after which he signalized himself in the expedition of the earl of Surrey against the Scots, and attended the princess Margaret, eldest daughter of Henry VII, as far as Berwick, on her espousals with James IV, king of Scotland.

Lumley, John, Lord, distinguished himself in the several expeditions against Scotland, particularly at the memorable battle of Flodden Field in 1513. He was also one of the barons who signed the letter to pope Clement VII, intimating that unless he complied with the king's wishes, by granting him a divorce from queen Catherine, the acknowledgment of his supremacy in England would be much endangered: but in 28 Hen. VIII he was one of the chief of those northern lords who appeared in the insurrection called the "Pilgrimage of Grace;" a pardon, however, being offered by the duke of Norfolk, at that time general of the king's forces sent to suppress them, he was chosen to treat with the duke at Doncaster, where an accommodation was effected. His only son George was soon after engaged in another insurrection, for which he was found guilty of high treason and beheaded.

Lumley, John, Lord, having procured a reversal of his father's attainder, was in the service of both Mary and Elizabeth, by whom he was employed as a commissioner on the trial of Mary, queen of Scots, with secretary Davison and Robert Devereux. He afterwards acted as commissioner for settling the claims of king James's coronation, and died in 1609.

Lumley, Richard, Viscount, a steady loyalist in the time of the rebellion, converted Lumley Castle into a garrison for the king's forces. He was a principal commander under prince Rupert, and remained at the siege of Bristol until its surrender in 1645. He had the happiness to survive the restoration, to which he contributed very materially by his exertions.

Lumley, Richard, eldest son of the preceding, first earl of Scarborough. [Vide Scarborough]

Lumley, Hon. Henry, younger son of Richard, viscount Lumley, is reported on his monument, erected by his lady, to have been in every battle, and at every siege, as colonel, lieutenant-colonel, or general of the horse with king William, or the duke of Marlborough, in 20 campaigns in Ireland, Flanders, and Germany, and to have died in 1722 governor of the Isle of Jersey, in the 63d year of his age.

Lumley (Her.) the name of a family derived by Camden and sir William Dugdale from Lumley Castle, situate on the bank of the river Weare, near Chester-le-Street, in the bishopric of Durham. This family is descended from Liulph, a nobleman of considerable distinction in the time of king Edward the Confessor, who married Algitha, daughter to Aldred, earl of Northumberland. On the Norman conquest Liulph withdrew into retirement; but being high in favour with Walcher, bishop of Durham, and earl of Northumberland, he was through envy murdered, at the instigation of Leofwin, the bishop's chaplain. His descendant, Ralph de Lumley, lord Lumley, was summoned to Parliament among the barons of the realm, from the eighth year of Richard II; but the ancient barony of Lumley expired at the death of John, lord Lumley above-mentioned in 1609, and was revived in the person of Richard Lumley, a collateral branch of the Lumleys, of Lumley Castle, who was created lord viscount Lumley, of Waterford, in Ireland, in 1628. Richard, the second viscount, was created baron Lumley, of Lumley Castle, in 1681; viscount Lumley in 1689; and earl of Scarborough in 1690. [Vide Scarborough]

Lumley, Viscount, the title commonly borne by the eldest son of the earl of Scarborough.

LUPERCAL (Topog.) a place at the foot of Mount Aventine, sacred to Pan, where festivals, called Lupercalia, were yearly celebrated. Virg. Æn. l. 8; Ovid. Fast. l. 2.

LUNA (Myth.) Σελήνη, daughter of Hyperion and Terra, and the same, according to some mythologists, as Diana. [Vide Diana]

Luna (Geog.) a maritime town of Etruria, called also Lunensis Portus, and famous for the white marble which it produced.

LUPERCUS (Biog.) a grammarian in the reign of the emperor Gallienus.

LUPSET, Thomas (Biog.) an English scholar, was born in London in 1498, educated at St. Paul's School, under Lilly, whence he is supposed to have proceeded to Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and died in 1532, leaving, 1. 'Epistolæ Variæ,' dated from Corpus Christi College, and printed in 'Epist. aliquot Eruditorum Virorum.' 2. 'A Treatise teaching how to die well.' 3. 'An Exhortation to Young Men,' 8vo. 1540. 4. 'A Treatise of Charity,' 8vo. 1546.

LUPTON, Donald (Biog.) a biographer in the 17th century, was the author of 'The History of the Moderne Protestant Divines,' &c. faithfully translated out of the Latin, &c. 12mo. London, 1637; 'London and the Country carbonadoed and quartered into several Characters,' 8vo. 1632; 'Emblems of Rarities,' &c. 18mo. 1636; 'England's Command of the Seas,' &c. 12mo. 1653; besides which, a 4to. volume, entitled 'The Glory of their Times; or, the Lives of the Primitive Fathers,' &c. London, 1640, is ascribed to him, although it does not bear his name in any part of the book.

LUPUS (Hist.) a governor of Alexandria, who acted against the Jews under the emperor Vespasian. Joseph. de Bell. Gall. l. 7.

Lupus (Biog.) or Christian Wolf, an Augustin, was born at Ypres, in Flanders, in 1612, and died in 1681, leaving many works in Latin, which were published separately, and afterwards collectively, in 12 vols. fol.

LUSHINGTON (Her.) the name of a family of Berkshire, which enjoys the baronetage conferred in 1791 on sir Stephen Lushington; the arms, &c. of which are as follow:

Arms. Or, on a fess wavy, between three lions' heads vert, langued gules, as many ermine spots or.

Crest. A lion's head erased vert, charged on the erasure with three ermine spots or; ducally gorged argent.

LUSITANIA (Geog.) the third division of Hispania, which extended from the Tagus to the sea, and comprehended the modern kingdom of Portugal. Liv. l. 21; Strab. l. 3; Mela, l. 2.

LUTETIA (Geog.) called by some Julia Civitas, because it was fortified and embellished by Julius Cæsar, now Paris, a town of Gallia Belgica, on the confluence of the rivers Sequana and Matrona. Cæs. de Bell. Gall. l. 6, &c.; Strab. l. 4; Ammian. l. 20.

LUTHER, Martin (Ecc.) the first promoter of that great revolution in the religious world well known by the name of the Reformation, was born at Isleben, a town of Saxony, entered the Order of the Hermits of St. Augustin at the age of 22; begun his attack soon after on the Romish church, by quarrelling with the rival Order of Dominican, to whom the work of collecting indulgences was entrusted; and, supported by several German princes, who condescended to use him as their tool, he continued successfully and virulently to oppose the whole scheme of the Romish religion, until his death in 1546. His German translation of the Bible appeared in 1535, and his works were collected and published after his death at Wittemberg, in 7 vols. fol. By his wife, who, like himself, had broken her vows in order to be married, and survived him till 1552, he had three sons, whose descendants are still existing in Germany. The adversaries of this man may have said more against him than is just; but his best friends can only give him credit for possessing the talents of a revolutionary demagogue, exerted most unwarrantably, and in violation of all law and order in sewing dissension in the Christian church. Whatever opinions therefore may be formed of the reformation, it cannot be denied by any that he was a most unworthy instrument to bring about so important a change. [Vide Plate XIX]

LUTORIUS PRISCUS, C. (Hist.) a Roman knight, was put to death by order of Tiberius, because he had written a poem, in which he bewailed the death of Germanicus. Tac. Annal. l. 3.

LUTTI, Benedict (Biog.) an Italian artist, was born at Florence in 1666, and died in 1724, leaving, among other things that were much admired, a Magdalene, in the church of Siena, at Monte Magna Napoli; St. Anthony of Padua, in the church of the Holy Apostles; the Prophet Isaiah, in an oval, in St. John de Lateran; and at the Palace Albani a Miracle of St. Pio, which some reckon his master-piece.

LUTTRELL, Sir Geoffrey, Knt. (Hist.) of the family mentioned under Heraldry, was one of the barons who sided with John, earl of Morton, in the reign of Richard I, for which his estates in the counties of Leicester, Derby, Nottingham, and York, were confiscated; but, on the accession of John, they were restored to him with addition. He was entrusted with the direction of public affairs in Ireland, and obtained a grant from the crown of the lands of Luttrelstown, which have remained in the family ever since. In the 16th year of king John he resided as Ambassador at Rome, and in the year following was named Ambassador Extraordinary to that court.

Luttrell, Sir Hugh, Knt. was one of the chief officers at the reduction of Harfleur, in the reign of Henry V, to whom he was Privy Councillor, and served under him at the memorable siege of Rouen in 1420.

Luttrell, Sir James, Knt. made knight banneret at the battle of Wakefield in 1460, was slain at the battle of Tewksbury in the Lancastrian cause in 1471.

Luttrell, Sir Hugh, had the estates of his father restored to him after the battle of Bosworth in 1485; and being a man of considerable note in his time, he was greatly instrumental in quelling the Devonshire insurrection.

Luttrell, Sir Andrew, Knt. son of the preceding, was made knight banneret at the taking of Yester, in the first year of Edward VI. He afterwards bravely defended Broughly Castle, of which he was governor, against the Scots, where he was taken prisoner, and his whole garrison put to the sword.

Luttrell, Sir Thomas, Knt. was appointed Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, in Ireland, in the reign of Henry VIII, and was Privy Councillor to Edward VI.

Luttrell, Thomas, a knight of the shire for the county of Dublin in the reigns of James and Charles, and a Privy Councillor, acted a conspicuous part in his times.

Luttrell, Simon, son of the preceding, had his Castle of Luttrelstown taken from him during the rebellion by colonel Hewson, who kept possession of it till the restoration, when it was returned to its proper owner.

Luttrell, Simon, of the second family mentioned under Heraldry, who was governor of the town and garrison of Dublin under king James II, adhered to the fortunes of his royal master, and, commanding an Irish regiment in foreign service, was killed at the battle of Landen in 1693.

Luttrell, Henry, brother of the preceding, and governor of Sligo, in the service of king James II, did, with his brother Simon, equip no less than five squadrons of cavalry; and after the revolution he was nominated to an important command in the Dutch army; but at the death of king William he retired to his seat at Luttrelstown, and was assassinated in his sedan chair by a band of ruffians in 1717, at the age of 63.

Luttrell (Her.) Lutterell, or Lottrell, the name of a family which was among the Norman chiefs that attended the army of William the Conqueror at the battle of Hastings in 1066. The first of this family of any distinction was sir Geoffrey Luttrell above-mentioned, who settled in Ireland. His son, sir Andrew, was baron of Irnham, which barony passed by marriage out of the family of the Luttrells; but Simon Luttrell, son of Henry above-mentioned, was created in 1768 baron Irnham of Luttrelstown, co. Dublin; in 1780 viscount Carhampton of Castlehaven, co. Cork; and in 1785 earl of Carhampton.

LUXEMBURG (Hist.) one of the most illustrious families in Europe, which derives its name from a province so called in Flanders. It has produced five emperors, three of whom have been kings of Germany; and, possessing great estates in France as well as in Germany, it has also produced several constables and marshals, and given birth to six queens and many princesses. The house of Luxemburg traces its immediate origin from Henry I, who flourished about 1071, and one of whose descendants, Valerian II, married a princess of Luxemburg.

Luxemburg, Francis Henry de Montmorency, Duke of, a distinguished general and marshal of France, was the posthumous son of Montmorency de Bouteville, who was beheaded for fighting a duel under Lewis XIII. He was present, at the age of 15, at the battle of Rocroi in 1643, under Condé, whose fortunes he followed, and after raising himself to the highest post in the French army by his brilliant talents, during the wars of that period, he died in 1694. [Vide Plate XIII]

Luxemburg (Geog.) capital of a duchy and province in the Netherlands, which is divided by the river Alsitz, 22 miles W. S. W. Treves. Lon. 6° 12′ E. lat. 49° 36′ N. This town was given to the Dutch in 1713, as a barrier town; ceded to the House of Austria in 1715; and surrendered to the French in 1795; but restored to the Netherlands in 1814.

LUYKEN, John (Biog.) a Dutch engraver of Amsterdam. who died in 1712, at the age of 63, left some plates for the Theatre of the Martyrs, which were much admired.
